

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE

The statutes collected in this Supplement connect, without break or duplication, with those contained in the 1920 Supplement. They are the general, permanent, and public acts passed by Congress between December 19, 1920, and December 31, 1921. These acts are classified according to the scheme of titles in the main work, and in using this Supplement the reader should examine the corresponding title to locate the late, amendatory, or repealing legislation on the topic under consideration.

The latter part of the volume is devoted to the supplemental notes. These supplemental notes connect directly with and continue those in the 1920 Supplement, and present all the subsequent decisions construing the statutes contained in the prior volumes. The arrangement is by title, volume, page, and section as the statutes are found in preceding volumes, and the investigator has merely to turn to the corresponding title, volume, page and section as shown by the captions in this Supplement to find the late cases. The omission of a title or of page and section captions implies that no new cases have been found.

Tables of titles, Revised Statutes sections, and statutes chronologically arranged are included, together with a table connecting the notes with the first edition and supplements thereto.

Supplemental notes to the Constitution are also included in this volume.

An Act To amend section 4 of the Act approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal Farm Loan Act, extending its provisions to Porto Rico.

[Act of Feb. 27, 1921.]

[Federal Land Banks — establishment — branches — loans — sec. 4 of Farm Loan Act amended.] That paragraph 2 of section 4 of the Act approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal Farm Loan Act, be amended to read as follows:

"The Federal Farm Loan Board shall establish in each Federal land bank district a Federal land bank, with its principal office located in such city within the district as said board shall designate. Each Federal land bank shall include in its title the name of the city in which it is located. Subject to the approval of the Federal Farm Loan Board, any Federal land bank may establish branches within the land bank district. Subject to the approval of the Federal Farm Loan Board and under such conditions as it may prescribe, the provisions of this Act are extended to the island of Porto Rico; and such Federal land bank as may be designated by the Federal Farm Loan Board, is hereby authorized to establish a branch bank at such point as the Federal Farm Loan Board may direct on the island of Porto Rico. Loans made by such branch bank, when so established, shall not exceed the sum of \$5,000 to any one borrower and shall be subject to the restrictions and provisions of this Act, except that such branch bank may loan direct to borrowers, and subject to such regulations as the Federal Farm Loan Board may prescribe the rate charged borrowers may be $1\frac{1}{2}$ per centum in excess of the rate borne by the last preceding issue of farm loan bonds of the Federal land bank with which such branch bank is connected: Provided, however, That no loans shall be made in the island of Porto Rico to run for a longer term than twenty years.

" Each borrower through such branch bank shall subscribe and pay for stock in the Federal land bank with which it is connected in the sum of $5 for each $100 or fraction thereof borrowed; such stock shall be held by such Federal land bank as collateral security for the loan of the borrower; shall participate in all dividends; and upon full payment of the loan shall be canceled at par and proceeds paid to borrower, or the borrower may apply the same to the final payments on his loan."

For sec. 4 of Act of July 17, 1916, as originally enacted, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 16.

* * * [Perishable farm products received in interstate commerce — certificate of quality and condition — prima facie evidence.] For enabling the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate and certify to shippers and other interested parties the quality and condition of fruits, vegetables, poultry, butter, hay, and other perishable farm products, when received in interstate commerce at such important central markets as the Secretary of Agriculture may from time to time designate, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, including payment of such fees as will be reasonable and as nearly as may be to cover the cost for the service rendered: Provided, That certificates issued by the authorized agents of the department shall be received in all courts of the United States as prima facie evidence of the truth of the statements therein contained, * * *.

This and the paragraph which follows are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1921.

* * * [Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates — powers and duties.] That hereafter the powers conferred and the duties imposed by law on the Bureau of Statistics and the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the Department of Agriculture shall be exercised and performed by the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates.

See note to preceding paragraph.

An Act To amend the first paragraph of section 20 of the Act of Congress approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended by the Act of Congress approved April 20, 1920.

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[Form of Farm Loan bonds — sec. 20 of Farm Loan Act amended.] That the first paragraph of section 20 of the Act of Congress approved July 17, 1916, as amended by the Act of Congress approved April 20, 1920, be amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 20. That bonds provided for in this Act shall be issued in denominations of $40, $100, $500, $1,000, and such larger denominations as the Federal Farm Loan Board may authorize; they shall run for specified minimum and maximum periods, subject to payment and retirement, at the option of the land bank, at any time after the minimum period specified in the bonds, which shall not be longer than ten years from the date of their issue. They shall have interest coupons attached, payable semiannually, and shall be issued in series of not less than $50,000, the amount and terms to be fixed by the Federal Farm Loan Board. They shall bear a rate of interest not to exceed 5 per centum per annum.”

For sec. 20 as originally enacted, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 32.

For sec. 20 as amended by Act of April 20, 1920, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 4.

For further amendment affecting rate of interest, see Act of Aug. 13, 1921, set out on following page.

An Act To amend section 32 of the Act of Congress approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal Farm Loan Act.

[Act of July 1, 1921.]

[Federal Farm Loan Act — land banks — government deposits — sec. 32 amended.] That section 32 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, approved July 17, 1916, as amended, is hereby amended by adding after the first paragraph a new paragraph to read as follows:

“Until such time as the aggregate paid-in capital stock of the twelve Federal land banks shall be $50,000,000, or more, the Secretary of the Treasury may in his discretion make deposits in addition to those authorized by the preceding paragraph, to be secured, redeemed, and paid in the same manner as provided in such paragraph, except that any additional deposit made hereunder shall be called by the Secretary of the Treasury and redeemed by the bank or banks holding the same, within fifteen days after the conclusion of each general offering of farm loan bonds by such bank or banks. The aggregate of such additional deposits outstanding at any time shall not exceed the difference between the aggregate paid-in capital stock of the twelve Federal land banks on the last day of the preceding month, and the sum of $50,000,000. The certificates of indebtedness issued to the Secretary of the Treasury by the Federal land bank for such additional deposits shall bear a rate of interest not exceeding by more than one-half of 1 per centum per annum the rate borne by the last bond issue of the land bank receiving such deposits.”

Section 32 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, here amended, will be found in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. at p. 41.

Joint Resolution For the relief of States in the cotton belt that have given aid to cotton farmers forced from the fields in established nonproduction zones through efforts to eradicate the pink bollworm.

[Res. of Aug. 9, 1921, No. 12.]

[Eradication of pink bollworm — aid to cotton farmers — relief of states.] That when any State shall have enacted legislation and taken measures, including the establishment and enforcement of noncotton zones, adequate, in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture, to eradicate the pink bollworm in any area thereof actually infested, or threatened, by such pest, the said Secretary, under regulations to be prescribed by him, is authorized, out of the appropriation of $554,840 for "Eradication of pink bollworm" made by the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1921, to utilize not to exceed $200,000 in reimbursing such States for expenses incurred by them in compensating any farmer for his loss due to the enforced nonproduction of cotton within said zones: Provided, That such reimbursement of any State shall be based upon the actual and necessary loss suffered by the owner of said land; that such reimbursement shall not exceed one-third the amount actually paid by the State to any farmer, and, in no event, shall exceed $5 per acre; and that no reimbursement shall be made in respect of any farmer who has not complied in good faith with all quarantine and control regulations prescribed by said Secretary of Agriculture and such State relative to the pink bollworm.

[Federal Farm Loan Act — form of bonds — sec. 20 amended.] That the first paragraph of section 20 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended, be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 20. That bonds provided for in this Act shall be issued in denominations of $40, $100, $500, $1,000, and such larger denominations as the Federal Farm Loan Board may authorize; they shall run for specified minimum and maximum periods, subject to payment and retirement, at the option of the land bank, at any time after the minimum period specified in the bonds, which shall not be longer than ten years from the date of their issue. They shall have interest coupons attached, payable semiannually, and shall be issued in series of not less than $50,000, the amount and terms to be fixed by the Federal Farm Loan Board. They shall bear a rate of interest not to exceed 5½ per centum per annum, but no bonds issued or sold after June 30, 1923, shall bear a rate of interest to exceed 5 per centum per annum."

The paragraph here amended, as it read prior to amendment, will be found in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 32.

This paragraph of sec. 20 was previously amended by Act of March 4, 1921, set out supra, this title p. 4.

An Act Taxing contracts for the sale of grain for future delivery, and options for such contracts, and providing for the regulation of boards of trade, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Title of act — "The Future Trading Act."] That this Act shall be known by the short title of "The Future Trading Act."

SEC. 2. [Definition of terms — "contract of sale" — "person" — "grain" — "future delivery" — "board of trade."] That for the purposes of this Act "contract of sale" shall be held to include sales, agreements of sale, and agreements to sell. That the word " person " shall be construed to import the plural or singular and shall include individuals, associations, partnerships, corporations, and trusts. That the word " grain " shall be construed to mean wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flax, and sorghum. The term " future delivery," as used herein, shall not include any sale of cash grain for deferred shipment or delivery. The words " board of trade " shall be held to include and mean any exchange or association, whether incorporated or unincorporated, of persons who shall be engaged in the business of buying or selling grain or receiving the same for sale on consignment. The act, omission, or failure of any official, agent, or other person acting for any individual, association, partnership, corporation, or trust within the scope of his employment or office shall be deemed the act, omission, or failure of such individual, association, partnership, corporation, or trust, as well as of such official, agent, or other person.

SEC. 3. [Tax on privilege or option relating to purchase or sale of grain.] That in addition to the taxes now imposed by law there is hereby levied a tax amounting to 20 cents per bushel on each bushel involved therein, whether the actual commodity is intended to be delivered or only nominally referred to, upon each and every privilege or option for a contract either of purchase or sale of grain, intending hereby to tax only the transactions known to the trade as " privileges," " bids," " offers," " puts and calls," " indemnities," or " ups and downs."

SEC. 4. [Tax on contract of sale of grain for future delivery — exceptions.] That in addition to the taxes now imposed by law there is hereby levied a tax of 20 cents a bushel on every bushel involved therein, upon each contract of sale of grain for future delivery except —

(a) [Owner or renter of land — owner or grower of grain.] Where the seller is at the time of the making of such contract the owner of the actual physical property covered thereby, or is the grower thereof, or in case either party to the contract is the owner or renter of land on which the same is to be grown, or is an association of such owners, or growers of grain, or of such owners or renters of land; or

(b) [Contract made by or through member of board of trade designated as " contract market."] Where such contracts are made by or through a member of a board of trade which has been designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as a " contract market," as hereinafter provided, and if such contract is evidenced by a memorandum in writing which shows the date, the parties to such contract and their addresses, the property covered and its price, and the terms of delivery, and provided that each board member shall keep such memorandum for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or the United States Department of Justice.

SEC. 5. [Designation of boards of trade as " contract markets " — conditions and requirements.] That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to designate boards of trade as " contract markets " when, and only when, such boards of trade comply with the following conditions and requirements:

(a) [Location at terminal market.] When located at a terminal market upon which cash grain is sold in sufficient volumes and under such conditions as fairly to reflect the general value of the grain and the difference in value between the various grades of grain, and having recognized official weighing and inspection service.

(b) [Keeping of records.] When the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing, by the board or any member thereof, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations, and in such manner and form and at such times as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board, or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, or transactions for future delivery, and when such governing board provides, in accordance with such rules and regulations, for the keeping of a record by the board or the members of the board of trade, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, such record to be in permanent form, showing the parties to all such transactions, any assignments or transfers thereof, with the parties thereto, and the manner in which said transactions are fulfilled, discharged, or terminated. Such record shall be required to be kept for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the Secretary of Agriculture shall so direct, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or United States Department of Justice.

(c) [Prevention of inaccurate reports.] When the governing board thereof prevents the dissemination, by the board or any member thereof, of false, misleading, or inaccurate report, concerning crop or market information or conditions that affect or tend to affect the price of commodities.

(d) [Prevention of manipulation of prices.] When the governing board thereof provides for the prevention of manipulation of prices, or the cornering of any grain, by the dealers or operators upon such board.

(e) [Admission to membership of representatives of associations of producers.] When the governing board thereof admits to membership thereof and all privileges thereon on such boards of trade any duly authorized representative of any lawfully formed and conducted cooperative associations of producers having adequate financial responsibility: Provided, That no rule of a contract market against rebating commissions shall apply to the distribution of earnings among the bona fide members of any such cooperative association.

(f) [Provision for making effective orders affecting trading, privileges of members, etc.] When the governing board shall provide for making effective the final orders or decisions entered pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) section 6 of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Application for designation as "contract market" — showing of compliance with requirements.] That any board of trade desiring to be designated a "contract market" shall make application to the Secretary of Agriculture for such designation and accompany the same with a showing that it complies with the above conditions, and with a sufficient assurance that it will continue to comply with the above requirements.

(a) [Suspension or revocation of designation — appeal from refusal to designate.] A commission composed of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General is authorized to suspend for a period not to exceed six months or to revoke the designation of any board of trade as a "contract market" upon a showing that such board of trade has failed or is failing to comply with the above requirements or is not enforcing its rules of government made a condition of its designation as set forth in section 5. Such suspension or revocation shall only be after a notice to the officers of the board of trade affected and upon a hearing: Provided, That such suspension or revocation shall be final and conclusive unless within fifteen days after such suspension or revocation by the said commission such board of trade appeals to the circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which it has its principal place of business by filing with the clerk of such court a written petition praying that the order of the said commission be set aside or modified in the manner stated in the petition, together with a bond in such sum as the court may determine, conditioned that such board of trade will pay the costs of the proceedings if the court so directs. The clerk of the court in which such a petition is filed shall immediately cause a copy thereof to be delivered to the Secretary of Agriculture, chairman of said commission, or any member thereof, and the said commission shall forthwith prepare, certify, and file in the court a full and accurate transcript of the record in such proceedings, including the notice to the board of trade, a copy of the charges, the evidence, and the report and order. The testimony and evidence taken or submitted before the said commission duly certified and filed as aforesaid as a part of the record, shall be considered by the court as the evidence in the case. The proceedings in such cases in the circuit court of appeals shall be made a preferred cause and shall be expedited in every way. Such a court may affirm or set aside the order of the said commission or may direct it to modify its order. No such order of the said commission shall be modified or set aside by the circuit court of appeals unless it is shown by the board of trade that the order is unsupported by the weight of the evidence or was issued without due notice and a reasonable opportunity having been afforded to such board of trade for a hearing, or infringes the Constitution of the United States, or is beyond the jurisdiction of said commission: Provided further, That if the Secretary of Agriculture shall refuse to designate as a contract market any board of trade that has made application therefor, then such board of trade may appeal from such refusal to the commission described therein, consisting of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Attorney General of the United States, with the right to appeal as provided for in other cases in this section, the decision on such appeal to be final and binding on all parties interested.

(b) [Violation of provisions of act — refusal of trading privileges.] That if the Secretary of Agriculture has reason to believe that any person is violating any of the provisions of this Act, or is attempting to manipulate the market price of any grain in violation of the provisions of section 5 hereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made pursuant to its requirements, he may serve upon such person a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached or contained therein a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than three days after the service thereof, requiring such person to show cause why an order should not be made directing that all contract markets until further notice of the said commission refuse all trading privileges thereon to such person. Said hearing may be held in Washington, District of Columbia, or elsewhere, before the said commission, or before a referee designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall cause all evidence to be reduced to writing and forthwith transmit the same to the Secretary of Agriculture as chairman of the said commission. That for the purpose of securing effective enforcement of the provisions of this Act the provisions, including penalties, of section 12 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, relating to the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of documentary evidence, and the immunity of witnesses, are made applicable to the power, jurisdiction, and authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, the said commission, or said referee in proceedings under this Act, and to persons subject to its provisions. Upon evidence received the said commission may require all contract markets to refuse such person all trading privileges thereon for such period as may be specified in said order. Notice of such order shall be sent forthwith by registered mail or delivered to the offending person and to the governing boards of said contract markets. After the issuance of the order by the commission, as aforesaid, the person against whom it is issued may obtain a review of such order or such other equitable relief as to the court may seem just by filing in the United States circuit court of appeals of the circuit in which the petitioner is doing business a written petition praying that the order of the commission be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the commission by delivering such copy to its chairman, or to any member thereof, and thereupon the commission shall forthwith certify and file in the court a transcript of the record theretofore made, including evidence received. Upon the filing of the transcript the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm, to set aside, or modify the order of the commission, and the findings of the commission as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall in like manner be conclusive. In proceedings under paragraphs (a) and (b) the judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the Judicial Code.

For sec. 12 of the Interstate Commerce Act, mentioned in the text; see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 448.

SEC. 7. [Collection of tax.] That the tax provided for herein shall be paid by the seller, and such tax shall be collected either by the affixing of stamps or by such other method as may have been prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury by regulations, and such regulations shall be published at such times and in such manner as shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 8. [Vacation of designation as "contract market."] That any board of trade that has been designated a contract market, in the manner herein provided, may have such designation vacated and set aside by giving notice in writing to the Secretary of Agriculture requesting that its designation as a contract market be vacated, which notice shall be served as [at] least ninety days prior to the date named therein, as the date when the vacation of designation shall take effect. Upon receipt of such notice the Secretary of Agriculture shall forthwith order the vacation of the designation of such board of trade as a contract market, effective upon the day named in the notice, and shall forthwith send a copy of the notice and his order to all other contract markets. From and after the date upon which the vacation became effective, the said board of trade can thereafter be designated again a contract market by making application to the Secretary of Agriculture in the manner herein provided for an original application.

SEC. 9. [Investigations by secretary of agriculture — reports.] That the Secretary of Agriculture may make such investigations as he may deem necessary to ascertain the facts regarding the operations of boards of trade and may publish from time to time, in his discretion, the result of such investigation, and such statistical information gathered therefrom, as he may deem of interest to the public, except data and information which would separately disclose the business transactions of any person, and trade secrets or names of customers: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the Secretary of Agriculture from making or issuing such reports as he may deem necessary, relative to the conduct of any board of trade, or of the transactions of any person found guilty of violating the provisions of this Act under the proceedings prescribed in section 6 of this Act: Provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture in any report may include the facts as to any actual transaction. The Secretary of Agriculture, upon his own initiative or in cooperation with existing governmental agencies, shall investigate marketing conditions of grain and grain products, and by-products, including supply and demand for these commodities, cost to the consumer, and handling and transportation charges. He shall likewise compile and furnish to producers, consumers, and distributors, by means of regular or special reports, or by such methods as he may deem most effective, information respecting the grain markets, together with information on supply, demand, prices, and other conditions, in this and other countries that affect the markets.

SEC. 10. [Penalties for failure to evidence contracts, keep records, pay taxes, etc.] That any person who shall fail to evidence any such contract by a memorandum in writing, or to keep the record, or make a report, or who shall fail to pay the tax, as provided in sections 4 and 5 hereof, or who shall fail to pay the tax required in section 3 hereof, shall pay in addition to the tax a penalty equal to 50 per centum of the tax levied against him under this Act and shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

SEC. 11. [Invalidity of part of act — effect on other provisions.] That if any provision of this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 12. [Provision relating to payment of tax and enforcement of penalties when in effect.] That no tax shall be imposed by this Act within four months after its passage, and no fine, imprisonment, or other penalty shall be enforced for any violation of this Act occurring within four months after its passage.

SEC. 13. [Miscellaneous powers of Secretary of Agriculture — officers and employees.] The Secretary of Agriculture may cooperate with any department or agency of the Government, any State, Territory, District, or possession, or department, agency or political subdivision thereof, or any person; and shall have the power to appoint, remove, and fix the compensation of such officers and employees, not in conflict with existing law, and make such expenditures for rent outside the District of Columbia, printing, telegrams, telephones, law books, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel and other supplies and expenses as shall be necessary to the administration of this Act in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for such purposes.

An Act To amend section 4, chapter 1 of Title I of an Act entitled "An Act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 6, 1900, as heretofore amended by section 2 of an Act entitled "An Act to amend section 86 of an Act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes," approved March 3, 1909, and for other purposes.

[District courts established — judges — divisions, terms, etc.—sec. 4 of Act of June 6, 1900 amended.] That section 4 of chapter 1 of Title I of the Act entitled "An Act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 6, 1900, as amended by section 2 of an Act entitled "An Act to amend section 86 of an Act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes," approved March 3, 1909, which section also constitutes section 363 of the Compiled Statutes of the Territory of Alaska, 1913, be, and the same hereby is, further amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 363. There is hereby established a district court for the District of Alaska, with the jurisdiction of district courts of the United States and with general jurisdiction in civil, criminal, equity, and admiralty causes; and four district judges shall be appointed for the district, each at an annual salary of $7,500, who shall during their terms of office reside in the divisions of the district to which they may be respectively assigned by the President. The court shall consist of four divisions, which shall also be recording divisions.

“Division numbered one shall consist of all that part of the District of Alaska lying east of the one hundred and forty-first meridian of west longitude.

“Division numbered two shall consist of all that territory lying west of a line commencing on the Arctic coast at the one hundred and forty-eighth meridian; thence extending south along the easterly watershed of the Colville River to a point on the Rocky Mountain divide between the headwaters of Colville River on the north and west and the waters of the Chandlar River on the south; thence southwesterly along the divide between the waters of the Colville River, Kotzebue Sound, and Norton Sound on the north and west and the waters of the Yukon on the south to the one hundred and sixty-first meridian of west longitude; thence along said meridian to a point midway between the Yukon River and the Kuskokwim River; thence southwesterly to the point of intersection of the sixty-first parallel of north latitude with the shore of Bering Sea; the said division to include all the islands lying north of the fifty-eighth parallel of north latitude and west of the one hundred and forty-eighth meridian of west longitude, excepting Nelson Island, all islands in Kuskokwim Bay, all islands in Bristol Bay, and all islands in the Gulf of Alaska, north of the fifty-eighth parallel of north latitude.

“Division numbered three shall consist of all that territory lying south and west of the line starting on the coast of the Gulf of Alaska at the one hundred and forty-first meridian of west longitude; thence northerly along said meridian to a point due east from Mount Kimball; thence west to the summit of Mount Kimball; thence south westerly along the southerly watershed of the headwaters of Tanana River; thence westerly along the divide between the waters of the Gulf of Alaska on the south and the waters of the Yukon on the north to the summit of Mount McKinley; thence continuing southwesterly along the divide between the waters of the Kuskokwim River and Bay on the north and west and the Gulf of Alaska and Bristol Bay on the south to the westerly point of Cape Newenham; the said division to include the Alaska Peninsula, the Aleutian and Pribilof Islands, and all islands along and off the coast of this division, between Cape Newenham and the point where the one hundred and forty-first meridian, west longitude, intersects the northern line of the territory.

“Division numbered four shall consist of that part of the district of Alaska lying east of the second division and north of the third division, and all islands along the north coast of said division, east of the one hundred and forty-eighth meridian of west longitude, also Nelson Island and all islands in Kuskokwim Bay.

“One general term of court shall be held each year at Juneau, and such additional terms at other places in the first division as the Attorney General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Nome, and such additional terms at other places in the second division as the Attorney General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Valdez, and such additional terms at other places in the third division as the Attorney General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Fairbanks, and such additional terms at other places in the fourth division as the Attorney General may direct. Each of the judges is authorized and directed to hold such special terms of court as may be necessary for the public welfare or for the dispatch of the business of the court at such times and places in their respective districts as any of them, respectively, may deem expedient, or as the Attorney General may direct; and each shall have authority to employ interpreters and to make allowances for the necessary expenses of his court and to employ an official court stenographer at such compensation as shall be fixed by the Attorney General. At least thirty days' notice shall be given by the judge, or the clerk, of the time and place of holding the several terms of the court."

For sec. 4 of the Act of June 6, 1900, amended by the text, as it read after the amendment of March 3, 1909, see 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 261.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Government Railroad — covering into appropriation moneys derived from certain sources.] During the fiscal year 1922 there shall be covered into the appropriation established from time to time under the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved March 12, 1914, as amended, the proceeds of the sale of material utilized for temporary work and structures in connection with the operations under said Act, as well as the sales of all other condemned property which has been purchased or constructed under the provisions thereof, also any moneys refunded in connection with the construction and operations under said Act, and a report hereunder shall be made to Congress at the beginning of its next session.

This and the paragraphs which follow are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

For Act of March 12, 1914, mentioned in the text, see 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 336.

* * * [Hospitals — admission of patients.] Patients who are not indigent may be admitted to the hospitals for care and treatment on the payment of such reasonable charges therefor as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe.

See note to preceding paragraph.

* * * [Reindeer.] For support of reindeer stations in Alaska and instruction of Alaskan natives in the care and management of reindeer, $10,000, to be available immediately: Provided, That the Commissioner of Education is authorized to sell such of the male reindeer belonging to the Government as he may deem advisable and to use the proceeds in the purchase of female reindeer belonging to missions and in the distribution of reindeer to natives in those portions of Alaska in which reindeer have not yet been placed and which are adapted to the reindeer industry.

See note under first paragraph of this section.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to authorize the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved March 12, 1914, as amended.

[Act of Nov. 18, 1921.]

[Government railroad — construction and equipment — amount of expenditures — Act of March 12, 1914 amended.] That the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved March 12, 1914, as amended, is further amended by adding at the end of section 2 a proviso to read as follows:

"Provided further, That in order to complete the construction and equipment of the railroad between Seward and Fairbanks, together with necessary sidings, spurs, and lateral branches, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, in addition to all sums heretofore appropriated therefor, the sum of $4,000,000, to be immediately and continuously available until expended."

For Act of March 12, 1914, here amended, see 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 336.

- Sec. 1. National Cemetery — Railroads — Right of Way, 17.*
Approaches to National Cemetery — Maintenance, 17.

An Act To provide for the erection of memorials and the entombment of bodies in the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater, in Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia.

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Arlington Memorial Amphitheater — memorials and entombment of bodies — creation of commission.] That a commission is hereby created, to be composed of the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, which shall submit annually to the President, who shall transmit the same to Congress by the first Monday in December, recommendations as to what, if any, inscriptions, tablets, busts, or other memorials shall be erected, and what, if any, bodies of deceased members of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps shall be entombed during the next ensuing year within the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater, in the Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia: Provided, That no memorial shall be placed and no body shall be interred in the grounds about the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater within a distance of two hundred and fifty feet from the said memorial.

SEC. 2. [Chairman of commission — executive and disbursing officer.] That the Secretary of War shall be the chairman of the said commission and the depot quartermaster of the Army in Washington shall be its executive and disbursing officer.

SEC. 3. [Congressional control over memorials and entombments.] That no inscription, tablet, bust, or other memorial shall be erected nor shall any body be entombed within the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater unless specifically authorized in each case by Act of the Congress.

SEC. 4. [Persons commemorated in amphitheater — lapse of certain period after death when necessary.] That no inscription, tablet, bust, or other memorial as herein provided for shall be erected to commemorate any person who shall not have rendered conspicuously distinguished service in the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, nor shall the body of any such person be entombed in the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater; nor shall any such memorial be erected or any body be entombed therein within ten years after the date of the death of the person so to be commemorated, except as heretofore or hereafter authorized by Congress.

SEC. 5. [Proposed memorials as subject to approval of commission.] That the character, design, and location of any such inscriptions, tablets, busts, or other memorials when authorized as herein provided shall be subject to the approval of the commission herein created, which shall in each case obtain the advice of the Commission of Fine Arts.

Joint Resolution Providing for the bringing to the United States of the body of an unknown American, who was a member of the American Expeditionary Forces, who served in Europe and lost his life during the World War, and for the burial of the remains with appropriate ceremonies.

[Res. of March 4, 1921, No. 67.]

[Burial of unknown American serving in World War in Arlington Memorial Amphitheater.] That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, under regulations to be prescribed by him, to cause to be brought to the United States the body of an American, who was a member of the American Expeditionary Forces who served in Europe, who lost his life during the World War and whose identity has not been established, for burial in the Memorial Amphitheater of the National Cemetery at Arlington, Virginia.

Such sum as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the joint resolution is hereby authorized to be expended by the Secretary of War.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [National cemetery — railroads — right of way.] That no railroads shall be permitted upon the right of way which may have been acquired by the United States to a national cemetery, or to encroach upon any roads or walks constructed thereon and maintained by the United States.

This and the paragraph following are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [Approaches to national cemetery — maintenance.] No part of any appropriation for national cemeteries or the repair of roadways thereto shall be expended in the maintenance of more than a single approach to any national cemetery.

See note to preceding paragraph.

CENSUS

Res. of March 3, 1921, No. 65, 18.

Fourteenth Decennial Census — Enumerators for Army and Navy — Validation of Appointment — Payment, 18.

Act of March 3, 1921 (Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act), 18.

Sec. 1. Census Office — Suspension of Unnecessary Work, 18.

Joint Resolution To authorize payment to members of the Army and Navy who were employed as enumerators during the Fourteenth Decennial Census to take the census of persons in the Army and Navy.

[Res. of March 3, 1921, No. 65.]

[Fourteenth Decennial Census — enumerators for army and navy — validation of appointment — payment.] Whereas it appears that in making an enumeration of persons in the Army and Navy for the Fourteenth Decennial Census, in the judgment of the Director of the Census it was impracticable to do otherwise than, with the official sanction of the Army and Navy, employ officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy as enumerators, and that such officers and enlisted men were duly employed to make the enumeration and were promised compensation at the rate of 3 cents for each person enumerated; and

Whereas the vouchers for such compensation have been disallowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department on the ground that payment thereof was unwarranted; and

Whereas it further appears that in the judgment of the Director of the Census the census of the military and naval forces was taken more accurately by reason of the assurance of compensation to such enumerators than if it had been taken under orders of the War Department: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled, That the appointment of such enumerators be, and the same is hereby, validated and that the moneys appropriated for the Fourteenth Decennial Census are hereby made available for the payment of their services as such enumerators.

For Act providing for taking of Fourteenth Decennial Census, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 15.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Census office — suspension of unnecessary work.] That the Secretary of Commerce is authorized, in his discretion, to suspend during the decennial census period such work of the Census Office, other than the Fourteenth Census, as he may deem advisable.

This is from the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1921.

2. Method of Registration — Certificate as Evidence — Examination — Deportation, 20.

3. Charges Incident to Procurement of Certificate, 20.

Joint Resolution Permitting certain Chinese to register under certain provisions and conditions.

[Res. of Nov. 23, 1921, No. 29.]

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Registration of Chinese men attached to military expedition against Mexico in 1916.] That the Commissioner General of Immigration be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to register, and to issue an appropriate certificate showing registration to, the three hundred and sixty-five Chinese men, now temporarily domiciled in the United States, who attached themselves to the punitive military expedition under the command of General Pershing which entered Mexico in 1916, and who were brought into the United States as refugees by said expedition when it returned from Mexico.

SEC. 2. [Method of registration — certificate as evidence — examination — deportation.] That the registration hereby provided shall correspond as nearly as circumstances permit to the registration of domiciled Chinese prescribed by section 6 of the Act approved May 5, 1892 (Twenty-seventh Statutes at Large, page 25), as amended by section 1 of the Act approved November 3, 1893 (Twenty-eighth Statutes at Large, page 7), and the certificates of registration issued to such Chinese shall constitute evidence of their right to be and remain within the United States: Provided, however, That before being registered hereunder the said Chinese shall be given the examination prescribed by the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (Thirty-ninth Statutes at Large, page 874), with the exception of the reading test prescribed by section 3 thereof, and such of them as may be found inadmissible under said Act shall not be registered hereunder, but shall be deported by the Secretary of Labor in the manner prescribed by section 19 of said Immigration Act: Provided, further, That if any of the said Chinese shall, at any time after being registered pursuant to this resolution, become members of any of the classes for the expulsion of which provision is made in section 19 of the said Immigration Act, they shall be taken into custody and deported upon the warrant of the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the terms of said section.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the settlement of the claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for the loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States," approved March 3, 1885, as amended by the Act of July 9, 1918, and for other purposes.

[Private property destroyed in military service belonging to officers, enlisted men and nurses — former acts amended.] That the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the settlement of the claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States," approved March 3, 1885, as amended by the Act of July 9, 1918 (Fortieth Statutes, page 880), be, and the same hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. That private property belonging to officers, enlisted men, and members of the Nurse Corps (female) of the Army, including all prescribed articles of equipment and clothing which they are required by law or regulation to own and use in the performance of their duties, and horses and equipment required by law or regulations to be provided by mounted officers, which since the 5th day of April, 1917, has been or shall hereafter be lost, damaged, or destroyed in the military service, shall be replaced, or the damage thereto, or its value recouped to the owner as hereinafter provided, when such loss, damage, or destruction has occurred or shall hereafter occur without fault or negligence on the part of the owner in any of the following circumstances:

"First. When such private property so lost, damaged, or destroyed was shipped on board an unseaworthy vessel by order of an officer authorized to give such order or direct such shipment.

"Second. When it appears that such private property was so lost, damaged, or destroyed in consequence of its owner having given his attention to the saving of human life or property belonging to the United States which was in danger at the same time and under similar circumstances, or while, at the time of such loss, damage, or destruction, the claimant was engaged in authorized military duties in connection therewith.

“Third. When during travel under orders such private property, including the regulating allowance of baggage, transferred by a common carrier, or otherwise transported by the proper agent or agency of the United States Government, is lost, damaged, or destroyed; but replacement, recoupment, or commutation in these circumstances, where the property was or shall be transported by a common carrier, shall be limited to the extent of such loss, damage, or destruction over and above the amount recoverable from said carrier.

“Fourth. When such private property is destroyed or captured by the enemy, or is destroyed to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy, or is abandoned on account of lack of transportation or by reason of military emergency requiring its abandonment, or is otherwise lost in the field during campaign.

“SEC. 2. That except as to such property as by law or regulation is required to be possessed and used by officers, enlisted men, and members of the Army Nurse Corps (female), respectively, the liability of the Government under this Act shall be limited to damage to or loss of such sums of money or such articles of personal property as the Secretary of War shall decide or declare to be reasonable, useful, necessary, and proper for officers, enlisted men, or members of the Army Nurse Corps (female), respectively, as the case may be, to have in their possession while in quarters, or in the field, engaged in the public service in the line of duty.

“SEC. 3. That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to examine into, ascertain, and determine the value of such property lost, destroyed, captured, or abandoned as specified in the foregoing paragraphs, or the amount of damage thereto, as the case may be; and the amount of such value or damage so ascertained and determined shall be paid by disbursing officers of the Army, or such property lost, destroyed, captured, or abandoned, or so damaged as to be unfit for service, may be replaced in kind from Government property on hand when the Secretary of War shall so direct.

“SEC. 4. That the tender of replacement or of commutation or the determination made by the Secretary of War upon a claim presented, as provided for in the foregoing section, shall constitute a final determination of any claim cognizable under this chapter, and such claim shall not thereafter be reopened or considered.

“SEC. 5. That no claim arising under this Act shall be considered unless made within two years from the time that it accrued, except that when a claim accrues in time of war, or when war intervenes within two years after its accrual, such claim may be presented within two years after peace is established.

“SEC. 6. That for the payment of claims arising and established under this Act there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $300,000.

“SEC. 7. That so much of the Act of March 28, 1918 (Fortieth Statutes, pages 479, 480), as makes provision for the presentation, adjustment, and payment of claims of officers and enlisted men for loss of private property destroyed in the military service be, and the same hereby is, repealed.”

[Res. of Dec. 19, 1920. No. 54.]

[SEC. 1.] [Reorganization of administrative branch of government — creation of Congressional Committee for purpose.] That a joint committee is created, to be known as the Joint Committee on Reorganization, which shall consist of three Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President thereof, and three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker thereof. Vacancies occurring in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments.

SEC. 2. [Scope of committee's power.] That it shall be the duty of the Joint Committee on Reorganization to make a survey of the administrative services of the Government for the purpose of securing all pertinent facts concerning their powers and duties, their distribution among the several executive departments, and their overlapping and duplication of authority; also to determine what redistribution of activities should be made among the several services, with a view to the proper correlation of the same, and what departmental regrouping of services should be made, so that each executive department shall embrace only services having close working relation with each other and ministering directly to the primary purpose for which the same are maintained and operated, to the end that there shall be achieved the largest possible measure of efficiency and economy in the conduct of Government business.

SEC. 3. [Reports to Congress — employment of assistants — compensation — expenditures of committee.] That the committee shall, from time to time, report to both the Senate and the House of Representatives the results of its inquiries, together with its recommendations, and shall prepare and submit bills or resolutions having for their purpose the coordination of Government functions and their most efficient and economical conduct, and the final report of said committee shall be submitted not later than the second Monday in December, 1922. The committee is authorized to employ such assistance as it may require, at such compensation as the committee may determine to be just and reasonable, and to make such reasonable expenditures as may be necessary for the proper conduct of its work, such expenditures to be paid in equal parts from the contingent funds of the House of Representatives and the Senate, as from time to time may be duly authorized by resolutions of those bodies.

SEC. 4. [Duty of administrative service to furnish information to committee — examination of records.] That the officers and employees of all administrative services of the Government shall furnish to the committee such information regarding powers, duties, activities, organization, and methods of business as the committee may from time to time require, and the committee or any of its employees, when duly authorized by the committee, shall have access to and the right to examine any books, documents, papers, or records of any administrative service for the purpose of securing the information needed by the committee in the prosecution of its work.

Joint Resolution Directing the War Finance Corporation to take certain action for the relief of the present depression in the agricultural sections of the country, and for other purposes.

[Res. of Jan. 4, 1921. No. 55.]

[War Finance Corporation—revival of activities—financing of exportations.] That the Secretary of the Treasury and the members of the War Finance Corporation are hereby directed to revive the activities of the War Finance Corporation, and that said corporation be at once rehabilitated with the view of assisting in the financing of the exportation of agricultural and other products to foreign markets.

F H GILLETT

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

CHARLES CURTIS

Acting President of the Senate Pro Tempore.

In the House of Representatives of the United States.

January 4, 1921.

The House having proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 212) entitled "Joint resolution directing the War Finance Corporation to take certain action for the relief of the present depression in the agricultural sections of the country, and for other purposes," returned to the Senate by the President of the United States, with his objections thereto, and sent by the Senate to the House of Representatives, with the message of the President returning the joint resolution:

Resolved, That the joint resolution do pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

Clerk.

January 3, 1921.

The President of the United States having returned to the Senate, in which it originated, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 212) "Joint Resolution directing the War Finance Corporation to take certain action for the relief of the present depression in the agricultural sections of the country, and for other purposes," with his objections thereto, the Senate proceeded in conformity with the Constitution to reconsider the same and has Resolved, That the joint resolution do pass, two-thirds of the Senate agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

GEORGE A. SANDERSON
Secretary.

By the Joint Resolution of March 3, 1921, set out in the title WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT, in this volume, infra, much war time legislation was repealed, but the Resolution with respect of the War Finance Corporation Act, excepted from its operation titles 1 and 3 of that Act and this Resolution of January 4, 1921.

An Act To amend the War Finance Corporation Act,* approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide relief for producers of and dealers in agricultural products, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] ["Person" defined.] That when used in this Act the term "person" includes partnerships, corporations, and associations, as well as individuals.

SEC. 2. [Creation of War Finance Corporation — duration of exercise of powers — sec. 1 amended.] That section 1 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation Act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and four additional persons (who shall be the directors first appointed as hereinafter provided) are hereby created a body corporate and politic in deed and in law by the name, style, and title of the War Finance Corporation (herein called the Corporation), and shall have succession for a period of ten years: Provided, That except as otherwise provided by this Act the Corporation shall not exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act except such as are incidental to the liquidation of its assets and the winding up of its affairs, after July 1, 1922."

* The War Finance Corporation Act will be found in 1918 Supp. 107, and amendments thereto will be found in 1919 Supp. 36; 1920 Supp. 30.

SEC. 3. [Advances for agricultural purposes — new sections added.] The War Finance Corporation Act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, is amended by adding after section 21 of Title I thereof the following new sections:

“SEC. 22. Whenever the Board of Directors of the Corporation shall be of the opinion that conditions arising out of the war, or out of the disruption of foreign trade created by the war, have resulted in or may result in an abnormal surplus accumulation of any staple agricultural product of the United States or lack of a market for the sale of same or that the ordinary banking facilities are inadequate to enable producers of or dealers in such products to carry them until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner, the Corporation shall thereupon be empowered to make advances, for periods not exceeding one year from the respective dates of such advances, upon such terms, not inconsistent with this Act, as it may determine;

“(a) To any person engaged in the United States in dealing in, or marketing any such products, or to any association composed of persons engaged in producing such products, for the purpose of assisting such person or association to carry such products until they can be exported or sold for export in an orderly manner. Any such advance shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding 1½ per centum in excess of the rate of discount for ninety-day commercial paper prevailing at the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the borrower is located at the time when such advance is made;

“(b) To any person without the United States purchasing such products, but in no case shall any of the money so advanced be expended without the United States. Every such advance shall be secured by adequate security of such character as shall be prescribed by the Board of Directors of the Corporation. The rate of interest charged on any such advance shall be determined by the Board of Directors. The Corporation shall retain power to recall an advance or require additional security at any time.

“(c) To any bank, banker, or trust company of the United States which makes or has made an advance or advances to any such person as is described in paragraph (a) of this section for the purpose therein set forth or which makes or has made an advance or advances to any producer for the purpose set forth in paragraph (a). The aggregate of advances made to any bank, banker, or trust company shall not exceed the amount remaining unpaid of the advances made by such bank, banker, or trust company for purposes herein described. Such advances shall bear interest at the rates fixed by the Corporation.

“SEC. 23. Notwithstanding the limitation of section 1, the advances provided for by section 21 and section 22 of this Act may be made until July 1, 1922. The Corporation may from time to time extend the time of payment of any such advance or advances through renewals, substitution of new obligations, or otherwise, but the time for the payment of any advance made under authority of section 21 and section 22 shall not be extended beyond three years from the date upon which such advance was originally made.

“All advances made under section 21 or under section 22 of this Act shall be made against promissory note or notes, or other instrument or instruments in writing imposing on the borrower a primary and unconditional obligation to repay the advance at maturity, with interest as stipulated therein, with full and adequate security in each instance by indorsement, guaranty, pledge, or otherwise. The Corporation shall retain the power to require additional security at any time. All notes or other instruments evidencing advances to persons outside the United States shall be in terms payable in the United States, in currency of the United States, and shall be secured by adequate guaranties or indorsements in the United States, or by warehouse receipts, acceptable collateral, or other instruments in writing conveying or securing marketable title to agricultural products in the United States.

" SEC. 24. Whenever in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Corporation the public interest may require it, the Corporation shall be authorized and empowered to make advances upon such terms not inconsistent with this Act as it may determine to any bank, banker, or trust company in the United States, or to any cooperative association of producers in the United States which may have made advances for agricultural purposes, including the breeding, raising, fattening, and marketing of live stock, or may have discounted or rediscounted notes, drafts, bills of exchange or other negotiable instruments issued for such purposes. Such advance or advances may be made upon promissory note or notes, or other instrument or instruments, in such form as to impose on the borrowing bank, banker, trust company, or cooperative association a primary and unconditional obligation to repay the advance at maturity with interest as stipulated therein, and shall be fully and adequately secured in each instance by indorsement, guaranty, pledge, or otherwise. Such advances may be made for a period not exceeding one year and the Corporation may from time to time extend the time of payment of any such advance through renewals, substitution of new obligations or otherwise, but the time for the payment of any such advance shall not be extended beyond three years from the date upon which such advance was originally made. The aggregate of advances made to any bank, banker, trust company, or cooperative association shall not exceed the amount remaining unpaid of the advances made by such bank, banker, trust company, or cooperative association for purposes herein described.

" The Corporation may, in exceptional cases, upon such terms not inconsistent with this Act as it may determine, purchase from domestic banks, bankers, or trust companies, notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other instruments of indebtedness secured by chattel mortgages, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, or other instruments in writing conveying or securing marketable title to staple agricultural products, including live stock. The Corporation may from time to time, upon like security, extend the time of payment of any note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument acquired under this section, but the time for the payment of any such note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument shall not be extended beyond three years from the date upon which such note, draft, bill of exchange, or other instrument was acquired by the Corporation. The Corporation is further authorized, upon such terms as it may prescribe, to purchase, sell, or otherwise deal in acceptances, adequately secured, issued by banking corporations organized under section 25 (a) of the Federal Reserve Act: Provided, That no purchase of acceptances of the said banking corporations shall be made except for the purpose of assisting the said banking corporations in financing the exportation of agricultural and manufactured products from the United States to foreign countries. No such acceptances shall be purchased which have a maturity at the time of such purchase of more than three years.

" Advances or purchases may be made under this section at any time prior to July 1, 1922.

" SEC. 25. The aggregate amount of all advances made under sections 21, 22, and 24, and of all notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or other securities purchased under section 24 remaining unpaid, shall not at any one time exceed $1,000,000,000.

" SEC. 26. Whenever in this Act the words ' bank, banker, or trust company ' are used, they shall be deemed to include any reputable and responsible financing institution incorporated under the laws of any State or of the United States with resources adequate to the undertaking contemplated.

" SEC. 27. In order to enable the Corporation to carry out the purposes of this Act, the Comptroller of the Currency is hereby authorized to furnish to the Corporation for its confidential use such reports, records, or other information as he may have available relating to financial condition of national banks to which the Corporation has made or contemplates making advances, and to make, through his examiners, for the confidential use of the Corporation, examinations of banks, bankers, or trust companies, other than national banks, to which the Corporation has made or contemplates making advances: Provided, That no such examination shall be made without the consent of such bank, banker, or trust company.

" SEC. 28. No person, bank, banker, or trust company receiving money under the provisions of this Act shall loan such money at a rate of interest greater than 2 per centum per annum in excess of the rate of interest charged or received by the Corporation upon such money.[""]

" SEC. 4. [Advances to promote commerce with foreign nations — sec. 21 partially repealed.] Sec. 21 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation Act is hereby amended by striking out paragraphs (b) and (c) thereof, and by striking out at the beginning of the first paragraph the letter (a).

" SEC. 5. [Issuance of notes and bonds — sec. 12 amended.] The first paragraph of section 12 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation Act is hereby amended and reenacted to read as follows:

" SEC. 12. That the Corporation shall be empowered and authorized to issue and have outstanding at any one time its notes or bonds in an amount aggregating not more than three times its paid-in capital, such notes or bonds to mature not less than six months nor more than five years from the respective dates of issue, and may be redeemable before maturity at the option of the Corporation, as may be stipulated in such notes or bonds, and to bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the board of directors, but such rate or rates of interest shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such notes or bonds shall have a first and paramount floating charge on all the assets of the Corporation, and the Corporation shall not at any time mortgage or pledge any of its assets. Such notes or bonds may be issued at not less than par in payment of any advances authorized by this title, or may be offered for sale publicly or to any individual, firm, corporation, or association, at such price or prices at not less than par as the board of directors, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may determine."

The power of the corporation to issue notes or bonds, may be exercised at any time prior to January 1, 1925, but no notes or bonds shall mature later than July 1, 1925.

SEC. 6. [Notes and bonds of Corporation as security in Federal Reserve Bank transactions — discounts and rediscounts — sec. 13 amended.] Paragraph 1 of section 13 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation Act is hereby amended and reenacted to read as follows:

" That the Federal Reserve Banks shall be authorized, subject to the maturity limitations of the Federal Reserve Act and to regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, to discount the direct obligations of member banks secured by such notes or bonds of the Corporation and to rediscount notes or other negotiable instruments secured by such notes or bonds and indorsed by a member bank. Discounts or rediscounts under this section shall be at an interest rate equal to the prevailing rate for eligible commercial paper of corresponding maturities."

SEC. 7. [Unemployed moneys of Corporation — disposition — Federal Reserve Banks as depositories, etc.— liquidation of assets — winding up affairs — sec. 15 amended.] That section 15 of Title I of the War Finance Corporation Act be amended and reenacted to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. That all moneys of the Corporation not otherwise employed may be kept on deposit, subject to check, with the Treasurer of the United States, or in any of the Federal reserve banks, or may, upon the direction of the board of directors of the Corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, be invested in bonds or other obligations of the United States issued or converted after September 24, 1917, or upon like direction and approval, may be used from time to time in the purchase or redemption of any bonds issued by the Corporation.

"The Federal reserve banks are hereby authorized to act as depositories for and as fiscal agents of the Corporation in the general performance of the powers conferred by this title.

"Beginning July 1, 1922, the directors of the Corporation shall proceed to liquidate its assets and wind up its affairs, except as specifically provided in this title; but the directors of the Corporation, in their discretion, may, from time to time prior to such liquidation, sell and dispose of any securities or other property acquired by the Corporation.

"After July 1, 1922, the Corporation may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, as a special deposit, out of money belonging to the Corporation, or from time to time received by it in the course of liquidation or otherwise, an amount equal to the aggregate amount of all outstanding bonds or notes of the Corporation, including principal and interest to maturity. Moneys so deposited shall constitute a special fund for the payment of principal and interest of such bonds or notes, or for the purchase or redemption of such bonds or notes at not more than par and accrued interest, and may be drawn upon or paid out for no other purpose.

"Whenever there shall have been deposited in such special fund an amount equal to the aggregate amount of all bonds or notes of the Corporation then outstanding, including principal and interest to maturity, the Corporation may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, pay into the Treasury of the United States, as miscellaneous receipts, any moneys belonging to the Corporation, or received from time to time in the course of liquidation or otherwise, in excess of a reasonable reserve to meet all liabilities and expenses during liquidation. Whenever any such payment is made, an amount of capital stock of the Corporation equal in par value to the amount so paid in shall be canceled and retired.

"All net earnings of the Corporation not required for its operations shall be accumulated as a reserve fund until such time as the Corporation liquidates under the terms of this title.

“Any balance remaining after the payment of all the Corporation’s debts, and after the retirement of all its capital stock as herein provided, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts, and thereupon the Corporation shall be dissolved.”

TITLE I.

EMERGENCY TARIFF.

[SEC. 1.] [Articles dutiable and rates of duties.] That on and after the day following the passage of this Act, for the period of six months, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the following articles, when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands, the Virgin Islands, and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), the rates of duty which are prescribed by this section, namely:

1. Wheat, 35 cents per bushel.
2. Wheat flour and semolina, 20 per centum ad valorem.
3. Flaxseed, 30 cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds.
4. Corn or maize, 15 cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds.
5. Beans, provided for in paragraph 197 of the Act entitled "An Act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," approved October 3, 1913, 2 cents per pound.
6. Peanuts or ground beans, 3 cents per pound.
7. Potatoes, 25 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.
8. Onions, 40 cents per bushel of fifty-seven pounds.
9. Rice, cleaned, 2 cents per pound, except rice cleaned for use in the manufacture of canned foods, on which the rate of duty shall be 1 cent per pound; uncleaned rice, or rice free of the outer hull and still having the inner cuticle on, $1\frac{3}{4}$ cents per pound; rice flour, and rice meal, and rice broken which will pass through a number twelve wire sieve of a kind prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, one-fourth of 1 cent per pound; paddy, or rice having the outer hull on, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound.
10. Lemons, 2 cents per pound.
11. Oils: Peanut, 26 cents per gallon; cottonseed, coconut, and soya bean, 20 cents per gallon; olive, 40 cents per gallon in bulk, 50 cents per gallon in containers of less than five gallons.
12. Cattle, 30 per centum ad valorem.
13. Sheep: One year old or over, $2 per head; less than one year old, $1 per head.
14. Fresh or frozen beef, veal, mutton, lamb, and pork, 2 cents per pound. Meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved, not specially provided for herein, 25 per centum ad valorem.
15. Cattle and sheep and other stock imported for breeding purposes shall be admitted free of duty.
16. Cotton having a staple of one and three-eighths inches or more in length, 7 cents per pound.
17. Manufactures of which cotton of the kind provided for in paragraph 16 is the component material of chief value, 7 cents per pound, in addition to the rates of duty imposed thereon by existing law.
18. Wool, commonly known as clothing wool, including hair of the camel, angora goat, and alpaca, but not such wools as are commonly known as carpet wools: Unwashed, 15 cents per pound; washed, 30 cents per pound; scoured, 45 cents per pound. Unwashed wools shall be considered such as shall have been shorn from the animal without any cleaning; washed wools shall be considered such as have been washed with water only on the animal's back or on the skin; wools washed in any other manner than on the animal's back or on the skin shall be considered as scoured wool. On wool and hair provided for in this paragraph, which is sorted or increased in value by the rejection of any part of the original fleece, the duty shall be twice the duty to which it would otherwise be subject, but not more than 45 cents per pound.

19. Wool and hair of the kind provided for in paragraph 18, when advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, and manufactures of which wool or hair of the kind provided for in paragraph 18 is the component material of chief value, 45 cents per pound in addition to the rates of duty imposed thereon by existing law.

20. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above seventy-five degrees, one and sixteen one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, four one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above forty degrees, 24 per centum ad valorem; testing above forty degrees and not above fifty-six degrees, $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents per gallon; testing above fifty-six degrees, 7 cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test.

21. Butter, and substitutes therefor, 6 cents per pound.

22. Cheese, and substitutes therefor, 23 per centum ad valorem.

23. Milk, fresh, 2 cents per gallon; cream, 5 cents per gallon.

24. Milk, preserved or condensed, or sterilized by heating or other processes, including weight of immediate coverings, 2 cents per pound; sugar of milk, 5 cents per pound.

25. Wrapper tobacco and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per centum of wrapper tobacco, and all leaf tobacco the product of two or more countries or dependencies when mixed or packed together, if unstemmed, $2.35 per pound; if stemmed, $3 per pound; filler tobacco not specially provided for in this section, if unstemmed, 35 cents per pound; if stemmed, 50 cents per pound.

The term "wrapper tobacco" as used in this section means that quality of leaf tobacco which has the requisite color, texture, and burn, and is of sufficient size for cigar wrappers, and the term "filler tobacco" means all other leaf tobacco.

26. Apples, 30 cents per bushel.

27. Cherries in a raw state, preserved in brine or otherwise, 3 cents per pound.

28. Olives, in solutions, 25 cents per gallon; olives, not in solutions, 3 cents per pound.

SEC. 2. [Suspension of former rates for six months period.] The rates of duty imposed by section 1 (except under paragraphs 17 and 19) in the case of articles on which a rate of duty is imposed by existing law, shall be in lieu of such rate of duty during the six months' period referred to in section 1.

SEC. 3. [Rates in force after six months period.] After the expiration of the six months' period referred to in section 1, the rates of duty upon the articles therein enumerated shall be those, if any, imposed thereon by existing law.

By Act of Nov. 16, 1921 (see infra, this title, p. 45), it is provided that this title I "shall continue in force until otherwise provided by law."

SEC. 4. [Levy, collection, payment and penalties.] The duties imposed by this title shall be levied, collected, and paid on the same basis, in the same manner, and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as the duties imposed by such Act of 1913.

SEC. 5. [Short title — “Emergency Tariff Act.”] That this title shall be cited as the “Emergency Tariff Act.”

TITLE II.—ANTIDUMPING.

DUMPING INVESTIGATION.

SEC. 201. (a) That whenever the Secretary of the Treasury (hereinafter in this Act called the “Secretary”), after such investigation as he deems necessary, finds that an industry in the United States is being or is likely to be injured, or is prevented from being established, by reason of the importation into the United States of a class or kind of foreign merchandise, and that merchandise of such class or kind is being sold or is likely to be sold in the United States or elsewhere at less than its fair value, then he shall make such finding public to the extent he deems necessary, together with a description of the class or kind of merchandise to which it applies in such detail as may be necessary for the guidance of the appraising officers.

(b) Whenever, in the case of any imported merchandise of a class or kind as to which the Secretary has not so made public a finding, the appraiser or person acting as appraiser has reason to believe or suspect, from the invoice or other papers or from information presented to him, that the purchase price is less, or that the exporter’s sales price is less or likely to be less, than the foreign market value (or, in the absence of such value, than the cost of production) he shall forthwith, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, notify the Secretary of such fact and withhold his appraisement report to the collector as to such merchandise until the further order of the Secretary, or until the Secretary has made public a finding as provided in subdivision (a) in regard to such merchandise.

SPECIAL DUMPING DUTY.

SEC. 202. (a) That in the case of all imported merchandise, whether dutiable or free of duty, of a class or kind as to which the Secretary has made public a finding as provided in section 201, and as to which the appraiser or person acting as appraiser has made no appraisement report to the collector before such finding has been so made public, if the purchase price or the exporter’s sales price is less than the foreign market value (or, in the absence of such value, than the cost of production) there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in addition to the duties imposed thereon by law, a special dumping duty in an amount equal to such difference.

(b) If it is established to the satisfaction of the appraising officers that the amount of such difference between the purchase price and the foreign market value is wholly or partly due to the fact that the wholesale quantities, in which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers for exportation to the United States in the ordinary course of trade, are greater than the wholesale quantities in which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country of exportation in the ordinary course of trade for home consumption (or if not so sold or offered for sale for home consumption, then for exportation to countries other than the United States), then due allowance shall be made therefor in determining the foreign market value for the purposes of this section.

(c) If it is established to the satisfaction of the appraising officers that the amount of such difference between the exporter's sales price and the foreign market value is wholly or partly due to the fact that the wholesale quantities, in which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the United States in the ordinary course of trade, are greater than the wholesale quantities in which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country of exportation in the ordinary course of trade for home consumption (or, if not so sold or offered for sale for home consumption, then for exportation to countries other than the United States), then due allowance shall be made therefor in determining the foreign market value for the purposes of this section.

PURCHASE PRICE.

SEC. 203. That for the purposes of this title, the purchase price of imported merchandise shall be the price at which such merchandise has been purchased or agreed to be purchased, prior to the time of exportation, by the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported, plus when not included in such price, the cost of all containers and coverings and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, less the amount, if any, included in such price, attributable to any additional costs, charges, and expenses, and United States import duties, incident to bringing the merchandise from the place of shipment in the country of exportation to the place of delivery in the United States; and plus the amount, if not included in such price, of any export tax imposed by the country of exportation on the exportation of the merchandise to the United States; and plus the amount of any import duties imposed by the country of exportation which have been rebated, or which have not been collected, by reason of the exportation of the merchandise to the United States; and plus the amount of any taxes imposed in the country of exportation upon the manufacturer, producer, or seller, in respect to the manufacture, production or sale of the merchandise, which have been rebated, or which have not been collected, by reason of the exportation of the merchandise to the United States.

EXPORTER'S SALES PRICE.

SEC. 204. That for the purpose of this title the exporter's sales price of imported merchandise shall be the price at which such merchandise is sold or agreed to be sold in the United States, before or after the time of importation, by or for the account of the exporter, plus, when not included in such price, the cost of all containers and coverings and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, less (1) the amount, if any, included in such price, attributable to any additional costs, charges, and expenses, and United States import duties, incident to bringing the merchandise from the place of shipment in the country of exportation to the place of delivery in the United States, (2) the amount of the commissions, if any, for selling in the United States the particular merchandise under consideration, (3) an amount equal to the expenses, if any, generally incurred by or for the account of the exporter in the United States in selling identical or substantially identical merchandise, and (4) the amount of any export tax imposed by the country of exportation on the exportation of the merchandise to the United States; and plus the amount of any import duties imposed by the country of exportation which have been rebated, or which have not been collected, by reason of the exportation of the merchandise to the United States; and plus the amount of any taxes imposed in the country of exportation upon the manufacturer, producer, or seller in respect to the manufacture, production, or sale of the merchandise, which have been rebated, or which have not been collected, by reason of the exportation of the merchandise to the United States.

FOREIGN MARKET VALUE.

SEC. 205. That for the purposes of this title the foreign market value of imported merchandise shall be the price, at the time of exportation of such merchandise to the United States, at which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country from which exported, in the usual wholesale quantities and in the ordinary course of trade for home consumption (or, if not so sold or offered for sale for home consumption, then for exportation to countries other than the United States), plus, when not included in such price, the cost of all containers and coverings and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition packed ready for shipment to the United States, except that in the case of merchandise purchased or agreed to be purchased by the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported, prior to the time of exportation, the foreign market value shall be ascertained as of the date of such purchase or agreement to purchase. In the ascertainment of foreign market value for the purposes of this title no pretended sale or offer for sale, and no sale or offer for sale intended to establish a fictitious market, shall be taken into account.

COST OF PRODUCTION.

SEC. 206. That for the purposes of this title the cost of production of imported merchandise shall be in the sum of —

(1) The cost of materials of, and of fabrication, manipulation, or other process employed in manufacturing or producing, identical or substantially identical merchandise, at a time preceding the date of shipment of the particular merchandise under consideration which would ordinarily permit the manufacture or production of the particular merchandise under consideration in the usual course of business;

(2) The usual general expenses (not less than 10 per centum of such cost) in the case of identical or substantially identical merchandise;

(3) The cost of all containers and coverings, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the particular merchandise under consideration in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States; and

(4) An addition for profit (not less than 8 per centum of the sum of the amounts found under paragraphs (1) and (2) equal to the profit which is ordinarily added, in the case of merchandise of the same general character as the particular merchandise under consideration, by manufacturers or producers in the country of manufacture or production who are engaged in the same general trade as the manufacturer or producer of the particular merchandise under consideration.

EXPORTER.

SEC. 207. That for the purposes of this title the exporter of imported merchandise shall be the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported into the United States:

(1) If such person is the agent or principal of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer; or

(2) If such person owns or controls, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, any interest in the business of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer; or

(4) If any person or persons, jointly or severally, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, own or control in the aggregate 20 per centum or more of the voting power or control in the business carried on by the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported into the United States, and also 20 per centum or more of such power or control in the business of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer.

OATHS AND BONDS ON ENTRY.

SEC. 208. That in the case of all imported merchandise, whether dutiable or free of duty, of a class or kind as to which the Secretary has made public a finding as provided in section 201, and delivery of which has not been made by the collector before such finding has been so made public, unless the person by whom or for whose account such merchandise is imported makes oath before the collector, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, that he is not an exporter, or unless such person declares under oath at the time of entry, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the exporter's sales price of such merchandise, it shall be unlawful for the collector to deliver the merchandise until such person has made oath before the collector, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, that the merchandise has not been sold or agreed to be sold by such person, and has given bond to the collector, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, with sureties approved by the collector, in an amount equal to the estimated value of the merchandise, conditioned: (1) that he will report to the collector the exporter's sales price of the merchandise within 30 days after such merchandise has been sold or agreed to be sold in the United States, (2) that he will pay on demand from the collector the amount of special dumping duty, if any, imposed by this title upon such merchandise, and (3) that he will furnish to the collector such information as may be in his possession and as may be necessary for the ascertainment of such duty, and will keep such records as to the sale of such merchandise as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

DUTIES OF APPRAISERS.

SEC. 209. That in the case of all imported merchandise, whether dutiable or free of duty, of a class or kind as to which the Secretary has made public a finding as provided in section 201, and as to which the appraiser or person acting as appraiser has made no appraisement report to the collector before such finding has been so made public, it shall be the duty of each appraiser or person acting as appraiser, by all reasonable ways and means to ascertain, estimate, and appraise (any invoice or affidavit thereto or statement of cost of production to the contrary notwithstanding) and report to the collector the foreign market value or the cost of production, as the case may be, the purchase price, and the exporter's sales price, and any other facts which the Secretary may deem necessary for the purposes of this title.

APPEALS AND PROTESTS.

SEC. 210. That for the purposes of this title the determination of the appraiser or person acting as appraiser as to the foreign market value or the cost of production, as the case may be, the purchase price, and the exporter's sales price, and the action of the collector in assessing special dumping duty, shall have the same force and effect and be subject to the same right of appeal and protest, under the same conditions and subject to the same limitations; and the general appraisers, the Board of General Appraisers, and the Court of Customs Appeals shall have the same jurisdiction, powers, and duties in connection with such appeals and protests as in the case of appeals and protests relating to customs duties under existing law.

DRAWBACKS.

SEC. 211. That the special dumping duty imposed by this title shall be treated in all respects as regular customs duties within the meaning of all laws relating to the drawback of customs duties.

SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 212. That this title may be cited as the "Antidumping Act, 1921."

TITLE III.—ASSESSMENT OF AD VALOREM DUTIES.

SEC. 301. [Export value of merchandise as basis of assessment.] That whenever merchandise which is imported into the United States is subject to an ad valorem rate of duty or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof, duty shall in no case be assessed on a value less than the export value of such merchandise.

EXPORT VALUE.

SEC. 302. That for the purposes of this title the export value of imported merchandise shall be the price, at the time of exportation of such merchandise to the United States, at which such or similar merchandise is sold or freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country from which exported, in the usual wholesale quantities and in the ordinary course of trade, for exportation to the United States, plus, when not included in such price, the cost of all containers and coverings and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, less the amount, if any, included in such price, attributable to any additional costs, charges, and expenses, and United States import duties, incident to bringing the merchandise from the place of shipment in the country of exportation to the place of delivery in the United States, and plus, if not included in such price, the amount of any export tax imposed by the country of exportation on merchandise exported to the United States.

REFERENCES TO "VALUE" IN EXISTING LAW.

SEC. 303. (a) That wherever in Title I of this Act, or in the Tariff Act of 1913, as amended, or in any law of the United States in existence at the time of the enactment of this Act relative to the appraisement of imported merchandise (except sections 2874, 2976, and 3016 of the Revised Statutes, and section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1916), reference is made to the value of imported merchandise (irrespective of the particular phraseology used and irrespective of whether or not such phraseology is limited or qualified by words referring to country or port of exportation or principal markets) such reference shall, in respect to all merchandise imported on or after the day this Act takes effect, be construed to refer, except as provided in subdivision (b), to actual market value as defined by the law in existence at the time of the enactment of this Act, or to export value as defined by section 302 of this Act, whichever is higher.

(b) If the rate of duty upon imported merchandise is in any manner dependent upon the value of any component material thereof, such value shall be an amount determined under the provisions of the Tariff Act of 1913, as in force prior to the enactment of this Act.

DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 304. That when used in this title the term "Tariff Act of 1913" means the Act entitled "An Act to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," approved October 3, 1913.

TITLE IV.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

STATEMENTS IN INVOICE.

SEC. 401. That all invoices of imported merchandise, and all statements in the form of an invoice, in addition to the statements required by law in existence at the time of the enactment of this Act, shall contain such other statements as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe, and a statement as to the currency in which made out, specifying whether gold, silver, or paper.

STATEMENTS AT TIME OF ENTRY.

SEC. 402. That the owner, importer, consignee, or agent, making entry of imported merchandise, shall set forth upon the invoice, or statement in the form of an invoice, and in the entry, in addition to the statements required by the law in existence at the time of the enactment of this Act, such statements, under oath if required, as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

CONVERSION OF CURRENCY.

SEC. 403. (a) That section 25 of the Act of August 27, 1894, entitled "An Act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 25. That the value of foreign coin as expressed in the money of account of the United States shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value; and the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated quarterly by the Director of the Mint and be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury quarterly on the first day of January, April, July, and October in each year."

(b) For the purpose of the assessment and collection of duties upon merchandise imported into the United States on or after the day of the enactment of this Act, wherever it is necessary to convert foreign currency into currency of the United States, such conversion, except as provided in subdivision (c), shall be made at the values proclaimed by the Secretary under the provisions of section 25 of such Act of August 27, 1894, for the quarter in which the merchandise was exported.

(c) If no such value has been proclaimed, or if the value so proclaimed varies by 5 per centum or more from a value measured by the buying rate in the New York market at noon on the day of exportation, conversion shall be made at a value measured by such buying rate. For the purposes of this subdivision such buying rate shall be the buying rate for cable transfers payable in the foreign currency so to be converted; and shall be determined by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and certified daily to the Secretary, who shall make it public at such times and to such extent as he deems necessary. In ascertaining such buying rate such Federal Reserve Bank may in its discretion (1) take into consideration the last ascertainable transactions and quotations, whether direct or through the exchange of other currencies, and (2) if there is no market buying rate for such cable transfers, calculate such rate from actual transactions and quotations in demand or time bills of exchange.

(d) Sections 2903 and 3565 of the Revised Statutes are repealed.

(e) Section 25 of such Act of August 27, 1894, as in force prior to the enactment of this Act, and section 2903 of the Revised Statutes, shall remain in force for the assessment and collection of duties on merchandise imported into the United States prior to the day of the enactment of this Act.

For Act of Aug. 27, 1894, sec. 25, here amended, see 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 368.

INSPECTION OF EXPORTER'S BOOKS.

SEC. 404. That if any person manufacturing, producing, selling, shipping, or consigning merchandise exported to the United States fails, at the request of the Secretary, or an appraiser, or person acting as appraiser, or a collector, or a general appraiser, or the Board of General Appraisers, as the case may be, to permit a duly accredited officer of the United States to inspect his books, papers, records, accounts, documents, or correspondence, pertaining to the market value or classification of such merchandise, then while such failure continues the Secretary, under regulations prescribed by him, (1) shall prohibit the importation into the United States of merchandise manufactured, produced, sold, shipped or consigned by such person, and (2) may instruct the collectors to withhold delivery of merchandise manufactured, produced, sold, shipped or consigned by such person. If such failure continues for a period of one year from the date of such instructions the collector shall cause the merchandise, unless previously exported, to be sold at public auction as in the case of forfeited merchandise.

INSPECTION OF IMPORTER'S BOOKS.

SEC. 405. That if any person importing merchandise into the United States or dealing in imported merchandise fails, at the request of the Secretary, or an appraiser, or person acting as appraiser, or a collector, or a general appraiser, or the Board of General Appraisers, as the case may be, to permit a duly accredited officer of the United States to inspect his books, papers, records, accounts, documents, or correspondence, pertaining to the value or classification of such merchandise, then while such failure continues the Secretary, under regulations prescribed by him, (1) shall prohibit the importation of merchandise into the United States by or for the account of such person, and (2) shall instruct the collectors to withhold delivery of merchandise imported by or for the account of such person. If such failure continues for a period of one year from the date of such instructions the collector shall cause the merchandise, unless previously exported, to be sold at public auction as in the case of forfeited merchandise.

DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 406. That when used in Title II or Title III or in this title —

The term "person" includes individuals, partnerships, corporations, and associations; and

The term "United States" includes all Territories and possessions subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, except the Philippine Islands, the Virgin Islands, the islands of Guam and Tutuila, and the Canal Zone.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

SEC. 407. That the Secretary shall make rules and regulations necessary for the enforcement of this Act.

TITLE V.—DYES AND CHEMICALS.

SEC. 501. (a) [Refusal of entry] That on and after the day following the enactment of this Act, for the period of three months, no sodium nitrite, no dyes or dyestuffs, including crudes and intermediates, no product or products derived directly or indirectly from coal tar (including crudes, intermediates, finished or partly finished products, and mixtures and compounds of such coal-tar products), and no synthetic organic drugs or synthetic organic chemicals, shall be admitted to entry or delivered from customs custody in the United States or in any of its possessions unless the Secretary determines that such article or a satisfactory substitute therefor is not obtainable in the United States or in any of its possessions in sufficient quantities and on reasonable terms as to quality, price and delivery, and that such article in the quantity to be admitted is required for consumption by an actual consumer in the United States or in any of its possessions within six months after receipt of the merchandise.

This subdivision was amended by Act of Aug. 24, 1921 (see infra, p. 45), by striking out the words "three months" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "six months." It was further amended by Act of Nov. 16, 1921 (see infra, this title, p. 45), which provided that Title V "shall continue in force until otherwise provided by law."

(b) [War Trade Board Section of Department of State — Abolishment — Treasury Department as successor — effect on existing licenses relating to dye and chemical imports.] Upon the day following the enactment of this Act the War Trade Board Section of the Department of State shall cease to exist; all clerks and employees of such War Trade Board Section shall be transferred to and become clerks and employees of the Treasury Department and all books, documents, and other records relating to such dye and chemical import control of such War Trade Board Section shall become books, documents and records of the Treasury Department. All individual licenses issued by such War Trade Board Section prior to the enactment of this Act shall remain in effect during the period of their validity, and the importations under such licenses shall be permitted. All unexpended funds and appropriations for the use and maintenance of such War Trade Board Section shall become funds and appropriations available to be expended by the Secretary in the exercise of the power and authority conferred upon him by this section.

Sec. 502. [Short Title.] That this title may be cited as the "Dye and Chemical Control Act, 1921."

An Act To constitute Forth Worth, in the State of Texas, a port of entry and to extend to said port the privileges of section 7 of an Act approved June 10, 1880, entitled "An Act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes."

[Act of June 18, 1921.]

[Port of Fort Worth — immediate transportation privileges.] That Fort Worth, in the State of Texas, be, and the same is hereby, constituted a port of entry in the customs collection district of San Antonio, Texas, and that the privileges of section 7 of an Act entitled "An Act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1880, as amended, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement, be, and the same are hereby, extended to the said port of Fort Worth, in the State of Texas.

For Act of June 10, 1880, as amended, see 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1119.

An Act To control importations of dyes and chemicals.

[Sec. 1.] [Dyes and chemicals — refusal of entry.] That subdivision (a) of section 501 of the Dye and Chemical Control Act, approved May 27, 1921, is amended by striking out the words "three months," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "six months."

For subd. (a) of sec. 501 of the Dye and Chemical Control Act, here amended, see supra, this title, p. 44.

An Act To extend the Tariff Act approved May 27, 1921.

[Tariff Act of 1921 — continuance in force.] That Titles I and V of the Act entitled "An Act imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies and to provide revenue; to regulate commerce with foreign countries; to prevent dumping of foreign merchandise on the markets of the United States; to regulate the value of foreign money; and for other purposes," approved May 27, 1921, shall continue in force until otherwise provided by law.

For the parts of the Act of May 27, 1921, here continued in force, see supra, this title.

There is hereby constituted a commission composed of the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of the Treasury, of which the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate shall be the chairman, whose duty it shall be to consider and formulate plans or proposals for the purchase of embassy, legation, and consular buildings and grounds under the authority contained in this Act.

With the approval of said commission and within a limit of cost at any one place of $150,000, the Secretary of State shall have power to purchase from any foreign government suitable buildings, or buildings and grounds, for embassy, legation, and consular purposes, separate or combined, in any city specified in connection with the foregoing appropriation of $300,000, and to effect payment therefor by causing the purchase price thereof to be credited upon the obligations or debts of such government then held by or owing to the United States, or by causing a part of such purchase price so to be credited, paying the remainder in money from applicable sums hereinbefore appropriated for the acquisition of embassy, legation, and consular buildings and grounds; and when the Secretary of State shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that a purchase has been made, the government from which made, and that a part or all of the purchase price is to be paid by crediting the same upon obligations or debts of said government then held by or owing to the United States, the date as of which said payment is to be made and the amount in United States dollars so to be credited, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to credit the amount so certified upon unpaid principal or interest of obligations or debts of said foreign government held by the United States: And provided further, That the President is hereby authorized in his discretion to accept on behalf of the United States unconditional gifts of land, buildings, furniture, and furnishings, or any of them, for the use of diplomatic and consular offices and residences.

* * * [Consuls — citizenship.] Every consul general, consul, vice consul, and wherever practicable, every consular agent shall be an American citizen.

* * * [Clerks at consulates — appointment — civil-service rules.] Clerks, whenever hereafter appointed, shall, so far as practicable, be appointed under civil-service rules and regulations.

* * * [American convicts in China, Chosen, Siam and Turkey — expense of maintenance.] Expenses of maintaining at Shanghai, under charge of the United States marshal for China, an institution for incarcerating American convicts and insane in China, $2,000; for salary of deputy marshal, $1,200; assistant deputy marshal, $800; in all, $4,000;

Paying for the keeping, feeding, and transportation of prisoners in China, Chosen, Siam, and Turkey and of those declared insane by the United States Court for China, $9,000;

Rent of prison for American convicts in Smyrna, Turkey, and for wages of keepers of the same, $1,000.

Rent of prison for American convicts in Constantinople, Turkey, and for wages of keepers of the same, $1,000; * * *

SEC. 3. [International conferences — limitation on character of expenditures.] No sums herein appropriated in connection with the participation of the United States in international conferences, congresses, or meetings within the United States shall be expended in payment of the personal expense, subsistence, transportation, or entertainment of any person or for the purchase of medals, badges, or souvenirs.

[Act of Dec. 21, 1920.]

[SEC. 1.] [Hotel proprietors and innkeepers — liability to guests — articles of value — providing safe.] That whenever the proprietor of any hotel or inn in the District of Columbia shall provide in such hotel or inn a suitable safe or vault for the safekeeping of any money, jewelry, or other articles of value, other than wearing apparel, belonging to or in the custody of guests, and shall notify the guests thereof by keeping conspicuously posted in the office and on the inside of the entrance door of the sleeping rooms of said hotel or inn a notice printed in distinct English type, such proprietor shall not be liable for the loss of or injury to any such property by theft or otherwise sustained by any guest unless such guest has offered to deliver the same to such proprietor for custody in such safe or vault and such proprietor has omitted or refused to receive it and deposit it in such safe or vault and to give such guest a receipt therefor: Provided, That in no case shall such proprietor be liable for the loss or injury to property so deposited in an amount exceeding the sum of $500, except by special contract in writing, stating the kind and value of property received, the kind and extent of the liability of said proprietor, and the reasonable consideration to be paid for such safekeeping, not in excess of the customary insurance charge or premium, and which said contract shall be signed by said guest and said proprietor or his clerk: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall apply to such an amount of money and such jewelry or other articles of value as is usual, common, or prudent for guests to retain in their rooms.

SEC. 2. [Baggage stolen from room of guest — liability of proprietor.] That whenever the proprietor of any hotel or inn shall keep posted in a conspicuous manner on the inside of the entrance door to the sleeping rooms of said hotel or inn a notice printed in distinct English type requiring the guests occupying said rooms to lock or bolt the door of said room and upon leaving said room to lock the door and deposit the key at the office, the proprietor shall not be liable for any baggage stolen from said room if it shall appear that said room was left by the guest unlocked or unbolted, or that the key was not so deposited at the office at the time of the loss of said baggage, unless the loss is directly or indirectly caused by or attributable to the proprietor or his employee or employees.

An Act To extend for the period of seven months the provisions of Title II of the Food Control and the District of Columbia Rents Act,* approved October 22, 1919, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Extension of period for remaining in force.] That Title II of the Food Control and the District of Columbia Rents Act, approved October 22, 1919, shall remain in full force and effect until May 22, 1922.

SEC. 2. [“ Rental property ” defined — sec. 101 amended.] That the second paragraph of section 101 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

“ The term ‘ rental property ’ means any building or part thereof or land appurtenant thereto in the District of Columbia rented or hired and the service agreed or required by law or by determination of the commission to be furnished in connection therewith; but does not include (a) any portion of a hotel or apartment building, (b) a garage or warehouse, or (c) any other building or part thereof or land appurtenant thereto, used by the tenant exclusively for a business purpose other than the subleasing or otherwise subcontracting for use for living accommodations.”

SEC. 3. [Salaries and expenditures — employees — sec. 103 amended.] That section 103 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

“ SEC. 103. Each commissioner shall receive a salary of $5,000 a year payable monthly. The commission shall appoint a secretary, who shall receive a salary of $3,000 a year, and an attorney, who shall receive a salary of $5,000 a year, payable in like manner; and subject to the provisions of the civil service laws, it may appoint and remove such officers, employees, and agents, and make such expenditures for rent, printing, telegrams, telephone, law books, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment and other supplies and expenses as may be necessary to the administration of this title. The attorney appointed by the commission shall appear for and represent the commission in all judicial proceedings and generally perform such professional duties and services as attorney and counsel to the commission as may reasonably be required of him by the commission. All of the expenditures of the commission shall upon the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the chairman of the commission be audited and paid in the same manner as other expenditures for the District of Columbia.

“ With the exception of the secretary and the attorney, all employees of the commission shall be appointed from lists of eligibles supplied by the Civil Service Commission and in accordance with the civil service law.”

* The District of Columbia Rents Act will be found in 1919 Supp., p. 41.

SEC. 4. [Return of excess rentals — validity of judgment for excess rentals — prosecutions for violations of act — new sections added.] That Title II of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof two new sections to read as follows:

“SEC. 123. In all cases where the owner of any rental property, apartment, or hotel has, prior to April 18, 1921, collected or received any rent or charge therefor in excess of the amount fixed in a determination of the commission made and in full force and effect in accordance with the provisions of the title, he may within thirty days after this section takes effect return such excess rental or charge to the tenant directly, and if such return is made within such period the owner shall not become liable under the provisions of section 112 of this Act. An owner who has obtained a judgment against a tenant for, or which includes, such rent or charge in excess of the amount fixed in such a determination of the commission shall move to vacate such judgment to the amount of such excess; within sixty days after this section takes effect. In case such motion is not made and such owner does not exercise reasonable diligence to have such judgment vacated, such judgment, to the amount of such excess, shall be null and void.

“SEC. 124. (a) Any violation of this Act or of any order of the commission, committed before the termination of this Act may, after such termination, be prosecuted by and in the name of the Attorney General in lieu of the commission in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been terminated.

“(b) In the case of (1) any proceeding begun under the provisions of section 114 before the termination of this Act, or (2) any proceeding on appeal from a determination of the commission begun before the termination of this Act, such proceeding may, after such termination, be continued in the same manner with the same effect as if this Act had not been terminated, and all powers and duties in respect to such proceedings vested in the commission by this Act shall for the purposes of such proceedings be vested in the Attorney General.

“(c) Any right or obligation based upon any provision of this Act or upon any order of the commission, accrued prior to the termination of this Act may, after the termination of this Act, be enforced in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been terminated.

“(d) The Attorney General may, after the termination of this Act, appoint the attorney last appointed by the commission under the provisions of section 103 to assist in the enforcement of this Act. Such attorney shall continue to receive compensation for such services at the rate of $5,000 per annum, payable monthly.”

SEC. 5. [Provisions of amendatory Act when in effect.] That the provisions of this Act, except section 2, shall take effect upon the enactment of the Act. Section 2 shall take effect on and after October 22, 1921.

SEC. 4. [Typewriting machines — purchase.] That no part of any money appropriated by this or any other Act shall be used during the fiscal year 1922 for the purchase of any standard typewriting machine, except bookkeeping and billing machines, at a price in excess of the following, to wit: For correspondence models with carriages which will accommodate paper ten inches in width, $70; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twelve inches in width, $75; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper fourteen inches in width, $77.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper sixteen inches in width, $82.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper eighteen inches in width, $87.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twenty inches in width, $94; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twenty-two inches in width, $95; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twenty-four inches in width, $97.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twenty-six inches in width, $103.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper twenty-eight inches in width, $104; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper thirty inches in width, $105; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper thirty-two inches in width, $107.50.

All purchases of typewriting machines during the fiscal year 1922 by executive departments and independent establishments for use in the District of Columbia or in the field, except as hereinafter provided, shall be made from the surplus machines in the stock of the General Supply Committee. The War Department shall furnish the General Supply Committee, immediately upon the approval of this Act, a complete inventory of the various makes, models, and classes of typewriters in its possession, the condition of such machines, and the point of storage, and shall turn over to the General Supply Committee such typewriting machines in such quantities as the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time may call for by specific requisition for sale to the various services of the Government. If the General Supply Committee is unable to furnish serviceable machines to any such service of the Government, it shall furnish unserviceable machines at current exchange prices and such machines shall then be applied by the service of the Government receiving them as part payment for new machines from commercial sources in accordance with the prices fixed in the preceding paragraph. And in selling typewriting machines to the various services the General Supply Committee may accept an equal number of unserviceable machines as part payment thereon at the exchange prices quoted in the current general schedule of supplies.

This is from the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1921.

SEC. 3. [Publications — discontinuance.] Any journal, magazine, periodical, or similar publication which is now being issued by a department or establishment of the Government may, in the discretion of the head thereof, be continued, within the limitation of available appropriations or other Government funds, until December 1, 1921, when, if it shall not have been specifically authorized by Congress before that date, such journal, magazine, periodical, or similar publication shall be discontinued.

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

An Act To provide a national budget system and an independent audit of Government accounts, and for other purposes.

[Act of June 10, 1921.]

TITLE I.—DEFINITIONS.

SECTION 1. [Title of Act — (“ Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 ”).] This Act may be cited as the “ Budget and Accounting Act, 1921.”

SEC. 2. [“ Department and establishment ”—“ the Budget ”—“ Bureau ”—“ Director ”—“ Assistant Director.”] When used in this Act—

The terms “ department and establishment ” and “ department or establishment ” mean any executive department, independent commission, board, bureau, office, agency, or other establishment of the Government, including the municipal government of the District of Columbia, but do not include the Legislative Branch of the Government or the Supreme Court of the United States;

The term "the Budget" means the Budget required by section 201 to be transmitted to Congress;

The term "Bureau" means the Bureau of the Budget;

The term "Director" means the Director of the Bureau of the Budget; and

The term "Assistant Director" means the Assistant Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

TITLE II.—THE BUDGET.

SEC. 201. [Transmission of Budget to Congress by President — contracts.]

The President shall transmit to Congress on the first day of each regular session, the Budget, which shall set forth in summary and in detail:

(a) Estimates of the expenditures and appropriations necessary in his judgment for the support of the Government for the ensuing fiscal year; except that the estimates for such year for the Legislative Branch of the Government and the Supreme Court of the United States shall be transmitted to the President on or before October 15th of each year, and shall be included by him in the Budget without revision;

(b) His estimates of the receipts of the Government during the ensuing fiscal year, under (1) laws existing at the time the Budget is transmitted and also (2) under the revenue proposals, if any, contained in the Budget;

(c) The expenditures and receipts of the Government during the last completed fiscal year;

(d) Estimates of the expenditures and receipts of the Government during the fiscal year in progress;

(e) The amount of annual, permanent, or other appropriations, including balances of appropriations for prior fiscal years, available for expenditure during the fiscal year in progress, as of November 1 of such year;

(f) Balanced statements of (1) the condition of the Treasury at the end of the last completed fiscal year, (2) the estimated condition of the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year in progress, and (3) the estimated condition of the Treasury at the end of the ensuing fiscal year if the financial proposals contained in the Budget are adopted;

(g) All essential facts regarding the bonded and other indebtedness of the Government; and

(h) Such other financial statements and data as in his opinion are necessary or desirable in order to make known in all practicable detail the financial condition of the Government.

SEC. 202. [Recommendations in Budget.]

(a) If the estimated receipts for the ensuing fiscal year contained in the Budget, on the basis of laws existing at the time the Budget is transmitted, plus the estimated amounts in the Treasury at the close of the fiscal year in progress, available for expenditure in the ensuing fiscal year, are less than the estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year contained in the Budget, the President in the Budget shall make recommendations to Congress for new taxes, loans, or other appropriate action to meet the estimated deficiency.

(b) If the aggregate of such estimated receipts and such estimated amounts in the Treasury is greater than such estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year, he shall make such recommendations as in his opinion the public interests require.

SEC. 203. [Transmission to Congress of supplemental or deficiency estimates.]

(a) The President from time to time may transmit to Congress supplemental or deficiency estimates for such appropriations or expenditures as in his judgment (1) are necessary on account of laws enacted after the transmission of the Budget, or (2) are otherwise in the public interest. He shall accompany such estimates with a statement of the reasons therefor, including the reasons for their omission from the Budget.

(b) Whenever such supplemental or deficiency estimates reach an aggregate which, if they had been contained in the Budget, would have required the President to make a recommendation under subdivision (a) of section 202, he shall thereupon make such recommendation.

SEC. 204. [Conformity of Budget to requirements of existing law — estimates for lump-sum appropriations.]

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the contents, order, and arrangement of the estimates of appropriations and the statements of expenditures and estimated expenditures contained in the Budget or transmitted under section 203, and the notes and other data submitted therewith, shall conform to the requirements of existing law.

(b) Estimates for lump-sum appropriations contained in the Budget or transmitted under section 203 shall be accompanied by statements showing, in such detail and form as may be necessary to inform Congress, the manner of expenditure of such appropriations and of the corresponding appropriations for the fiscal year in progress and the last completed fiscal year. Such statements shall be in lieu of statements of like character now required by law.

SEC. 205. [Transmission to Congress of alternative budget.] The President, in addition to the Budget, shall transmit to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, only, an alternative budget, which shall be prepared in such form and amounts and according to such system of classification and itemization as is, in his opinion, most appropriate, with such explanatory notes and tables as may be necessary to show where the various items embraced in the Budget are contained in such alternative budget.

SEC. 206. [Submission of estimates or requests to Congress by officers or employees of department — prohibition.] No estimate or request for an appropriation and no request for an increase in an item of any such estimate or request, and no recommendation as to how the revenue needs of the Government should be met, shall be submitted to Congress or any committee thereof by any officer or employee of any department or establishment, unless at the request of either House of Congress.

SEC. 207. [Bureau of the Budget — creation — director — salary — preparation of Budget.] There is hereby created in the Treasury Department a Bureau to be known as the Bureau of the Budget. There shall be in the Bureau a Director and an Assistant Director, who shall be appointed by the President and receive salaries of $10,000 and $7,500 a year, respectively. The Assistant Director shall perform such duties as the Director may designate, and during the absence or incapacity of the Director or during a vacancy in the office of Director he shall act as Director. The Bureau, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, shall prepare for him the Budget, the alternative Budget, and any supplemental or deficiency estimates. and to this end shall have authority to assemble, correlate, revise, reduce, or increase the estimates of the several departments or establishments.

SEC. 208. [Employees in Bureau — appointment and compensation — expenditures.] (a) The Director, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, shall appoint and fix the compensation of attorneys and other employees and make expenditures for rent in the District of Columbia, printing, binding, telegrams, telephone service, law books, books of reference, periodicals, stationery, furniture, office equipment, other supplies, and necessary expenses of the office, within the appropriations made therefor.

(b) No person appointed by the Director shall be paid a salary at a rate in excess of $6,000 a year, and not more than four persons so appointed shall be paid a salary at a rate in excess of $5,000 a year.

(c) All employees in the Bureau whose compensation is at a rate of $5,000 a year or less shall be appointed in accordance with the civil-service laws and regulations.

(d) The provisions of law prohibiting the transfer of employees of executive departments and independent establishments until after service of three years shall not apply during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1921, and June 30, 1922, to the transfer of employees to the Bureau.

(e) The Bureau shall not be construed to be a bureau or office created since January 1, 1916, so as to deprive employees therein of the additional compensation allowed civilian employees under the provisions of section 6 of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1921, and June 30, 1922, if otherwise entitled thereto.

SEC. 209. [Duties of Bureau — study of departments and establishments — reports to President.] The Bureau, when directed by the President, shall make a detailed study of the departments and establishments for the purpose of enabling the President to determine what changes (with a view of securing greater economy and efficiency in the conduct of the public service) should be made in (1) the existing organization, activities, and methods of business of such departments or establishments, (2) the appropriations therefor, (3) the assignment of particular activities to particular services, or (4) the regrouping of services. The results of such study shall be embodied in a report or reports to the President, who may transmit to Congress such report or reports or any part thereof with his recommendations on the matters covered thereby.

SEC. 210. [Codification by Bureau of laws relating to transmission to Congress of statements of receipts, and expenditures and estimates of appropriation.] The Bureau shall prepare for the President a codification of all laws or parts of laws relating to the preparation and transmission to Congress of statements of receipts and expenditures of the Government and of estimates of appropriations. The President shall transmit the same to Congress on or before the first Monday in December, 1921, with a recommendation as to the changes which, in his opinion, should be made in such laws or parts of laws.

SEC. 211. [Compiling of estimates — transfer of duty to Bureau.] The powers and duties relating to the compiling of estimates now conferred and imposed upon the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants of the office of the Secretary of the Treasury are transferred to the Bureau.

SEC. 212. [Duty of Bureau to give aid and information to congressional committees.] The Bureau shall, at the request of any committee of either House of Congress having jurisdiction over revenue or appropriations, furnish the committee such aid and information as it may request.

SEC. 213. [Duty of departments to furnish information to Bureau.] Under such regulations as the President may prescribe, (1) every department and establishment shall furnish to the Bureau such information as the Bureau may from time to time require, and (2) the Director and the Assistant Director, or any employee of the Bureau when duly authorized, shall, for the purpose of securing such information, have access to, and the right to examine, any books, documents, papers, or records of any such department or establishment.

SEC. 214. [Designation of Budget officer for each department—preparation of departmental estimates.] (a) The head of each department and establishment shall designate an official thereof as budget officer therefor, who, in each year under his direction and on or before a date fixed by him, shall prepare the departmental estimates.

(b) Such budget officer shall also prepare, under the direction of the head of the department or establishment, such supplemental and deficiency estimates as may be required for its work.

SEC. 215. [Revision and submission of departmental estimates to Bureau of the Budget—necessity.] The head of each department and establishment shall revise the departmental estimates and submit them to the Bureau on or before September 15 of each year. In case of his failure so to do, the President shall cause to be prepared such estimates and data as are necessary to enable him to include in the Budget estimates and statements in respect to the work of such department or establishment.

SEC. 216. [Preparation and submission of departmental estimates, form, etc.] The departmental estimates and any supplemental or deficiency estimates submitted to the Bureau by the head of any department or establishment shall be prepared and submitted in such form, manner, and detail as the President may prescribe.

SEC. 217. [Appropriation for expenses of Bureau.] For expenses of the establishment and maintenance of the Bureau there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $225,000, to continue available during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922.

TITLE III.—GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE.

SEC. 301. [Establishment—abolishment of office of Comptroller of Treasury—transfer of officers, employees and property.] There is created an establishment of the Government to be known as the General Accounting Office, which shall be independent of the executive departments and under the control and direction of the Comptroller General of the United States. The offices of Comptroller of the Treasury and Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury are abolished, to take effect July 1, 1921. All other officers and employees of the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury shall become officers and employees in the General Accounting Office at their grades and salaries on July 1, 1921, and all books, records, documents, papers, furniture, office equipment and other property of the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury shall become the property of the General Accounting Office. The Comptroller General is authorized to adopt a seal for the General Accounting Office.

SEC. 302. [Comptroller General and Assistant Comptroller General of United States — appointment and compensation — duties of Assistant Comptroller.] There shall be in the General Accounting Office a Comptroller General of the United States and an Assistant Comptroller General of the United States, who shall be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive salaries of $10,000 and $7,500 a year, respectively. The Assistant Comptroller General shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him by the Comptroller General, and during the absence or incapacity of the Comptroller General, or during a vacancy in that office, shall act as Comptroller General.

SEC. 303. [Term of office — removal — retirement.] Except as hereinafter provided in this section, the Comptroller General and the Assistant Comptroller General shall hold office for fifteen years. The Comptroller General shall not be eligible for reappointment. The Comptroller General or the Assistant Comptroller General may be removed at any time by joint resolution of Congress after notice and hearing, when, in the judgment of Congress, the Comptroller General or Assistant Comptroller General has become permanently incapacitated or has been inefficient, or guilty of neglect of duty, or of malfeasance in office, or of any felony or conduct involving moral turpitude, and for no other cause and in no other manner except by impeachment. Any Comptroller General or Assistant Comptroller General removed in the manner herein provided shall be ineligible for reappointment to that office. When a Comptroller General or Assistant Comptroller General attains the age of seventy years, he shall be retired from his office.

SEC. 304. [Powers and duties of General Accounting Office — transfer from other offices of Treasury Department — establishment of Bureau of Accounts in Post Office Department.] All powers and duties now conferred or imposed by law upon the Comptroller of the Treasury or the six auditors of the Treasury Department, and the duties of the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants of the Office of the Secretary of the Treasury relating to keeping the personal ledger accounts of disbursing and collecting officers, shall, so far as not inconsistent with this Act, be vested in and imposed upon the General Accounting Office and be exercised without direction from any other officer. The balances certified by the Comptroller General shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branch of the Government. The revision by the Comptroller General of settlements made by the six auditors shall be discontinued, except as to settlements made before July 1, 1921.

The administrative examination of the accounts and vouchers of the Postal Service now imposed by law upon the Auditor for the Post Office Department shall be performed on and after July 1, 1921, by a bureau in the Post Office Department to be known as the Bureau of Accounts, which is hereby established for that purpose. The Bureau of Accounts shall be under the direction of a Comptroller, who shall be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive a salary of $5,000 a year. The Comptroller shall perform the administrative duties now performed by the Auditor for the Post Office Department and such other duties in relation thereto as the Postmaster General may direct. The appropriation of $5,000 for the salary of the Auditor for the Post Office Department for the fiscal year 1922 is transferred and made available for the salary of the Comptroller, Bureau of Accounts, Post Office Department. The officers and employees of the Office of the Auditor for the Post Office Department engaged in the administrative examination of accounts shall become officers and employees of the Bureau of Accounts at their grades and salaries on July 1, 1921. The appropriations for salaries and for contingent and miscellaneous expenses and tabulating equipment for such office for the fiscal year 1922, and all books, records, documents, papers, furniture, office equipment, and other property shall be apportioned between, transferred to, and made available for the Bureau of Accounts and the General Accounting Office, respectively, on the basis of duties transferred.

SEC. 305. [Claims, demands and accounts affecting United States — adjustment in General Accounting Office — R. S. sec. 236 amended.] Section 236 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 236. All claims and demands whatever by the Government of the United States or against it, and all accounts whatever in which the Government of the United States is concerned, either as debtor or creditor, shall be settled and adjusted in the General Accounting Office.”

For R. S. sec. 236, here amended, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 797.

SEC. 306. [Laws governing General Accounting Office — copies of books, etc., as evidence.] All laws relating generally to the administration of the departments and establishments shall, so far as applicable, govern the General Accounting Office. Copies of any books, records, papers, or documents, and transcripts from the books and proceedings of the General Accounting Office, when certified by the Comptroller General or the Assistant Comptroller General under its seal, shall be admitted as evidence with the same effect as the copies and transcripts referred to in sections 882 and 886 of the Revised Statutes.

For R. S. secs. 882 and 886, referred to in the text, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 197, 199.

SEC. 307. [Payment of adjusted accounts or claims.] The Comptroller General may provide for the payment of accounts or claims adjusted and settled in the General Accounting Office, through disbursing officers of the several departments and establishments, instead of by warrant.

SEC. 308. [Office of Secretary of Treasury — Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants — Division of Public Moneys — transfer of duties.] The duties now appertaining to the Division of Public Moneys of the Office of the Secretary of the Treasury, so far as they relate to the covering of revenues and repayments into the Treasury, the issue of duplicate checks and warrants, and the certification of outstanding liabilities for payment, shall be performed by the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants of the Office of the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 309. [Administrative appropriation and fund accounting — examination of accounts and claims against United States — forms, systems and procedure.] The Comptroller General shall prescribe the forms, systems, and procedure for administrative appropriation and fund accounting in the several departments and establishments, and for the administrative examination of fiscal officers' accounts and claims against the United States.

SEC. 310. [Abolishment of offices of auditors of Treasury Department — transfer of officers, employees and property to General Accounting Office.] The offices of the six auditors shall be abolished, to take effect July 1, 1921. All other officers and employees of these offices except as otherwise provided herein shall become officers and employees of the General Accounting Office at their grades and salaries on July 1, 1921. All books, records, documents, papers, furniture, office equipment, and other property of these offices, and of the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants, so far as they relate to the work of such division transferred by section 304, shall become the property of the General Accounting Office. The General Accounting Office shall occupy temporarily the rooms now occupied by the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury and the six auditors.

SEC. 311. [Officers and employees of General Accounting Office — appointment, etc.— compensation — duties — rules and regulations of office.] (a) The Comptroller General shall appoint, remove, and fix the compensation of such attorneys and other employees in the General Accounting Office as may from time to time be provided for by law.

(b) All such appointments, except to positions carrying a salary at a rate of more than $5,000 a year, shall be made in accordance with the civil-service laws and regulations.

(c) No person appointed by the Comptroller General shall be paid a salary at a rate of more than $6,000 a year, and not more than four persons shall be paid a salary at a rate of more than $5,000 a year.

(d) All officers and employees of the General Accounting Office, whether transferred thereto or appointed by the Comptroller General, shall perform such duties as may be assigned to them by him.

(e) All official acts performed by such officers or employees specially designated therefor by the Comptroller General shall have the same force and effect as though performed by the Comptroller General in person.

(f) The Comptroller General shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for carrying on the work of the General Accounting Office, including rules and regulations concerning the admission of attorneys to practice before such office.

SEC. 312. [Investigations and reports by Comptroller General.] (a) The Comptroller General shall investigate, at the seat of government or elsewhere, all matters relating to the receipt, disbursement, and application of public funds, and shall make to the President when requested by him, and to Congress at the beginning of each regular session, a report in writing of the work of the General Accounting Office, containing recommendations concerning the legislation he may deem necessary to facilitate the prompt and accurate rendition and settlement of accounts and concerning such other matters relating to the receipt, disbursement, and application of public funds as he may think advisable. In such regular report, or in special reports at any time when Congress is in session, he shall make recommendations looking to greater economy or efficiency in public expenditures.

(b) He shall make such investigations and reports as shall be ordered by either House of Congress or by any committee of either House having jurisdiction over revenue, appropriations, or expenditures. The Comptroller General shall also, at the request of any such committee, direct assistants from his office to furnish the committee such aid and information as it may request.

(c) The Comptroller General shall specially report to Congress every expenditure or contract made by any department or establishment in any year in violation of law.

(d) He shall submit to Congress reports upon the adequacy and effectiveness of the administrative examination of accounts and claims in the respective departments and establishments and upon the adequacy and effectiveness of departmental inspection of the offices and accounts of fiscal officers.

(e) He shall furnish such information relating to expenditures and accounting to the Bureau of the Budget as it may request from time to time.

SEC. 313. [Duty of departments and establishments to furnish information to Comptroller General.] All departments and establishments shall furnish to the Comptroller General such information regarding the powers, duties, activities, organization, financial transactions, and methods of business of their respective offices as he may from time to time require of them; and the Comptroller General, or any of his assistants or employees, when duly authorized by him, shall, for the purpose of securing such information, have access to and the right to examine any books, documents, papers, or records of any such department or establishment. The authority contained in this section shall not be applicable to expenditures made under the provisions of section 291 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 314. [Accountants — civil service examinations.] The Civil Service Commission shall establish an eligible register for accountants for the General Accounting Office, and the examinations of applicants for entrance upon such register shall be based upon questions approved by the Comptroller General.

SEC. 315. [Appropriations available for General Accounting Office.] (a) All appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, for the offices of the Comptroller of the Treasury and the six auditors, are transferred to and made available for the General Accounting Office, except as otherwise provided herein.

(b) During such fiscal year the Comptroller General, within the limit of the total appropriations available for the General Accounting Office, may make such changes in the number and compensation of officers and employees appointed by him or transferred to the General Accounting Office under this Act as may be necessary.

(c) There shall also be transferred to the General Accounting Office such portions of the appropriations for rent and contingent and miscellaneous expenses, including allotments for printing and binding, made for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, as are equal to the amounts expended from similar appropriations during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, by the Treasury Department for the offices of the Comptroller of the Treasury and the six auditors.

(d) During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the appropriations and portions of appropriations referred to in this section shall be available for salaries and expenses of the General Accounting Office, including payment for rent in the District of Columbia, traveling expenses, the purchase and exchange of law books, books of reference, and for all necessary miscellaneous and contingent expenses.

SEC. 316. [Additional compensation — allowance to employees of General Accounting Office.] The General Accounting Office and the Bureau of Accounts shall not be construed to be a bureau or office created since January 1, 1916, so as to deprive employees therein of the additional compensation allowed civilian employees under the provisions of section 6 of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, if otherwise entitled thereto.

For sec. 6 of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act, mentioned in the text, see infra, this volume, title PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

SEC. 317. [Transfer of employees to General Accounting Office — laws governing.] The provisions of law prohibiting the transfer of employees of executive departments and independent establishments until after service of three years shall not apply during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, to the transfer of employees to the General Accounting Office.

SEC. 318. [Time of taking effect of Act.] This Act shall take effect upon its approval by the President: Provided, That sections 301 to 317, inclusive, relating to the General Accounting Office and the Bureau of Accounts, shall take effect July 1, 1921.

SEC. 2. [Office appliances of War Trade Section of State Department — transfer to Treasury Department.] That all furniture, file cases, typewriters, and other office appliances in use by the War Trade Section of the Department of State on May 28, 1921, shall be transferred to and become the property of the Treasury Department.

This is from the Act of Aug. 24, 1921. Section 1 relates to the importation of dyes and chemicals and will be found supra, this volume, p. 45.

Joint Resolution Terminating the state of war between the Imperial German Government and the United States of America and between the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government and the United States of America.

[SEC. 1.] [Declaration terminating war with Germany.] That the state of war declared to exist between the Imperial German Government and the United States of America by the joint resolution of Congress approved April 6, 1917, is hereby declared at an end.

SEC. 2. [Reservation of rights, etc., under terms of armistice, treaty of Versailles, etc.] That in making this declaration, and as a part of it, there are expressly reserved to the United States of America and its nationals any and all rights, privileges, indemnities, reparations, or advantages, together with the right to enforce the same, to which it or they have become entitled under the terms of the armistice signed November 11, 1918, or any extensions or modifications thereof; or which were acquired by or are in the possession of the United States of America by reason of its participation in the war or to which its nationals have thereby become rightfully entitled; or which, under the treaty of Versailles, have been stipulated for its or their benefit; or to which it is entitled as one of the principal allied and associated powers; or to which it is entitled by virtue of any Act or Acts of Congress; or otherwise.

SEC. 3. [Declaration terminating war with Austro-Hungary.] That the state of war declared to exist between the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government and the United States of America by the joint resolution of Congress approved December 7, 1917, is hereby declared at an end.

SEC. 4. [Reservation of rights, etc., under armistice, treaties, etc.] That in making this declaration, and as a part of it, there are expressly reserved to the United States of America and its nationals any and all rights, privileges, indemnities, reparations, or advantages, together with the right to enforce the same, to which it or they have become entitled under the terms of the armistice signed November 3, 1918, or any extensions or modifications thereof; or which were acquired by or are in the possession of the United States of America by reason of its participation in the war or to which its nationals have thereby become rightfully entitled; or which, under the treaty of Saint Germain-en-Laye or the treaty of Trianon, have been stipulated for its or their benefit; or to which it is entitled as one of the principal allied and associated powers; or to which it is entitled by virtue of any Act or Acts of Congress; or otherwise.

SEC. 5. [Seized property — disposition.] All property of the Imperial German Government, or its successor or successors, and of all German nationals which was, on April 6, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession or under control of, or has been the subject of a demand by the United States of America or of any of its officers, agents, or employees, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, and all property of the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or its successor or successors, and of all Austro-Hungarian nationals which was on December 7, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession or under control of, or has been the subject of a demand by the United States of America or any of its officers, agents, or employees, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, shall be retained by the United States of America and no disposition thereof made, except as shall have been heretofore or specifically hereafter shall be provided by law until such time as the Imperial German Government and the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or their successor or successors, shall have respectively made suitable provision for the satisfaction of all claims against said Governments respectively, of all persons, wheresoever domiciled, who owe permanent allegiance to the United States of America and who have suffered, through the acts of the Imperial German Government, or its agents, or the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or its agents, since July 31, 1914, loss, damage, or injury to their persons or property, directly or indirectly, whether through the ownership of shares of stock in German, Austro-Hungarian, American, or other corporations, or in consequence of hostilities or of any operations of war, or otherwise, and also shall have granted to persons owing permanent allegiance to the United States of America most-favored-nation treatment, whether the same be national or otherwise, in all matters affecting residence, business, profession, trade, navigation, commerce and industrial property rights, and until the Imperial German Government and the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or their successor or successors, shall have respectively confirmed to the United States of America all fines, forfeitures, penalties, and seizures imposed or made by the United States of America during the war, whether in respect to the property of the Imperial German Government or German nationals or the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government or Austro-Hungarian nationals, and shall have waived any and all pecuniary claims against the United States of America.

SEC. 6. [Effect on war legislation.] Nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal, modify or amend the provisions of the joint resolution "declaring that certain Acts of Congress, joint resolutions and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired," approved March 3, 1921, or the passport control provisions of an Act entitled "An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922," approved March 2, 1921; nor to be effective to terminate the military status of any person now in desertion from the military or naval service of the United States, nor to terminate the liability to prosecution and punishment under the Selective Service law, approved May 18, 1917, of any person who failed to comply with the provisions of said Act, or of Acts amendatory thereof.

An Act To provide for the acquisition by the United States of private rights of fishery in and about Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii.

[Pearl Harbor — rights of fishery — acquisition by United States.] That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to examine and appraise the value of the privately owned rights of fishery in Pearl Harbor, island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii, from an imaginary line from Kaak Point to Beckoning Point, both within said harbor, to the seaward, and the privately owned rights of fishery in and about the entrance channel to said harbor, and to enter into negotiations for the purchase of the said rights and, if in his judgment the price for such rights is reasonable and satisfactory, to make contracts for the purchase of same subject to future ratification and appropriation by Congress; or in the event of the inability of the Secretary of the Navy to make a satisfactory contract for the voluntary purchase of the said rights of fishery, he is hereby authorized and directed through the Attorney General to institute and carry to completion proceedings for the condemnation of said rights of fishery, the acceptance of the award in said proceedings to be subject to the future ratification and appropriation by Congress. Such condemnation proceedings shall be instituted and conducted in, and jurisdiction of said proceedings is hereby given to, the district court of the United States for the district of Hawaii, substantially as provided in "An Act to authorize condemnation of land for sites for public buildings, and for other purposes," approved August 1, 1888; and the sum of $5,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated, to be immediately and continuously available until expended, to pay the necessary costs thereof and expenses in connection therewith. The Secretary of the Navy is further authorized and directed to report the proceedings hereunder to Congress.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1900,* as amended, to establish an Hawaiian Homes Commission, granting certain powers to the board of harbor commissioners of the Territory of Hawaii, and for other purposes.

TITLE 1.—DEFINITIONS.

SECTION 1. ["Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920."] That this Act may be cited as the "Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920."

SEC. 2. ["Hawaiian Organic Act."] That when used in this Act the term "Hawaiian Organic Act" means the Act entitled "An Act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1900, as amended.

TITLE 2.—HAWAIIAN HOMES COMMISSION.

SEC. 201. [Meaning of terms used in title.] (a) That when used in this title —

- (1) The term "commission" means the Hawaiian Homes Commission;
- (2) The term "public land" has the same meaning as defined in paragraph (3) of subdivision (a) of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act;
- (3) The term "fund" means the Hawaiian home loan fund;
- (4) The term "Territory" means the Territory of Hawaii;
- (5) The term "Hawaiian home lands" means all lands given the status of Hawaiian home lands under the provisions of section 204 of this title;
- (6) The term "tract" means any tract of Hawaiian home lands leased, as authorized by section 207 of this title, or any portion of such tract; and
- (7) The term "native Hawaiian" means any descendant of not less than one-half part of the blood of the races inhabiting the Hawaiian Islands previous to 1778.

(b) Any term defined or described in section 347 or 351 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915, except a term defined in subdivision (a) of this section, shall, whenever used in this title, have the same meaning as given by such definition or description.

SEC. 202. [Establishment of Commission — membership compensation, etc.]

(a) There is hereby established a commission to be known as the "Hawaiian Homes Commission" and to be composed of five members, as follows:

- (1) The governor of the Territory, and
- (2) Four citizens of the Territory to be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate of the legislature of the Territory. At least three of the appointed members of the commission shall be native Hawaiians.

* For Act of April 30, 1900, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 483.

(b) Any vacancy in the office of an appointed member shall be filled in the same manner and under the same limitations as the original appointment.

(c) The governor of the Territory shall be the chairman of the commission. The commission shall designate one of its members to serve as the executive officer and secretary of the commission. The executive officer and secretary shall receive such annual salary, not to exceed $6,000, as the commission may determine. The members of the commission, except the executive officer and secretary, shall receive an annual salary of $500. Of the original appointed members of the commission, one shall be appointed for a term of one year, one for two years, one for three years, and one for four years. Their successors shall hold office for terms of four years, except that any member appointed to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he succeeds. A member may after due notice and public hearing be removed by the governor for neglect of duty or malfeasance in office, but for no other cause.

SEC. 203. [Enumeration of public lands designated as "available lands."]
All public lands of the description and acreage, as follows, excluding (a) all lands within any forest reservation, (b) all cultivated sugar-cane lands, and (c) all public lands held under a certificate of occupation, homestead lease, right of purchase lease, or special homestead agreement, are hereby designated, and hereinafter referred to, as "available lands":

(1) On the island of Hawaii: Kamaoa-Puueo (eleven thousand acres, more or less), in the district of Kau; Puukapu (twelve thousand acres, more or less), Kawaihae I (ten thousand acres, more or less), and Pauahi (seven hundred and fifty acres, more or less), in the district of South Kohala; Kamoku-Kapulena (five thousand acres, more or less), Waimanu (two hundred acres, more or less), and Nienie (seven thousand three hundred and fifty acres, more or less), in the district of Hamakua; fifty-three thousand acres to be selected by the commission from the lands of Humuula Mauka, in the district of North Hilo; Panaewa, Waiakea (two thousand acres, more or less), Waiakea-kai, or Keaaukaha (two thousand acres, more or less), and two thousand acres of agricultural lands to be selected by the commission from the lands of Piihonua, in the district of South Hilo; and two thousand acres to be selected by the commission from the lands of Kaohe-Makuu, in the district of Puna;

(2) On the island of Maui: Kahikinui (twenty-five thousand acres, more or less) in the district of Kahikinui, and the public lands (six thousand acres, more or less) in the district of Kula;

(3) On the island of Molokai: Palaau (eleven thousand four hundred acres, more or less), Kapaakea (two thousand acres, more or less), Kalamaula (six thousand acres, more or less), Hoolehua (three thousand five hundred acres, more or less), Kamiloloa I and II (three thousand six hundred acres, more or less), and Makakupaia (two thousand two hundred acres, more or less); and Kalaupapa (five thousand acres, more or less);

(4) On the island of Oahu: Nanakuli (three thousand acres, more or less), and Lualualei (two thousand acres, more or less), in the district of Waianae; and Waimanalo (four thousand acres, more or less), in the district of Koolau-poko, excepting therefrom the military reservation and the beach lands; and

(5) On the island of Kauai: Upper land of Waimea, above the cultivated sugar cane lands, in the district of Waimea (fifteen thousand acres, more or less); and Moloaa (two thousand five hundred acres, more or less); and Anahola and Kamalomalo (five thousand acres, more or less).

SEC. 204. [Status of "available lands"—Hawaiian home lands—authority of Commission with respect to use and disposition.] Upon the passage of this Act all available lands shall immediately assume the status of Hawaiian home lands and be under the control of the commission to be used and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of this title, except that—

(1) For a period of five years after the first meeting of the Hawaiian Homes Commission only those lands situate on the island of Molokai, which are particularly named in paragraphs 1 and 3 of section 203 hereof; Waimanu, in the district of Hamakua; Keaaukaha, in the district of South Hilo; and Panaewa, Waiakea, in the district of South Hilo, island of Hawaii, shall be available for use and disposition by said commission under the provisions of this title and none of the remaining available lands named in said section 203 shall, after the expiration of the said five-year period, be leased, used, or otherwise disposed of by the commission under the provisions of this title, except by further authorization of Congress and with the written approval of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States.

(2) In case any available land is under lease at the time of the passage of this Act such land shall not assume the status of Hawaiian home lands until the lease expires or the commissioner of public lands withdraws the lands from the operation of the lease. If the land is covered by a lease containing a withdrawal clause as provided in subdivision (d) of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act, the commissioner of public lands shall withdraw such lands from the operation of the lease whenever the commission with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior gives notice to him that the commission is of the opinion that the lands are required by it for leasing as authorized by the provisions of section 207, or for a community pasture as provided in section 211 of this title. Such withdrawal shall be held to be for a public purpose within the meaning of that term as used in subdivision (d) of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act.

(3) In case any land is to be selected by the commission out of a larger area of available lands, such land shall not assume the status of Hawaiian home lands until the commission, with the approval of Secretary of the Interior, makes the selection and gives notice thereof to the commissioner of public lands. The commission shall give such notice within three years after the expiration of the five-year period referred to in paragraph 1 of this section. Any such notice given thereafter shall be deemed invalid and of no effect.

SEC. 205. [Sale and lease of "available lands"—manner and purpose.] Available lands shall be sold or leased only (1) in the manner and for the purposes set out in this title, or (2) as may be necessary to complete any valid agreement of sale or lease in effect at the time of the passage of this Act; except that such limitations shall not apply to the unselected portions of lands from which the commission has made a selection and given notice thereof, or failed so to select and give notice within the time limit, as provided in paragraph (3) of section 204 of this title.

SEC. 206. [Powers and duties of governor, etc., in respect to Hawaiian home lands.] The powers and duties of the governor, the commissioner of public lands, and the board of public lands, in respect to lands of the Territory, shall not extend to lands having the status of Hawaiian home lands, except as specifically provided in this title.

SEC. 207. [Lease of Hawaiian home lands to native Hawaiians.] (a) The commission is authorized to lease to native Hawaiians the right to the use and occupancy of a tract of Hawaiian home lands within the following acreage limits:

- (1) Not less than twenty nor more than eighty acres of agricultural lands; or
- (2) Not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred acres of first-class pastoral lands; or
- (3) Not less than two hundred and fifty nor more than one thousand acres of second-class pastoral lands.

(b) The title to lands so leased shall remain in the United States. Applications for tracts shall be made to and granted by the commission, under such regulations, not in conflict with any provision of this title, as the commission may prescribe. The commission shall, whenever tracts are available, enter into such a lease with any applicant who, in the opinion of the commission, is qualified to perform the conditions of such lease.

SEC. 208. [Conditions imposed on lessee.] Each lease made under the authority granted the commission by the provisions of section 207 of this title and the tract in respect to which the lease is made, shall be deemed subject to the following conditions, whether or not stipulated in the lease:

- (1) The lessee shall be a native Hawaiian.
- (2) The lessee shall pay a rental of $1 a year for the tract and the lease shall be for a term of ninety-nine years;
- (3) The lessee shall occupy and commence to use or cultivate the tract as his home or farm within one year after the lease is made;
- (4) The lessee shall thereafter, for at least such part of each year as the commission shall by regulation prescribe, so occupy and use or cultivate the tract on his own behalf;
- (5) The lessee shall not in any manner transfer to, or mortgage, pledge, or otherwise hold for the benefit of, any other person, except a native Hawaiian, and then only upon the approval of the commission, or agree so to transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise hold, his interest in the tract. Such interest shall not, except in pursuance of such a transfer, mortgage, or pledge to or holding for or agreement with a native Hawaiian, be subject to attachment, levy, or sale upon court process. The lessee shall not sublet his interest in the tract or improvements thereon. Upon the death of the lessee his interest in the tract and improvements thereon shall vest under the limitations provided for homesteads in section 403 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915:
- (6) The lessee shall pay all taxes assessed upon the tract and improvements thereon within sixty days after they became delinquent. If the lessee fails so to pay, the commission shall thereupon pay the taxes and have a lien therefor as provided in section 216 of this title;
- (7) The lessee shall perform such other conditions, not in conflict with any provision of this title, as the commission may stipulate in the lease: Provided, however, That the lessee shall be exempt from all taxes for the first five years from date of lease.

SEC. 209. [Successors to interest of lessee — conditions.] All successors, whether by agreement or process of law, to the interest of the lessee in any tract, shall be deemed to receive such interest subject to the conditions which would rest upon the lessee, if he then were the party holding the interest in the tract: Provided, That a successor receiving such interest by inheritance shall not, during the two years next following his inheritance, be deemed to have violated any of the conditions enumerated in section 208 of this title, even though he is not a native Hawaiian and does not on his own behalf occupy and use or cultivate the tract as a home or farm for such part of the year as the commission requires in accordance with the regulations prescribed by it under paragraph (4) of section 208 of this title.

SEC. 210. [Violation of conditions.] Whenever the commission has reason to believe that any condition enumerated in section 208, or any provision of section 209, of this title has been violated, the commission shall give due notice and afford opportunity for a hearing to the lessee of the tract in respect to which the alleged violation relates or to the successor of the lessee's interest therein, as the case demands. If upon such hearing the commission finds that the lessee or his successor has violated any condition in respect to the leasing of such tract, the commission may declare his interest in the tract and all improvements thereon to be forfeited and the lease in respect thereto canceled, and shall thereupon order the tract to be vacated within a reasonable time. The right to the use and occupancy of the Hawaiian home lands contained in such tract shall thereupon revert in the commission and the commission may take possession of the tract and the improvements thereon.

SEC. 211. [Community pastures.] The commission shall, when practicable, provide from the Hawaiian home lands a community pasture adjacent to each district in which agricultural lands are leased, as authorized by the provisions of section 207 of this title.

SEC. 212. [Unleased Hawaiian home lands — disposition.] The commission may return any Hawaiian home lands not leased as authorized by the provisions of section 207 of this title to the control of the commissioner of public lands. Any Hawaiian home lands so returned shall, until the commission gives notice as hereinafter in this section provided, resume and maintain the status of public lands in accordance with the provisions of the Hawaiian Organic Act and the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915, except that such lands may be disposed of under a general lease only. Each such lease, whether or not stipulated therein, shall be deemed subject to the right and duty of the commissioner of public lands to terminate the lease and return the lands to the commission whenever the commission, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, gives notice to him that the commission is of the opinion that the lands are required by it for leasing as authorized by the provisions of section 207 of this title or for a community pasture.

SEC. 213. [“Hawaiian Home Loan Fund” — establishment — receipts available.] There is hereby established in the treasury of the Territory a revolving fund, to be known as the “Hawaiian home loan fund.” The entire receipts derived from any leasing of public lands under the provisions of section 212 of this title and 30 per centum of the Territorial receipts derived from the leasing of cultivated sugar-cane lands under any other provision of law or from water licenses shall be covered into the fund until the total amount of the moneys paid therein equals $1,000,000.

SEC. 214. [Loans from "fund"—purposes.] The commission is hereby authorized to make loans from the fund to the lessee of any tract or the successor to his interest therein. Such loans may be made for the following purposes:

- (1) The erection of dwellings on any tract and the undertaking of other permanent improvements thereon;
- (2) The purchase of live stock and farm equipment; and
- (3) Otherwise assisting in the development of tracts.

SEC. 215. [Conditions imposed on loans.] Each contract of loan with the lessee or the successor to his interest in the tract shall be held subject to the following conditions, whether or not stipulated in the contract of loan:

- (1) The amount of loans to any one borrower outstanding at any one time shall not exceed $3,000.

- (2) The loans shall be repaid upon an amortization plan by means of a fixed number of annual installments sufficient to cover (a) interest on the unpaid principal at the rate of 5 per centum per annum, and (b) such amount of the principal as will extinguish the debt within an agreed period not exceeding thirty years. The moneys received by the commission from any installment paid upon such loan shall be covered into the fund. The payment of any installment due shall, with the concurrence therein of at least three of the five members of the commission, be postponed in whole or in part by the commission for such reasons as it deems good and sufficient and until such later date as it deems advisable. Such postponed payments shall continue to bear interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum on the unpaid principal and interest.

- (3) In case the borrower's interest in his tract or his successor's interest therein is transferred to or mortgaged, pledged, or otherwise held for the benefit of any native Hawaiian, or agreed so to be transferred, mortgaged, pledged, or otherwise held, as permitted by paragraph (5) of section 208 of this title, the commission may at its option declare all annual installments upon the loan immediately due and payable or permit the successor to the borrower's interest in the tract to assume the contract of loan. In case of the borrower's death, the commission shall permit the successor to the borrower's interest in the tract to assume the contract of loan.

- (4) No part of the moneys loaned shall be devoted to any purpose other than those for which the loan is made.

- (5) The borrower or the successor to his interest in the tract shall comply with such other conditions, not in conflict with any provision of this title, as the commission may stipulate in the contract of loan.

- (6) The borrower or the successor to his interest in the tract shall comply with the conditions enumerated in section 208, and with the provisions of section 209 of this title in respect to the lease of the tract.

SEC. 216. [Duty of borrowers to insure property—liens.] The commission may require the borrower to insure, in such amount as the commission may by regulation prescribe, all live stock and dwellings and other permanent improvements upon his tract, purchased or constructed out of any moneys loaned from the fund; or in lieu thereof the commission may directly take out such insurance and add the cost thereof to the amount of the annual installments payable under the amortization plan. Whenever the commission has reason to believe that the borrower has violated any condition enumerated in paragraphs (2), (4), (5), or (6) of section 215 of this title, the commission shall give due notice and afford opportunity for a hearing to the borrower or the successor to his interest in the tract, as the case demands. If upon such hearing the commission finds that the borrower has violated the condition, the commission may declare all annual installments immediately due and payable, notwithstanding any provision in the contract of loan to the contrary. The commission shall have a lien upon the borrower's or lessee's interest in his tract, dwellings, and other permanent improvements thereon, and his live stock to the amount of all annual installments due and unpaid and of all taxes upon such tract and improvements paid by the commission. Such liens shall have priority over any other obligation for which the tract, dwellings, other improvements, or live stock may be security.

The commission may, at such time as it deems advisable, enforce any such lien by declaring the borrower's interest in his tract or his successor's interest therein, as the case may be, together with the dwellings and other permanent improvements thereon and the live stock, to be forfeited, and the lease in respect to such tract canceled, and shall thereupon order the tract to be vacated and the live stock surrendered within a reasonable time. The right to the use and occupancy of the Hawaiian home lands contained in such tract shall thereupon revert in the commission, and the commission may take possession of the tract and the improvements thereon: Provided, That the commission shall pay to the borrower any difference in his favor between (1) the fair value of the live stock and any improvements in respect to the tract made by the borrower or any predecessor to his interest in the tract, and (2) the amount of the lien.

SEC. 217. [Failure of lessee or borrower to comply with orders of Commission — penalties — new leasing of forfeited tracts.] In case the lessee or borrower or the successor to his interest in the tract, as the case may be, fails to comply with any order issued by the commission under the provisions of section 210 or 216 of this title, the commission may (1) bring action of ejectment or other appropriate proceeding, or (2) invoke the aid of the circuit court of the Territory for the judicial circuit in which the tract designated in the commission's order is situated. Such court may thereupon order the lessee or his successor to comply with the order of the commission. Any failure to obey the order of the court may be punished by it as contempt thereof. Any tract forfeited under the provisions of section 210 or 216 of this title may be again leased by the commission as authorized by the provisions of section 207 of this title, except that the value, in the opinion of the commission, of all improvements made in respect to such tract by the original lessee or any successor to his interest therein shall constitute a loan by the commission to the new lessee. Such loan shall be subject to the provisions of this section and sections 215, except paragraph (1), and 216 to the same extent as loans made by the commission from the Hawaiian loan fund.

SEC. 218. [“ Farm Loan Act of Hawaii ”— applicability to lessee of homo lands.] No lessee of any tract or any successor to his interest therein shall be eligible to receive in respect to such tract any loan made under the provisions of the act of the legislature of the Territory entitled "the Farm Loan Act of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1919.

SEC. 219. [Agricultural experts — employment — duties.] The commission is authorized to employ agricultural experts at such compensation and in such number as it deems necessary. The annual expenditures for such compensation shall not exceed $6,000. It shall be the duty of such agricultural experts to instruct and advise the lessee of any tract or the successor to the lessee's interest therein as to the best methods of diversified farming and stock raising and such other matters as will tend successfully to accomplish the purposes of this title.

SEC. 220. [Water and other development projects — authority of Commission — funds for purpose — bonds.] The commission is hereby authorized directly to undertake and carry on general water and other development projects in respect to Hawaiian home lands. The legislature of the Territory is authorized to appropriate out of the treasury of the Territory such sums as it deems necessary to provide the commission with funds sufficient to execute such projects. The legislature is further authorized to issue bonds to the extent required to yield the amount of any sum so appropriated. The commission shall pay from the Hawaiian home loan fund into the treasury of the Territory:

(1) Upon the date when any interest payment becomes due upon any bond so issued, the amount of the interest then due; and

(2) Commencing with the first such date more than one year subsequent to the issuance of any bond and at each interest date thereafter, an amount such that the aggregate of all such amounts which become payable during the term of the bond, compounded annually at the rate of interest specified therein, shall equal the par value of the bond at the expiration of its term.

SEC. 221. ["Water license"—"surplus water"—water for domestic use and irrigation.] (a) When used in this section —

(1) The term "water license" means any license issued by the commissioner of public lands granting to any person the right to the use of Government-owned water; and

(2) The term "surplus water" means so much of any Government-owned water covered by a water license or so much of any privately owned water as is in excess of the quantity required for the use of the licensee or owner, respectively.

(b) All water licenses issued after the passage of this Act shall be deemed subject to the condition, whether or not stipulated in the license, that the licensee shall, upon the demand of the commission, grant to it the right to use, free of all charge, any water which the commission deems necessary adequately to supply the live stock or the domestic needs of individuals upon any tract.

(c) In order adequately to supply live stock or the domestic needs of individuals upon any tract, the commission is authorized (1) to use, free of all charge, Government-owned water not covered by any water license or covered by a water license issued after the passage of this Act, or covered by a water license issued previous to the passage of this Act but containing a reservation of such water for the benefit of the public, and (2) to contract with any person for the right to use or to acquire, under eminent domain proceedings similar, as near as may be, to the proceedings provided in respect to land by sections 667 to 678, inclusive, of the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915, the right to use any privately owned surplus water or any Government-owned surplus water covered by a water license issued previous to the passage of this Act, but not containing a reservation of such water for the benefit of the public. Any such acquirement shall be held to be for a public use and purpose. The commission may institute the eminent domain proceedings in its own name.

(d) The commission is authorized, for the additional purpose of adequately irrigating any tract, to use, free of all charge, Government-owned water upon the island of Molokai and Government-owned surplus water tributary to the Waimea River upon the island of Kauai, not covered by a water license or covered by a water license issued after the passage of this Act. Any water license issued after the passage of this Act and covering any such Government-owned water shall be deemed subject to the condition, whether or not stipulated therein, that the licensee shall, upon the demand of the commission, grant to it the right to use, free of all charge, any of the water upon the island of Molokai, and any of the surplus water tributary to the Waimea River upon the island of Kauai, which is covered by the license and which the commission deems necessary for the additional purpose of adequately irrigating any tract.

(e) All rights conferred on the commission by this section to use, contract for, acquire the use of water shall be deemed to include the right to use, contract for, or acquire the use of any ditch or pipe line constructed for the distribution and control of such water and necessary to such use by the commission.

SEC. 222. [Authority of Commission with reference to regulations and expenditures — reports — surety bonds by employees.] The commission may make such regulations and, with the approval in writing of the governor of the Territory, may make such expenditures including salaries, and appoint and remove such employees and agents, as are necessary to the efficient execution of the functions vested in the commission by this title. All expenditures of the commission shall be allowed and paid, and all moneys necessary for loans made by the commission in accordance with the provisions of this title advanced, from the Hawaiian home loan fund upon the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor, approved by the chairman of the commission. The commission shall make a biennial report to the legislature of the Territory upon the first day of each regular session thereof and such special reports as the legislature may from time to time require. The executive officer and secretary shall give bond in the sum of $25,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. The sureties upon the bond and the conditions thereof shall be approved annually by the commission.

SEC. 223. [Amendment on repeal of title — reservation of right by Congress.] The Congress of the United States reserves the right to alter, amend, or repeal the provisions of this title.

TITLE 3.—AMENDMENTS TO HAWAIIAN ORGANIC ACT.

SEC. 301. [Sec. 26 amended — legislature — compensation of members.] Section 26 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“ SEC. 26. That the members of the legislature shall receive for their services, in addition to mileage at the rate of 20 cents a mile each way, the sum of $1,000 for each regular session, payable in three equal installments on and after the first, thirtieth, and fiftieth days of the session, and the sum of $500 for each special session: Provided, That they shall receive no compensation for any extra session held under the provisions of section 54 of this Act."

For sec. 26 as it read before this amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 498.

SEC. 302. [Sec. 55 amended — power of corporations to hold real estate — indebtedness of Territory.] Section 55 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended by deleting therefrom that portion thereof which reads: "Provided, That no corporation, domestic or foreign, shall acquire and hold real estate in Hawaii in excess of one thousand acres, and all real estate acquired or held by such corporation or association contrary hereto shall be forfeited and escheat to the United States, but existing vested rights in real estate shall not be impaired," and by amending so much of section 55 as reads, "and the total indebtedness of the Territory shall not at any time be extended beyond 7 per centum of such assessed value of property in the Territory," to read as follows: "and the total indebtedness of the Territory shall not at any time be extended beyond 10 per centum of such assessed value of property in the Territory."

For sec. 55 as it read before this amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 503.

SEC. 303. [Sec. 66 amended — executive power.] Section 66 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 66. That the executive power of the government of the Territory of Hawaii shall be vested in a governor, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and shall hold office for four years and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President. He shall be not less than thirty-five years of age; shall be a citizen of the Territory of Hawaii; shall have resided therein for at least three years next preceding his appointment; shall be commander in chief of the militia thereof; and may grant pardons or reprieves for offenses against the laws of the said Territory and reprieves for offenses against the laws of the United States until the decision of the President is made known thereon."

For sec. 66 as it read before this amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 509.

SEC. 304. [Sec. 73 amended — first, second and third paragraphs — public lands.] The first, second, and third paragraphs of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act are hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 73. (a) That when used in this section —

"(1) The term 'commissioner' means the commissioner of public lands of the Territory of Hawaii;

"(2) The term 'land board' means the board of public lands, as provided in subdivision (1) of this section;

"(3) The term 'public lands' includes all lands in the Territory of Hawaii classed as government or crown lands previous to August 15, 1895, or acquired by the government upon or subsequent to such date by purchase, exchange, escheat, or the exercise of the right of eminent domain, or in any other manner; except (1) lands designated in section 203 of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920. (2) lands set apart or reserved by Executive order by the President,

(3) lands set aside or withdrawn by the governor under the provisions of subdivision (g) of this section, (4) sites of public buildings, lands used for roads, streets, landings, nurseries, parks, tracts reserved for forest growth or conservation of water supply, or other public purposes, and (5) lands to which the United States has relinquished the absolute fee and ownership, unless subsequently placed under the control of the commissioner and given the status of public lands in accordance with the provisions of this Act, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, or the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915; and

“(4) The term ‘ person ’ includes individual, partnership, corporation, and association.

“(b) Any term defined or described in section 347 or 351 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii of 1915, except a term defined in subdivision (a) of this section, shall, whenever used in this section, if not inconsistent with the context or any provision of this section, have the same meaning as given it by such definition or description.

“(c) The laws of Hawaii relating to public lands, the settlement of boundaries, and the issuance of patents on land commission awards, except as changed by this Act, shall continue in force until Congress shall otherwise provide. Subject to the approval of the President, all sales, grants, leases, and other dispositions of the public domain, and agreements concerning the same, and all franchises granted by the Hawaiian government in conformity with the laws of Hawaii, between the 7th day of July, 1898, and the 28th day of September, 1899, are hereby ratified and confirmed. In said laws ‘ land patent ’ shall be substituted for ‘ royal patent ’; ‘ commissioner of public lands,’ for ‘ minister of the interior,’ ‘ agent of public lands,’ and ‘ commissioners of public lands,’ or their equivalents; and the words ‘ that I am a citizen of the United States,’ or ‘ that I have declared my intention to become a citizen of the United States, as required by law,’ for the words ‘ that I am a citizen by birth (or naturalization) of the Republic of Hawaii,’ or ‘ that I have received letters of denization under the Republic of Hawaii,’ or ‘ that I have received a certificate of special right of citizenship from the Republic of Hawaii.’

“(d) No lease of agricultural lands or of undeveloped arid public land which is capable of being converted into agricultural land by the development, for irrigation purposes, of either the underlying or adjacent waters, or both, shall be granted, sold, or renewed by the government of the Territory of Hawaii for a longer period than fifteen years. Each such lease shall be sold at public auction to the highest bidder after due notice as provided in subdivision (h) of this section and the laws of the Territory of Hawaii. Each such notice shall state all the terms and conditions of the sale. The land, or any part thereof so leased, may at any time during the term of the lease be withdrawn from the operation thereof for homestead or public purposes, in which case the rent reserved shall be reduced in proportion to the value of the part so withdrawn. Every such lease shall contain a provision to that effect: Provided, That the commissioner may, with the approval of the governor and at least two-thirds of the members of the land board, omit such withdrawal provision from the lease of any lands suitable for the cultivation of sugar cane whenever he deems it advantageous to the Territory of Hawaii. Land so leased shall not be subject to such right of withdrawal.

“(e) All funds arising from the sale or lease or other disposal of public land shall be appropriated by the laws of the government of the Territory of Hawaii and applied to such uses and purposes for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Territory of Hawaii as are consistent with the joint resolution of annexation, approved July 7, 1898.

“(f) No person shall be entitled to receive any certificate of occupation, right of purchase lease, cash freehold agreement, or special homestead agreement who, or whose husband or wife, has previously taken or held more than ten acres of land under any such certificate, lease, or agreement made or issued after May 27, 1910, or under any homestead lease or patent based thereon; or who, or whose husband or wife, or both of them, owns other land in the Territory, the combined area of which and the land in question exceeds eighty acres; or who is an alien, unless he has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States as provided by law. No person who has so declared his intention and taken or held under any such certificate, lease, or agreement shall continue so to hold or become entitled to a homestead lease or patent of the land, unless he becomes a citizen within five years after so taking.

“(g) No public land for which any such certificate, lease, or agreement is issued after May 27, 1910, or any part thereof, or interest therein or control thereof, shall, without the written consent of the commissioner and governor, thereafter, whether before or after a homestead lease of patent has been issued thereon, be or be contracted to be in any way, directly or indirectly, by process of law or otherwise, conveyed, mortgaged, leased, or otherwise transferred to, or acquired or held by or for the benefit of, any alien or corporation; or before or after the issuance of a homestead lease or before the issuance of a patent to or by or for the benefit of any other person; or, after the issuance of a patent, to or by or for the benefit of any person who owns, or holds, or controls, directly or indirectly, other land or the use thereof, the combined area of which and the land in question exceeds eighty acres. The prohibitions of this paragraph shall not apply to transfers or acquisitions by inheritance or between tenants in common.”

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 305. [Sec. 73 further amended — fourth and fifth paragraphs.] The fourth and fifth paragraphs of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act are hereby amended by inserting “(h)” at the beginning of the fourth paragraph and “(i)” at the beginning of the fifth paragraph.

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 306. [Sec. 73 further amended — sixth paragraph.] The sixth paragraph of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“(j) The commissioner, with the approval of the governor, may give to any person (1) who is a citizen of the United States or who has legally declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States and hereafter becomes such, and (2) who has, or whose predecessors in interest have, improved any parcel of public lands and resided thereon continuously for the ten years next preceding the application to purchase, a preference right to purchase so much of such parcel and such adjoining land as may reasonably be required for a home, at a fair price to be determined by three disinterested citizens to be appointed by the governor. In the determination of such purchase price the commissioner may, if he deems it just and reasonable, disregard the value of the improvements on such parcel and adjoining land. If such parcel of public lands is reserved for public purposes, either for the use of the United States or the Territory of Hawaii, the commissioner may with the approval of the governor grant to such person a preference right to purchase public lands which are of similar character, value, and area, and which are situated in the same land district. The privilege granted by this paragraph shall not extend to any original lessee or to an assignee of an entire lease of public lands."

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 307. [Sec. 73 further amended — seventh paragraph.] The seventh paragraph of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended by inserting "(k)" at the beginning thereof.

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 308. [Sec. 73 further amended — eighth paragraph.] The eighth paragraph of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(l) No sale of lands for other than homestead purposes, except as herein provided, and no exchange by which the Territory shall convey lands exceeding either forty acres in area or $5,000 in value shall be made. No lease of agricultural lands exceeding forty acres in area, or of pastoral or waste lands exceeding two hundred acres in area, shall be made without the approval of two-thirds of the board of public lands, which is hereby constituted, the members of which are to be appointed by the governor as provided in section 80 of this Act, and until the legislature shall otherwise provide said board shall consist of six members, and its members be appointed for a term of four years: Provided, however, That the commissioner shall, with the approval of said board, sell to any citizen of the United States, or to any person who has legally declared his intention to become a citizen, for residence purposes lots and tracts, not exceeding three acres in area, and that sales of Government lands may be made upon the approval of said board whenever necessary to locate thereon railroad rights of way, railroad tracks, side tracks, depot grounds, pipe lines, irrigation ditches, pumping stations, reservoirs, factories, and mills and appurtenances thereto, including houses for employees, mercantile establishments, hotels, churches, and private schools; and all such sales shall be limited to the amount actually necessary for the economical conduct of such business or undertaking: Provided further, That no exchange of Government lands shall hereafter be made without the approval of two-thirds of the members of said board, and no such exchange shall be made except to acquire lands directly for public uses."

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 309. [Sec. 73 further amended — ninth paragraph.] The ninth paragraph of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended by inserting "(m)" at the beginning thereof.

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 310. [Sec. 73 further amended — tenth paragraph.] The tenth paragraph of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(n) It shall be the duty of the commissioner to cause to be surveyed and opened for homestead entry a reasonable amount of desirable agricultural lands and also of pastoral lands in the various parts of the Territory for homestead purposes on or before January 1, 1911, and he shall annually thereafter cause to be surveyed for homestead purposes such amount of agricultural lands and pastoral lands in various parts of the Territory as there may be demand for by persons having the qualifications of homesteaders. In laying out any homestead the commissioner shall include in the homestead lands sufficient to support thereon an ordinary family, but not exceeding eighty acres of agricultural lands and two hundred and fifty acres of first-class pastoral lands or five hundred acres of second-class pastoral lands; or in case of a homestead, including pastoral lands only, not exceeding five hundred acres of first-class pastoral lands or one thousand acres of second-class pastoral lands. All necessary expenses for surveying and opening any such lands for homesteads shall be paid for out of any funds of the Territorial treasury derived from the sale or lease of the public lands, which funds are hereby made available for such purposes.

“(o) The commissioner, with the approval of the governor, may by contract or agreement authorize any person who has the right of possession, under a general lease from the Territory, of agricultural or pastoral lands included in any homestead, to continue in possession of such lands after the expiration of the lease until such time as the homesteader takes actual possession thereof under any form of homestead agreement. The commissioner may fix in the contract or agreement such other terms and conditions as he deems advisable.”

For sec. 73 as it read before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 311. [Sec. 73 further amended — eleventh and twelfth paragraphs.] The eleventh and twelfth paragraphs of section 73 of the Hawaiian Organic Act are hereby amended by inserting “(p)” at the beginning of the eleventh paragraph and “(q)” at the beginning of the twelfth paragraph.

For sec. 73 before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 511.

SEC. 312. [Sec. 80 amended — fourth paragraph — citizenship of officers.] The fourth paragraph of section 80 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“All officers appointed under the provisions of this section shall be citizens of the Territory of Hawaii and shall have resided therein for at least three years next preceding their appointment.”

For sec. 80 before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 517.

SEC. 313. [Sec. 86 amended — federal court.] Section 86 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 86. (a) That there shall be established in the said Territory a district court, to consist of two judges, who shall reside therein and be called district judges, and who shall each receive an annual salary of $7,500. The said court while in session shall be presided over by only one of said judges. The two judges shall from time to time, either by order or rules of the court, prescribe at what times and in what class of cases each of them shall preside. The said two judges shall have the same powers in all matters coming before said court.” [sic]

“(b) The President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, shall appoint two district judges, a district attorney, and a marshal of the United States for the said district, all of whom shall be citizens of the Territory of Hawaii and shall have resided therein for at least three years next preceding their appointment. Said judges, attorney, and marshal shall hold office for six years unless sooner removed by the President.

“(c) The said court shall have, in addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, jurisdiction of all cases cognizable in a circuit court of the United States, and shall proceed therein in the same manner as a circuit court; and the said judges, district attorney, and marshal shall have and exercise in the Territory of Hawaii all the powers conferred by the laws of the United States upon the judges, district attorneys, and marshals of district and circuit courts of the United States.

“(d) Writs of error and appeals from the said district court shall be had and allowed to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth judicial circuit in the same manner as writs of error and appeals are allowed from circuit courts to circuit courts of appeal as provided by law, and appeals and writs of error may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States from said district court in cases where appeals and writs of error are allowed from the district and circuit courts of the United States to the Supreme Court, and the laws of the United States relating to juries and jury trials shall be applicable to said district court. The laws of the United States relating to appeals, writs of error, removal of causes, and other matters and proceedings as between the courts of the United States and the courts of the several States shall govern in such matters and proceedings as between the courts of the United States and the courts of the Territory of Hawaii. Regular terms of said court shall be held at Honolulu on the second Monday in April and October, and special terms may be held at such times and places in said district as the said judges may deem expedient. The said district judges shall appoint a clerk of said court at a salary of $4,200 per annum and shall appoint a reporter of said court at a salary of $3,000 per annum. The clerk of the district court with the approval of the judges thereof may appoint two deputy clerks at salaries of $2,500 each per annum.”

For sec. 86 before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 521.

SEC. 314. [Sec. 92 amended — salaries of officers.] Section 92 of the Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 92. That the following officers shall receive the following annual salaries, to be paid by the United States: The governor, $10,000; the secretary of the Territory, $5,400; the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the Territory, $7,500; the associate judges of the Supreme Court, $7,000 each; the judges of the circuit courts, $6,000 each; the United States district attorney, $5,000; the United States marshal, $5,000. The governor shall receive annually from the United States, in addition to his salary, (1) the sum of $1,000 for stationery, postage, and incidentals, and (2) his traveling expenses while absent from the capital on official business. The governor is authorized to employ a private secretary who shall receive an annual salary of $3,000, to be paid by the United States.”

For sec. 92 before amendment see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 525.

SEC. 315. [Addition of secs. 105, 106, 107 at end of Act.] The Hawaiian Organic Act is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof three additional sections to read as follows:

“SEC. 105. [Citizenship of employees on public works.] That no person shall be employed as a mechanic or laborer upon any public work carried on in the Territory of Hawaii by the Government of the United States, whether the work is done by contract or otherwise, unless such person is a citizen of the United States or eligible to become such a citizen.

“SEC. 106. [Powers and duties of board of harbor commissioners.] The board of harbor commissioners of the Territory of Hawaii shall have and exercise all the powers and shall perform all the duties which may lawfully be exercised by or under the Territory of Hawaii relative to the control and management of the shores, shore waters, navigable streams, harbors, harbor and water-front improvements, ports, docks, wharves, quays, bulkheads, and landings belonging to or controlled by the Territory, and the shipping using the same, and shall have the authority to use and permit and regulate the use of the wharves, piers, bulkheads, quays, and landings belonging to or controlled by the Territory for receiving or discharging passengers and for loading and landing merchandise, with a right to collect wharfage and demurrage thereon or therefor, and, subject to all applicable provisions of law, to fix and regulate from time to time rates for services rendered in mooring vessels, charges for the use of moorings belonging to or controlled by the Territory, rates or charges for the services of pilots, wharfage, and demurrage, rents or charges for warehouses or warehouse space, for office or office space, for storage of freight, goods, wares, and merchandise, for storage space for the use of donkey engines, derricks, or other equipment belonging to the Territory, under the control of the board, and to make other charges, including toll or tonnage charges on freight passing over or across wharves, docks, quays, bulkheads, or landings. The board shall likewise have power to appoint and remove clerks, wharfingers and their assistants, pilots and pilot-boat crews, and all such other employees as may be necessary, and to fix their compensation; to make rules and regulations pursuant to this section and not inconsistent with law; and generally shall have all powers necessary fully to carry out the provisions of this section.

“All moneys appropriated for harbor improvements, including new construction, reconstruction, repairs, salaries, and operating expenses, shall be expended under the supervision and control of the board, subject to the provisions of law. All contracts and agreements authorized by law to be entered into by the board shall be executed on its behalf by its chairman.

“The board shall prepare and submit annually to the governor a report of its official acts during the preceding year, together with its recommendations as to harbor improvements throughout the Territory.

“SEC. 107. [Name of Act.] That this Act may be cited as the ‘Hawaiian Organic Act.’”

TITLE 4.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

SEC. 401. [Repeal of inconsistent Acts.] All Acts or parts of Acts, either of the Congress of the United States or of the Territory of Hawaii, to the extent that they are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 402. [Unconstitutionality of any provision — validity of remainder of Act.] If any provision of this Act, or the application of such provision to certain circumstances, is held unconstitutional, the remainder of the Act and the application of such provision to circumstances other than those as to which it is held unconstitutional shall not be held invalidated thereby.

An Act To amend "An Act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service," approved February 15, 1893.

[Vessels from foreign ports — bill of health from consular officer, etc.— sec. 2 of Act of Feb. 15, 1893, amended.] That first paragraph of section 2 of the Act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the United States Public Health Service, approved February 15, 1893, to be amended to read as follows:

" SEC. 2. That any vessel at any foreign port clearing or departing for any port or place in the United States or its possessions or other dependencies or any vessel at any port in the possessions or other dependencies of the United States clearing or departing for any port or place in the United States or its possessions or other dependencies, shall be required to obtain from the consul, vice consul, or other consular officer of the United States at the port of departure, or from the medical officer where such officer has been detailed by the President for that purpose, a bill of health in duplicate, in the form prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, setting forth the sanitary history and condition of said vessel, and that it has in all respects complied with the rules and regulations in such cases prescribed for securing the best sanitary condition of the said vessel, its cargo, passengers, and crew; and said consular or medical officer is required, before granting such duplicate bill of health, to be satisfied that the matters and things therein stated are true; and for his services in that behalf he shall be entitled to demand and receive such fees as shall by lawful regulation be allowed, to be accounted for as is required in other cases."

For section 2 as originally enacted, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 549.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Public Health Service — limitation on expenditures for advertising.] Appropriations herein or hereafter made for the Public Health Service shall not be expended for advertising in newspapers, magazines, or periodicals for any purpose other than the procurement of necessary employees and bids for necessary services, supplies, materials, and equipment.

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [Vessels at quarantine stations — fees imposed by Secretary of Treasury.] On and after July 1, 1921, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to promulgate such a schedule of fees to be charged vessels at each of the national quarantine stations as will be fair and reasonable for the services rendered by each station: Provided, That this authority shall not be applicable to any quarantine station where the fees are now fixed by law.

This is from the "Second Deficiency Act, Fiscal Year, 1921," approved June 16, 1921.

An Act For the promotion of the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Maternity and infancy — promotion of welfare and hygiene — Federal aid.] That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sums specified in section 2 of this Act, to be paid to the several States for the purpose of cooperating with them in promoting the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. [Apportionment of moneys among different states.] For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the current fiscal year $480,000, to be equally apportioned among the several States, and for each subsequent year, for the period of five years, $240,000, to be equally apportioned among the several States in the manner hereinafter provided: Provided, That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the use of the States, subject to the provisions of this Act, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, an additional sum of $1,000,000, and annually thereafter, for the period of five years, an additional sum not to exceed $1,000,000: Provided further, That the additional appropriations herein authorized shall be apportioned $5,000 to each State and the balance among the States in the proportion which their population bears to the total population of the States of the United States, according to the last preceding United States census: And provided further, That no payment out of the additional appropriation herein authorized shall be made in any year to any State until an equal sum has been appropriated for that year by the legislature of such State for the maintenance of the services and facilities provided for in this Act.

So much of the amount apportioned to any State for any fiscal year as remains unpaid to such State at the close thereof shall be available for expenditures in that State until the close of the succeeding fiscal year.

SEC. 3. [Board of Maternity and Infant Hygiene — creation — administration of Act by Children's Bureau of Department of Labor.] There is hereby created a Board of Maternity and Infant Hygiene, which shall consist of the Chief of the Children's Bureau, the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and the United States Commissioner of Education, and which is hereafter designated in this Act as the Board. The Board shall elect its own chairman and perform the duties provided for in this Act.

The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor shall be charged with the administration of this Act, except as herein otherwise provided, and the Chief of the Children's Bureau shall be the executive officer. It shall be the duty of the Children's Bureau to make or cause to be made such studies, investigations, and reports as will promote the efficient administration of this Act.

For Act creating Children's Bureau see 6 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 295.

SEC. 4. [How states may secure benefits of Act.] In order to secure the benefits of the appropriations authorized in section 2 of this Act, any State shall, through the legislative authority thereof, accept the provisions of this Act and designate or authorize the creation of a State agency with which the Children's Bureau shall have all necessary powers to cooperate as herein provided in the administration of the provisions of this Act: Provided, That in any State having a child-welfare or child-hygiene division in its State agency of health, the said State agency of health shall administer the provisions of this Act through such divisions. If the legislature of any State has not made provision for accepting the provisions of this Act the governor of such State may in so far as he is authorized to do so by the laws of such State accept the provisions of this Act and designate or create a State agency to cooperate with the Children's Bureau until six months after the adjournment of the first regular session of the legislature in such State following the passage of this Act.

SEC. 5. [Fund for administration of provisions of Act.] So much, not to exceed 5 per centum, of the additional appropriations authorized for any fiscal year under section 2 of this Act, as the Children's Bureau may estimate to be necessary for administering the provisions of this Act, as herein provided, shall be deducted for that purpose, to be available until expended.

SEC. 6. [Employees — supplies — travel and other expenses.] Out of the amounts authorized under section 5 of this Act the Children's Bureau is authorized to employ such assistants, clerks, and other persons in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, to be taken from the eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission, and to purchase such supplies, material, equipment, office fixtures, and apparatus, and to incur such travel and other expense as it may deem necessary for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

SEC. 7. [Appropriation when apportioned — duties of Children's Bureau.] Within sixty days after any appropriation authorized by this Act has been made, the Children's Bureau shall make the apportionment herein provided for and shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount estimated by the bureau to be necessary for administering the provisions of this Act, and shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the treasurers of the various States the amount which has been apportioned to each State for the fiscal year for which such appropriation has been made.

SEC. 8. [Submission of plans by State for carrying out provisions of Act.] Any State desiring to receive the benefits of this Act shall, by its agency described in section 4, submit to the Children's Bureau detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this Act within such State, which plans shall be subject to the approval of the board: Provided, That the plans of the States under this Act shall provide that no official, or agent, or representative in carrying out the provisions of this Act shall enter any home or take charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or the person standing in loco parentis or having custody of such child. If these plans shall be in conformity with the provisions of this Act and reasonably appropriate and adequate to carry out its purposes they shall be approved by the board and due notice of such approval shall be sent to the State agency by the chief of the Children's Bureau.

SEC. 9. [Authority of Children's Bureau over children.] No official, agent, or representative of the Children's Bureau shall by virtue of this Act have any right to enter any home over the objection of the owner thereof, or to take charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or of the person standing in loco parentis or having custody of such child. Nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the power of a parent or guardian or person standing in loco parentis to determine what treatment or correction shall be provided for a child or the agency or agencies to be employed for such purpose.

SEC. 10. [Certificate to Secretary of Treasury of amount to which states entitled.] Within sixty days after any appropriation authorized by this Act has been made, and as often thereafter while such appropriation remains unexpended as changed conditions may warrant, the Children's Bureau shall ascertain the amounts that have been appropriated by the legislatures of the several States accepting the provisions of this Act and shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount to which each State is entitled under the provisions of this Act. Such certificate shall state (1) that the State has, through its legislative authority, accepted the provisions of this Act and designated or authorized the creation of an agency to cooperate with the Children's Bureau, or that the State has otherwise accepted this Act, as provided in section 4 hereof; (2) the fact that the proper agency of the State has submitted to the Children's Bureau detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this Act, and that such plans have been approved by the board; (3) the amount, if any, that has been appropriated by the legislature of the State for the maintenance of the services and facilities of this Act, as provided in section 2 hereof; and (4) the amount to which the State is entitled under the provisions of this Act. Such certificate, when in conformity with the provisions hereof, shall, until revoked as provided in section 12 hereof, be sufficient authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to make payment to the State in accordance therewith.

SEC. 11. [Reports by states receiving Federal aid — withholding of certificate by Children's Bureau.] Each State agency cooperating with the Children's Bureau under this Act shall make such reports concerning its operations and expenditures as shall be prescribed or requested by the bureau. The Children's Bureau may, with the approval of the board, and shall, upon request of a majority of the board, withhold any further certificate provided for in section 10 hereof whenever it shall be determined as to any State that the agency thereof has not properly expended the money paid to it or the moneys herein required to be appropriated by such State for the purposes and in accordance with the provisions of this Act. Such certificate may be withheld until such time or upon such conditions as the Children's Bureau, with the approval of the board, may determine; when so withheld the State agency may appeal to the President of the United States who may either affirm or reverse the action of the Bureau with such directions as he shall consider proper: Provided, That before any such certificate shall be withheld from any State, the chairman of the board shall give notice in writing to the authority designated to represent the State, stating specifically wherein said State has failed to comply with the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 12. [Application of moneys apportioned to states — prohibited purposes.] No portion of any moneys apportioned under this Act for the benefit of the States shall be applied, directly or indirectly, to the purchase, erection, preservation, or repair of any building or buildings or equipment, or for the purchase or rental of any buildings or lands, nor shall any such moneys or moneys required to be appropriated by any State for the purposes and in accordance with the provisions of this Act be used for the payment of any maternity or infancy pension, stipend, or gratuity.

SEC. 13. [Authority of Secretary of Labor — supervision of Children's Bureau.] The Children's Bureau shall perform the duties assigned to it by this Act under the supervision of the Secretary of Labor, and he shall include in his annual report to Congress a full account of the administration of this Act and expenditures of the moneys herein authorized.

SEC. 14. [Control by states of administration of act within their territory.] This Act shall be construed as intending to secure to the various States control of the administration of this Act within their respective States, subject only to the provisions and purposes of this Act.

An Act To amend the Act entitled "An Act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

[Act of Nov. 9, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Citation of act as "Federal Highway Act."] That this Act may be cited as the Federal Highway Act.

SEC. 2. [Terms used in act defined.] That, when used in this Act, unless the context indicates otherwise —

The term "Federal Aid Act" means the Act entitled "An Act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, as amended by sections 5 and 6 of an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1919, and all other Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto.

The term "highway" includes rights of way, bridges, drainage structures, signs, guard rails, and protective structures in connection with highways, but shall not include any highway or street in a municipality having a population of two thousand five hundred or more as shown by the last available census, except that portion of any such highway or street along which within a distance of one mile the houses average more than two hundred feet apart.

The term "State highway department" includes any State department, commission, board, or official having adequate powers and suitably equipped and organized to discharge to the satisfaction of the Secretary of Agriculture the duties herein required.

The term "maintenance" means the constant making of needed repairs to preserve a smooth surfaced highway.

The term "construction" means the supervising, inspecting, actual building, and all expenses incidental to the construction of a highway, except locating, surveying, mapping, and costs of rights of way.

The term "reconstruction" means a widening or a rebuilding of the highway or any portion thereof to make it a continuous road, and of sufficient width and strength to care adequately for traffic needs.

The term "forest roads" means roads wholly or partly within or adjacent to and serving the national forests.

The term "State funds" includes for the purposes of this Act funds raised under the authority of the State, or any political or other subdivision thereof, and made available for expenditure under the direct control of the State highway department.

For Act of July 11, 1916, mentioned in the text, and amendments, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 639; 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 299.

SEC. 3. [Council of National Defense — powers respecting highways, etc., transferred to Secretary of Agriculture.] All powers and duties of the Council of National Defense under the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 29, 1916, in relation to highway or highway transport, are hereby transferred to the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Council of National Defense is directed to turn over to the Secretary of Agriculture the equipment, material, supplies, papers, maps, and documents utilized in the exercise of such powers. The powers and duties of agencies dealing with highways in the national parks or in military or naval reservations under the control of the United States Army or Navy, or with highways used principally for military or naval purposes, shall not be taken over by the Secretary of Agriculture, but such highways shall remain under the control and jurisdiction of such agencies.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to cooperate with the State highway departments, and with the Department of the Interior in the construction of public highways within Indian reservations, and to pay the amount assumed therefor from the funds allotted or apportioned under this Act to the State wherein the reservation is located.

For that part of the Act of Aug. 29, 1916, mentioned in the text, which has to do with the Council of National Defense, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1342.

SEC. 4. [Accounting division — establishment.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall establish an accounting division which shall devise and install a proper method of keeping the accounts.

SEC. 5. [Surplus supplies suitable for highways — transfer from War Department — distribution.] That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transfer to the Secretary of Agriculture, upon his request, all war material, equipment, and supplies now or hereafter declared surplus from stock now on hand and not needed for the purposes of the War Department but suitable for use in the improvement of highways, and that the same shall be distributed among the highway departments of the several States to be used in the construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of highways, such distribution to be upon the same basis as that hereinafter provided for in this Act in the distribution of Federal-aid fund: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture, in his discretion, may reserve from such distribution not to exceed 10 per centum of such material, equipment, and supplies for use in the construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of national forest roads or other roads constructed, reconstructed, or maintained under his direct supervision.

SEC. 6. [Projects receiving Federal aid — approval by Secretary of Agriculture.] That in approving projects to receive Federal aid under the provisions of this Act the Secretary of Agriculture shall give preference to such projects as will expedite the completion of an adequate and connected system of highways, interstate in character.

Before any projects are approved in any State, such State, through its State highway department, shall select or designate a system of highways not to exceed 7 per centum of the total highway mileage of such State as shown by the records of the State highway department at the time of the passage of this Act.

Upon this system all Federal-aid apportionments shall be expended.

Highways which may receive Federal aid shall be divided into two classes, one of which shall be known as primary or interstate highways, and shall not exceed three-sevenths of the total mileage which may receive Federal aid, and the other which shall connect or correlate therewith and be known as secondary or intercounty highways, and shall consist of the remainder of the mileage which may receive Federal aid.

The Secretary of Agriculture shall have authority to approve in whole or in part the systems as designated or to require modifications or revisions thereof: Provided, That the States shall submit to the Secretary of Agriculture for his approval any proposed revisions of the designated systems of highways above provided for.

Not more than 60 per centum of all Federal aid allotted to any State shall be expended upon the primary or interstate highways until provision has been made for the improvement of the entire system of such highways: Provided, That with the approval of any State highway department the Secretary of Agriculture may approve the expenditure of more than 60 per centum of the Federal aid apportioned to such State upon the primary or interstate highways in such State.

The Secretary of Agriculture may approve projects submitted by the State highway departments prior to the selection, designation, and approval of the system of Federal-aid highways herein provided for if he may reasonably anticipate that such projects will become a part of such system.

Whenever provision has been made by any State for the completion and maintenance of a system of primary or interstate and secondary or intercounty highways equal to 7 per centum of the total mileage of such State, as required by this Act, said State, through its State highway department, by and with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, is hereby authorized to add to the mileage of primary or interstate and secondary or intercounty systems as funds become available for the construction and maintenance of such additional mileage.

SEC. 7. [Necessity that state set aside fund for Federal aid roads.] That before any project shall be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture for any State such State shall make provisions for State funds required each year of such States by this Act for construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of all Federal-aid highways within the State, which funds shall be under the direct control of the State highway department.

SEC. 8. [Types of surface and kinds of materials for construction, etc., of Federal aid roads.] That only such durable types of surface and kinds of materials shall be adopted for the construction and reconstruction of any highway which is a part of the primary or interstate and secondary or intercounty systems as will adequately meet the existing and probable future traffic needs and conditions thereon. The Secretary of Agriculture shall approve the types and width of construction and reconstruction and the character of improvement, repair, and maintenance in each case, consideration being given to the type and character which shall be best suited for each locality and to the probable character and extent of the future traffic.

SEC. 9. [Freedom from tolls of Federal aid roads — width of roads.] That all highways constructed or reconstructed under the provisions of this Act shall be free from tolls of all kinds.

That all highways in the primary or interstate system constructed after the passage of this Act shall have a right of way of ample width and a wearing surface of an adequate width which shall not be less than eighteen feet, unless, in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture, it is rendered impracticable by physical conditions, excessive costs, probable traffic requirements, or legal obstacles.

SEC. 10. [Payment to state of sum apportioned to it.] That when any State shall have met the requirements of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury, upon receipt of certification from the governor of such State to such effect, approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, shall immediately make available to such State, for the purpose set forth in this Act, the sum apportioned to such State as herein provided.

SEC. 11. [Surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates — approval — setting aside state's share of Federal fund — public land states.] That any State having complied with the provisions of this Act, and desiring to avail itself of the benefits thereof, shall by its State highway department submit to the Secretary of Agriculture project statements setting forth proposed construction or reconstruction of any primary or interstate, or secondary or intercounty highway therein. If the Secretary of Agriculture approve the project, the State highway department shall furnish to him such surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates therefor as he may require; items included for engineering, inspection, and unforeseen contingencies shall not exceed 10 per centum of the total estimated cost of its construction.

That when the Secretary of Agriculture approves such surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates, he shall notify the State highway department and immediately certify the fact to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon set aside the share of the United States payable under this Act on account of such projects, which shall not exceed 50 per centum of the total estimated cost thereof, except that in the case of any State containing unappropriated public lands exceeding 5 per centum of the total area of all lands in the State, the share of the United States payable under this Act on account of such projects shall not exceed 50 per centum of the total estimated cost thereof plus a percentage of such setimated cost equal to one-half of the percentage which the area of the unappropriated public lands in such State bears to the total area of such State: Provided, That the limitation of payments not to exceed $20,000 per mile, under existing law, which the Secretary of Agriculture may make be, and the same is hereby, increased in proportion to the increased percentage of Federal aid authorized by this section: Provided further, That these provisions relative to the public-land States shall apply to all unobligated or unmatched funds appropriated by the Federal Aid Act and payment for approved projects upon which actual building construction work had not begun on the 30th day of June, 1921.

SEC. 12. [State highway department — supervision of work on Federal aid roads — approval by Secretary of Agriculture.] That the construction and reconstruction of the highways or parts of highways under the provisions of this Act, and all contracts, plans, specifications, and estimates relating thereto, shall be undertaken by the State highway departments subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture. The construction and reconstruction work and labor in each State shall be done in accordance with its laws and under the direct supervision of the State highway department, subject to the inspection and approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and in accordance with the rules and regulations pursuant to this Act.

SEC. 13. [Payments to state on account of construction, etc., of Federal aid roads — how and when made.] That when the Secretary of Agriculture shall find that any project approved by him has been constructed or reconstructed in compliance with said plans and specifications, he shall cause to be paid to the proper authorities of said State the amount set aside for said project.

That the Secretary of Agriculture may, in his discretion, from time to time, make payments on such construction or reconstruction as the work progresses, but these payments, including previous payments, if any, shall not be more than the United States pro rata part of the value of the labor and materials which have been actually put into such construction or reconstruction in conformity to said plans and specifications. The Secretary of Agriculture and the State highway department of each State may jointly determine at what time and in what amounts payments as work progresses shall be made under this Act.

Such payments shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, on warrants drawn by the Secretary of Agriculture, to such official or officials or depository as may be designated by the State highway department and authorized under the laws of the State to receive public funds of the State.

SEC. 14. [Failure of state to maintain Federal aid road — duty of Secretary of Agriculture.] That should any State fail to maintain any highway within its boundaries after construction or reconstruction under the provisions of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall then serve notice upon the State highway department of that fact, and if within ninety days after receipt of such notice said highway has not been placed in proper condition of maintenance, the Secretary of Agriculture shall proceed immediately to have such highway placed in a proper condition of maintenance and charge the cost thereof against the Federal funds allotted to such State, and shall refuse to approve any other project in such State, except as hereinafter provided.

Upon the reimbursement by the State of the amount expended by the Federal Government for such maintenance, said amount shall be paid into the Federal highway fund for reapportionment among all the States for the construction of roads under this Act, and the Secretary of Agriculture shall then approve further projects submitted by the State as in this Act provided.

Whenever it shall become necessary for the Secretary of Agriculture under the provisions of this Act to place any highway in a proper condition of maintenance the Secretary of Agriculture shall contract with some responsible party or parties for doing such work: Provided, however, That in case he is not able to secure a satisfactory contract he may purchase, lease, hire, or otherwise obtain all necessary supplies, equipment, and labor, and may operate and maintain such motor and other equipment and facilities as in his judgment are necessary for the proper and efficient performance of his functions.

SEC. 15. [Maps of Federal aid roads — preparation and distribution.] That within two years after this Act takes effect the Secretary of Agriculture shall prepare, publish, and distribute a map showing the highways and forest roads that have been selected and approved as a part of the primary or interstate, and the secondary or intercounty systems, and at least annually thereafter shall publish supplementary maps showing his program and the progress made in selection, construction, and reconstruction.

SEC. 16. [Property of railroad or canal company acquired from United States — conveyance to state.] That for the purpose of this Act the consent of the United States is hereby given to any railroad or canal company to convey to the highway department of any State any part of its right of way or other property in that State acquired by grant from the United States.

SEC. 17. [Appropriation of public lands for highway or forest road purposes.] That if the Secretary of Agriculture determines that any part of the public lands or reservations of the United States is reasonably necessary for the right of way of any highway or forest road or as a source of materials for the construction or maintenance of any such highway or forest road adjacent to such lands or reservations, the Secretary of Agriculture shall file with the Secretary of the department supervising the administration of such land or reservation a map showing the portion of such lands or reservations which it is desired to appropriate.

If within a period of four months after such filing the said Secretary shall not have certified to the Secretary of Agriculture that the proposed appropriation of such land or material is contrary to the public interest or inconsistent with the purposes for which such land or materials have been reserved, or shall have agreed to the appropriation and transfer under conditions which he deems necessary for the adequate protection and utilization of the reserve, then such land and materials may be appropriated and transferred to the State highway department for such purposes and subject to the conditions so specified.

If at any time the need for any such lands or materials for such purposes shall no longer exist, notice of the fact shall be given by the State highway department to the Secretary of Agriculture, and such lands or materials shall immediately revert to the control of the Secretary of the department from which they had been appropriated.

SEC. 18. [Rules and regulations by Secretary of Agriculture — recommendations.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe and promulgate all needful rules and regulations for the carrying out of the provisions of this Act, including such recommendations to the Congress and the State highway departments as he may deem necessary for preserving and protecting the highways and insuring the safety of traffic thereon.

SEC. 19. [Reports to Congress.] That on or before the first Monday in December of each year the Secretary of Agriculture shall make a report to Congress, which shall include a detailed statement of the work done, the status of each project undertaken, the allocation of appropriations, an itemized statement of the expenditures and receipts during the preceding fiscal year under this Act, an itemized statement of the traveling and other expenses, including a list of employees, their duties, salaries, and traveling expenses, if any, and his recommendations, if any, for new legislation amending or supplementing this Act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall also make such special reports as Congress may request.

SEC. 20. [Moneys available for carrying out provisions of act]. That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act there is hereby appropriated, out of the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $75,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, $25,000,000 of which shall become immediately available, and $50,000,000 of which shall become available January 1, 1922.

SEC. 21. [Expenditures for administering provisions of act and for research work — deduction from appropriation — apportionment of remainder to states — ratio of apportionment.] That so much, not to exceed $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum, of all moneys hereby or hereafter appropriated for expenditure under the provisions of this Act, as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary for administering the provisions of this Act and for carrying on necessary highway research and investigational studies independently or in cooperation with the State highway departments and other research agencies, and for publishing the results thereof, shall be deducted for such purposes, available until expended.

Within sixty days after the close of each fiscal year the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine what part, if any, of the sums theretofore deducted for such purposes will not be needed and apportion such part, if any, for the fiscal year then current in the same manner and on the same basis as are other amounts authorized by this Act apportioned among all the States, and shall certify such apportionment to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the State highway departments.

The Secretary of Agriculture, after making the deduction authorized by this section, shall apportion the remainder of the appropriation made for expenditure under the provision of the Act for the fiscal year among the several States in the following manner: One-third in the ratio which the area of each State bears to the total area of all the States; one-third in the ratio which the population of each State bears to the total population of all the States, as shown by the latest available Federal census; one-third in the ratio which the mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in each State bears to the total mileage of rural delivery and star routes in all the States at the close of the next preceding fiscal year, as shown by certificate of the Postmaster General, which he is directed to make and furnish annually to the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That no State shall receive less than one-half of 1 per centum of each year's allotment. All moneys herein or hereafter appropriated for expenditure under the provisions of this Act shall be available until the close of the second succeeding fiscal year for which apportionment was made: Provided further, That any sums apportioned to any State under the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, and all Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, shall be available for expenditure in that State for the purpose set forth in such Acts until two years after the close of the respective fiscal years for which any such sums become available, and any amount so apportioned remaining unexpended at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure under the terms of such Acts shall be reapportioned according to the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916: And provided further, That any amount apportioned under the provisions of this Act unexpended at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure under the terms of this section shall be reapportioned within sixty days thereafter to all the States in the same manner and on the same basis, and certified to the Secretary of the Treasury and the State highway departments in the same way as if it were being apportioned under this Act for the first time.

For Act of July 11, 1916, mentioned in the text, and amendments thereto, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 639; 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 299.

SEC. 22. [Certificate of disposition made of appropriations.] That within sixty days after the approval of this Act the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury and to each of the State highway departments the sum he has estimated to be deducted for administering the provisions of this Act and the sums which he has apportioned to each State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and on or before January 20 next preceding the commencement of each succeeding fiscal year, and shall make like certificates for each fiscal year.

SEC. 23. [Forest roads and trails — appropriation — construction, etc.— contracts.] That out of the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, there is hereby appropriated for the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of forest roads and trails, the sum of $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, available immediately and until expended, and $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, available until expended.

(a) Fifty per centum, but not to exceed $3,000,000 for any one fiscal year, of the appropriation made or that may hereafter be made for expenditure under the provisions of this section shall be expended under the direct supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture in the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of roads and trails of primary importance for the protection, administration, and utilization of the national forests, or when necessary, for the use and development of the resources upon which communities within or adjacent to the national forests are dependent, and shall be apportioned among the several States, Alaska, and Porto Rico by the Secretary of Agriculture, according to the relative needs of the various national forests, taking into consideration the existing transportation facilities, value of timber, or other resources served, relative fire danger, and comparative difficulties of road and trail construction.

The balance of such appropriations shall be expended by the Secretary of Agriculture in the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of forest roads of primary importance to the State, counties, or communities within, adjoining, or adjacent to the national forests, and shall be prorated and apportioned by the Secretary of Agriculture for expenditures in the several States, Alaska, and Porto Rico, according to the area and value of the land owned by the Government within the national forests therein as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture from such information, investigation, sources, and departments as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem most accurate.

(b) Cooperation of Territories, States, and civil subdivisions thereof may be accepted but shall not be required by the Secretary of Agriculture.

(c) The Secretary of Agriculture may enter into contracts with any Territory, State, or civil subdivision thereof for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of any forest road or trail or part thereof.

(d) Construction work, on forest roads or trails estimated to cost $5,000 or more per mile, exclusive of bridges, shall be advertised and let to contract.

If such estimated cost is less than $5,000 per mile, or if, after proper advertising, no acceptable bid is received, or the bids are deemed excessive, the work may be done by the Secretary of Agriculture on his own account; and for such purpose the Secretary of Agriculture may purchase, lease, hire, rent, or otherwise obtain all necessary supplies, materials, tools, equipment, and facilities required to perform the work.

The appropriation made in this section or that may hereafter be made for expenditure under the provisions of this section may be expended for the purpose herein authorized and for the payment of wages, salaries, and other expenses for help employed in connection with such work.

SEC. 24. [Approval of projects in states not permitted by Constitution, etc., to provide revenue for highways.] That in any State where the existing constitution or laws will not permit the State to provide revenues for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of highways, the Secretary of Agriculture shall continue to approve projects for said State until three years after the passage of this Act, if he shall find that said State has complied with the provisions of this Act in so far as its existing constitution and laws will permit.

SEC. 25. [Invalidity of any provision of Act — effect on remainder.] That if any provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, shall be held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and of the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 26. [Repeal of inconsistent Acts.] That all Acts or parts of Acts in any way inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed, and this Act shall take effect on its passage.

An Act Providing additional hospital facilities for patients of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, Division of Rehabilitation, and for other purposes.

[Additional hospital facilities for persons serving in World War — patients of Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Board for Vocational Education, etc.] That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, within the limits of appropriations made herein, to provide additional hospital and out-patient dispensary facilities for persons who served in the World War and are now or hereafter may be patients of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance or of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, Division of Rehabilitation, (1) by purchase, gift, or lease of existing plants, (2) by construction on sites now owned by the Government or on sites to be acquired, when approved by the President, by purchase, condemnation, gift, or otherwise, or (3) by such remodeling or extension of existing plants and their equipment, owned or acquired by the United States at places now being used or that have been used by the Public Health Service for hospital purposes, as may be necessary economically to adapt such plants to the uses and purposes herein provided. Such hospitals and out-patient dispensary facilities shall include the necessary buildings, and auxiliary structures, mechanical equipment, approach work, roads and track-age facilities leading thereto, vehicles, live stock, furniture, equipment and accessories, and also shall provide accommodations for officers, nurses, and attending personnel, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to accept gifts or donations for any of the purposes named herein;

The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to transfer without charge to the Secretary of the Treasury for the use of the Public Health Service such mechanical, construction, and miscellaneous material, hospital furniture and equipment, hospital and medical supplies, motor trucks and other motor-driven vehicles, not required by the War Department, as may be required by the Public Health Service for its hospitals;

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized in his discretion to employ technical and clerical assistants within or without the District of Columbia, without regard to civil-service laws, rules, and regulations, and to pay from the sum herein appropriated for construction purposes, at customary rates of compensation, exclusively to aid in the preparation of the plans and specifications for the above-named objects and for the supervision of the execution thereof, and for traveling expenses, field-office equipment, and supplies, commercial printing in or out of the District of Columbia, incident thereto, at a total limit of cost for such additional technical and clerical assistants and traveling expenses, and so forth, of not exceeding 3 per centum of the limit of cost for construction: Provided, That all of the above-mentioned work shall be under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury;

In carrying out the purposes herein authorized the President is authorized and empowered, in his discretion, to assign for use of the Public Health Service, under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury, such lands or buildings now owned or leased by the United States, not including property under the jurisdiction of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which, in his judgment, can be used more efficiently for the care of patients of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to take over immediately Fort Mackenzie, Wyoming, Fort Walla Walla, Washington, and Fort Logan H. Roots, Arkansas, with all lands, buildings, and equipment belonging thereto for the uses contemplated herein and to expend from the appropriation in the following paragraph not to exceed $600,000 at Forts Mackenzie and Walla Walla, and not to exceed $250,000 at Fort Logan H. Roots, for providing and increasing hospital facilities thereat;

For carrying into effect the preceding paragraphs relating to additional hospital facilities there is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $18,600,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, of which sum not to exceed $6,100,000 shall be used for remodeling or extending existing plants.

[Act of May 19, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Act to limit immigration — definition — "United States" — "alien" — "Immigration Act" — "immigration laws."] The term "United States" means the United States, and any waters, territory, or other place subject to the jurisdiction thereof except the Canal Zone and the Philippine Islands; but if any alien leaves the Canal Zone or any insular possession of the United States and attempts to enter any other place under the jurisdiction of the United States nothing contained in this Act shall be construed as permitting him to enter under any other conditions than those applicable to all aliens.

The word "alien" includes any person not a native-born or naturalized citizen of the United States, but this definition shall not be held to include Indians of the United States not taxed nor citizens of the islands under the jurisdiction of the United States.

The term "Immigration Act" means the Act of February 5, 1917, entitled "An Act to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States"; and the term "immigration laws" includes such Act and all laws, conventions, and treaties of the United States relating to the immigration, exclusion, or expulsion of aliens.

For Act of Feb. 5, 1917, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 212.

SEC. 2. (a) [Admission of aliens of any nationality on percentage basis — excepted classes.] That the number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted under the immigration laws to the United States in any fiscal year shall be limited to 3 per centum of the number of foreign-born persons of such nationality resident in the United States as determined by the United States census of 1910. This provision shall not apply to the following, and they shall not be counted in reckoning any of the percentage limits provided in this Act: (1) Government officials, their families, attendants, servants, and employees; (2) aliens in continuous transit through the United States; (3) aliens lawfully admitted to the United States who later go in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory; (4) aliens visiting the United States as tourists or temporarily for business or pleasure; (5) aliens from countries immigration from which is regulated in accordance with treaties or agreements relating solely to immigration; (6) aliens from the so-called Asiatic barred zone, as described in section 3 of the Immigration Act; (7) aliens who have resided continuously for at least one year immediately preceding the time of their admission to the United States in the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the Republic of Cuba, the Republic of Mexico, countries of Central or South America, or adjacent islands; or (8) aliens under the age of eighteen who are children of citizens of the United States.

(b) [Determination of nationality.] For the purposes of this Act nationality shall be determined by country of birth, treating as separate countries the colonies or dependencies for which separate enumeration was made in the United States census of 1910.

(c) [Statement showing number of persons of various nationalities — preparation by certain cabinet officers — change in political boundaries — effect on question of nationality of aliens.] The Secretary of State, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Labor, jointly, shall, as soon as feasible after the enactment of this Act, prepare a statement showing the number of persons of the various nationalities resident in the United States as determined by the United States census of 1910, which statement shall be the population basis for the purposes of this Act. In case of changes in political boundaries in foreign countries occurring subsequent to 1910 and resulting (1) in the creation of new countries, the Governments of which are recognized by the United States, or (2) in the transfer of territory from one country to another, such transfer being recognized by the United States, such officials, jointly, shall estimate the number of persons resident in the United States in 1910 who were born within the area included in such new countries or in such territory so transferred, and revise the population basis as to each country involved in such change of political boundary. For the purpose of such revision and for the purposes of this Act generally aliens born in the area included in any such new country shall be considered as having been born in such country, and aliens born in any territory so transferred shall be considered as having been born in the country to which such territory was transferred.

(d) [Admission of maximum number of any nationality in particular year — effect — monthly maximum — preferential classes.] When the maximum number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted in any fiscal year under this Act shall have been admitted all other aliens of such nationality, except as otherwise provided in this Act, who may apply for admission during the same fiscal year shall be excluded: Provided, That the number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted in any month shall not exceed 20 per centum of the total number of aliens of such nationality who are admissible in that fiscal year: Provided further, That aliens returning from a temporary visit abroad, aliens who are professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, nurses, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, aliens belonging to any recognized learned profession, or aliens employed as domestic servants, may, if otherwise admissible, be admitted notwithstanding the maximum number of aliens of the same nationality admissible in the same month or fiscal year, as the case may be, shall have entered the United States; but aliens of the classes included in this proviso who enter the United States before such maximum number shall have entered shall (unless excluded by subdivision (a) from being counted) be counted in reckoning the percentage limits provided in this Act: Provided further, That in the enforcement of this Act preference shall be given so far as possible to the wives, parents, brothers, sisters, children under eighteen years of age, and fiancées, (1) of citizens of the United States, (2) of aliens now in the United States who have applied for citizenship in the manner provided by law, or (3) of persons eligible to United States citizenship who served in the military or naval forces of the United States at any time between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, and have been separated from such forces under honorable conditions.

SEC. 3. [Commissioner General of Immigration — duties — rules and regulations — statements relating to admissions.] That the Commissioner General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall, as soon as feasible after the enactment of this Act, and from time to time thereafter, prescribe rules and regulations necessary to carry the provisions of this Act into effect. He shall, as soon as feasible after the enactment of this Act, publish a statement showing the number of aliens of the various nationalities who may be admitted to the United States between the date this Act becomes effective and the end of the current fiscal year, and on June 30 thereafter he shall publish a statement showing the number of aliens of the various nationalities who may be admitted during the ensuing fiscal year. He shall also publish monthly statements during the time this Act remains in force showing the number of aliens of each nationality already admitted during the then current fiscal year and the number who may be admitted under the provisions of this Act during the remainder of such year, but when 75 per centum of the maximum number of any nationality admissible during the fiscal year shall have been admitted such statements shall be issued weekly thereafter. All statements shall be made available for general publication and shall be mailed to all transportation companies bringing aliens to the United States who shall request the same and shall file with the Department of Labor the address to which such statements shall be sent. The Secretary of Labor shall also submit such statements to the Secretary of State, who shall transmit the information contained therein to the proper diplomatic and consular officials of the United States, which officials shall make the same available to persons intending to emigrate to the United States and to others who may apply.

SEC. 4. [Immigration laws how affected by this act.] That the provisions of this Act are in addition to and not in substitution for the provisions of the immigration laws.

SEC. 5. [Time of taking effect — duration.] That this Act shall take effect and be enforced 15 days after its enactment (except sections 1 and 3 and subdivisions (b) and (c) of section 2, which shall take effect immediately upon the enactment of this Act), and shall continue in force until June 30, 1922, and the number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted during the remaining period of the current fiscal year, from the date when this Act becomes effective to June 30, shall be limited in proportion to the number admissible during the fiscal year 1922.

Joint Resolution Permitting the admission of certain aliens who sailed from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921, and for other purposes.

[Aliens sailing from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921 — admission.] That aliens of any nationality who are brought to the United States on vessels which departed from foreign ports on or before June 8, 1921, destined for the United States, and who apply in the month of June, 1921, for admission to the United States, may, if otherwise admissible, be admitted to the United States although the limit prescribed by section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States," approved May 19, 1921, may have been reached before such application for admission. The number of aliens of any nationality so admitted shall be deducted, under such regulations as the Secretary of Labor may prescribe, from the number of aliens of that nationality admissible, during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1921, under the provisions of such Act of May 19, 1921, but nothing in this resolution shall prohibit the admission of otherwise admissible aliens of any nationality during the month of July, 1921, up to 20 per centum of the number of aliens of that nationality admissible during such fiscal year under the provisions of such Act of May 19, 1921, as heretofore promulgated.

An Act Amending an Act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved March 27, 1914 (Thirty-eighth Statutes, 310, Public, Numbered 77).

[Five Civilized Tribes — drainage of allotments — assessments — Act of March 27, 1914, amended.] That Public Act Numbered 77 (Thirty-eighth Statutes, 310), approved March 27, 1914, an Act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, be and is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

“That whenever a drainage district is organized in any county in the Five Civilized Tribes of the State of Oklahoma, under the laws of that State, for the purpose of draining the lands within such district, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion, to pay from the funds or moneys arising from any source under his control or under the control of the United States, and which would be prorated to such allottee, the assessment for drainage purposes against any Indian allottee or upon the lands of any allottee who is not subject to taxation, or whose lands are exempt from taxation or from assessment for taxation under the treaties or agreements with the tribes to which such allottee may belong, or under any Act of Congress; and such amount so paid out shall be charged against such allottee's pro rata share of any funds to his credit under the control of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior, before paying out such funds, shall designate some person with a knowledge of the subject of drainage, to review the schedules of assessment against each tract of land and to review the land assessed to ascertain whether such Indian allottee, or his lands not subject to taxation, have been assessed more than their pro rata share as compared with other lands located in said district similarly situated and deriving like benefits. And if such Indian lands have been assessed justly when compared with other assessments, then, in that event, said funds shall be paid to the proper county in which said drainage district may be organized, or, in the option of the Secretary of the Interior to the construction company or bondholder shown to be entitled to the funds arising from such assessment: Provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to deprive any allottee of any right which he might otherwise have individually to apply to the courts for the purpose of having his rights adjudicated."

February 24, 1921.

The President of the United States having returned to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, the bill (H. R. 517) entitled "An Act amending an Act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved March 27, 1914 (Thirty-eighth Statutes, 310, Public, Numbered 77)," with his objections thereto, the House proceeded in pursuance of the Constitution to reconsider the same; and

Resolved, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

WM. TYLER PAGE
Clerk.

February 24 (Calendar Day, March 2), 1921.

The Senate having proceeded to reconsider the bill (H. R. 517) "An Act amending an Act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved March 27, 1914 (Thirty-eighth Statutes, 310, Public, numbered 77)," returned by the President of the United States to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, with his objections, and passed by the House on a reconsideration of the same, it was Resolved, That the bill pass, two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative.

Attest:

GEORGE A. SANDERSON
Secretary.

An Act Making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Boarding and day schools — discontinuance — disposition of moneys appropriated.] That all reservation and nonreservation boarding schools, with an average attendance of less than forty-five and eighty pupils, respectively, shall be discontinued on or before the beginning of the fiscal year 1922: Provided, That this limitation as to attendance shall not apply to the Hope Indian School for Girls at Springfield, South Dakota, which school is hereby reestablished and continued. The pupils in schools so discontinued shall be transferred first, if possible, to Indian day schools or State public schools; second, to adjacent reservation or nonreservation boarding schools, to the limit of the capacity of said schools: Provided further, That all day schools with an average attendance of less than eight shall be discontinued on or before the beginning of the fiscal year 1922: And provided further, That all moneys appropriated for any school discontinued pursuant to this Act or for other cause shall be returned immediately to the Treasury of the United States: Provided further, That not more than $200,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended for the tuition of Indian children enrolled in the public schools: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the support of Indian day and industrial schools where specific appropriation is made.

* * * [Employees in Indian service — quarters — heat and light.] That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow employees in the Indian Service, who are furnished quarters, necessary heat and light for such quarters without charge, such heat and light to be paid for out of the fund chargeable with the cost of heating and lighting other buildings at the same place: And provided further, That the amount so expended for agency purposes shall not be included in the maximum amounts for compensation of employees prescribed by section 1, Act of August 24, 1912.

* * * [Indian reservations — unallotted lands — leases — mining claims — sec. 26 of Act of June 30, 1919, amended.] That section 26 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920," approved June 30, 1919 (Public, Numbered 3, Sixty-sixth Congress), be amended as follows:

"That wherever the term 'metalliferous' is used in said section 26 of the above-entitled Act, it shall be defined and construed by the Secretary of the Interior to include magnesite, gypsum, limestone, and asbestos."

* * * [Restricted allotments — leases for farming and grazing purposes — Five Civilized Tribes excepted.] That the restricted allotment of any Indian may be leased for farming and grazing purposes by the allottee or his heirs, subject only to the approval of the superintendent or other officer in charge of the reservation where the land is located, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That this provision shall not apply to the Five Civilized Tribes.

* * * [Five Civilized Tribes — tribal funds — expenditures — appropriation by Congress — schools.] That hereafter no money shall be expended from tribal funds belonging to the Five Civilized Tribes without specific appropriation by Congress, except as follows: Equalization of allotments, per capita and other payments authorized by law to individual members of the respective tribes. tribal and other Indian schools for the current fiscal year under existing law, salaries and contingent expenses of governors, chiefs, assistant chiefs, secretaries, interpreters, and mining trustees of the tribes for the current fiscal year at salaries at the rate heretofore paid, and one attorney each for the Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Creek Tribes employed under contract approved by the President, under existing law, for the current fiscal year: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to continue during the ensuing fiscal year the tribal and other schools among the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, and Seminole Tribes from the tribal funds of those nations, within his discretion and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby empowered, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, to expend funds of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, and Seminole Nations available for school purposes under existing law for such repairs, improvements, or new buildings as he may deem essential for the proper conduct of the several schools of said tribes.

An Act Authorizing appropriations and expenditures for the administration of Indian Affairs, and for other purposes.

[Bureau of Indian Affairs — expenditures for specified purposes.] That the Bureau of Indian Affairs, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, shall direct, supervise, and expend such moneys as Congress may from time to time appropriate, for the benefit, care, and assistance of the Indians throughout the United States for the following purposes:

General support and civilization, including education.

For relief of distress and conservation of health.

For industrial assistance and advancement and general administration of Indian property.

For extension, improvement, operation, and maintenance of existing Indian irrigation systems and for development of water supplies.

For the enlargement, extension, improvement, and repair of the buildings and grounds of existing plants and projects.

For the employment of inspectors, supervisors, superintendents, clerks, field matrons, farmers, physicians, Indian police, Indian judges, and other employees.

For the suppression of traffic in intoxicating liquor and deleterious drugs.

For the purchase of horse-drawn and motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use.

And for general and incidental expenses in connection with the administration of Indian affairs.

An Act Authorizing the distribution of abandoned or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes to hospitals maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States.

[Act of Oct. 14, 1921.]

[Tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes abandoned or forfeited — distribution to United States hospitals — R. S. sec. 3369 amended.] That the last proviso of section 3369 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

“And provided further, That in case it shall appear that any abandoned, condemned, or forfeited tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, when offered for sale, will not bring a price equal to the tax due and payable thereon, such goods shall not be sold for consumption in the United States; and upon application made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, he is authorized to order the destruction of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes by the officer in whose custody and control the same may be at the time, and in such manner and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, or he may, under such regulations, order delivery of such tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, without payment of any tax, to any hospital maintained by the United States for the use of present or former members of the military or naval forces of the United States.”

An Act To reduce and equalize taxation, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

[Act of Nov. 23, 1921.]

TITLE I.—GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

SECTION 1. [Citation of Act as “Revenue Act of 1921.”] That this Act may be cited as the “Revenue Act of 1921.”

SEC. 2. [Terms used in Act defined.] That when used in this Act —

(1) The term “person” includes partnerships and corporations, as well as individuals;

(2) The term “corporation” includes associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies;

(3) The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United States;

(4) The term “foreign” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized outside the United States;

(5) The term “United States” when used in a geographical sense includes only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia;

(6) The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of the Treasury;

(7) The term “Commissioner” means the Commissioner of Internal Revenue;

(8) The term “collector” means collector of internal revenue;

(9) The term “taxpayer” includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by this Act;

(10) The term “military or naval forces of the United States” includes the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Army Nurse Corps, Female, and the Navy Nurse Corps, Female, but this shall not be deemed to exclude other units otherwise included within such terms; and

(11) The term “Government contract” means (a) a contract made with the United States, or with any department, bureau, officer, commission, board, or agency, under the United States and acting in its behalf, or with any agency controlled by any of the above if the contract is for the benefit of the United States, or (b) a subcontract made with a contractor performing such a contract if the products or services to be furnished under the subcontract are for the benefit of the United States. The term “Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive” when applied to a contract of the kind referred to in clause (a) of this subdivision, includes all such contracts which, although entered into during such period, were originally not enforceable, but which have been or may become enforceable by reason of subsequent validation in pursuance of law.

TITLE II.—INCOME TAX.

PART I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 200. Definitions. That when used in this title —

(1) [“Taxable year” — “fiscal year.”] The term “taxable year” means the calendar year, or the fiscal year ending during such calendar year, upon the basis of which the net income is computed under section 212 or section 232. The term "fiscal year" means an accounting period of twelve months ending on the last day of any month other than December. The first taxable year, to be called the taxable year 1921, shall be the calendar year 1921 or any fiscal year ending during the calendar year 1921;

(2) ["Fiduciary."] The term "fiduciary" means a guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, conservator, or any person acting in any fiduciary capacity for any person, trust or estate;

(3) ["Withholding agent."] The term "withholding agent" means any person required to deduct and withhold any tax under the provisions of section 221 or section 237;

(4) ["Paid."] The term "paid," for the purposes of the deductions and credits under this title, means "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred," and the terms "paid or incurred" and "paid or accrued" shall be construed according to the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed under section 212; and

(5) ["Personal service corporation."] The term "personal service corporation" means a corporation whose income is to be ascribed primarily to the activities of the principal owners or stockholders who are themselves regularly engaged in the active conduct of the affairs of the corporation and in which capital (whether invested or borrowed) is not a material income-producing factor; but does not include any foreign corporation, nor any corporation 50 per centum or more of whose gross income consists either (1) of gains, profits, or income derived from trading as a principal, or (2) of gains, profits, commissions, or other income, derived from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

SEC. 201. Dividends. (a) That the term "dividend" when used in this title (except in paragraph (10) of subdivision (a) of section 234 and paragraph (4) of subdivision (a) of section 245) means any distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders or members, whether in cash or in other property, out of its earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, except a distribution made by a personal service corporation out of earnings or profits accumulated since December 31, 1917, and prior to January 1, 1922.

(b) For the purposes of this Act every distribution is made out of earnings or profits, and from the most recently accumulated earnings or profits, to the extent of such earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913; but any earnings or profits accumulated or increase in value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, may be distributed exempt from the tax, after the earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, have been distributed. If any such tax-free distribution has been made the distributee shall not be allowed as a deduction from gross income any loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of his stock or shares unless, and then only to the extent that, the basis provided in section 202 exceeds the sum of (1) the amount realized from the sale or other disposition of such stock or shares, and (2) the aggregate amount of such distributions received by him thereon.

(c) Any distribution (whether in cash or other property) made by a corporation to its shareholders or members otherwise than out of (1) earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, or (2) earnings or profits accumulated or increase in value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, shall be applied against and reduce the basis provided in section 202 for the purpose of ascertaining the gain derived or the loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of the stock or shares by the distributee.

(d) A stock dividend shall not be subject to tax but if after the distribution of any such dividend the corporation proceeds to cancel or redeem its stock at such time and in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount received in redemption or cancellation of the stock shall be treated as a taxable dividend to the extent of the earnings or profits accumulated by such corporation after February 28, 1913.

(e) For the purposes of this Act, a taxable distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders or members shall be included in the gross income of the distributees as of the date when the cash or other property is unqualifiedly made subject to their demands.

(f) Any distribution made during the first sixty days of any taxable year shall be deemed to have been made from earnings or profits accumulated during preceding taxable years; but any distribution made during the remainder of the taxable year shall be deemed to have been made from earnings or profits accumulated between the close of the preceding taxable year and the date of distribution, to the extent of such earnings or profits, and if the books of the corporation do not show the amount of such earnings or profits, the earnings or profits for the accounting period within which the distribution was made shall be deemed to have been accumulated ratably during such period. This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921.

SEC. 202. Basis for determining gain or loss. (a) That the basis for ascertaining the gain derived or loss sustained from a sale or other disposition of property, real, personal, or mixed, acquired after February 28, 1913, shall be the cost of such property; except that —

(1) In the case of such property, which should be included in the inventory, the basis shall be the last inventory value thereof;

(2) In the case of such property, acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis shall be the same as that which it would have in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift. If the facts necessary to determine such basis are unknown to the donee, the Commissioner shall, if possible, obtain such facts from such donor or last preceding owner, or any other person cognizant thereof. If the Commissioner finds it impossible to obtain such facts, the basis shall be the value of such property as found by the Commission as of the date or approximate date at which, according to the best information the Commissioner is able to obtain, such property was acquired by such donor or last preceding owner. In the case of such property acquired by gift on or before December 31, 1920, the basis for ascertaining gain or loss from a sale or other disposition thereof shall be the fair market price or value of such property at the time of such acquisition;

(3) In the case of such property, acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance, the basis shall be the fair market price or value of such property at the time of such acquisition. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply to the acquisition of such property interests as are specified in subdivision (c) or (e) of section 402.

(b) The basis for ascertaining the gain derived or loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of property, real, personal, or mixed, acquired before March 1, 1913, shall be the same as that provided by subdivision (a); but —

(1) If its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913, is in excess of such basis, the gain to be included in the gross income shall be the excess of the amount realized therefor over such fair market price or value;

(2) If its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913, is lower than such basis, the deductible loss is the excess of the fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913, over the amount realized therefor; and

(3) If the amount realized therefor is more than such basis but not more than its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913, or less than such basis but not less than such fair market price or value, no gain shall be included in and no loss deducted from the gross income.

(c) For the purposes of this title, on an exchange of property, real, personal or mixed, for any other such property, no gain or loss shall be recognized unless the property received in exchange has a readily realizable market value; but even if the property received in exchange has a readily realizable market value, no gain or loss shall be recognized —

(1) When any such property held for investment, or for productive use in trade or business (not including stock-in-trade or other property held primarily for sale), is exchanged for property of a like kind or use;

(2) When in the reorganization of one or more corporations a person receives in place of any stock or securities owned by him, stock or securities in a corporation a party to or resulting from such reorganization. The word "reorganization," as used in this paragraph, includes a merger or consolidation (including the acquisition by one corporation of at least a majority of the voting stock and at least a majority of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of another corporation, or of substantially all the properties of another corporation), recapitalization, or mere change in identity, form, or place of organization of a corporation, (however effected); or

(3) When (A) a person transfers any property, real, personal or mixed, to a corporation, and immediately after the transfer is in control of such corporation, or (B) two or more persons transfer any such property to a corporation, and immediately after the transfer are in control of such corporation, and the amounts of stock, securities, or both, received by such persons are in substantially the same proportion as their interests in the property before such transfer. For the purposes of this paragraph, a person is, or two or more persons are, "in control" of a corporation when owning at least 80 per centum of the voting stock and at least 80 per centum of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of the corporation.

(d) (1) Where property is exchanged for other property and no gain or loss is recognized under the provisions of subdivision (c), the property received shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated as taking the place of the property exchanged therefor, except as provided in subdivision (e);

(2) Where property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent in the manner described in paragraph (12) of subdivision (a) of section 214 and paragraph (14) of subdivision (a) of section 234, and the taxpayer proceeds in good faith to expend or set aside the proceeds of such conversion in the form and in the manner therein provided, the property acquired shall, for the purpose of this section, be treated as taking the place of a like proportion of the property converted.

(3) Where no deduction is allowed for a loss or a part thereof under the provisions of paragraph (5) of subdivision (a) of section 214 and paragraph (4) of subdivision (a) of section 234, that part of the property acquired with relation to which such loss is disallowed shall for the purposes of this section be treated as taking the place of the property sold or disposed of.

(e) Where property is exchanged for other property which has no readily realizable market value, together with money or other property which has a readily realizable market value, then the money or the fair market value of the property having such readily realizable market value received in exchange shall be applied against and reduce the basis, provided in this section, of the property exchanged, and if in excess of such basis, shall be taxable to the extent of the excess; but when property is exchanged for property specified in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subdivision (c) as received in exchange, together with money or other property of a readily realizable market value other than that specified in such paragraphs, the money or the fair market value of such other property received in exchange shall be applied against and reduce the basis, provided in this section, of the property exchanged, and if in excess of such basis, shall be taxable to the extent of the excess.

(f) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent (in the case of property sold under contract providing for payment in installments) the taxation of that portion of any installment payment representing gain or profit in the year in which such payment is received.

SEC. 203. Inventories. That whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner the use of inventories is necessary in order clearly to determine the income of any taxpayer, inventories shall be taken by such taxpayer upon such basis as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe as conforming as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and as most clearly reflecting the income.

SEC. 204. Net losses. (a) That as used in this section the term "net loss" means only net losses resulting from the operation of any trade or business regularly carried on by the taxpayer (including losses sustained from the sale or other disposition of real estate, machinery, and other capital assets, used in the conduct of such trade or business); and when so resulting means the excess of the deductions allowed by section 214 or 234, as the case may be, over the sum of the following: (1) the gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year, (2) the amount by which the interest received free from taxation under this title exceeds so much of the interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness as is not permitted to be deducted by paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of section 214 or by paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of section 234, (3) the amount by which the deductible losses not sustained in such trade or business exceed the taxable gains or profits not derived from such trade or business, (4) amounts received as dividends and allowed as a deduction under paragraph (6) of subdivision (a) of section 234, and (5) so much of the depletion deduction allowed with respect to any mine, oil or gas well as is based upon discovery value in lieu of cost.

(b) If for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1920, it appears upon the production of evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner that any taxpayer has sustained a net loss, the amount thereof shall be deducted from the net income of the taxpayer for the succeeding taxable year; and if such net loss is in excess of the net income for such succeeding taxable year, the amount of such excess shall be allowed as a deduction in computing the net income for the next succeeding taxable year; the deduction in all cases to be made under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) The benefit of this section shall be allowed to the members of a partnership and the beneficiaries of an estate or trust, and to insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 243 or 246, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(d) If it appears, upon the production of evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner, that a taxpayer having a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921 has sustained a net loss during such fiscal year, such taxpayer shall be entitled to the benefits of this section in respect to the same proportion of such net loss which the portion of such fiscal year falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire fiscal year.

SEC. 205. Fiscal years 1920-1921 and 1921-1922. (a) That if a taxpayer makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, his tax under this title for the taxable year 1921 shall be the sum of : (1) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under Title II of the Revenue Act of 1918 at the rates for the calendar year 1920 which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1920 is of the entire period, and (2) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title at the rates for the calendar year 1921, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period.

Any amount paid before or after the passage of this Act on account of the tax imposed for such fiscal year by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1918 shall be credited toward the payment of the tax imposed for such fiscal year by this Act, and if the amount so paid exceeds the amount of such tax imposed by this Act, the excess shall be credited or refunded in accordance with the provisions of section 252.

(b) If a taxpayer makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, his tax under this title for the taxable year 1922 shall be the sum of: (1) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title (as in force on December 31, 1921) at the rates for the calendar year 1921 which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period, and (2) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title (as in force on January 1, 1922) at the rates for the calendar year 1922 which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1922 is of the entire period: Provided, That in the case of a personal service corporation the amount to be paid shall be only that specified in clause (2).

(c) If a fiscal year of a partnership begins in 1920 and ends in 1921, or begins in 1921 and ends in 1922, then (1) the rates for the calendar year during which such fiscal year begins shall apply to an amount of each partner's share of such partnership net income (determined under the law applicable to such year) equal to the proportion which the part of such fiscal year falling within such calendar year bears to the full fiscal year, and (2) the rates for the calendar year during which such fiscal year ends shall apply to an amount of each partner's share of such partnership net income (determined under the law applicable to such calendar year) equal to the proportion which the part of such fiscal year falling within such calendar year bears to the full fiscal year.

SEC. 206. Capital gain. (a) That for the purpose of this title:

(1) The term "capital gain" means taxable gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets consummated after December 31, 1921;

(2) The term "capital loss" means deductible loss resulting from the sale or exchange of capital assets consummated after December 31, 1921;

(3) The term "capital deductions" means such deductions as are allowed under this title for the purpose of computing net income and are properly allocable to or chargeable against items of capital gain as defined in this section;

(4) The term "capital net gain" means the excess of the total amount of capital gain over the sum of the capital deductions and capital losses;

(5) The term "ordinary net income" means the net income, computed in accordance with the provisions of this title, after excluding all items of capital gain, capital loss, and capital deductions; and

(6) The term "capital assets" as used in this section means property acquired and held by the taxpayer for profit or investment for more than two years (whether or not connected with his trade or business), but does not include property held for the personal use or consumption of the taxpayer or his family, or stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year.

(b) In the case of any taxpayer (other than a corporation) who for any taxable year derives a capital net gain, there shall (at the election of the taxpayer) be levied, collected and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 210 and 211 of this title, a tax determined as follows:

A partial tax shall first be computed upon the basis of the ordinary net income at the rates and in the manner provided in sections 210 and 211, and the total tax shall be this amount plus $12\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of the capital net gain; but if the taxpayer elects to be taxed under this section the total tax shall in no such case be less than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of the total net income. The total tax thus determined shall be computed, collected and paid in the same manner, at the same time and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as other taxes under this title.

(c) In the case of a partnership or of an estate or trust, the proper part of each share of the net income which consists, respectively, of ordinary net income and capital net gain, shall be determined under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, and shall be separately shown in the return of the partnership or estate or trust, and shall be taxed to the member or beneficiary or to the estate or trust as provided in sections 218 and 219, but at the rates and in the manner provided in subdivision (b) of this section.

PART II.—INDIVIDUALS.

SEC. 210. Normal Tax. That, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 210 of the Revenue Act of 1918, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual a normal tax of 8 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits provided in section 216: Provided, That in the case of a citizen or resident of the United States the rate upon the first $4,000 of such excess amount shall be 4 per centum.

For sec. 210 of the Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 94.

SEC. 211. Surtax. (a) That, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 211 of the Revenue Act of 1918, but in addition to the normal tax imposed by section 210 of this Act, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual —

(1) For the calendar year 1921, a surtax equal to the sum of the following:

1 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $5,000 and does not exceed $6,000;

2 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $6,000 and does not exceed $8,000;

3 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $8,000 and does not exceed $10,000;

4 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $10,000 and does not exceed $12,000;

5 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $12,000 and does not exceed $14,000;

6 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $14,000 and does not exceed $16,000;

7 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $16,000 and does not exceed $18,000;

8 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $18,000 and does not exceed $20,000;

9 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $22,000;

10 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $22,000 and does not exceed $24,000;

11 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $24,000 and does not exceed $26,000;

12 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $26,000 and does not exceed $28,000;

13 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $28,000 and does not exceed $30,000;

14 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $30,000 and does not exceed $32,000;

15 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $32,000 and does not exceed $34,000;

16 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $34,000 and does not exceed $36,000;

17 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $36,000 and does not exceed $38,000;

18 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $38,000 and does not exceed $40,000;

19 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $40,000 and does not exceed $42,000;

20 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $42,000 and does not exceed $44,000;

21 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $44,000 and does not exceed $46,000;

22 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $46,000 and does not exceed $48,000;

23 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $48,000 and does not exceed $50,000;

24 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $52,000;

25 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $52,000 and does not exceed $54,000;

26 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $54,000 and does not exceed $56,000;

47 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $96,000 and does not exceed $98,000;

48 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $98,000 and does not exceed $100,000;

52 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

56 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $200,000;

60 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $200,000 and does not exceed $300,000;

63 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $300,000 and does not exceed $500,000;

64 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $500,000 and does not exceed $1,000,000;

65 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $1,000,000;

(2) For the calendar year 1922 and each calendar year thereafter, a surtax equal to the sum of the following:

1 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $6,000 and does not exceed $10,000;

2 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $10,000 and does not exceed $12,000;

3 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $12,000 and does not exceed $14,000;

4 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $14,000 and does not exceed $16,000;

5 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $16,000 and does not exceed $18,000;

6 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $18,000 and does not exceed $20,000;

8 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $22,000;

9 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $22,000 and does not exceed $24,000;

10 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $24,000 and does not exceed $26,000;

11 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $26,000 and does not exceed $28,000;

12 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $28,000 and does not exceed $30,000;

17 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $38,000 and does not exceed $40,000;

18 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $40,000 and does not exceed $42,000;

19 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $42,000 and does not exceed $44,000;

20 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $44,000 and does not exceed $46,000;

21 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $46,000 and does not exceed $48,000;

22 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $48,000 and does not exceed $50,000;

23 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $52,000;

24 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $52,000 and does not exceed $54,000;

25 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $54,000 and does not exceed $56,000;

26 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $56,000 and does not exceed $58,000;

27 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $58,000 and does not exceed $60,000;

28 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $60,000 and does not exceed $62,000;

29 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $62,000 and does not exceed $64,000;

30 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $64,000 and does not exceed $66,000;

31 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $66,000 and does not exceed $68,000;

32 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $68,000 and does not exceed $70,000;

33 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $70,000 and does not exceed $72,000;

34 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $72,000 and does not exceed $74,000;

35 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $74,000 and does not exceed $76,000;

36 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $76,000 and does not exceed $78,000;

37 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $78,000 and does not exceed $80,000;

38 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $80,000 and does not exceed $82,000;

39 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $82,000 and does not exceed $84,000;

40 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $84,000 and does not exceed $86,000;

41 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $86,000 and does not exceed $88,000;

42 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $88,000 and does not exceed $90,000;

43 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $90,000 and does not exceed $92,000;

44 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $92,000 and does not exceed $94,000;

45 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $94,000 and does not exceed $96,000;

46 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $96,000 and does not exceed $98,000;

47 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $98,000 and does not exceed $100,000;

48 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

49 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $200,000;

50 per centum of the amount by which the net income exceeds $200,000.

(b) In the case of a bona fide sale of mines, oil or gas wells, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration and discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the tax imposed by this section attributable to such sale shall not exceed, for the calendar year 1921, 20 per centum, and for each calendar year thereafter 16 per centum, of the selling price of such property or interest.

For sec. 211 of the Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 95.

SEC. 212. Net income of individuals defined. (a) That in the case of an individual the term "net income" means the gross income as defined in section 213, less the deductions allowed by section 214.

(b) The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made upon such basis and in such manner as in the opinion of the Commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 200 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year.

(c) If a taxpayer changes his accounting period from fiscal year to calendar year, from calendar year to fiscal year, or from one fiscal year to another, the net income shall, with the approval of the Commissioner, be computed on the basis of such new accounting period, subject to the provisions of section 226.

SEC. 213. Gross income defined. That for the purposes of this title (except as otherwise provided in section 233) the term "gross income" —

(a) Includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including in the case of the President of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and all other officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever. The amount of all such items (except as provided in subdivision (e) of section 201) shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under methods of accounting permitted under subdivision (b) of section 212, any such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period; but

(b) Does not include the following items, which shall be exempt from taxation under this title:

- (1) The proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the death of the insured;
- (2) The amount received by the insured as a return of premium or premiums paid by him under life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts, either during the term or at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract or upon surrender of the contract;
- (3) The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or descent (but the income from such property shall be included in gross income);
- (4) Interest upon (a) the obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia; or (b) securities issued under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act of July 17, 1916; or (c) the obligations of the United States or its possessions; or (d) bonds issued by the War Finance Corporation. In the case of obligations of the United States issued after September 1, 1917 (other than postal savings certificates of deposit), and in the case of bonds issued by the War Finance Corporation, the interest shall be exempt only if and to the extent provided in the respective Acts authorizing the issue thereof as amended and supplemented, and shall be excluded from gross income only if and to the extent it is wholly exempt to the taxpayer from income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes;
- (5) The income of foreign governments received from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds, or other domestic securities, owned by such foreign governments, or from interest on deposits in banks in the United States of moneys belonging to such foreign governments, or from any other source within the United States;
- (6) Amounts received, through accident or health insurance or under workmen's compensation acts, as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, plus the amount of any damages received whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness;
- (7) Income derived from any public utility or the exercise of any essential governmental function and accruing to any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision of a State or Territory, or income accruing to the Government of any possession of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof.

Whenever any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision of a State or Territory, prior to September 8, 1916, entered in good faith into a contract with any person, the object and purpose of which is to acquire, construct, operate, or maintain a public utility, no tax shall be levied under the provisions of this title upon the income derived from the operation of such public utility, so far as the payment thereof will impose a loss or burden upon such State, Territory, District of Columbia, or political subdivision; but this provision is not intended and shall not be construed to confer upon such person any financial gain or exemption or to relieve such person from the payment of a tax as provided for in this title upon the part or portion of such income to which such person is entitled under such contract;

(8) The income of a nonresident alien or foreign corporation which consists exclusively of earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States and to corporations organized in the United States;

(9) Amounts received as compensation, family allotments and allowances under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance and the Vocational Rehabilitation Acts, or as pensions from the United States for service of the beneficiary or another in the military or naval forces of the United States in time of war;

(10) So much of the amount received by an individual after December 31, 1921, and before January 1, 1927, as dividends or interest from domestic building and loan associations, operated exclusively for the purpose of making loans to members, as does not exceed $300;

(11) The rental value of a dwelling house and appurtenances thereof furnished to a minister of the gospel as part of his compensation;

(12) The receipts of shipowners' mutual protection and indemnity associations, not organized for profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or member but such corporations shall be subject as other persons to the tax upon their net income from interest, dividends, and rents.

(c) In the case of a nonresident alien individual, gross income means only the gross income from sources within the United States, determined under the provisions of section 217.

SEC. 214. Deductions allowed individuals. (a) That in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions:

(1) All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity;

(2) All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this title;

(3) Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year except (a) income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of the United States, (b) so much of the income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes, imposed by the authority of any foreign country or possession of the United States, as is allowed as a credit under section 222, (c) taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed, and (d) taxes imposed upon the taxpayer upon his interest as shareholder or member of a corporation, which are paid by the corporation without reimbursement from the taxpayer. For the purpose of this paragraph estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes accrue on the due date thereof except as otherwise provided by the law of the jurisdiction imposing such taxes;

(5) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, though not connected with the trade or business; but in the case of a nonresident alien individual only if and to the extent that the profit, if such transaction had resulted in a profit, would be taxable under this title. No deduction shall be allowed under this paragraph for any loss claimed to have been sustained in any sale or other disposition of shares of stock or securities made after the passage of this Act where it appears that within thirty days before or after the date of such sale or other disposition the taxpayer has acquired (otherwise than by bequest or inheritance) substantially identical property, and the property so acquired is held by the taxpayer for any period after such sale or other disposition. If such acquisition is to the extent of part only of substantially identical property, then only a proportionate part of the loss shall be disallowed;

(6) Losses sustained during the taxable year of property not connected with the trade or business (but in the case of a nonresident alien individual only property within the United States) if arising from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft, and if not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. Losses allowed under paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of this subdivision shall be deducted as of the taxable year in which sustained unless, in order to clearly reflect the income, the loss should, in the opinion of the Commissioner, be accounted for as of a different period. In case of losses arising from destruction of or damage to property, where the property so destroyed or damaged was acquired before March 1, 1913, the deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(7) Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year (or, in the discretion of the Commissioner, a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts); and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the Commissioner may allow such debt to be charged off in part;

(8) A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence. In the case of such property acquired before March 1, 1913, this deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(9) In the case of buildings, machinery, equipment, or other facilities, constructed, erected, installed, or acquired, on or after April 6, 1917, for the production of articles contributing to the prosecution of the war against the German Government, and in the case of vessels constructed or acquired on or after such date for the transportation of articles or men contributing to the prosecution of such war, there shall be allowed, for any taxable year ending before March 3, 1924 (if claim therefor was made at the time of filing return for the taxable year 1918, 1919, 1920, or 1921) a reasonable deduction for the amortization of such part of the cost of such facilities or vessels as has been borne by the taxpayer, but not again including any amount otherwise allowed under this title or previous Act of Congress as a deduction in computing net income. At any time before March 3, 1924, the Commissioner may, and at the request of the taxpayer shall, reexamine the return, and if he then finds as a result of an appraisal or from other evidence that the deduction originally allowed was incorrect, the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes for the year or years affected shall be redetermined; and the amount of tax due upon such redetermination, if any, shall be paid upon notice and demand by the collector, or the amount of tax overpaid, if any, shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 252;

(10) In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, a reasonable allowance for depletion and for depreciation of improvements, according to the peculiar conditions in each case, based upon cost including cost of development not otherwise deducted: Provided, That in the case of such properties acquired prior to March 1, 1913, the fair market value of the property (or the taxpayer's interest therein) on that date shall be taken in lieu of cost up to that date: Provided further, That in the case of mines, oil and gas wells, discovered by the taxpayer, on or after March 1, 1913, and not acquired as the result of purchase of a proven tract or lease, where the fair market value of the property is materially disproportionate to the cost, the depletion allowance shall be based upon the fair market value of the property at the date of the discovery, or within thirty days thereafter: And provided further, That such depletion allowance based on discovery value shall not exceed the net income, computed without allowance for depletion, from the property upon which the discovery is made, except where such net income so computed is less than the depletion allowance based on cost or fair market value as of March 1, 1913; such reasonable allowance in all the above cases to be made under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary. In the case of leases the deductions allowed by this paragraph shall be equitably apportioned between the lessor and lessee;

(11) Contributions or gifts made within the taxable year to or for the use of: (A) The United States, any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, for exclusively public purposes; (B) any corporation, or community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, including posts of the American Legion or the women's auxiliary units thereof, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual; or (C) the special fund for vocational rehabilitation authorized by section 7 of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act; to an amount which in all the above cases combined does not exceed 15 per centum of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of this paragraph. In case of a nonresident alien individual this deduction shall be allowed only as to contributions or gifts made to domestic corporations, or to community chests, funds, or foundations, created in the United States, or to such vocational rehabilitation fund. Such contributions or gifts shall be allowable as deductions only if verified under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary;

(12) If property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent as a result of (A) its destruction in whole or in part, (B) theft or seizure, or (C) an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation, or the threat or imminence thereof; and if the taxpayer proceeds forthwith in good faith, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to expend the proceeds of such conversion in the acquisition of other property of a character similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or in the acquisition of 80 per centum or more of the stock or shares of a corporation owning such other property, or in the establishment of a replacement fund, then there shall be allowed as a deduction such portion of the gain derived as the portion of the proceeds so expended bears to the entire proceeds. The provisions of this paragraph prescribing the conditions under which a deduction may be taken in respect of the proceeds or gains derived from the compulsory or involuntary conversion of property into cash or its equivalent, shall apply so far as may be practicable to the exemption or exclusion of such proceeds or gains from gross income under prior income, war-profits and excess-profits tax acts.

(b) In the case of a nonresident alien individual, the deductions allowed in subdivision (a), except those allowed in paragraphs (5), (6), and (11), shall be allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources of income within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 217 under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. In the case of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262 the deductions shall be the same and shall be determined in the same manner as in the case of a nonresident alien individual.

SEC. 215. Items not deductible. (a) That in computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of —

(1) Personal, living, or family expenses;

(2) Any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate;

(3) Any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; or

(4) Premiums paid on any life insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee, or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

(b) Amounts paid under the laws of any State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country as income to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance shall not be reduced or diminished by any deduction for shrinkage (by whatever name called) in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time, nor by any deduction allowed by this Act for the purpose of computing the net income of an estate or trust but not allowed under the laws of such State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country for the purpose of computing the income to which such holder is entitled.

SEC. 216. Credits allowed individuals. That for the purpose of the normal tax only there shall be allowed the following credits:

(a) The amount received as dividends (1) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, or (2) from a foreign corporation when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that more than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of section 217;

(b) The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States and bonds issued by the War Finance Corporation, which is included in gross income under section 213;

(c) In the case of a single person, a personal exemption of $1,000; or in the case of the head of a family or a married person living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $2,500, unless the net income is in excess of $5,000, in which case the personal exemption shall be $2,000. A husband and wife living together shall receive but one personal exemption. The amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,500, unless the aggregate net income of such husband and wife is in excess of $5,000, in which case the amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,000. If such husband and wife make separate returns, the personal exemption may be taken by either or divided between them. In no case shall the reduction of the personal exemption from $2,500 to $2,000 operate to increase the tax, which would be payable if the exemption were $2,500, by more than the amount of the net income in excess of $5,000;

(d) $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer if such dependent person is under eighteen years of age or is incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

(e) In the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the personal exemption shall be only $1,000, and he shall not be entitled to the credit provided in subdivision (d).

(f) The credits allowed by subdivisions (c), (d), and (e) of this section shall be determined by the status of the taxpayer on the last day of the period for which the return of income is made; but in the case of an individual who dies during the taxable year, such credits shall be determined by his status at the time of his death, and in such case full credits shall be allowed to the surviving spouse, if any, according to his or her status at the close of the period for which such survivor makes return of income.

SEC. 217. Net income of nonresident alien individuals. (a) That in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(1) Interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of residents, corporate or otherwise, not including (A) interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to persons not engaged in business within the United States and not having an office or place of business therein, or (B) interest received from a resident alien individual or a resident foreign corporation when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that less than 20 per centum of the gross income of such resident payor has been derived from sources within the United States, as determined under the provisions of this section, for the three-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of such payor, or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable;

(2) The amount received as dividends (A) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, or (B) from a foreign corporation unless less than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of this section;

(3) Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States;

(4) Rentals or royalties from property located in the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using in the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property; and

(5) Gains, profits, and income from the sale of real property located in the United States.

(b) From the items of gross income specified in subdivision (a) there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States.

(c) The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources without the United States:

(1) Interest other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in paragraph (1) of subdivision (a);

(2) Dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in paragraph (2) of subdivision (a);

(3) Compensation for labor or personal service performed without the United States;

(4) Rentals or royalties from property located without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property; and

(5) Gains, profits, and income from the sale of real property located without the United States;

(d) From the items of gross income specified in subdivision (c) there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto, and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be treated in full as net income from sources without the United States.

(e) Items of gross income, expenses, losses and deductions, other than those specified in subdivisions (a) and (c), shall be allocated or apportioned to sources within or without the United States under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Where items of gross income are separately allocated to sources within the United States, there shall be deducted (for the purpose of computing the net income therefrom) the expenses, losses and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of other expenses, losses or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States. In the case of gross income derived from sources partly within and partly without the United States, the net income may first be computed by deducting the expenses, losses or other deductions apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income; and the portion of such net income attributable to sources within the United States may be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Gains, profits and income from (1) transportation or other services rendered partly within and partly without the United States, or (2) from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within and sold without the United States, or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer without and sold within the United States, shall be treated as derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States. Gains, profits and income derived from the purchase of personal property within and its sale without the United States or from the purchase of personal property without and its sale within the United States, shall be treated as derived entirely from the country in which sold.

(g) A nonresident alien individual or a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262 shall receive the benefit of the deductions and credits allowed in this title only by filing or causing to be filed with the collector a true and accurate return of his total income received from all sources corporate or otherwise in the United States, in the manner prescribed in this title; including therein all the information which the Commissioner may deem necessary for the calculation of such deductions and credits: Provided, That the benefit of the credit allowed in subdivision (e) of section 216 may, in the discretion of the Commissioner, be received by filing a claim therefor with the withholding agent. In case of failure to file a return, the collector shall collect the tax on such income, and all property belonging to such nonresident alien individual or foreign trader shall be liable to distraint for the tax.

SEC. 218. Partnerships and personal service corporations. (a) That individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity. There shall be included in computing the net income of each partner his distributive share, whether distributed or not of the net income of the partnership for the taxable year, or, if his net income for such taxable year is computed upon the basis of a period different from that upon the basis of which the net income of the partnership is computed, then his distributive share of the net income of the partnership for any accounting period of the partnership ending within the fiscal or calendar year upon the basis of which the partner's net income is computed.

(b) The partner shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as credits, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 216, his proportionate share of such amounts specified in subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 216 as are received by the partnership.

(c) The net income of the partnership shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as provided in section 212 except that the deduction provided in paragraph (11) of subdivision (a) of section 214 shall not be allowed.

(d) Personal service corporations shall not be subject to taxation under this title, but the individual stockholders thereof shall be taxed in the same manner as the members of partnerships. All the provisions of this title relating to partnerships and the members thereof shall so far as practicable apply to personal service corporations and the stockholders thereof: Provided, That for the purpose of this subdivision amounts distributed by a personal service corporation during its taxable year shall be accounted for by the distributees; and any portion of the net income remaining undistributed at the close of its taxable year shall be accounted for by the stockholders of such corporation at the close of its taxable year in proportion to their respective shares.

This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921. In the case of a personal service corporation having a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, amounts distributed prior to January 1, 1922, to its stockholders out of earnings or profits accumulated after December 31, 1920, shall be taxed to the distributees; and the stockholders of record on December 31, 1921, shall be taxed upon their distributive shares of the difference (if any) between such distributive profits and the portion of the corporation's net income assignable to the calendar year 1921, determined in the manner provided in clause (1) of subdivision (c) of section 205 of this Act.

SEC. 219. Estates and trusts. (a) That the tax imposed by sections 210 and 211 shall apply to the income of estates or of any kind of property held in trust, including —

(1) Income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate;

(2) Income accumulated in trust for the benefit of unborn or unascertained persons or persons with contingent interests;

(3) Income held for future distribution under the terms of the will or trust; and

(4) Income which is to be distributed to the beneficiaries periodically, whether or not at regular intervals, and the income collected by a guardian of an infant to be held or distributed as the court may direct.

(b) The fiduciary shall be responsible for making the return of income for the estate or trust for which he acts. The net income of the estate or trust shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as provided in section 212, except that (in lieu of the deduction authorized by paragraph (11) of subdivision (a) of section 214) there shall also be allowed as a deduction, without limitation, any part of the gross income which, pursuant to the terms of the will or deed creating the trust, is during the taxable year paid or permanently set aside for the purposes and in the manner specified in paragraph (11) of subdivision (a) of section 214. In cases in which there is any income of the class described in paragraph (4) of subdivision (a) of this section the fiduciary shall include in the return a statement of the income of the estate or trust which, pursuant to the instrument or order governing the distribution, is distributable to each beneficiary, whether or not distributed before the close of the taxable year for which the return is made.

(c) In cases under paragraphs (1), (2), or (3) of subdivision (a) or in any other case within subdivision (a) of this section except paragraph (4) thereof the tax shall be imposed upon the net income of the estate or trust and shall be paid by the fiduciary, except that in determining the net income of the estate of any deceased person during the period of administration or settlement there may be deducted the amount of any income properly paid or credited to any legatee, heir, or other beneficiary. In such cases the estate or trust shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed the same credits as are allowed to single persons under section 216.

(d) In cases under paragraph (4) of subdivision (a), and in the case of any income of an estate during the period of administration or settlement permitted by subdivision (c) to be deducted from the net income upon which tax is to be paid by the fiduciary, the tax shall not be paid by the fiduciary, but there shall be included in computing the net income of each beneficiary that part of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which, pursuant to the instrument or order governing the distribution, is distributable to such beneficiary, whether distributed or not, or, if his taxable year is different from that of the estate or trust, then there shall be included in computing his net income his distributive share of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year ending within the taxable year of the beneficiary. In such cases the beneficiary shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as credits, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 216, his proportionate share of such amounts specified in subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 216 as are received by the estate or trust.

(e) In the case of an estate or trust the income of which consists both of income of the class described in paragraph (4) of subdivision (a) of this section and other income, the net income of the estate or trust shall be computed and a return thereof made by the fiduciary in accordance with subdivision (b) and the tax shall be imposed, and shall be paid by the fiduciary in accordance with subdivision (c), except that there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust that part of its income of the class described in paragraph (4) of subdivision (a) which, pursuant to the instrument or order governing the distribution, is distributable during its taxable year to the beneficiaries. In cases under this subdivision there shall be included, as provided in subdivision (d) of this section, in computing the net income of each beneficiary, that part of the income of the estate or trust which, pursuant to the instrument or order governing the distribution, is distributable during the taxable year to such beneficiary.

(f) A trust created by an employer as a part of a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan for the exclusive benefit of some or all of his employees, to which contributions are made by such employer, or employees, or both, for the purpose of distributing to such employees the earnings and principal of the fund accumulated by the trust in accordance with such plan, shall not be taxable under this section, but the amount actually distributed or made available to any distributee shall be taxable to him in the year in which so distributed or made available to the extent that it exceeds the amounts paid in by him. Such distributees shall for the purpose of the normal tax be allowed as credits that part of the amount so distributed or made available as represents the items specified in subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 216.

SEC. 220. Evasion of surtaxes by incorporation. That if any corporation, however created or organized, is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders or members through the medium of permitting its gains and profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of such corporation a tax equal to 25 per centum of the amount thereof, which shall be in addition to the tax imposed by section 230 of this title and shall be computed, collected, and paid upon the same basis and in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as that tax: Provided, That if all the stockholders or members of such corporation agree thereto, the Commissioner may, in lieu of all income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed upon the corporation for the taxable year, tax the stockholders or members of such corporation upon their distributive shares in the net income of the corporation for the taxable year in the same manner as provided in subdivision (a) of section 218 in the case of members of a partnership. The fact that any corporation is a mere holding company, or that the gains and profits are permitted to accumulate beyond the reasonable needs of the business, shall be prima facie evidence of a purpose to escape the surtax; but the fact that the gains and profits are in any case permitted to accumulate and become surplus shall not be construed as evidence of a purpose to escape the tax in such case unless the Commissioner certifies that in his opinion such accumulation is unreasonable for the purposes of the business. When requested by the Commissioner, or any collector, every corporation shall forward to him a correct statement of such gains and profits and the names and addresses of the individuals or shareholders who would be entitled to the same if divided or distributed, and of the amounts that would be payable to each.

SEC. 221. Payment of individual's tax at source. (a) That all individuals, corporations, and partnerships, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, fiduciaries, employers, and all officers and employees of the United States having the control, receipt, custody, disposal, or payment of interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to persons not engaged in business in the United States and not having an office or place of business therein), rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income, of any nonresident alien individual or partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens (other than income received as dividends of the class allowed as a credit by subdivision (a) of section 216) shall (except in the cases provided for in subdivision (b) and except as otherwise provided in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner under section 217) deduct and withhold from such annual or periodical gains, profits, and income a tax equal to 8 per centum thereof: Provided, That the Commissioner may authorize such tax to be deducted and withheld from the interest upon any securities the owners of which are not known to the withholding agent.

(b) In any case where bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a corporation contain a contract or provision by which the obligor agrees to pay any portion of the tax imposed by this title upon the obligee, or to reimburse the obligee for any portion of the tax, or to pay the interest without deduction for any tax which the obligor may be required or permitted to pay thereon, or to retain therefrom under any law of the United States, the obligor shall deduct and withhold a tax equal to 2 per centum of the interest upon such bonds, mortgages, deeds of trust, or other obligations, whether such interest is payable annually or at shorter or longer periods and whether payable to a nonresident alien individual or to an individual citizen or resident of the United States or to a partnership: Provided, That the Commissioner may authorize such tax to be deducted and withheld in the case of interest upon any such bonds, mortgages, deeds of trust, or other obligations, the owners of which are not known to the withholding agent. Such deduction and withholding shall not be required in the case of a citizen or resident entitled to receive such interest, if he files with the withholding agent on or before February 1 a signed notice in writing claiming the benefit of the credits provided in subdivisions (c) and (d) of section 216; nor in the case of a nonresident alien individual if so provided for in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner under subdivision (g) of section 217.

(c) Every individual, corporation, or partnership required to deduct and withhold any tax under this section shall make return thereof on or before March 1 of each year and shall on or before June 15 pay the tax to the official of the United States Government authorized to receive it. Every such individual, corporation, or partnership is hereby made liable for such tax and is hereby indemnified against the claims and demands of any individual, corporation, or partnership for the amount of any payments made in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(d) Income upon which any tax is required to be withheld at the source under this section shall be included in the return of the recipient of such income, but any amount of tax so withheld shall be credited against the amount of income tax as computed in such return.

(e) If any tax required under this section to be deducted and withheld is paid by the recipient of the income, it shall not be re-collected from the withholding agent; nor in cases in which the tax is so paid shall any penalty be imposed upon or collected from the recipient of the income or the withholding agent for failure to return or pay the same, unless such failure was fraudulent and for the purpose of evading payment.

SEC. 222. Credit for taxes in case of individuals. (a) That the tax computed under Part II of this title shall be credited with:

(1) In the case of a citizen of the United States the amount of any income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes paid during the taxable year to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States; and

(2) In the case of a resident of the United States, the amount of any such taxes paid during the taxable year to any possession of the United States; and

(3) In the case of an alien resident of the United States, the amount of any such taxes paid during the taxable year to any foreign country, if the foreign country of which such alien resident is a citizen or subject, in imposing such taxes, allows a similar credit to citizens of the United States residing in such country; and

(4) In the case of any such individual who is a member of a partnership or a beneficiary of an estate or trust, his proportionate share of such taxes of the partnership or the estate or trust paid during the taxable year to a foreign country or to any possession of the United States, as the case may be.

(5) The above credits shall not be allowed in the case of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262; and in no other case shall the amount of credit taken under this subdivision exceed the same proportion of the tax, against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's net income (computed without deduction for any income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by any foreign country or possession of the United States) from sources without the United States bears to his entire net income (computed without such deduction) for the same taxable year.

(b) If accrued taxes when paid differ from the amounts claimed as credits by the taxpayer, or if any tax paid is refunded in whole or in part, the taxpayer shall notify the Commissioner, who shall redetermine the amount of the tax due under Part II of this title for the year or years affected, and the amount of tax due upon such redetermination, if any, shall be paid by the taxpayer upon notice and demand by the collector, or the amount of tax overpaid, if any, shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 252. In the case of such a tax accrued but not paid, the Commissioner as a condition precedent to the allowance of this credit may require the taxpayer to give a bond with sureties satisfactory to and to be approved by the Commissioner in such penal sum as the Commissioner may require, conditioned for the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of tax found due upon any such redetermination; and the bond herein prescribed shall contain such further conditions as the Commissioner may require.

(c) These credits shall be allowed only if the taxpayer furnishes evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner showing the amount of income derived from sources without the United States, and all other information necessary for the verification and computation of such credits.

(d) If the taxpayer makes a return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, the credit for the entire fiscal year shall, notwithstanding any provision of this Act, be determined under the provisions of this section; and the Commissioner is authorized to disallow, in whole or part, any such credit which he finds has already been taken by the taxpayer.

SEC. 223. Individual returns. (a) That the following individuals shall each make under oath a return stating specifically the items of his gross income and the deductions and credits allowed under this title —

(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,000 or over, if married and living with husband or wife; and

(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income.

(b) If a husband and wife living together have an aggregate net income for the taxable year of $2,000 or over, or an aggregate gross income for such year of $5,000 or over —

(1) Each shall make such a return, or

(2) The income of each shall be included in a single joint return, in which case the tax shall be computed on the aggregate income.

(c) If the taxpayer is unable to make his own return, the return shall be made by a duly authorized agent or by the guardian or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

SEC. 224. Partnership returns. That every partnership shall make a return for each taxable year, stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions allowed by this title, and shall include in the return the names and addresses of the individuals who would be entitled to share in the net income if distributed and the amount of the distributive share of each individual. The return shall be sworn to by any one of the partners.

SEC. 225. Fiduciary returns. (a) That every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of part only of the property of an individual) shall make under oath a return for any of the following individuals, estates, or trusts for which he acts, stating specifically the items of gross income thereof and the deductions and credits allowed under this title —

(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

(2) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,000 or over, if married and living with husband or wife;

(3) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income;

(4) Every estate or trust the net income of which for the taxable year is $1,000 or over; and

(5) Every estate or trust of which any beneficiary is a nonresident alien.

(b) Under such regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe a return made by one of two or more joint fiduciaries and filed in the office of the collector of the district where such fiduciary resides shall be sufficient compliance with the above requirement. Such fiduciary shall make oath (1) that he has sufficient knowledge of the affairs of the individual, estate or trust for which the return is made, to enable him to make the return, and (2) that the return is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, true and correct. Any fiduciary required to make a return under this Act shall be subject to all the provisions of this Act which apply to individuals.

SEC. 226. Returns for a period of less than twelve months. (a) That if a taxpayer, with the approval of the Commissioner, changes the basis of computing net income from fiscal year to calendar year a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the last fiscal year for which return was made and the following December 31. If the change is from calendar year to fiscal year, a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the last calendar year for which return was made and the date designated as the close of the fiscal year. If the change is from one fiscal year to another fiscal year a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the former fiscal year and the date designated as the close of the new fiscal year.

(b) In all cases where a separate return is made for a part of a taxable year the net income shall be computed on the basis of such period for which separate return is made, and the tax shall be paid thereon at the rate for the calendar year in which such period is included.

(c) In the case of a return for a period of less than one year the net income shall be placed on an annual basis by multiplying the amount thereof by twelve and dividing by the number of months included in such period; and the tax shall be such part of a tax computed on such annual basis as the number of months in such period is of twelve months.

SEC. 227. Time and place for filing individual, partnership, and fiduciary returns. (a) That returns (except in the case of nonresident aliens) shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, or, if the return is made on the basis of the calendar year, then the return shall be made on or before the 15th day of March. In the case of a nonresident alien individual returns shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the fiscal year, or, if the return is made on the basis of the calendar year, then the return shall be made on or before the 15th day of June. The Commissioner may grant a reasonable extension of time for filing returns whenever in his judgment good cause exists and shall keep a record of every such extension and the reason therefor. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no such extension shall be for more than six months.

(b) Returns shall be made to the collector for the district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the return, or, if he has no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, then to the collector at Baltimore, Maryland.

SEC. 228. Understatement in returns. That if the collector or deputy collector has reason to believe that the amount of any income returned is understated, he shall give due notice to the taxpayer making the return to show cause why the amount of the return should not be increased, and upon proof of the amount understated, may increase the same accordingly. Such taxpayer may furnish sworn testimony to prove any relevant facts and if dissatisfied with the decision of the collector may appeal to the Commissioner for his decision, under such rules of procedure as may be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

SEC. 229. Incorporation of individual or partnership business. That in the case of the organization as a corporation within four months after the passage of this act of any trade or business in which capital is a material income-producing factor, and which was previously owned by a partnership or individual, the net income of such trade or business from January 1, 1921, to the date of such organization may at the option of the individual or partnership be taxed as the net income of a corporation is taxed under Titles II and III; in which event the net income and invested capital of such trade or business shall be computed as if such corporation had been in existence on and after January 1, 1921, and the undistributed profits or earnings of such trade or business shall not be subject to the surtaxes imposed in section 211, but amounts distributed on and after January 1, 1921, from the earnings or profits of such trade or business accumulated after December 31, 1920, shall be taxed to the recipients as dividends; and all the provisions of Titles II and III relating to corporations shall so far as practicable apply to such trade or business: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any trade or business, the net income of which for the taxable year 1921 was less than 20 per centum of its invested capital for such year: Provided further, That any taxpayer who takes advantage of this section shall pay the tax imposed by section 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918 as if such taxpayer had been a corporation on and after January 1, 1921.

For sec. 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 165.

PART III.—CORPORATIONS.

SEC. 230. Tax on corporations. That, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 230 of the Revenue Act of 1918, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every corporation a tax at the following rates:

- (a) For the calendar year 1921, 10 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits provided in section 236; and
- (b) For each calendar year thereafter, 12½ per centum of such excess amount.

SEC. 231. Conditional and other exemptions of corporations. That the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this title —

- (1) Labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations;
- (2) Mutual savings banks not having a capital stock represented by shares;
- (3) Fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations, (a) operating under the lodge system or for the exclusive benefit of the members of a fraternity itself operating under the lodge system; and (b) providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such society, order, or association or their dependents;
- (4) Domestic building and loan associations substantially all the business of which is confined to making loans to members; and co-operative banks without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit;
- (5) Cemetery companies owned and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members or which are not operated for profit; and any corporation chartered solely for burial purposes as a cemetery corporation and not permitted by its charter to engage in any business not necessarily incident to that purpose, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual;

(6) Corporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual;

(7) Business leagues, chambers of commerce, or boards of trade, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual;

(8) Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare;

(9) Clubs organized and operated exclusively for pleasure, recreation, and other nonprofitable purposes, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or member;

(10) Farmers' or other mutual hail, cyclone, or fire insurance companies, mutual ditch or irrigation companies, mutual or cooperative telephone companies, or like organizations of a purely local character, the income of which consists solely of assessments, dues, and fees collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting expenses;

(11) Farmers', fruit growers', or like associations, organized and operated as sales agents for the purpose of marketing the products of members and turning back to them the proceeds of sales, less the necessary selling expenses, on the basis of the quantity of produce furnished by them; or organized and operated as purchasing agents for the purpose of purchasing supplies and equipment for the use of members and turning over such supplies and equipment to such members at actual cost, plus necessary expenses;

(12) Corporations organized for the exclusive purpose of holding title to property, collecting income therefrom, and turning over the entire amount thereof, less expenses, to an organization which itself is exempt from the tax imposed by this title;

(13) Federal land banks and national farm-loan associations as provided in section 26 of the Act approved July 17, 1916, entitled "An Act to provide capital for agricultural development, to create standard forms of investment based upon farm mortgage, to equalize rates of interest upon farm loans, to furnish a market for United States bonds, to create Government depositaries and financial agents for the United States, and for other purposes";

(14) Personal service corporations. This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921.

SEC. 232. Net income of corporations defined. That in the case of a corporation subject to the tax imposed by section 230 the term "net income" means the gross income as defined in section 233 less the deductions allowed by section 234, and the net income shall be computed on the same basis as is provided in subdivision (b) of section 212 or in section 226. In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the computation shall also be made in the manner provided in section 217.

SEC. 233. Gross income of corporations defined. (a) That in the case of a corporation subject to the tax imposed by section 230 the term "gross income" means the gross income as defined in sections 213 and 217, except that mutual marine insurance companies shall include in gross income the gross premiums collected and received by them less amounts paid for reinsurance.

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States, determined (except in the case of insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by sections 243 or 246) in the manner provided in section 217.

SEC. 234. Deductions allowed corporations. (a) That in computing the net income of a corporation subject to the tax imposed by section 230 there shall be allowed as deductions:

(1) All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered, and including rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property to which the corporation has not taken or is not taking title, or in which it has no equity;

(2) All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on its indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this title;

(3) Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year except (a) income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of the United States, (b) so much of the income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of any foreign country or possession of the United States as is allowed as a credit under section 238, and (c) taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed. In the case of obligors specified in subdivision (b) of section 221 no deduction for the payment of the tax imposed by this title, or any other tax paid pursuant to the contract or provision referred to in that subdivision, shall be allowed nor shall such tax be included in the gross income of the obligee. The deduction allowed by this paragraph shall be allowed in the case of taxes imposed upon a shareholder or member of a corporation upon his interest as shareholder or member, which are paid by the corporation without reimbursement from the shareholder or member, but in such cases no deduction shall be allowed the shareholder or member for the amount of such taxes. For the purpose of this paragraph, estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes accrue on the due date thereof except as otherwise provided by the law of the jurisdiction imposing such taxes;

(4) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise; unless, in order to clearly reflect the income, the loss should in the opinion of the Commissioner be accounted for as of a different period. No deduction shall be allowed for any loss claimed to have been sustained in any sale or other disposition of shares of stock or securities made after the passage of this Act where it appears that within thirty days before or after the date of such sale or other disposition the taxpayer has acquired (otherwise than by bequest or inheritance) substantially identical property, and the property so acquired is held by the taxpayer for any period after such sale or other disposition, unless such claim is made by a dealer in stock or securities and with respect to a transaction made in the ordinary course of its business. If such acquisition is to the extent of part only of substantially identical property, then only a proportionate part of the loss shall be disallowed. In case of losses arising from destruction of or damage to property, where the property so destroyed or damaged was acquired before March 1, 1913, the deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(5) Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year (or in the discretion of the Commissioner, a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts); and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the Commissioner may allow such debt to be charged off in part;

(6) The amount received as dividends (A) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, or (B) from any foreign corporation when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that more than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the foreign corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under section 217;

(8) In the case of buildings, machinery, equipment, or other facilities, constructed, erected, installed, or acquired, on or after April 6, 1917, for the production of articles contributing to the prosecution of the war against the German Government, and in the case of vessels constructed or acquired on or after such date for the transportation of articles or men contributing to the prosecution of such war, there shall be allowed, for any taxable year ending before March 3, 1924 (if claim therefor was made at the time of filing return for the taxable year 1918, 1919, 1920, or 1921) a reasonable deduction for the amortization of such part of the cost of such facilities or vessels as has been borne by the taxpayer, but not again including any amount otherwise allowed under this title or previous Acts of Congress as a deduction in computing net income. At any time before March 3, 1924, the Commissioner may, and at the request of the taxpayer shall, reexamine the return, and if he then finds as a result of an appraisal or from other evidence that the deduction originally allowed was incorrect, the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes for the year or years affected shall be redetermined and the amount of tax due upon such redetermination, if any, shall be paid upon notice and demand by the collector, or the amount of tax overpaid, if any, shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 252;

(9) In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, a reasonable allowance for depletion and for depreciation of improvements, according to the peculiar conditions in each case, based upon cost including cost of development not otherwise deducted: Provided, That in the case of such properties acquired prior to March 1, 1913, the fair market value of the property (or the taxpayer's interest therein) on that date shall be taken in lieu of cost up to that date: Provided further, That in the case of mines, oil and gas wells, discovered by the taxpayer, on or after March 1, 1913, and not acquired as the result of purchase of a proven tract or lease, where the fair market value of the property is materially disproportionate to the cost, the depletion allowance shall be based upon the fair market value of the property at the date of the discovery, or within thirty days thereafter: And provided further, That such depletion allowance based on discovery value shall not exceed the net income, computed without allowance for depletion, from the property upon which the discovery is made, except where such net income so computed is less than the depletion allowance based on cost or fair market value as of March 1, 1913; such reasonable allowance in all the above cases to be made under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. In the case of leases the deductions allowed by this paragraph shall be equitably apportioned between the lessor and lessee:

(10) In the case of insurance companies (other than life insurance companies), in addition to the above (unless otherwise allowed): (A) The net addition required by law to be made within the taxable year to reserve funds (including in the case of assessment insurance companies the actual deposit of sums with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as additions to guarantee or reserve funds); and (B) the sums other than dividends paid within the taxable year on policy and annuity contracts. After December 31, 1921, this subdivision shall apply only to mutual insurance companies other than life insurance companies;

(11) In the case of corporations (except those taxed under section 243) issuing policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan continuing for life and not subject to cancellation, in addition to the above, such portion of the net addition (not required by law) made within the taxable year to reserve funds as the Commissioner finds to be required for the protection of the holders of such policies only. This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921;

(12) In the case of mutual marine insurance companies, there shall be allowed, in addition to the deductions allowed in paragraphs (1) to (10), inclusive, and paragraph (14), unless otherwise allowed, amounts repaid to policyholders on account of premiums previously paid by them, and interest paid upon such amounts between the ascertainment and the payment thereof;

(13) In the case of mutual insurance companies (including interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters, but not including mutual life or mutual marine insurance companies) requiring their members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses, there shall be allowed, in addition to the deductions allowed in paragraphs (1) to (10), inclusive, and paragraph (14), unless otherwise allowed, the amount of premium deposits returned to their policyholders and the amount of premium deposits retained for the payment of losses, expenses, and reinsurance reserves;

(14) If property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent as a result of (A) its destruction in whole or in part, (B) theft or seizure, or (C) an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation, or the threat or imminence thereof; and if the taxpayer proceeds forthwith in good faith, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to expend the proceeds of such conversion in the acquisition of other property of a character similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or in the acquisition of 80 per centum or more of the stock or shares of a corporation owning such other property, or in the establishment of a replacement fund, then there shall be allowed as a deduction such portion of the gain derived as the portion of the proceeds so expended bears to the entire proceeds. The provisions of this paragraph prescribing the conditions under which a deduction may be taken in respect of the proceeds or gains derived from the compulsory or involuntary conversion of property into cash or its equivalent, shall apply so far as may be practicable to the exemption or exclusion of such proceeds or gains from gross income under prior income, war-profits and excess-profits tax Acts.

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the deductions allowed in subdivision (a) shall be allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 217 under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

SEC. 235. Items not deductible by corporations. That in computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of any of the items specified in section 215.

SEC. 236. Credits allowed corporations. That for the purpose only of the tax imposed by section 230 there shall be allowed the following credits:

(a) The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States and bonds issued by the War Finance Corporation, which is included in gross income under section 233;

(b) In the case of a domestic corporation the net income of which is $25,000 or less, a specific credit of $2,000; but if the net income is more than $25,000 the tax imposed by section 230 shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $2,000 credit were allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000; and

(c) The amount of any war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by Act of Congress for the same taxable year. The credit allowed by this subdivision shall be determined as follows:

(1) In the case of a corporation which makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, in computing the income tax as provided in subdivision (a) of section 205, the portion of the war-profits and excess-profits tax computed for the entire period under clause (1) of subdivision (a) of section 335 shall be credited against the net income computed for the entire period as provided in clause (1) of subdivision (a) of section 205, and the portion of the war-profits and excess-profits tax computed for the entire period under clause (2) of subdivision (a) of section 335 shall be credited against the net income computed for the entire period as provided in clause (2) of subdivision (a) of section 205.

(2) In the case of a corporation which makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, in computing the income tax as provided in subdivision (b) of section 205, the war-profits and excess-profits tax computed under subdivision (b) of section 335 shall be credited against the net income computed for the entire period as provided in clause (1) of subdivision (b) of section 205.

SEC. 237. Payment of corporation income tax at source. That in the case of foreign corporations subject to taxation under this title not engaged in trade or business within the United States and not having any office or place of business therein, there shall be deducted and withheld at the source in the same manner and upon the same items of income as is provided in section 221 a tax equal to 12½ per centum thereof (but during the calendar year 1921 only 10 per centum), and such tax shall be returned and paid in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided in that section: Provided, That in the case of interest described in subdivision (b) of that section the deduction and withholding shall be at the rate of 2 per centum.

SEC. 238. Credit for taxes in case of corporations. (a) That in the case of a domestic corporation the tax imposed by this title, plus the war-profits and excess-profits taxes, if any, shall be credited with the amount of any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid during the same taxable year to any foreign country, or to any possession of the United States: Provided, That the amount of credit taken under this subdivision shall in no case exceed the same proportion of the taxes, against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's net income (computed without deduction for any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by any foreign country or possession of the United States) from sources without the United States bears to its entire net income (computed without such deduction) for the same taxable year. In the case of domestic insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 243 or 246, the term "net income", as used in this subdivision means net income as defined in sections 245 and 246, respectively.

(b) If accrued taxes when paid differ from the amounts claimed as credits by the corporation, or if any tax paid is refunded in whole or in part, the corporation shall at once notify the Commissioner, who shall redetermine the amount of the income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes for the year or years affected, and the amount of taxes due upon such redetermination, if any, shall be paid by the corporation upon notice and demand by the collector, or the amount of taxes overpaid, if any, shall be credited or refunded to the corporation in accordance with the provisions of section 252. In the case of such a tax accrued but not paid, the Commissioner as a condition precedent to the allowance of this credit may require the corporation to give a bond with sureties satisfactory to and to be approved by him in such penal sum as he may require, conditioned for the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of taxes found due upon any such redetermination; and the bond herein prescribed shall contain such further conditions as the Commissioner may require.

(c) These credits shall be allowed only if the taxpayer furnishes evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner showing the amount of income derived from sources without the United States, and all other information necessary for the verification and computation of such credit.

(d) If a domestic corporation makes a return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, the credit for the entire fiscal year shall, notwithstanding ing any provision of this Act, be determined under the provisions of this section; and the Commissioner is authorized to disallow, in whole or in part, any such credit which he finds has already been taken by the taxpayer.

(e) For the purposes of this section a domestic corporation which owns a majority of the voting stock of a foreign corporation from which it receives dividends (not deductible under section 234) in any taxable year shall be deemed to have paid the same proportion of any income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid by such foreign corporation to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States, upon or with respect to the accumulated profits of such foreign corporation from which such dividends were paid, which the amount of such dividends bears to the amount of such accumulated profits: Provided, That the credit allowed to any domestic corporation under this subdivision shall in no case exceed the same proportion of the taxes against which it is credited, which the amount of such dividends bears to the amount of the entire net income of the domestic corporation in which such dividends are included. The term "accumulated profits" when used in this subdivision in reference to a foreign corporation, means the amount of its gains, profits, or income in excess of the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed upon or with respect to such profits or income; and the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall have full power to determine from the accumulated profits of what year or years such dividends were paid; treating dividends paid in the first sixty days of any year as having been paid from the accumulated profits of the preceding year or years (unless to his satisfaction shown otherwise), and in other respects treating dividends as having been paid from the most recently accumulated gains, profits, or earnings. In the case of a foreign corporation, the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes of which are determined on the basis of an accounting period of less than one year, the word "year" as used in this subdivision shall be construed to mean such accounting period.

(f) For the purposes of this section a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 shall be treated as a foreign corporation.

SEC. 239. Corporation returns. (a) That every corporation subject to taxation under this title and every personal service corporation shall make a return, stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits allowed by this title. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer and by the treasurer or assistant treasurer. If any foreign corporation has no office or place of business in the United States but has an agent in the United States, the return shall be made by the agent. In cases where receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of corporations, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall make returns for such corporations in the same manner and form as corporations are required to make returns. Any tax due on the basis of such returns made by receivers, trustees, or assignees shall be collected in the same manner as if collected from the corporations of whose business or property they have custody and control.

(b) Returns made under this section shall be subject to the provisions of sections 226 and 228. When return is made under section 226 the credit provided in subdivision (b) of section 236 shall be reduced to an amount which bears the same ratio to the full credit therein provided as the number of months in the period for which such return is made bears to twelve months.

(c) There shall be included in the return or appended thereto a statement of such facts as will enable the Commissioner to determine the portion of the earnings or profits of the corporation (including gains, profits and income not taxed) accumulated during the taxable year for which the return is made, which have been distributed or ordered to be distributed, respectively, to its stockholders or members during such year.

SEC. 240. Consolidated returns of corporations. (a) That corporations which are affiliated within the meaning of this section may, for any taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1922, make separate returns or, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, make a consolidated return of net income for the purpose of this title, in which case the taxes thereunder shall be computed and determined upon the basis of such return. If return is made on either of such bases, all returns thereafter made shall be upon the same basis unless permission to change the basis is granted by the Commissioner.

(b) In any case in which a tax is assessed upon the basis of a consolidated return, the total tax shall be computed in the first instance as a unit and shall then be assessed upon the respective affiliated corporations in such proportions as may be agreed upon among them, or, in the absence of any such agreement, then on the basis of the net income properly assignable to each. There shall be allowed in computing the income tax only one specific credit computed as provided in subdivision (b) of section 236.

(c) For the purpose of this section two or more domestic corporations shall be deemed to be affiliated (1) if one corporation owns directly or controls through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees substantially all the stock of the other or others, or (2) if substantially all the stock of two or more corporations is owned or controlled by the same interests.

(d) For the purposes of this section a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 shall be treated as a foreign corporation: Provided, That in any case of two or more related trades or businesses (whether unincorporated or incorporated and whether organized in the United States or not) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the Commissioner may consolidate the accounts of such related trades and businesses, in any proper case, for the purpose of making an accurate distribution or apportionment of gains, profits, income, deductions, or capital between or among such related trades or businesses.

(e) Corporations which are affiliated within the meaning of this section shall make consolidated returns for any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1922, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided by the Revenue Act of 1918.

For Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 90.

SEC. 241. Time and place for filing corporate returns. (a) That returns of corporations shall be made at the same time as is provided in subdivision (a) of section 227, except that in the case of foreign corporations not having any office or place of business in the United States returns shall be made at the same time as provided in section 227 in the case of a nonresident alien individual.

(b) Returns shall be made to the collector of the district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office or agency of the corporation, or, if it has no principal place of business or principal office or agency in the United States, then to the collector at Baltimore, Maryland.

Taxes on Insurance Companies.

SEC. 242. [“Life insurance company” defined.] That when used in this title the term “life insurance company” means an insurance company engaged in the business of issuing life insurance and annuity contracts (including contracts of combined life, health, and accident insurance), the reserve funds of which held for the fulfillment of such contracts comprise more than 50 per centum of its total reserve funds.

SEC. 243. [Rate of tax on life insurance company.] That in lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 230 and 1000 and by Title III, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for the calendar year 1921 and for each taxable year thereafter upon the net income of every life insurance company a tax as follows:

- (1) In the case of a domestic life insurance company, the same percentage of its net income as is imposed upon other corporations by section 230;
- (2) In the case of a foreign life insurance company, the same percentage of its net income from sources within the United States as is imposed upon the net income of other corporations by section 230.

SEC. 244. [Definitions — “gross income” — “reserve funds required by law.”] (a) That in the case of a life insurance company the term “gross income” means the gross amount of income received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, and rents.

(b) The term “reserve funds required by law” includes, in the case of assessment insurance, sums actually deposited by any company or association with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as guaranty or reserve funds, and any funds maintained under the charter or articles of incorporation of the company or association exclusively for the payment of claims arising under certificates of membership or policies issued upon the assessment plan and not subject to any other use.

SEC. 245. [“Net income” of life insurance companies — what constitutes deductions.] (a) That in case of a life insurance company the term “net income” means the gross income less —

(1) The amount of interest received during the taxable year which under paragraph (4) of subdivision (b) of section 213 is exempt from taxation under this title;

(2) An amount equal to the excess, if any, over the deduction specified in paragraph (1) of this subdivision, of 4 per centum of the mean of the reserve funds required by law and held at the beginning and end of the taxable year, plus (in case of life insurance companies issuing policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, continuing for life and not subject to cancellation) 4 per centum of the mean of such reserve funds (not required by law) held at the beginning and end of the taxable year, as the Commissioner finds to be necessary for the protection of the holders of such policies only;

(3) The amount received as dividends (A) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, or (B) from any foreign corporation when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that more than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the foreign corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under section 217;

(4) An amount equal to 2 per centum of any sums held at the end of the taxable year as a reserve for dividends (other than dividends payable during the year following the taxable year) the payment of which is deferred for a period of not less than five years from the date of the policy contract;

(5) Investment expenses paid during the taxable year: Provided, That if any general expenses are in part assigned to or included in the investment expenses, the total deduction under this paragraph shall not exceed one-fourth of 1 per centum of the book value of the mean of the invested assets held at the beginning and end of the taxable year;

(6) Taxes and other expenses paid during the taxable year exclusively upon or with respect to the real estate owned by the company, not including taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed, and not including any amount paid out for new buildings, or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property. The deduction allowed by this paragraph shall be allowed in the case of taxes imposed upon a shareholder or member of a company upon his interest as shareholder or member, which are paid by the company without reimbursement from the shareholder or member, but in such cases no deduction shall be allowed the shareholder or member for the amount of such taxes;

(7) A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence. In the case of property acquired before March 1, 1913, this deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(8) All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on its indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this title;

(9) In the case of a domestic life insurance company, the net income of which (computed without the benefit of this paragraph) is $25,000 or less, the sum of $2,000; but if the net income is more than $25,000 the tax imposed by section 243 shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $2,000 credit were allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000.

(b) No deduction shall be made under paragraphs (6) and (7) of subdivision (a) on account of any real estate owned and occupied in whole or in part by a life insurance company unless there is included in the return of gross income the rental value of the space so occupied. Such rental value shall be not less than a sum which in addition to any rents received from other tenants shall provide a net income (after deducting taxes, depreciation, and all other expenses) at the rate of 4 per centum per annum of the book value at the end of the taxable year of the real estate so owned or occupied.

(c) In the case of a foreign life insurance company the amount of its net income for any taxable year from sources within the United States shall be the same proportion of its net income for the taxable year from sources within and without the United States, which the reserve funds required by law and held by it at the end of the taxable year upon business transacted within the United States is of the reserve funds held by it at the end of the taxable year upon all business transacted.

SEC. 246. [Insurance companies other than life and mutual — rate of tax — terms defined.] (a) That, in lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 230 and 1000, there shall be levied, collected and paid for the calendar year 1922, and for each taxable year thereafter, upon the net income of every insurance company (other than a life or mutual insurance company) a tax as follows:

(1) In the case of such a domestic insurance company the same percentage of its net income as is imposed upon other corporations by section 230;

(2) In the case of such a foreign insurance company the same percentage of its net income from sources within the United States as is imposed upon the net income of other corporations by section 230.

(b) In the case of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section —

(1) The term “gross income” means the combined gross amount, earned during the taxable year, from investment income and from underwriting income as provided in this subdivision, computed on the basis of the underwriting and investment exhibit of the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners;

(2) The term “net income” means the gross income as defined in paragraph (1) of this subdivision less the deductions allowed by section 247;

(3) The term “investment income” means the gross amount of income earned during the taxable year from interest, dividends and rents, computed as follows:

To all interest, dividends and rents received during the taxable year, add interest, dividends and rents due and accrued at the end of the taxable year, and deduct all interest, dividends and rents due and accrued at the end of the preceding taxable year:

(4) The term “underwriting income” means the premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year less losses incurred and expenses incurred;

(5) The term “premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year” means an amount computed as follows:

From the amount of gross premiums written on insurance contracts during the taxable year, deduct return premiums and premiums paid for reinsurance. To the result so obtained add unearned premiums on outstanding business at the end of the preceding taxable year and deduct unearned premiums on outstanding business at the end of the taxable year;

(6) The term “losses incurred” means losses incurred during the taxable year on insurance contracts, computed as follows:

To losses paid during the taxable year, add salvage and reinsurance recoverable outstanding at the end of the preceding taxable year, and deduct salvage and reinsurance recoverable outstanding at the end of the taxable year. To the result so obtained add all unpaid losses outstanding at the end of the taxable year and deduct unpaid losses outstanding at the end of the preceding taxable year;

(7) The term "expenses incurred" means all expenses shown on the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, and shall be computed as follows:

To all expenses paid during the taxable year add expenses unpaid at the end of the taxable year and deduct expenses unpaid at the end of the preceding taxable year. For the purpose of computing the net income subject to the tax imposed by this section there shall be deducted from expenses incurred as defined in this paragraph all expenses incurred which are not allowed as deductions by section 247.

SEC. 247. [Deductions affecting insurance companies other than life and mutual.] (a) That in computing the net income of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 246 there shall be allowed as deductions:

(1) All ordinary and necessary expenses incurred, as provided in paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of section 234;

(2) All interest as provided in paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of section 234;

(3) Taxes as provided in paragraph (3) of subdivision (a) of section 234;

(4) Losses incurred;

(5) Bad debts in the nature of agency balances and bills receivable ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year;

(6) The amount received as dividends from corporations as provided in paragraph (6) of subdivision (a) of section 234;

(7) The amount of interest earned during the taxable year which under paragraph (4) of subdivision (b) of section 213 is exempt from taxation under this title, and the amount of interest allowed as a credit under subdivision (a) of section 236;

(8) A reasonable allowance, for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, as provided in paragraph (7) of subdivision (a) of section 234;

(9) In the case of such a domestic insurance company, the net income of which (computed without the benefit of this paragraph) is $25,000 or less, the sum of $2,000; but if the net income is more than $25,000 the tax imposed by section 246 shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $2,000 credit were allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000.

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation the deductions allowed in this section shall be allowed to the extent provided in subdivision (b) of section 234.

(c) Nothing in this section or in section 246 shall be construed to permit the same item to be twice deducted.

PART IV.—ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

SEC. 250. Payment of taxes. (a) That except as otherwise provided in this section and sections 221 and 237 the tax shall be paid in four installments, each consisting of one-fourth of the total amount of the tax. The first installment shall be paid at the time fixed by law for filing the return, and the second installment shall be paid on the fifteenth day of the third month, the third installment on the fifteenth day of the sixth month, and the fourth installment on the fifteenth day of the ninth month, after the time fixed by law for filing the return. Where an extension of time for filing a return is granted the time for payment of the first installment shall be postponed until the date of the expiration of the period of the extension, but the time for payment of the other installments shall not be postponed unless the Commissioner so provides in granting the extension. In any case in which the time for the payment of any installment is at the request of the taxpayer thus postponed, there shall be added as a part of such installment interest thereon at the rate of one-half of 1 per centum per month from the time it would have been due if no extension had been granted, until paid. If any installment is not paid when due, the whole amount of the tax unpaid shall become due and payable upon notice and demand by the collector.

The tax may at the option of the taxpayer be paid in a single payment instead of installments, in which case the total amount shall be paid on or before the time fixed by law for filing the return, or, where an extension of time for filing the return has been granted, on or before the expiration of the period of such extension.

(b) As soon as practicable after the return is filed, the Commissioner shall examine it. If it then appears that the correct amount of the tax is greater or less than that shown in the return, the installments shall be recomputed. If the amount already paid exceeds that which should have been paid on the basis of the installments as recomputed, the excess so paid shall be credited against the subsequent installments; and if the amount already paid exceeds the correct amount of the tax, the excess shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 252.

If the amount already paid is less than that which should have been paid, the difference, to the extent not covered by any credits due to the taxpayer under section 252 (hereinafter called "deficiency"), together with interest thereon at the rate of one-half of 1 per centum per month from the time the tax was due (or, if paid on the installment basis, on the deficiency of each installment from the time the installment was due), shall be paid upon notice and demand by the collector. If any part of the deficiency is due to negligence or intentional disregard of authorized rules and regulations with knowledge thereof, but without intent to defraud, there shall be added as part of the tax 5 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency in the tax, and interest in such a case shall be collected at the rate of 1 per centum per month on the amount of such deficiency in the tax from the time it was due (or, if paid on the installment basis, on the amount of the deficiency in each installment from the time the installment was due), which penalty and interest shall become due and payable upon notice and demand by the collector. If any part of the deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, then, in lieu of the penalty provided by section 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for false or fraudulent returns willfully made, but in addition to other penalties provided by law for false or fraudulent returns, there shall be added as part of the tax 50 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency in the tax. In such case the whole amount of the tax unpaid, including the penalty so added, shall become due and payable upon notice and demand by the collector.

(c) If the return is made pursuant to section 3176 of the Revised Statutes as amended, the amount of tax determined to be due under such return shall be paid upon notice and demand by the collector.

(d) The amount of income, excess-profits, or war-profits taxes due under any return made under this Act for the taxable year 1921 or succeeding taxable years shall be determined and assessed by the Commissioner within four years after the return was filed, and the amount of any such taxes due under any return made under this Act for prior taxable years or under prior income, excess-profits, or war-profits tax Acts, or under section 38 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 5, 1909, shall be determined and assessed within five years after the return was filed, unless both the Commissioner and the taxpayer consent in writing to a later determination, assessment, and collection of the tax; and no suit or proceeding for the collection of any such taxes due under this Act or under prior income, excess-profits, or war-profits tax Acts, or of any taxes due under section 38 of such Act of August 5, 1909, shall be begun, after the expiration of five years after the date when such return was filed, but this shall not affect suits or proceedings begun at the time of the passage of this Act: Provided, That in the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent, all taxes due thereon shall be determined and assessed by the Commissioner within one year after written request therefor by the executor, administrator, or other fiduciary representing the estate of such decedent: Provided further, That in the case of a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax, or of a failure to file a required return, the amount of tax due may be determined, assessed, and collected, and a suit or proceeding for the collection of such amount may be begun, at any time after it becomes due: Provided further, That in cases coming within the scope of paragraph (9) of subdivision (a) of section 214, or of paragraph (8) of subdivision (a) of section 234, or in cases of final settlement of losses and other deductions tentatively allowed by the Commissioner pending a determination of the exact amount deductible, the amount of tax or deficiency in tax due may be determined, assessed, and collected at any time; but prior to the assessment thereof the taxpayer shall be notified and given a period of not less than thirty days in which to file an appeal and be heard as hereinafter provided in this subdivision.

If upon examination of a return made under the Revenue Act of 1916, the Revenue Act of 1917, the Revenue Act of 1918, or this Act, a tax or a deficiency in tax is discovered, the taxpayer shall be notified thereof and given a period of not less than thirty days after such notice is sent by registered mail in which to file an appeal and show cause or reason why the tax or deficiency should not be paid. Opportunity for hearing shall be granted and a final decision thereon shall be made as quickly as practicable. Any tax or deficiency in tax then determined to be due shall be assessed and paid, together with the penalty and interest, if any, applicable thereto, within ten days after notice and demand by the collector as hereinafter provided, and in such cases no claim in abatement of the amount so assessed shall be entertained: Provided, That in cases where the Commissioner believes that the collection of the amount due will be jeopardized by such delay he may make the assessment without giving such notice or awaiting the conclusion of such hearing.

For sec. 38 of the Act of Aug. 5, 1909, above mentioned, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 255.

(e) If any tax remains unpaid after the date when it is due, and for ten days after notice and demand by the collector, then, except in the case of estates of insane, deceased, or insolvent persons, there shall be added as part of the tax the sum of 5 per centum on the amount due but unpaid, plus interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month upon such amount from the time it became due: Provided, That as to any such amount which is the subject of a bona fide claim for abatement filed within ten days after notice and demand by the collector, where the taxpayer has not had the benefit of the provisions of subdivision (d), such sum of 5 per centum shall not be added and the interest from the time the amount was due until the claim is decided shall be at the rate of one-half of 1 per centum per month on that part of the claim rejected.

In the case of the first installment provided for in subdivision (a) the instructions printed on the return shall be sufficient notice of the date when the tax is due and sufficient demand, and the taxpayer's computation of the tax on the return shall be sufficient notice of the amount due. In the case of each subsequent installment the collector may, within thirty days and not later than ten days before the installment becomes due, mail to the taxpayer notice of the amount of the installment and the date on which it is due for payment. Such notice of the collector shall be sufficient notice and sufficient demand under this section.

(f) In the case of any deficiency (except where the deficiency is due to negligence or to fraud with intent to evade tax) where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the payment of such deficiency would result in undue hardship to the taxpayer, the Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary, extend the time for the payment of such deficiency or any part thereof for such period not in excess of eighteen months from the passage of this Act as the Commissioner may determine. In such case the Commissioner may require the taxpayer to furnish a bond with sufficient sureties conditioned upon the payment of the deficiency in accordance with the terms of the extension granted. There shall be added in lieu of other interest provided by law, as a part of such deficiency, interest thereon at the rate of two-thirds of 1 per centum per month from the time such extension is granted; except where such other interest provided by law is in excess of interest at the rate of two-thirds of 1 per centum per month. If the deficiency or any part thereof is not paid in accordance with the terms of the extension granted, there shall be added as part of the deficiency, in lieu of other interest and penalties provided by law, the sum of 5 per centum of the deficiency and interest on the deficiency at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the time it becomes payable in accordance with the terms of such extension.

(g) If the Commissioner finds that a taxpayer designs quickly to depart from the United States or to remove his property therefrom, or to conceal himself or his property therein, or to do any other act tending to prejudice or to render wholly or partly ineffectual proceedings to collect the tax for the taxable year then last past or the taxable year then current unless such proceedings be brought without delay, the Commissioner shall declare the taxable period for such taxpayer immediately terminated and shall cause notice of such finding and declaration to be given the taxpayer, together with a demand for immediate payment of the tax for the taxable period so declared terminated and of the tax for the preceding taxable year or so much of said tax as is unpaid, whether or not the time otherwise allowed by law for filing return and paying the tax has expired; and such taxes shall thereupon become immediately due and payable. In any action or suit brought to enforce payment of taxes made due and payable by virtue of the provisions of this subdivision the finding of the Commissioner, made as herein provided, whether made after notice to the taxpayer or not, shall be for all purposes presumptive evidence of the taxpayer's design. A taxpayer who is not in default in making any return or paying income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax under any Act of Congress may furnish to the United States, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, security approved by the Commissioner that he will duly make the return next thereafter required to be filed and pay the tax next thereafter required to be paid. The Commissioner may approve and accept in like manner security for return and payment of taxes made due and payable by virtue of the provisions of this subdivision, provided the taxpayer has paid in full all other income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes due from him under any Act of Congress. If security is approved and accepted pursuant to the provisions of this subdivision and such further or other security with respect to the tax or taxes covered thereby is given as the Commissioner shall from time to time find necessary and require, payment of such taxes shall not be enforced by any proceedings under the provisions of this subdivision prior to the expiration of the time otherwise allowed for paying such respective taxes. In the case of a citizen of the United States about to depart from the United States the Commissioner may, at his discretion, waive any or all of the requirements placed on the taxpayer by this subdivision. No alien shall depart from the United States unless he first secures from the collector or agent in charge a certificate that he has complied with all the obligations imposed upon him by the income, war-profits, and excess-profits tax laws. If a taxpayer violates or attempts to violate this subdivision there shall, in addition to all other penalties, be added as part of the tax 25 per centum of the total amount of the tax or deficiency in the tax, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month from the time the tax became due.

(h) The provisions of subdivisions (e), (f) and (g) of this section shall apply to the assessment and collection of taxes which have accrued or may accrue under the Revenue Act of 1917, the Revenue Act of 1918 or this Act.

SEC. 251. Receipts for taxes. That every collector to whom any payment of any tax is made under the provisions of this title shall upon request give to the person making such payment a full written or printed receipt, stating the amount paid and the particular account for which such payment was made; and whenever any debtor pays taxes on account of payments made or to be made by him to separate creditors the collector shall, if requested by such debtor, give a separate receipt for the tax paid on account of each creditor in such form that the debtor can conveniently produce such receipts separately to his several creditors in satisfaction of their respective demands up to the amounts stated in the receipts; and such receipt shall be sufficient evidence in favor of such debtor to justify him in withholding from his next payment to his creditor the amount therein stated; but the creditor may, upon giving to his debtor a full written receipt acknowledging the payment to him of any sum actually paid and accepting the amount of tax paid as aforesaid (specifying the same) as a further satisfaction of the debt to that amount, require the surrender to him of such collector's receipt.

SEC. 252. Refunds. That if, upon examination of any return of income made pursuant to this Act, the Act of August 5, 1909, entitled "An Act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," the Act of October 3, 1913, entitled "An Act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," the Revenue Act of 1916, as amended, the Revenue Act of 1917, or the Revenue Act of 1918, it appears that an amount of income, war-profits or excess-profits tax has been paid in excess of that properly due, then, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3228 of the Revised Statutes, the amount of the excess shall be credited against any income, war-profits or excess-profits taxes, or installment thereof, then due from the taxpayer under any other return, and any balance of such excess shall be immediately refunded to the taxpayer: Provided, That no such credit or refund shall be allowed or made after five years from the date when the return was due, unless before the expiration of such five years a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayer: Provided further, That if upon examination of any return of income made pursuant to the Revenue Act of 1917, the Revenue Act of 1918, or this Act, the invested capital of a taxpayer is decreased by the Commissioner, and such decrease is due to the fact that the taxpayer failed to take adequate deductions in previous years, with the result that an amount of income tax in excess of that properly due was paid in any previous year or years, then, notwithstanding any other provision of law and regardless of the expiration of such five-year period, the amount of such excess shall, without the filing of any claim therefor, be credited or refunded as provided in this section: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to bar from allowance claims for refund filed prior to the passage of the Revenue Act of 1918 under subdivision (a) of section 14 of the Revenue Act of 1916, or filed prior to the passage of this Act under section 252 of the Revenue Act of 1918.

SEC. 253. Penalties. That any individual, corporation, or partnership required under this title to pay or collect any tax, to make a return or to supply information, who fails to pay or collect such tax, to make such return, or to supply such information at the time or times required under this title, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000. Any individual, corporation, or partnership, or any officer or employee of any corporation or member or employee of a partnership, who willfully refuses to pay or collect such tax, to make such return, or to supply such information at the time or times required under this title, or who willfully attempts in any manner to defeat or evade the tax imposed by this title, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

SEC. 254. Returns of payments of dividends. That every corporation subject to the tax imposed by this title and every personal service corporation shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its payments of dividends, stating the name and address of each stockholder, the number of shares owned by him, and the amount of dividends paid to him.

SEC. 255. Returns of brokers. That every individual, corporation, or partnership doing business as a broker shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return duly verified under oath, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe, showing the names of customers for whom such individual, corporation, or partnership has transacted any business, with such details as to the profits, losses, or other information which the Commissioner may require, as to each of such customers, as will enable the Commissioner to determine whether all income tax due on profits or gains of such customers has been paid.

SEC. 256. Information at source. That all individuals, corporations, and partnerships, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, fiduciaries, and employers, making payment to another individual, corporation, or partnership, of interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments described in sections 254 and 255), of $1,000 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Commissioner, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

Such returns may be required, regardless of amounts, (1) in the case of payments of interest upon bonds, mortgages, deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of corporations, and (2) in the case of collections of items (not payable in the United States) of interest upon the bonds of foreign countries and interest upon the bonds of and dividends from foreign corporations by individuals, corporations, or partnerships, undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of such interest or dividends by means of coupons, checks or bills of exchange.

When necessary to make effective the provisions of this section the name and address of the recipient of income shall be furnished upon demand of the individual, corporation, or partnership paying the income.

The provisions of this section shall apply to the calendar year 1921 and each calendar year thereafter, but shall not apply to the payment of interest on obligations of the United States.

SEC. 257. Returns to be public records. That returns upon which the tax has been determined by the Commissioner shall constitute public records; but they shall be open to inspection only upon order of the President and under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary and approved by the President: Provided, That the proper officers of any State imposing an income tax may, upon the request of the governor thereof, have access to the returns of any corporation, or to an abstract thereof showing the name and income of the corporation, at such times and in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe: Provided further, That all bona fide stockholders of record owning 1 per centum or more of the outstanding stock of any corporation shall, upon making request of the Commissioner, be allowed to examine the annual income returns of such corporation and of its subsidiaries. Any stockholder who pursuant to the provisions of this section is allowed to examine the return of any corporation, and who makes known in any manner whatever not provided by law the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any such return, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

The Commissioner shall as soon as practicable in each year cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the collector in each internal-revenue district and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the names and the post-office addresses of all individuals making income-tax returns in such district.

SEC. 258. Publication of statistics. That the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prepare and publish annually statistics reasonably available with respect to the operation of the income, war-profits and excess-profits tax laws, including classifications of taxpayers and of income, the amounts allowed as deductions, exemptions, and credits, and any other facts deemed pertinent and valuable.

SEC. 259. Collection of foreign items. That all individuals, corporations, or partnerships undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of interest or dividends by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange shall obtain a license from the Commissioner and shall be subject to such regulations enabling the Government to obtain the information required under this title as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe; and whoever knowingly undertakes to collect such payments without having obtained a license therefor, or without complying with such regulations, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

SEC. 260. Citizens of possessions of the United States. That any individual who is a citizen of any possession of the United States (but not otherwise a citizen of the United States) and who is not a resident of the United States, shall be subject to taxation under this title only as to income derived from sources within the United States, and in such case the tax shall be computed and paid in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as in the case of other persons who are taxable only as to income derived from such sources.

Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes," approved July 12, 1921, relating to the imposition of income taxes in the Virgin Islands of the United States.

For Act of July 12, 1921, mentioned in the text, see infra, this volume, title VIRGIN ISLANDS.

SEC. 261. Porto Rico and Philippine Islands. That in Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands the income tax shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid as provided by law prior to the passage of this Act.

The Porto Rican or Philippine Legislature shall have power by due enactment to amend, alter, modify, or repeal the income tax laws in force in Porto Rico or the Philippine Islands, respectively.

SEC. 262. Income from sources within the possessions of the United States.

(a) That in the case of citizens of the United States or domestic corporations, satisfying the following conditions, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States —

(1) If 80 per centum or more of the gross income of such citizen or domestic corporation (computed without the benefit of this section) for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and

(2) If, in the case of such corporation, 50 per centum or more of its gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States; or

(3) If, in the case of such citizen, 50 per centum or more of his gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (a) there shall be included in gross income all amounts received by such citizens or corporations within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States.

(c) As used in this section the term "possession of the United States" does not include the Virgin Islands of the United States.

SEC. 263. Effective date of title. That this title shall take effect as of January 1, 1921.

TITLE III.—WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX FOR 1921.

PART I.—GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 300. [Terms used in title defined.] That when used in this title the terms "taxable year," "fiscal year," "personal service corporation," "paid or accrued," and "dividends" shall have the same meaning as provided for the purposes of income tax in sections 200 and 201.

PART II.—IMPOSITION OF TAX.

SEC. 301. [Rate of tax.] (a) That in lieu of the tax imposed by Title III of the Revenue Act of 1918, but in addition to the other taxes imposed by this Act, there shall be levied, collected and paid for the calendar year 1921 upon the net income of every corporation (except corporations taxable under subdivision (b) of this section) a tax equal to the sum of the following:

First Bracket.

20 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the excess-profits credit (determined under section 312) and not in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital;

Second Bracket.

40 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital.

(b) For the calendar year 1921 there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the net income of every corporation which derives in such year a net income of more than $10,000 from any Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, a tax equal to the sum of the following:

(1) Such a portion of a tax computed at the rates specified in subdivision (a) of section 301 of the Revenue Act of 1918, as the part of the net income attributable to such Government contract or contracts bears to the entire net income. In computing such tax the excess-profits credit and the war-profits credit which would be applicable to such calendar year under the Revenue Act of 1918 if it had been continued in force, shall be used;

(2) Such a portion of a tax computed at the rates specified in subdivision (a) of this section as the part of the net income not attributable to such Government contract or contracts bears to the entire net income.

For the purpose of determining the part of the net income attributable to such Government contract or contracts, the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to gross income derived from such Government contract or contracts and from other sources, respectively, shall be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) In any case where the full amount of the excess-profits credit is not allowed under the first bracket of subdivision (a), by reason of the fact that such credit is in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital, the part not so allowed shall be deducted from the amount in the second bracket.

For Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 90.

SEC. 302. [Tax limitations.] That the tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301 shall in no case be more than 20 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of $3,000 and not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of $20,000; and the limitations imposed by section 302 of the Revenue Act of 1918 (upon taxes computed under subdivision (c) of section 301 of that Act) are hereby made applicable to taxes computed under subdivision (b) of section 301 of this Act. Nothing in this section shall be construed in such manner as to increase the tax imposed by section 301 of this Act.

SEC. 303. [Net income derived from different sources — computation.] That if part of the net income of a corporation is derived (1) from a trade or business (or a branch of a trade or business) in which the employment of capital is necessary, and (2) a part (constituting not less than 30 per centum of its total net income) is derived from a separate trade or business (or a distinctly separate branch of the trade or business) which if constituting the sole trade or business would bring it within the class of "personal service corporations," then (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) the tax upon the first part of such net income shall be separately computed (allowing in such computation only the same proportionate part of the credits authorized in section 312), and the tax upon the second part shall be the same percentage thereof as the tax so computed upon the first part is of such first part: Provided, That the tax upon such second part shall in no case be less than 20 per centum thereof, unless the tax upon the entire net income, if computed without benefit of this section, would constitute less than 20 per centum of such entire net income, in which event the tax shall be determined upon the entire net income, without reference to this section, as other taxes are determined under this title. The total tax computed under this section shall be subject to the limitations provided in section 302.

SEC. 304. [Corporations when exempt from taxation under this title.]

(a) That the corporations enumerated in section 231 shall, to the extent that they are exempt from income tax under Title II, be exempt from taxation under this title.

(b) Any corporation whose net income for the taxable year is less than $3,000 shall be exempt from taxation under this title.

(c) In the case of any corporation engaged in the mining of gold, the portion of the net income derived from the mining of gold shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this title or any tax imposed by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917, and the tax on the remaining portion of the net income shall be the same proportion of a tax computed without the benefit of this subdivision which such remaining portion of the net income bears to the entire net income.

For Revenue Act of 1917, see 1918 Supp. 270.

SEC. 305. [Period of computation as affecting amount of exemption.] That if a tax is computed under this title for a period of less than twelve months, the specific exemption of $3,000, wherever referred to in this title, shall be reduced to an amount which is the same proportion of $3,000 as the number of months in the period is of twelve months.

PART III.—EXCESS-PROFITS CREDIT.

SEC. 312. [Elements of credit — foreign corporation.] That the excess-profits credit shall consist of a specific exemption of $3,000 plus an amount equal to 8 per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year.

A foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 shall not be entitled to the specific exemption of $3,000.

PART IV.—NET INCOME.

SEC. 320. [Basis of ascertainment.] That for the purpose of this title the net income of a corporation shall be ascertained and returned for the taxable year upon the same basis and in the same manner as provided for income tax purposes in Title II of this Act.

PART V.—INVESTED CAPITAL.

SEC. 325. [Terms in title defined.] (a) That as used in this title —

The term "intangible property" means patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulae, good will, trade-marks, trade-brands, franchises, and other like property;

The term "tangible property" means stocks, bonds, notes, and other evidences of indebtedness, bills and accounts receivable, leaseholds, and other property other than intangible property;

The term "borrowed capital" means money or other property borrowed, whether represented by bonds, notes, open accounts, or otherwise;

The term "inadmissible assets" means stocks, bonds, and other obligations (other than obligations of the United States), the dividends or interest from which is not included in computing net income, but where the income derived from such assets consists in part of gain or profit derived from the sale or other disposition thereof, or where all or part of the interest derived from such assets is in effect included in the net income because of the limitation on the deduction of interest under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of section 234, a corresponding part of the capital invested in such assets shall not be deemed to be inadmissible assets;

The term "admissible assets" means all assets other than inadmissible assets, valued in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (a) of section 326 and section 331.

(b) For the purposes of this title the par value of stock or shares shall, in the case of stock or shares issued at a nominal value or having no par value, be deemed to be the fair market value as of the date or dates of issue of such stock or shares.

SEC. 326. [Invested capital—meaning and scope of term.] (a) That as used in this title the term "invested capital" for any year means (except as provided in subdivision (b) and (c) of this section):

(1) Actual cash bona fide paid in for stock or shares;

(2) Actual cash value of tangible property, other than cash, bona fide paid in for stock or shares, at the time of such payment, but in no case to exceed the par value of the original stock or shares specifically issued therefor, unless the actual cash value of such tangible property at the time paid in is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to have been clearly and substantially in excess of such par value, in which case such excess shall be treated as paid-in surplus: Provided, That the Commissioner shall keep a record of all cases in which tangible property is included in invested capital at a value in excess of the stock or shares issued therefor, containing the name and address of each taxpayer, the business in which engaged, the amount of invested capital and net income shown by the return, the value of the tangible property at the time paid in, the par value of the stock or shares specifically issued therefor, and the amount included under this paragraph as paid-in surplus. The Commissioner shall furnish a copy of such record and other detailed information with respect to such cases when required by resolution of either House of Congress, without regard to the restrictions contained in section 257;

(3) Paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits; not including surplus and undivided profits earned during the year;

(4) Intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares prior to March 3, 1917, in an amount not exceeding (a) the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, (b) the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or (c) in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding on March 3, 1917, whichever is lowest;

(5) Intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares on or after March 3, 1917, in an amount not exceeding (a) the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, (b) the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or (c) in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year, whichever is lowest: Provided, That in no case shall the total amount included under paragraphs (4) and (5) exceed in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year; but

(b) As used in this title the term "invested capital" does not include borrowed capital.

(c) There shall be deducted from invested capital as above defined a percentage thereof equal to the percentage which the amount of inadmissible assets is of the amount of admissible and inadmissible assets held during the taxable year.

(d) The invested capital for any period shall be the average invested capital for such period, but in the case of a corporation making a return for a fractional part of a year, it shall be the same fractional part of such average invested capital.

SEC. 327. [Enumeration of cases specially considered for purposes of taxation.] That in the following cases the tax shall be determined as provided in section 328:

(a) Where the Commissioner is unable to determine the invested capital as provided in section 326;

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262;

(c) Where a mixed aggregate of tangible property and intangible property has been paid in for stock or for stock and bonds and the Commissioner is unable satisfactorily to determine the respective values of the several classes of property at the time of payment, or to distinguish the classes of property paid in for stock and for bonds, respectively;

(d) Where upon application by the corporation the Commissioner finds and so declares of record that the tax if determined without benefit of this section would, owing to abnormal conditions affecting the capital or income of the corporation, work upon the corporation an exceptional hardship evidenced by gross disproportion between the tax computed without benefit of this section and the tax computed by reference to the representative corporations specified in section 328. This subdivision shall not apply to any case (1) in which the tax (computed without benefit of this section) is high merely because the corporation earned within the taxable year a high rate of profit upon a normal invested capital, nor (2) in which 50 per centum or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable year (computed under section 233 of Title II) consists of gains, profits, commissions, or other income, derived on a cost-plus basis from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

SEC. 328. [Determination of tax of specially considered cases.] (a) That in the cases specified in section 327 the tax shall be the amount which bears the same ratio to the net income of the taxpayer (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for the taxable year, as the average tax of representative corporations engaged in a like or similar trade or business, bears to their average net income (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for such year. In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the tax shall be computed without deducting the specific exemption of $3,000 either for the taxpayer or the representative corporations.

In computing the tax under this section the Commissioner shall compare the taxpayer only with representative corporations whose invested capital can be satisfactorily determined under section 326 and which are, as nearly as may be, similarly circumstanced with respect to gross income, net income, profits per unit of business transacted and capital employed, the amount and rate of war profits or excess profits, and all other relevant facts and circumstances.

(b) For the purposes of subdivision (a) the ratios between the average tax and the average net income of representative corporations shall be determined by the Commissioner in accordance with regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) The Commissioner shall keep a record of all cases in which the tax is determined in the manner prescribed in subdivision (a), containing the name and address of each taxpayer, the business in which engaged, the amount of invested capital and net income shown by the return, and the amount of invested capital as determined under such subdivision. The Commissioner shall furnish a copy of such record and other detailed information with respect to such cases when required by resolution of either House of Congress, without regard to the restrictions contained in section 257.

PART VI.—REORGANIZATIONS.

SEC. 331. [Reorganizations, etc., after March 3, 1917 — determination of invested capital — transferred assets.] That in the case of the reorganization, consolidation, or change of ownership of a trade or business, or change of ownership of property, after March 3, 1917, if an interest or control in such trade or business or property of 50 per centum or more remains in the same persons, or any of them, then no asset transferred or received from the previous owner shall, for the purpose of determining invested capital, be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed under this title in computing the invested capital of such previous owner if such asset had not been so transferred or received: Provided, That if such previous owner was not a corporation, then the value of any asset so transferred or received shall be taken at its cost of acquisition (at the date when acquired by such previous owner) with proper allowance for depreciation, impairment, betterment or development, but no addition to the original cost shall be made for any charge or expenditure deducted as expense or otherwise on or after March 1, 1913, in computing the net income of such previous owner for purposes of taxation.

PART VII.— MISCELLANEOUS.

SEC. 335. [Period covered by return of corporation as affecting amount of tax — refund of tax.] (a) That if a corporation (other than a personal service corporation) makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, the war-profits and excess-profits tax for the taxable year 1921 shall be the sum of: (1) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under the Revenue Act of 1918, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1920 is of the entire period, and (2) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period. Any amount heretofore or hereafter paid on account of the tax imposed for such taxable year by the Revenue Act of 1918 shall be credited towards the payment of the tax as above computed, and if the amount so paid exceeds the amount of such tax, the excess shall be credited or refunded to the corporation in accordance with the provisions of section 252 of this Act.

(b) If a corporation (other than a personal service corporation) makes a return for a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, the war-profits and excess-profits tax for the portion of the year falling within the calendar year 1921 shall be an amount equivalent to the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period.

For Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 90.

SEC. 336. [Corporations required to make return under title — laws affecting returns and payment of taxes.] That every corporation, not exempt under section 304, shall make a return for the purposes of this title. Such returns shall be made, and the taxes imposed by this title shall be paid, at the same times and places, in the same manner, and subject to the same conditions, as is provided in the case of returns and payment of income tax by corporations for the purposes of Title II, and all the provisions of that title not inapplicable, including penalties, are hereby made applicable to the taxes imposed by this title.

SEC. 337. [Sales of mines, oil or gas wells — amount of tax.] That in the case of a bona fide sale of mines, oil or gas wells, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration and discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the tax imposed by this title attributable to such sale shall not exceed 20 per centum of the selling price of such property or interest.

SEC. 338. Effective date of title. That this title shall take effect as of January 1, 1921.

TITLE IV.— ESTATE TAX.

SEC. 400. [Terms defined — “ executor ” — “ net estate ” — “ month ” — “ collector.”] That when used in this title —

The term “ executor ” means the executor or administrator of the decedent, or, if there is no executor or administrator, any person in actual or constructive possession of any property of the decedent;

The term "net estate" means the net estate as determined under the provisions of section 403;

The term "month" means calendar month; and

The term "collector" means the collector of internal revenue of the district in which was the domicile of the decedent at the time of his death, or, if there was no such domicile in the United States, then the collector of the district in which is situated the part of the gross estate of the decedent in the United States, or, if such part of the gross estate is situated in more than one district, then the collector of internal revenue of such district as may be designated by the Commissioner.

SEC. 401. [Imposition of tax—amount—persons dying in military or naval services.] That, in lieu of the tax imposed by Title IV of the Revenue Act of 1918, a tax equal to the sum of the following percentages of the value of the net estate (determined as provided in section 403) is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the net estate of every decedent dying after the passage of this Act, whether a resident or nonresident of the United States:

1 per centum of the amount of the net estate not in excess of $50,000;

2 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

3 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $250,000;

4 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $250,000 and does not exceed $450,000;

6 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $450,000 and does not exceed $750,000;

8 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $750,000 and does not exceed $1,000,000;

10 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $1,000,000 and does not exceed $1,500,000;

12 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $1,500,000 and does not exceed $2,000,000;

14 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $2,000,000 and does not exceed $3,000,000;

16 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $3,000,000 and does not exceed $4,000,000;

18 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $4,000,000 and does not exceed $5,000,000;

22 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $8,000,000 and does not exceed $10,000,000; and 25 per centum of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $10,000,000.

The taxes imposed by this title or by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1916 (as amended by the Act entitled "An Act to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1917) or by Title IX of the Revenue Act of 1917, or by Title IV of the Revenue Act of 1918, shall not apply to the transfer of the net estate of any decedent who has died or may die from injuries received or disease contracted in line of duty while serving in the military or naval forces of the United States in the war against the German Government, or to the transfer of the net estate of any citizen of the United States who has died or may die from injuries received or disease contracted in line of duty while serving in the military or naval forces of any country while associated with the United States in the prosecution of such war, or prior to the entrance therein of the United States, and any tax collected upon such transfer shall be refunded to the estate of such decedent.

For different revenue Acts mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. 270; 1919 Supp. 90.

SEC. 402. [Value of gross estate—determination.] That the value of the gross estate of the decedent shall be determined by including the value at the time of his death of all property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, wherever situated —

(a) To the extent of the interest therein of the decedent at the time of his death which after his death is subject to the payment of the charges against his estate and the expenses of its administration and is subject to distribution as part of his estate;

(b) To the extent of any interest therein of the surviving spouse, existing at the time of the decedent's death as dower, curtesy, or by virtue of a statute creating an estate in lieu of dower or curtesy;

(c) To the extent of any interest therein of which the decedent has at any time made a transfer, or with respect to which he has at any time created a trust, in contemplation of or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after his death (whether such transfer or trust is made or created before or after the passage of this Act), except in case of a bona fide sale for a fair consideration in money or money's worth. Any transfer of a material part of his property in the nature of a final disposition or distribution thereof, made by the decedent within two years prior to his death without such a consideration, shall, unless shown to the contrary, be deemed to have been made in contemplation of death within the meaning of this title;

(d) To the extent of the interest therein held jointly or as tenants in the entirety by the decedent and any other person, or deposited in banks or other institutions in their joint names and payable to either or the survivor, except such part thereof as may be shown to have originally belonged to such other person and never to have been received or acquired by the latter from the decedent for less than a fair consideration in money or money's worth: Provided, That where such property or any part thereof, or part of the consideration with which such property was acquired, is shown to have been at any time acquired by such other person from the decedent for less than a fair consideration in money or money's worth, there shall be excepted only such part of the value of such property as is proportionate to the consideration furnished by such other person: Provided further, That where any property has been acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance, as a tenancy in the entirety by the decedent and spouse, or where so acquired by the decedent and any other person as joint tenants and their interests are not otherwise specified or fixed by law, then to the extent of one-half of the value thereof;

(e) To the extent of any property passing under a general power of appointment exercised by the decedent (1) by will, or (2) by deed executed in contemplation of, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after, his death, except in case of a bona fide sale for a fair consideration in money or money's worth; and

(f) To the extent of the amount receivable by the executor as insurance under policies taken out by the decedent upon his own life; and to the extent of the excess over $40,000 of the amount receivable by all other beneficiaries as insurance under policies taken out by the decedent upon his own life.

SEC. 403. [Value of net estate—determination.] That for the purpose of the tax the value of the net estate shall be determined—

(a) In the case of a resident, by deducting from the value of the gross estate—

(1) Such amounts for funeral expenses, administration expenses, claims against the estate, unpaid mortgages upon, or any indebtedness in respect to, property (except, in the case of a resident decedent, where such property is not situated in the United States), losses incurred during the settlement of the estate arising from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft, when such losses are not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, and such amounts reasonably required and actually expended for the support during the settlement of the estate of those dependent upon the decedent, as are allowed by the laws of the jurisdiction, whether within or without the United States, under which the estate is being administered, but not including any income taxes upon income received after the death of the decedent, or any estate, succession, legacy or inheritance taxes;

(2) An amount equal to the value of any property forming a part of the gross estate situated in the United States of any person who died within five years prior to the death of the decedent where such property can be identified as having been received by the decedent from such prior decedent by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance, or which can be identified as having been acquired in exchange for property so received: Provided, That this deduction shall be allowed only where an estate tax under this or any prior Act of Congress was paid by or on behalf of the estate of such prior decedent, and only in the amount of the value placed by the Commissioner on such property in determining the value of the gross estate of such prior decedent, and only to the extent that the value of such property is included in the decedent's gross estate and not deducted under paragraphs (1) or (3) of subdivision (a) of this section. This deduction shall be made in case of the estates of all decedents who have died since September 8, 1916;

(3) The amount of all bequests, legacies, devises, or transfers, except bona fide sales for a fair consideration in money or money's worth, in contemplation of or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after the decedent's death, to or for the use of the United States, any State, Territory, any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, for exclusively public purposes, or to or for the use of any corporation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, including the encouragement of art and the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, or to a trustee or trustees exclusively for such religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes. This deduction shall be made in case of the estates of all decedents who have died since December 31, 1917; and

(4) An exemption of $50,000;

(b) In the case of a nonresident, by deducting from the value of that part of his gross estate which at the time of his death is situated in the United States —

(1) That proportion of the deductions specified in paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of this section which the value of such part bears to the value of his entire gross estate, wherever situated, but in no case shall the amount so deducted exceed 10 per centum of the value of that part of his gross estate which at the time of his death is situated in the United States;

(2) An amount equal to the value of any property forming a part of the gross estate situated in the United States of any person who died within five years prior to the death of the decedent where such property can be identified as having been received by the decedent from such prior decedent by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance, or which can be identified as having been acquired in exchange for property so received: Provided, That this deduction shall be allowed only where an estate tax under this or any prior Act of Congress was paid by or on behalf of the estate of such prior decedent, and only in the amount of the value placed by the Commissioner on such property in determining the value of the gross estate of such prior decedent, and only to the extent that the value of such property is included in that part of the decedent's gross estate which at the time of his death is situated in the United States and not deducted under paragraphs (1) or (3) of subdivision (b) of this section. This deduction shall be made in case of the estates of all decedents who have died since September 8, 1916; and

(3) The amount of all bequests, legacies, devises, or transfers, except bona fide sales for a fair consideration, in money, or money's worth, in contemplation of or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after the decedent's death, to or for the use of the United States, any State, Territory, any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, for exclusively public purposes, or to or for the use of any domestic corporation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, including the encouragement of art and the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, or to a trustee or trustees exclusively for such religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes within the United States. This deduction shall be made in case of the estates of all decedents who have died since December 31, 1917.

No deduction shall be allowed in the case of a nonresident unless the executor includes in the return required to be filed under section 404 the value at the time of his death of that part of the gross estate of the nonresident not situated in the United States.

For the purpose of this title stock in a domestic corporation owned and held by a nonresident decedent shall be deemed property within the United States, and any property of which the decedent has made a transfer or with respect to which he has created a trust, within the meaning of subdivision (c) of section 402, shall be deemed to be situated in the United States, if so situated either at the time of the transfer or the creation of the trust, or at the time of the decedent's death.

The amount receivable as insurance upon the life of a nonresident decedent, and any moneys deposited with any person carrying on the banking business, by or for a nonresident decedent who was not engaged in business in the United States at the time of his death, shall not, for the purpose of this title, be deemed property within the United States.

Missionaries duly commissioned and serving under boards of foreign missions of the various religious denominations in the United States, dying while in the foreign missionary service of such boards, shall not, by reason merely of their intention to permanently remain in such foreign service, be deemed nonresidents of the United States, but shall be presumed to be residents of the State, the District of Columbia, or the Territories of Alaska or Hawaii wherein they respectively resided at the time of their commission and their departure for such foreign service.

In the case of any estate in respect to which the tax has been paid, if necessary to allow the benefit of the deduction under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subdivision (a) or (b) the tax shall be redetermined and any excess of tax paid shall be refunded to the executor.

SEC. 404. [Duty of executor — notice — return — assessment of tax.] That the executor, within two months after the decedent's death, or within a like period after qualifying as such, shall give written notice thereof to the collector. The executor shall also, at such times and in such manner as may be required by regulations made pursuant to law, file with the collector a return under oath in duplicate, setting forth (a) the value of the gross estate of the decedent at the time of his death, or, in case of a nonresident, of that part of his gross estate situated in the United States; (b) the deductions allowed under section 403; (c) the value of the net estate of the decedent as defined in section 403; and (d) the tax paid or payable thereon; or such part of such information as may at the time be ascertainable and such supplemental data as may be necessary to establish the correct tax.

Return shall be made in all cases where the gross estate at the death of the decedent exceeds $50,000, and in the case of the estate of every nonresident any part of whose gross estate is situated in the United States. If the executor is unable to make a complete return as to any part of the gross estate of the decedent, he shall include in his return a description of such part and the name of every person holding a legal or beneficial interest therein, and upon notice from the collector such person shall in like manner make a return as to such part of the gross estate. The Commissioner shall make all assessments of the tax under the authority of existing administrative special and general provisions of law relating to the assessment and collection of taxes.

SEC. 405. [Return when required to be made by collector.] That if no administration is granted upon the estate of a decedent, or if no return is filed as provided in section 404, or if a return contains a false or incorrect statement of a material fact, the collector or deputy collector shall make a return and the Commissioner shall assess the tax thereon.

SEC. 406. [Payment of tax — time — interest.] That the tax shall be due and payable one year after the decedent's death; but in any case where the Commissioner finds that payment of the tax within such period would impose undue hardship upon the estate, he may grant an extension or extensions of time for payment not to exceed three years from the due date.

The executor shall pay the tax to the collector or deputy collector, and to such portion of the tax, not paid within one year and six months after the decedent's death, interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the expiration of one year after such death shall be added as part of the tax irrespective of any extension or extensions of time that may have been granted for the payment of the tax, or any portion thereof.

SEC 407. [Payment of tax — to whom made — amount undetermined.] That where the amount of tax shown upon a return made in good faith has been fully paid, or time for payment has been extended, as provided in section 406, beyond one year and six months after the decedent's death, and an additional amount of tax is, after the expiration of such period of one year and six months, found to be due, then such additional amount shall be paid upon notice and demand by the collector, and if it remains unpaid for one month after such notice and demand there shall be added as part of the tax interest on such additional amount at the rate of 10 per centum per annum from the expiration of such period until paid, and such additional tax and interest shall, until paid, be and remain a lien upon the entire gross estate.

The collector shall grant to the person paying the tax duplicate receipts, either of which shall be sufficient evidence of such payment, and shall entitle the executor to be credited and allowed the amount thereof by any court having jurisdiction to audit or settle his accounts.

If the executor files a complete return and makes written application to the Commissioner for determination of the amount of the tax and discharge from personal liability therefor, the Commissioner, as soon as possible and in any event within one year after receipt of such application, shall notify the executor of the amount of the tax, and upon payment thereof the executor shall be discharged from personal liability for any additional tax thereafter found to be due, and shall be entitled to receive a receipt or writing showing such discharge: Provided, however, That such discharge shall not operate to release the gross estate from the lien of any additional tax that may thereafter be found to be due while the title to such gross estate remains in the heirs, devisees, or distributees thereof; but no part of such gross estate shall be subject to such lien or to any claim or demand for any such tax if the title thereto has passed to a bona fide purchaser for value.

SEC. 408. [Unpaid taxes — collection — satisfaction of tax out of distributed portion of estate — proceeds of insurance policies.] That if the tax herein imposed is not paid on or before the due date thereof the collector shall, upon instruction from the Commissioner, proceed to collect the tax under the provisions of general law, or commence appropriate proceedings in any court of the United States, in the name of the United States, to subject the property of the decedent to be sold under the judgment or decree of the court. From the proceeds of such sale the amount of the tax, together with the costs and expenses of every description to be allowed by the court, shall be first paid, and the balance shall be deposited according to the order of the court, to be paid under its direction to the person entitled thereto.

If the tax or any part thereof is paid by, or collected out of that part of the estate passing to or in the possession of, any person other than the executor in his capacity as such, such person shall be entitled to reimbursement out of any part of the estate still undistributed or by a just and equitable contribution by the persons whose interest in the estate of the decedent would have been reduced if the tax had been paid before the distribution of the estate or whose interest is subject to equal or prior liability for the payment of taxes, debts, or other charges against the estate, it being the purpose and intent of this title that so far as is practicable and unless otherwise directed by the will of the decedent the tax shall be paid out of the estate before its distribution. If any part of the gross estate consists of proceeds of policies of insurance upon the life of the decedent receivable by a beneficiary other than the executor, the executor shall be entitled to recover from such beneficiary such portion of the total tax paid as the proceeds, in excess of $40,000, of such policies bear to the net estate. If there is more than one such beneficiary the executor shall be entitled to recover from such beneficiaries in the same ratio.

SEC. 409. [Unpaid tax as lien — transfers of property in anticipation of death — innocent purchasers for value.] That unless the tax is sooner paid in full, it shall be a lien for ten years upon the gross estate of the decedent, except that such part of the gross estate as is used for the payment of charges against the estate and expenses of its administration, allowed by any court having jurisdiction thereof, shall be divested of such lien. If the Commissioner is satisfied that the tax liability of an estate has been fully discharged or provided for, he may, under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, issue his certificate, releasing any or all property of such estate from the lien herein imposed.

If (a) the decedent makes a transfer of, or creates a trust with respect to, any property in contemplation of or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after his death (except in the case of a bona fide sale for a fair consideration in money or money's worth) or (b) if insurance passes under a contract executed by the decedent in favor of a specific beneficiary, and if in either case the tax in respect thereto is not paid when due, then the transferee, trustee, or beneficiary shall be personally liable for such tax, and such property, to the extent of the decedent's interest therein at the time of such transfer, or to the extent of such beneficiary's interest under such contract of insurance, shall be subject to a like lien equal to the amount of such tax. Any part of such property sold by such transferee or trustee to a bona fide purchaser for a fair consideration in money or money's worth shall be divested of the lien and a like lien shall then attach to all the property of such transferee or trustee, except any part sold to a bona fide purchaser for a fair consideration in money or money's worth.

SEC. 410. [Violations of Act — penalties.] That whoever knowingly makes any false statement in any notice or return required to be filed under this title shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding $5,000, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

Whoever fails to comply with any duty imposed upon him by section 404, or, having in his possession or control any record, file, or paper, containing or supposed to contain any information concerning the estate of the decedent, or, having in his possession or control any property comprised in the gross estate of the decedent, fails to exhibit the same upon request to the Commissioner or any collector or law officer of the United States, or his duly authorized deputy or agent, who desires to examine the same in the performance of his duties under this title, shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding $500, to be recovered, with costs of suit, in a civil action in the name of the United States.

SEC. 411. [Property situated in China — collection of tax — repeal of proviso in Act of June 4, 1920.] (a) That the term "resident" as used in this title includes a citizen of the United States with respect to whose property any probate or administration proceedings are had in the United States Court for China. Where no part of the gross estate of such decedent is situated in the United States at the time of his death, the total amount of tax due under this title shall be paid to or collected by the clerk of such court, but where any part of the gross estate of such decedent is situated in the United States at the time of his death, the tax due under this title shall be paid to or collected by the collector of the district in which is situated the part of the gross estate in the United States, or, if such part is situated in more than one district, then the collector of such district as may be designated by the Commissioner.

(b) For the purpose of this section the clerk of the United States Court for China shall be a collector for the territorial jurisdiction of such court, and taxes shall be collected by and paid to him in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as the taxes collected by and paid to a collector in the United States.

(c) The proviso in the Act entitled "An Act making appropriation for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921," approved June 4, 1920, which reads as follows: "Provided, That in probate and administration proceedings there shall be collected by said clerk, before entering the order of final distribution, to be paid into the Treasury of the United States, the same inheritance taxes from time to time collected under the laws enacted by the Congress of the United States from the estates of decedents residing within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States," is hereby repealed.

For proviso in Act of June 4, 1920, here repealed, see 1920 Supp. 133.

TITLE V.—TAX ON TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE MESSAGES.

SEC. 500. [Amount of tax.] That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1918 —

(a) In the case of each telegraph, telephone, cable, or radio, dispatch, message, or conversation, which originates on or after such date within the United States, and for the transmission of which the charge is more than 14 cents and not more than 50 cents, a tax of 5 cents; and if the charge is more than 50 cents, a tax of 10 cents: Provided, That only one payment of such tax shall be required, notwithstanding the lines or stations of one or more persons are used for the transmission of such dispatch, message, or conversation; and

(b) A tax equivalent to 10 per centum of the amount paid after such date to any telegraph or telephone company for any leased wire or talking circuit

special service furnished after such date. This subdivision shall not apply to the amount paid for so much of such service as is utilized (1) in the collection and dissemination of news through the public press, or (2) in the conduct, by a common carrier or telegraph or telephone company, of its business as such;

(c) No tax shall be imposed under this section upon any payment received for services rendered to the United States or to any State or Territory or the District of Columbia. The right to exemption under this subdivision shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation prescribe.

(d) Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, refund shall be made of the proportionate part of the tax collected under subdivision (c) or (d) of section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1918 on tickets or mileage books purchased and only partially used before January 1, 1922.

For sec. 500 of Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 136.

SEC. 501. [Tax by whom paid.] That the taxes imposed by section 500 shall be paid by the person paying for the services or facilities rendered.

SEC. 502. [Collection of tax — refunds — returns — penalty for nonpayment.] (a) That each person receiving any payments referred to in section 500 shall collect the amount of the tax, if any, imposed by such section from the person making such payments, and shall make monthly returns under oath, in duplicate, and pay the taxes so collected to the collector of the district in which the principal office or place of business is located.

(b) Any person making a refund of any payment upon which tax is collected under this section may repay therewith the amount of the tax collected on such payment; and the amount so repaid may be credited against amounts included in any subsequent monthly return.

(c) The returns required under this section shall contain such information, and be made at such times and in such manner, as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation prescribe.

(d) The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time so fixed for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per centum, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum for each full month, from the time when the tax became due.

TITLE VI.—TAX ON BEVERAGES AND CONSTITUENT PARTS THEREOF.

SEC. 600. [Distilled spirits — amount of tax — when due — sec. 600 (a) of Revenue Act of 1918 amended.] That subdivision (a) of section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1918 is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting a colon and the following: "Provided, That on all distilled spirits on which tax is paid at the nonbeverage rate of $2.20 per proof gallon and which are diverted to beverage purposes or for use in the manufacture or production of any article used or intended for use as a beverage, there shall be levied and collected an additional tax of $4.20 on each proof gallon, and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such proof gallon, to be paid by the person responsible for such diversion."

For sec. 600 of Revenue Act of 1918 here amended, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 600.

SEC. 601. [Distilled spirits and wines hereafter rectified, etc.—additional tax—floor tax—cordials and liquors—blends—rectifiers—sec. 605 of Revenue Act of 1918 amended.] That section 605 of the Revenue Act of 1918 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: “The process of extraction of water from high-proof spirits for the production of absolute alcohol shall not be deemed to be rectification within the meaning of section 3244 of the Revised Statutes, and absolute alcohol shall not be subject to the tax imposed by this section, but the production of such absolute alcohol shall be under such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe.”

SEC. 602. [Soft drinks.] That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 628 and 630 of the Revenue Act of 1918—

For secs. 628 and 630 of the Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 153, 154.

(a) [Cereal drinks.] Upon all beverages derived wholly or in part from cereals or substitutes therefor, containing less than one-half of 1 per centum of alcohol by volume, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax of 2 cents per gallon.

(b) [Fruit juices.] Upon all unfermented fruit juices, in natural or slightly concentrated form, or such fruit juices to which sugar has been added (as distinguished from finished or fountain sirups), intended for consumption as beverages with the addition of water or water and sugar, and upon all imitations of any such fruit juices, and upon all carbonated beverages, commonly known as soft drinks (except those described in subdivision (a), manufactured, compounded, or mixed by the use of concentrate, essence, or extract, instead of a finished or fountain sirup, sold by the manufacturer, producer or importer, a tax of 2 cents per gallon.

(c) [Still drinks.] Upon all still drinks, containing less than one-half of 1 per centum of alcohol by volume, intended for consumption as beverages in the form in which sold (except natural or artificial mineral and table waters and imitations thereof, and pure apple cider), sold by the manufacturer, producer or importer, a tax of 2 cents per gallon.

(d) [Minerals and other table waters.] Upon all natural or artificial mineral waters or table waters, whether carbonated or not, and all imitations thereof, sold by the producer, bottler, or importer thereof, in bottles or other closed containers, at over 12½ cents per gallon, a tax of 2 cents per gallon.

(e) [Fountain sirups.] Upon all finished or fountain sirups of the kinds used in manufacturing, compounding, or mixing drinks commonly known as soft drinks, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax of 9 cents per gallon; except that in the case of any such sirups intended to be used in the manufacture of carbonated beverages sold in bottles or other closed containers the rate shall be 5 cents per gallon. Where any person conducting a soda fountain, ice cream parlor, or other similar place of business manufactures any sirups of the kinds described in this subdivision, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid on each gallon manufactured and used in the preparation of soft drinks a tax of 9 cents per gallon; and where any person manufacturing carbonated beverages manufactures and uses any such sirups in the manufacture of carbonated beverages sold in bottles or other closed containers there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid on each gallon of such sirups a tax of 5 cents per gallon. The taxes imposed by this subdivision shall not apply to finished or fountain sirups sold for use in the manufacture of a beverage subject to tax under subdivision (a) or (c).

(f) [Carbonic acid gas.] Upon all carbonic acid gas sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer to a manufacturer of any carbonated beverages, or to any person conducting a soda fountain, ice cream parlor, or other similar place of business, and upon all carbonic acid gas used by the manufacturer, producer, or importer thereof in the preparation of soft drinks, a tax of 4 cents per pound.

SEC. 603. [Returns — payment of taxes — penalties — registration of persons subject to tax.] (a) That each manufacturer, producer, or importer of any of the articles enumerated in section 602 and each person who sells carbonic acid gas to a manufacturer of carbonated beverages or to a person conducting a soda fountain, ice cream parlor, or other similar place of business, shall make monthly returns under oath in duplicate and pay the tax imposed in respect to the articles enumerated in section 602 to the collector for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such returns shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe. The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time so fixed for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per centum, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum for each full month from the time when the tax became due.

(b) Each person required to pay any tax imposed by section 602 shall procure and keep posted a certificate of registry in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary. Any person who fails to register or keep posted any certificate of registry in accordance with such regulations, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000 for each such offense.

TITLE VII.—TAX ON CIGARS, TOBACCO, AND MANUFACTURES THEREOF.

SEC. 700. (a) [Cigars and cigarettes — amount of tax.] That upon cigars and cigarettes manufactured in or imported into the United States, and hereafter sold by the manufacturer or importer, or removed for consumption or sale, there shall be levied, collected, and paid under the provisions of existing law, in lieu of the internal-revenue taxes now imposed thereon by section 700 of the Revenue Act of 1918, the following taxes, to be paid by the manufacturer or importer thereof —

On cigars of all descriptions made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, and weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, $1.50 per thousand;

On cigars made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, and weighing more than three pounds per thousand, if manufactured or imported to retail at not more than 5 cents each, $4 per thousand;

If manufactured or imported to retail at more than 5 cents each and not more than 8 cents each, $6 per thousand;

If manufactured or imported to retail at more than 8 cents each and not more than 15 cents each, $9 per thousand;

If manufactured or imported to retail at more than 15 cents each and not more than 20 cents each, $12 per thousand;

If manufactured or imported to retail at more than 20 cents each, $15 per thousand;

On cigarettes made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, and weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, $3 per thousand;

Weighing more than three pounds per thousand, $7.20 per thousand.

For sec. 700 of the Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 154.

(b) [Price of cigars, how fixed.] Whenever in this section reference is made to cigars manufactured or imported to retail at not over a certain price each, then in determining the tax to be paid regard shall be had to the ordinary retail price of a single cigar.

(c) [Labels on boxes, etc.] The Commissioner may, by regulation, require the manufacturer or importer to affix to each box, package, or container a conspicuous label indicating the clause of this section under which the cigars therein contained have been tax-paid, which must correspond with the tax-paid stamp on such box or container.

(d) [Cigarettes and small cigars — packing and stamping.] Every manufacturer of cigarettes (including small cigars weighing not more than three pounds per thousand) shall put up all the cigarettes and such small cigars that he manufactures or has manufactured for him, and sells or removes for consumption or sale, in packages or parcels containing five, eight, ten, twelve, fifteen, sixteen, twenty, twenty-four, forty, fifty, eighty, or one hundred cigarettes each, and shall securely affix to each of such packages or parcels a suitable stamp denoting the tax thereon and shall properly cancel the same prior to such sale or removal for consumption or sale under such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe; and all cigarettes imported from a foreign country shall be packed, stamped, and the stamps canceled in a like manner, in addition to the import stamp indicating inspection of the custom-house before they are withdrawn therefrom.

SEC. 701. (a) [Tobacco and snuff — amount of tax.] That upon all tobacco and snuff manufactured in or imported into the United States, and hereafter sold by the manufacturer or importer, or removed for consumption or sale, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in lieu of the internal-revenue taxes now imposed thereon by section 701 of the Revenue Act of 1918, a tax of 18 cents per pound, to be paid by the manufacturer or importer thereof.

For sec. 701 of the Revenue Act of 1918 mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 155.

(b) [Tobacco and snuff, how put up and prepared — R. S. sec. 3362 re-enacted.] Section 3362 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 701 of the Revenue Act of 1918, is re-enacted without change, as follows:

“SEC. 3362. All manufactured tobacco shall be put up and prepared by the manufacturer for sale, or removal for sale or consumption, in packages of the following description and in no other manner:

“All smoking tobacco, snuff, fine-cut chewing tobacco, all cut and granulated tobacco, all shorts, the refuse of fine-cut chewing, which has passed through a riddle of thirty-six meshes to the square inch, and all refuse scraps, clippings, cuttings, and sweepings of tobacco, and all other kinds of tobacco not otherwise provided for, in packages containing one-eighth of an ounce, three-eighths of an ounce, and further packages with a difference between each package and the one next smaller of one-eighth of an ounce up to and including two ounces, and further packages with a difference between each package and the one next smaller of one-fourth of an ounce up to and including four ounces, and packages of five ounces, six ounces, seven ounces, eight ounces, ten ounces, twelve ounces, fourteen ounces, and sixteen ounces: Provided, That snuff may, at the option of the manufacturer, be put up in bladders and in jars containing not exceeding twenty pounds.

"All cavendish, plug, and twist tobacco, in wooden packages not exceeding two hundred pounds net weight.

"And every such wooden package shall have printed or marked thereon the manufacturer's name and place of manufacture, the registered number of the manufactory, and the gross weight, the tare, and the net weight of the tobacco in each package: Provided, That these limitations and descriptions of packages shall not apply to tobacco and snuff transported in bond for exportation and actually exported: And provided further, That perique tobacco, snuff flour, fine-cut shorts, the refuse of fine-cut chewing tobacco, refuse scraps, clippings, cuttings, and sweepings of tobacco, may be sold in bulk as material, and without the payment of tax, by one manufacturer directly to another manufacturer, or for export, under such restrictions, rules, and regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe: And provided further, That wood, metal, paper, or other materials may be used separately or in combination for packing tobacco, snuff, and cigars, under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may establish."

For R. S. sec. 3362, before the amendment made by the Revenue Act of 1918, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 141.

SEC. 703. [Cigarette paper — amount of tax — bond — records — return.] That there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 703 of the Revenue Act of 1918, upon cigarette paper made up into packages, books, sets, or tubes, made up in or imported into the United States and hereafter sold by the manufacturer or importer to any person (other than to a manufacturer of cigarettes for use by him in the manufacture of cigarettes) the following taxes, to be paid by the manufacturer or importer: On each package, book, or set, containing more than twenty-five but not more than fifty papers, $\frac{1}{2}$ cent; containing more than fifty but not more than one hundred papers, 1 cent; containing more than one hundred papers, $\frac{1}{2}$ cent for each fifty papers or fractional part thereof; and upon tubes, 1 cent for each fifty tubes or fractional part thereof.

Every manufacturer of cigarettes purchasing any cigarette paper made up into tubes (a) shall give bond in an amount and with sureties satisfactory to the Commissioner that he will use such tubes in the manufacture of cigarettes or pay thereon a tax equivalent to the tax imposed by this section, and (b) shall keep such records and render under oath such returns as the Commissioner finds necessary to show the disposition of all tubes purchased or imported by such manufacturer of cigarettes.

SEC. 704. [Leaf tobacco — requirements imposed on dealers — R. S. sec. 3360 re-enacted.] That section 3360 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 704 of the Revenue Act of 1918, is re-enacted without change, as follows:

“SEC. 3360. (a) Every dealer in leaf tobacco shall file with the collector of the district in which his business is carried on a statement in duplicate, subscribed under oath, setting forth the place, and, if in a city, the street and number of the street, where his business is to be carried on, and the exact location of each place where leaf tobacco is held by him on storage, and, whenever he adds to or discontinues any of his leaf tobacco storage places, he shall give immediate notice to the collector of the district in which he is registered.

“Every such dealer shall give a bond with surety, satisfactory to, and to be approved by, the collector of the district, in such penal sum as the collector may require, not less than $500; and a new bond may be required in the discretion of the collector, or under instructions of the Commissioner.

“Every such dealer shall be assigned a number by the collector of the district, which number shall appear in every inventory, invoice and report rendered by the dealer, who shall also obtain certificates from the collector of the district setting forth the place where his business is carried on and the places designated by the dealer as the places of storage of his tobacco, which certificates shall be posted conspicuously within the dealer's registered place of business, and within each designated place of storage.

“(b) Every dealer in leaf tobacco shall make and deliver to the collector of the district a true inventory of the quantity of the different kinds of tobacco held or owned, and where stored by him, on the 1st day of January of each year, or at the time of commencing and at the time of concluding business, if before or after the 1st day of January, such inventory to be made under oath and rendered in such form as may be prescribed by the Commissioner.

“Every dealer in leaf tobacco shall render such invoices and keep such records as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner, and shall enter therein, day by day, and upon the same day on which the circumstance, thing or act to be recorded is done or occurs, an accurate account of the number of hogsheads, tierces, cases and bales, and quantity of leaf tobacco contained therein, purchased or received by him, on assignment, consignment, for storage, by transfer or otherwise, and of whom purchased or received, and the number of hogsheads, tierces, cases and bales, and the quantity of leaf tobacco contained therein, sold by him, with the name and residence in each instance of the person to whom sold, and if shipped, to whom shipped, and to what district; such records shall be kept at his place of business at all times and preserved for a period of two years, and the same shall be open at all hours for the inspection of any internal-revenue officer or agent.

“Every dealer in leaf tobacco on or before the tenth day of each month, shall furnish to the collector of the district a true and complete report of all purchases, receipts, sales and shipments of leaf tobacco made by him during the month next preceding, which report shall be verified and rendered in such form as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe.

“(c) Sales or shipments of leaf tobacco by a dealer in leaf tobacco shall be in quantities of not less than a hogshead, tierce, case, or bale, except loose leaf tobacco comprising the breaks on warehouse floors, and except to a duly registered manufacturer of cigars for use in his own manufactory exclusively.

“Dealers in leaf tobacco shall make shipments of leaf tobacco only to other dealers in leaf tobacco, to registered manufacturers of tobacco, snuff, cigars or cigarettes, or for export.

“(d) Upon all leaf tobacco sold, removed or shipped by any dealer in leaf tobacco in violation of the provisions of subdivision (c), or in respect to which no report has been made by such dealer in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (b), there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid a tax equal to the tax then in force upon manufactured tobacco, such tax to be assessed and collected in the same manner as the tax on manufactured tobacco.

“(e) Every dealer in leaf tobacco —

“(1) who neglects or refuses to furnish the statement, to give bond, to keep books, to file inventory or to render the invoices, returns or reports required by the Commissioner, or to notify the collector of the district of additions to his places of storage; or

“(2) who ships or delivers leaf tobacco, except as herein provided; or

“(3) who fraudulently omits to account for tobacco purchased, received, sold, or shipped;
shall be fined not less than $100 or more than $500, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

“(f) For the purposes of this section a farmer or grower of tobacco shall not be regarded as a dealer in leaf tobacco in respect to the leaf tobacco produced by him.”

For R. S. see 3360, before its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1918, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 140.

TITLE VIII.—TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES.

SEC. 800. [Admissions — amount of tax — places affected.] (a) That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 800 of the Revenue Act of 1918 —

(1) A tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place on or after such date, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the person paying for such admission; but where the amount paid for admission is 10 cents or less, no tax shall be imposed;

(2) Upon tickets or cards of admission to theaters, operas, and other places of amusement, sold at news stands, hotels, and places other than the ticket offices of such theaters, operas, or other places of amusement, at not to exceed 50 cents in excess of the sum of the established price therefor at such ticket offices plus the amount of any tax imposed under paragraph (1), a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the amount of such excess; and if sold for more than 50 cents in excess of the sum of such established price plus the amount of any tax imposed under paragraph (1), a tax equivalent to 50 per centum of the whole amount of such excess, such taxes to be returned and paid, in the manner and subject to the penalties and interest provided in section 903, by the person selling such tickets;

(3) A tax equivalent to 50 per centum of the amount for which the proprietors, managers, or employees of any opera house, theater, or other place of amusement sell or dispose of tickets or cards of admission in excess of the regular or established price or charge therefor, such tax to be returned and paid, in the manner and subject to the penalties and interest provided in section 903, by the person selling such tickets;

(4) In the case of persons having the permanent use of boxes or seats in an opera house or any place of amusement or a lease for the use of such box or seat in such opera house or place of amusement (in lieu of the tax imposed by paragraph (1)), a tax equivalent to 10 per centum of the amount for which a similar box or seat is sold for each performance or exhibition at which the box or seat is used or reserved by or for the lessee or holder, such tax to be paid by the lessee or holder; and

(5) A tax of $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any public performance for profit at any roof garden, cabaret, or other similar entertainment, to which the charge for admission is wholly or in part included in the price paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise; the amount paid for such admission to be deemed to be 20 per centum of the amount paid for refreshment, service, and merchandise; such tax to be paid by the person paying for such refreshment, service, or merchandise.

(b) No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to (1) any admissions all the proceeds of which inure (A) exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational, or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, any post of the American Legion or the women's auxiliary units thereof, societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, or societies or organizations conducted for the sole purpose of maintaining symphony orchestras and receiving substantial support from voluntary contributions, or of improving any city, town, village, or other municipality, or of maintaining a cooperative or community center moving-picture theater—if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual; or (B) exclusively to the benefit of persons in the military or naval forces of the United States; or (C) exclusively to the benefit of persons who have served in such forces and are in need; or (2) any admissions to agricultural fairs if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any stockholders or members of the association conducting the same, or admissions to any exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature conducted by such association as part of any such fair,—if the proceeds therefrom are used exclusively for the improvement, maintenance and operation of such agricultural fairs.

(c) The term "admission" as used in this title includes seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations, and the charges made therefor.

(d) The price (exclusive of the tax to be paid by the person paying for admission) at which every admission ticket or card is sold shall be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped, or written on the face or back of that part of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement, together with the name of the vendor if sold other than at the ticket office of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement. Whoever sells an admission ticket or card on which the name of the vendor and price is not so printed, stamped, or written, or at a price in excess of the price so printed, stamped, or written thereon, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $100.

For sec. 800 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 158.

SEC. 801. [Club dues and fees.] That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1918, a tax equivalent to 10 per centum of any amount paid on or after such date, for any period after such date, (a) as dues or membership fees (where the dues or fees of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year) to any social, athletic, or sporting club or organization; or (b) as initiation fees to such a club or organization, if such fees amount to more than $10, or if the dues or membership fees (not including initiation fees) of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year; such taxes to be paid by the person paying such dues or fees: Provided, That there shall be exempted from the provisions of this section all amounts paid as dues or fees to a fraternal society, order, or association, operating under the lodge system. In the case of life memberships a life member shall pay annually, at the time for the payment of dues by active resident annual members, a tax equivalent to the tax upon the amount paid by such a member, but shall pay no tax upon the amount paid for life membership.

For sec. 801 of the Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 160.

SEC. 802. [Collection of tax on admissions, dues and fees.] That every person receiving any payments for such admission, dues, or fees, shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by section 800 or 801 from the person making such payments. Every club or organization having life members, shall collect from such members the amount of the tax imposed by section 801. In all the above cases returns and payments of the amount so collected shall be made at the same time and in the same manner and subject to the same penalties and interest as provided in section 502.

TITLE IX.—EXCISE TAXES.

SEC. 900. [Enumeration of articles taxed—amount of tax.] That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon the following articles sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to the following percentage of the price for which so sold or leased —

- (1) Automobile trucks and automobile wagons (including tires, inner tubes, parts, and accessories therefor, sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof) 3 per centum;
- (2) Other automobiles and motor cycles (including tires, inner tubes, parts, and accessories therefor, sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof), except tractors, 5 per centum;
- (3) Tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for any of the articles enumerated in subdivision (1) or (2), sold to any person other than a manufacturer or producer of any of the articles enumerated in subdivision (1) or (2), 5 per centum;
- (4) Cameras, weighing not more than 100 pounds, and lenses for such cameras, 10 per centum;
- (5) Photographic films and plates (other than moving-picture films), 5 per centum;
- (6) Candy, 3 per centum;

(7) Firearms, shells, and cartridges, except those sold for the use of the United States, any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, 10 per centum;

(8) Hunting and bowie knives, 10 per centum;

(9) Dirk knives, daggers, sword canes, stilettos, and brass or metallic knuckles, 100 per centum;

(10) Cigar or cigarette holders and pipes, composed wholly or in part of meerschaum or amber, humidors, and smoking stands, 10 per centum;

(11) Automatic slot-device vending machines, 5 per centum, and automatic slot-device weighing machines, 10 per centum; if the manufacturer, producer, or importer of any such machine operates it for profit, he shall pay a tax in respect to each such machine put into operation equivalent to 5 per centum of its fair market value in the case of a vending machine, and 10 per centum of its fair market value in the case of a weighing machine;

(12) Liveries and livery boots and hats, 10 per centum;

(13) Hunting and shooting garments and riding habits, 10 per centum;

(14) Yachts and motor boats not designed for trade, fishing, or national defense; and pleasure boats and pleasure canoes if sold for more than $100, 10 per centum.

If any manufacturer, producer, or importer of any of the articles enumerated in this section customarily sells such articles both at wholesale and at retail, the tax in the case of any article sold by him at retail shall be computed on the price for which like articles are sold by him at wholesale.

The taxes imposed by this section shall, in the case of any article in respect to which a corresponding tax is imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, be in lieu of such tax.

SEC. 901. [Articles subject to tax sold or leased at less than fair market value — effect.] That if any person who manufactures, produces or imports any article enumerated in section 900, or leases or licenses for exhibition any positive motion-picture film containing a picture ready for projection, (a) sells, leases, or licenses such article to a corporation affiliated with such person within the meaning of section 240 of this Act, at less than the fair market price obtainable therefor, the tax thereon shall be computed on the basis of the price at which such article is sold, leased or licensed by such affiliated corporation; and (b) if any such person sells, leases, or licenses such article whether through any agreement, arrangement, or understanding, or otherwise, at less than the fair market price obtainable therefor, either (1) in such manner as directly or indirectly to benefit such person or any person directly or indirectly interested in the business of such person, or (2) with intent to cause such benefit, the amount for which such article is sold, leased or licensed shall be taken to be the amount which would have been received from the sale, lease or license of such article if sold, leased or licensed at the fair market price.

SEC. 902. [Sculpture and other art articles.] That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon sculpture, paintings, statuary, art porcelains, and bronzes, sold by any person other than the artist, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the price for which so sold. This section shall not apply to the sale of any such article (1) to an educational institution or public art museum, or (2) by any dealer in such articles to another dealer in such articles for resale.

SEC. 903. [Returns — payment of tax — penalty for nonpayment.] That every person liable for any tax imposed by section 900, 902, or 904, shall make monthly returns under oath in duplicate and pay the taxes imposed by such sections to the collector for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such returns shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe.

The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time so fixed for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per centum, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum for each full month, from the time when the tax became due.

SEC. 904. [Luxury taxes — articles affected.] That from and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 904 of the Revenue Act of 1918, upon the following articles sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of so much of the price for which so sold or leased as is in excess of the price hereinafter specified as to each such article —

(1) Carpets and rugs, including fiber, on the amount in excess of $4.50 per square yard in the case of carpets and $6 per square yard in the case of rugs;

(2) Trunks, on the amount in excess of $35 each;

(3) Valises, traveling bags, suit cases, hat boxes used by travelers, and fitted toilet cases, on the amount in excess of $25 each;

(4) Purses, pocketbooks, shopping and hand bags, on the amount in excess of $5 each;

(5) Portable lighting fixtures, including lamps of all kinds and lamp shades, on the amount in excess of $10 each;

(6) Fans, on the amount in excess of $1 each.

SEC. 905. [Tax on jewelry, etc.— watches and clocks — glasses — returns — payment of tax.] (a) That on and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid (in lieu of the tax imposed by section 905 of the Revenue Act of 1918) upon all articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry, whether real or imitation; pearls, precious and semiprecious stones, and imitations thereof; articles made of, or ornamented, mounted or fitted with, precious metals or imitations thereof or ivory (not including surgical instruments, eyeglasses, and spectacles); watches; clocks; opera glasses; lorgnettes; marine glasses; field glasses; and binoculars; upon any of the above when sold by or for a dealer or his estate for consumption or use, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the price for which so sold.

(b) Every person selling any of the articles enumerated in this section shall make returns under oath in duplicate (monthly or quarterly as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe) and pay the taxes imposed in respect to such articles by this section to the collector for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such returns shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe.

(c) The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time so fixed for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per centum, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum for each full month, from the time when the tax became due.

For sec. 905 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 163.

SEC. 906. [Executory contracts of sales made prior to Aug. 15, 1921 — payment of taxes — refunds.] (a) That if (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with a dealer for the sale or lease, after the tax takes effect, of any article in respect to which a tax is imposed by section 900 or 904, or by this subdivision, and in respect to which no corresponding tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (2) such contract does not permit the adding, to the amount to be paid thereunder, of the whole of the tax imposed by section 900 or 904 of this Act or by this subdivision; then the vendee or lessee shall, in lieu of the vendor or lessor, pay so much of the tax imposed by section 900 or 904 of this Act or by this subdivision as is not so permitted to be added to the contract price. If a contract of the character above described was made with any person other than a dealer, no tax shall be collected under this Act.

(b) If (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with any other person for the sale or lease, after the tax takes effect, of any article in respect to which a tax is imposed by section 900 of this Act, and in respect to which a corresponding but greater tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, (2) the contract price includes the amount of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (3) such contract does not permit the deduction, from the amount to be paid thereunder, of the whole of the difference between the corresponding tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and the tax imposed by section 900 of this Act; then the vendor or lessor shall refund to the vendee or lessee so much of the amount of such difference as is not so permitted to be deducted from the contract price.

(c) If (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with any other person for the sale or lease, after December 31, 1921, of any article in respect to which a tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and in respect to which no corresponding tax is imposed by section 900 of this Act, (2) the contract price includes the amount of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (3) such contract does not permit deduction, from the amount to be paid thereunder, of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918; then the vendor or lessor shall refund to the vendee or lessee so much of the amount of such tax as is not so permitted to be deducted from the contract price.

(d) The taxes payable by the vendee or lessee under subdivision (a), shall be paid to the vendor or lessor at the time the sale or lease is consummated, and collected, returned, and paid to the United States by such vendor or lessor in the same manner and subject to the same penalties and interest as provided by section 903.

(e) Any refund by the vendor or lessor under subdivision (b) or (c) shall be made at the time the sale or lease is consummated. Upon the failure of the vendor or lessor so to refund, he shall be liable to the vendee or lessee for damages in the amount of three times the amount of such refund, and the court shall include in any judgment in favor of the vendee or lessee in any suit for the recovery of such damages, costs of the suit and a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court.

(f) A vendee who purchases any article with intent to use it in the manufacture or production of another article intended for sale shall be included in the term "dealer," as used in this section.

For sec. 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 163.

TITLE X.—SPECIAL TAXES.

SEC. 1000. Capital stock tax. (a) That on and after July 1, 1922, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918 —

(1) Every domestic corporation shall pay annually a special excise tax with respect to carrying on or doing business, equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of so much of the fair average value of its capital stock for the preceding year ending June 30 as is in excess of $5,000. In estimating the value of capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included;

(2) Every foreign corporation shall pay annually a special excise tax with respect to carrying on or doing business in the United States, equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States during the preceding year ending June 30.

(b) The taxes imposed by this section shall not apply in any year to any corporation which was not engaged in business (or, in the case of a foreign corporation, not engaged in business in the United States) during the preceding year ending June 30, nor to any corporation enumerated in section 231, nor to any insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 243 or 246.

(c) Section 257 shall apply to all returns filed with the Commissioner for purposes of the tax imposed by this section.

For sec. 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 165.

MISCELLANEOUS OCCUPATIONAL TAXES.

SEC. 1001. (a) [Occupations enumerated.] That on and after July 1, 1922, there shall be levied, collected, and paid annually the following special taxes —

(1) Brokers shall pay $50. Every person whose business it is to negotiate purchases or sales of stocks, bonds, exchange, bullion, coined money, bank notes, promissory notes, other securities, produce or merchandise, for others, shall be regarded as a broker. If a broker is a member of a stock exchange, or if he is a member of any produce exchange, board of trade, or similar organization, where produce or merchandise is sold, he shall pay an additional amount as follows: If the average value, during the preceding year ending June 30, of a seat or membership in such exchange or organization was $2,000 or more but not more than $5,000, $100; if such value was more than $5,000, $150.

(2) Pawnbrokers shall pay $100. Every person whose business or occupation it is to take or receive, by way of pledge, pawn, or exchange, any goods, wares, or merchandise, or any kind of personal property whatever, as security for the repayment of money loaned thereon, shall be regarded as a pawnbroker.

(3) Ship brokers shall pay $50. Every person whose business it is as a broker to negotiate freights and other business for the owners of vessels or for the shippers or consignors or consignees of freight carried by vessels, shall be regarded as a ship broker.

(4) Customhouse brokers shall pay $50. Every person whose occupation it is, as the agent of others, to arrange entries and other customhouse papers, or transact business at any port of entry relating to the importation or exportation of goods, wares, or merchandise, shall be regarded as a customhouse broker.

(5) Proprietors of theaters, museums, and concert halls, where a charge for admission is made, having a seating capacity of not more than two hundred and fifty, shall pay $50; having a seating capacity of more than two hundred and fifty and not exceeding five hundred, shall pay $100; having a seating capacity exceeding five hundred and not exceeding eight hundred, shall pay $150; having a seating capacity of more than eight hundred, shall pay $200. Every edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays, or performances, for admission to which entrance money is received, not including halls or armories rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representations, and not including edifices owned by religious, educational or charitable institutions, societies or organizations where all the proceeds from admissions inure exclusively to the benefit of such institutions, societies or organizations or exclusively to the benefit of persons in the military or naval forces of the United States, shall be regarded as a theater: Provided, That in cities, towns, or villages of five thousand inhabitants or less the amount of such payment shall be one-half of that above stated: Provided further, That whenever any such edifice is under lease at the time the tax is due, the tax shall be paid by the lessee, unless otherwise stipulated between the parties to the lease.

(6) The proprietor or proprietors of circuses shall pay $100. Every building, space, tent, or area, where feats of horsemanship or acrobatic sports or theatrical performances not otherwise provided for in this section are exhibited shall be regarded as a circus: Provided, That no special tax paid in one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, shall exempt exhibitions from the tax in another State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, and but one special tax shall be imposed for exhibitions within any one State, Territory, or District.

(7) Proprietors or agents of all other public exhibitions or shows for money not enumerated in this section shall pay $15: Provided, That a special tax paid in one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia shall not exempt exhibitions from the tax in another State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, and but one special tax shall be required for exhibitions within any one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia: Provided further, That this paragraph shall not apply to Chautauquas, lecture lyceums, agricultural or industrial fairs, or exhibitions held under the auspices of religious or charitable associations: Provided further, That an aggregation of entertainments, known as a street fair, shall not pay a larger tax than $100 in any State, Territory, or in the District of Columbia.

(8) Proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard rooms shall pay $10 for each alley or table. Every building or place where bowls are thrown or where games of billiards or pool are played, except in private homes, shall be regarded as a bowling alley or a billiard room, respectively.

(9) Proprietors of shooting galleries shall pay $20. Every building, space, tent, or area, where a charge is made for the discharge of firearms at any form of target shall be regarded as a shooting gallery.

(10) Proprietors of riding academies shall pay $100. Every building, space, tent, or area, where a charge is made for instruction in horsemanship or for facilities for the practice of horsemanship shall be regarded as a riding academy: Provided, That this tax shall not be collected from associations composed exclusively of members of units of the Federalized National Guard or the Organized Reserve and whose receipts are used exclusively for the benefit of such units.

(11) Persons carrying on the business of operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire shall pay $10 for each such automobile having a seating capacity of more than two and not more than seven, and $20 for each such automobile having a seating capacity of more than seven.

(12) [Brewers, distillers, liquor dealers, etc.] Every person carrying on the business of a brewer, distiller, wholesale liquor dealer, retail liquor dealer, wholesale dealer in malt liquor, retail dealer in malt liquor, or manufacturer of stills, as defined in section 3244 as amended and section 3247 of the Revised Statutes, in any State, Territory, or District of the United States contrary to the laws of such State, Territory, or District, or in any place therein in which carrying on such business is prohibited by local or municipal law, shall pay, in addition to all other taxes, special or otherwise, imposed by existing law or by this Act, $1,000.

(b) [Payment of tax as exempting from state laws.] The payment of the tax imposed by this subdivision shall not be held to exempt any person from any penalty or punishment provided for by the laws of any State, Territory, or District for carrying on such business in such State, Territory, or District, or in any manner to authorize the commencement or continuance of such business contrary to the laws of such State, Territory, or District, or in places prohibited by local or municipal law.

(c) [Tax imposed in lieu of tax in Revenue Act of 1918.] The taxes imposed by this section shall, in the case of persons upon whom a corresponding tax is imposed by section 1001 of the Revenue Act of 1918, be in lieu of such tax.

For sec. 1001 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 165.

Sec. 1002. Special tobacco manufacturers' tax. That on and after July 1, 1922, there shall be levied, collected, and paid annually, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 1002 of the Revenue Act of 1918, the following special taxes, the amount of such taxes to be computed on the basis of the sales for the preceding year ending June 30—

Manufacturers of tobacco whose annual sales do not exceed fifty thousand pounds shall each pay $6;

Manufacturers of tobacco whose annual sales exceed fifty thousand and do not exceed one hundred thousand pounds shall each pay $12;

Manufacturers of tobacco whose annual sales exceed one hundred thousand and do not exceed two hundred thousand pounds shall each pay $24;

Manufacturers of tobacco whose annual sales exceed two hundred thousand pounds shall each pay $24, and at the rate of 16 cents per thousand pounds, or fraction thereof, in respect to the excess over two hundred thousand pounds;

Manufacturers of cigars whose annual sales do not exceed fifty thousand cigars shall each pay $4;

Manufacturers of cigars whose annual sales exceed fifty thousand and do not exceed one hundred thousand cigars shall each pay $6;

Manufacturers of cigars whose annual sales exceed one hundred thousand and do not exceed two hundred thousand cigars shall each pay $12;

Manufacturers of cigars whose annual sales exceed two hundred thousand and do not exceed four hundred thousand cigars shall each pay $24;

Manufacturers of cigars whose annual sales exceed four hundred thousand cigars shall each pay $24, and at the rate of 10 cents per thousand cigars, or fraction thereof, in respect to the excess over four hundred thousand cigars;

Manufacturers of cigarettes, including small cigars weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, shall each pay at the rate of 6 cents for every ten thousand cigarettes, or fraction thereof.

In arriving at the amount of special tax to be paid under this section, and in the levy and collection of such tax, each person engaged in the manufacture of more than one of the classes of articles specified in this section shall be considered and deemed a manufacturer of each class separately.

In computing under this section the amount of annual sales no account shall be taken of tobacco, cigars, or cigarettes, sold for export and in due course so exported.

For sec. 1002 of the Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. 168.

SEC. 1003. Special tax on use of boats. That on and after July 1, 1922, and thereafter on July 1 in each year, and also at the time of the original purchase of a new boat by a user, if on any other date than July 1, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 1003 of the Revenue Act of 1918, upon the use of yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, sailing boats, and motor boats with fixed engines, of over five net tons and over thirty-two feet in length, not used exclusively for trade, fishing, or national defense, or not built according to plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department, a special excise tax to be based on each yacht or boat, at rates as follows: Yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats with fixed engines, and sailing boats, of over five net tons, length over thirty-two feet and not over fifty feet, $1 for each foot; length over fifty feet, and not over one hundred feet, $2 for each foot; length over one hundred feet, $4 for each foot.

In determining the length of such yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats with fixed engines, and sailing boats, the measurement of over-all length shall govern.

In the case of a tax imposed at the time of the original purchase of a new boat on any other date than July 1, the amount to be paid shall be the same number of twelfths of the amount of the tax as the number of calendar months (including the month of sale) remaining prior to the following July 1.

This section shall not apply to vessels or boats used without profit by any benevolent, charitable, or religious organizations, exclusively for furnishing aid, comfort, or relief to seamen.

For sec. 1003 of the Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 169.

SEC. 1004. Penalty for nonpayment of special taxes. That any person who carries on any business or occupation for which a special tax is imposed by sections 1000, 1001 or 1002, without having paid the special tax therein provided, shall, besides being liable for the payment of such special tax, be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000 or to imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

TAX ON NARCOTICS.

SEC. 1005. [Opium, coca leaves and preparations therefrom — regulation of traffic — registration — amount of tax — collection — Harrison Act.] That section 1 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the registration of, with collectors of internal revenue, and to impose a special tax upon all persons who produce, import, manufacture, compound, deal in, dispense, sell, distribute, or give away opium or coca leaves, their salts, derivatives, or preparations, and for other purposes," approved December 17, 1914, as amended by section 1006 of the Revenue Act of 1918, is re-enacted without change, as follows:

"SECTION 1. That on or before July 1 of each year every person who imports, manufactures, produces, compounds, sells, deals in, dispenses, or gives away opium or coca leaves, or any compound, manufacture, salt, derivative, or preparation thereof, shall register with the collector of internal revenue of the district his name or style, place of business and place or places where such business is to be carried on, and pay the special taxes hereinafter provided;

"Every person who on January 1, 1919, is engaged in any of the activities above enumerated, or who between such date and the passage of this Act first engaged in any of such activities, shall within thirty days after the passage of this Act make like registration, and shall pay the proportionate part of the tax for the period ending June 30, 1919; and

"Every person who first engages in any of such activities after the passage of this Act shall immediately make like registration and pay the proportionate part of the tax for the period ending on the following June 30th;

"Importers, manufacturers, producers, or compounders, $24 per annum; wholesale dealers, $12 per annum; retail dealers, $6 per annum; physicians, dentists, veterinary surgeons, and other practitioners lawfully entitled to distribute, dispense, give away, or administer any of the aforesaid drugs to patients upon whom they in the course of their professional practice are in attendance, shall pay $3 per annum.

"Every person who imports, manufactures, compounds, or otherwise produces for sale or distribution any of the aforesaid drugs shall be deemed to be an importer, manufacturer, or producer.

"Every person who sells or offers for sale any of said drugs in the original stamped packages, as hereinafter provided, shall be deemed a wholesale dealer.

"Every person who sells or dispenses from original stamped packages, as hereinafter provided, shall be deemed a retail dealer: Provided, That the office, or if none, the residence, of any person shall be considered for the purpose of this Act his place of business; but no employee of any person who has registered and paid special tax as herein required, acting within the scope of his employment, shall be required to register and pay special tax provided by this section: Provided further, That officials of the United States, Territorial, District of Columbia, or insular possessions, State or municipal governments, who in the exercise of their official duties engage in any of the business herein described, shall not be required to register, nor pay special tax, nor stamp the aforesaid drugs as hereinafter prescribed, but their right to this exemption shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulations prescribe.

“ It shall be unlawful for any person required to register under the provisions of this Act to import, manufacture, produce, compound, sell, deal in, dispense, distribute, administer, or give away any of the aforesaid drugs without having registered and paid the special tax as imposed by this section.

“ That the word ‘ person ’ as used in this Act shall be construed to mean and include a partnership, association, company, or corporation, as well as a natural person; and all provisions of existing law relating to special taxes, as far as necessary, are hereby extended and made applicable to this section.

“ That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon opium, coca leaves, any compound, salt, derivative, or preparation thereof, produced in or imported into the United States, and sold, or removed for consumption or sale, an internal-revenue tax at the rate of 1 cent per ounce, and any fraction of an ounce in a package shall be taxed as an ounce, such tax to be paid by the importer, manufacturer, producer, or compounder thereof, and to be represented by appropriate stamps, to be provided by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury; and the stamps herein provided shall be so affixed to the bottle or other container as to securely seal the stopper, covering, or wrapper thereof.

“ The tax imposed by this section shall be in addition to any import duty imposed on the aforesaid drugs.

“ It shall be unlawful for any person to purchase, sell, dispense, or distribute any of the aforesaid drugs except in the original stamped package or from the original stamped package; and the absent of appropriate tax-paid stamps from any of the aforesaid drugs shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this section by the person in whose possession same may be found; and the possession of any original stamped package containing any of the aforesaid drugs by any person who has not registered and paid special taxes as required by this section shall be prima facie evidence of liability to such special tax: Provided, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to any person having in his or her possession any of the aforesaid drugs which have been obtained from a registered dealer in pursuance of a prescription, written for legitimate medical uses, issued by a physician, dentist, veterinary surgeon, or other practitioner registered under this Act; and where the bottle or other container in which such drug may be put up by the dealer upon said prescription bears the name and registry number of the druggist, serial number of prescription, name and address of the patient, and name, address, and registry number of the person writing said prescription; or to the dispensing, or administration, or giving away of any of the aforesaid drugs to a patient by a registered physician, dentist, veterinary surgeon, or other practitioner in the course of his professional practice, and where said drugs are dispensed or administered to the patient for legitimate medical purposes, and the record kept as required by this Act of the drugs so dispensed, administered, distributed, or given away.

“ And all the provisions of existing laws relating to the engraving, issuance, sale, accountability, cancellation, and destruction of tax-paid stamps provided for in the internal-revenue laws are, in so far as necessary, hereby extended and made to apply to stamps provided by this section.

" That all unstamped packages of the aforesaid drugs found in the possession of any person, except as herein provided, shall be subject to seizure and forfeiture, and all the provisions of existing internal-revenue laws relating to searches, seizures, and forfeitures of unstamped articles are hereby extended to and made to apply to the articles taxed under this Act and the persons upon whom these taxes are imposed.

" Importers, manufacturers, and wholesale dealers shall keep such books and records and render such monthly returns in relation to the transactions in the aforesaid drugs as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulations require.

" The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all needful rules and regulations for carrying the provisions of this Act into effect."

For Act of Dec. 17, 1914, sec. 1, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 177.

SEC. 1006. [Preparations containing limited quantities of opium, morphine, etc.—application of Harrison Act—record of sales, etc.—registration—decocainized coca leaves and preparations therefrom.] That section 6 of such Act of December 17, 1914, as amended by section 1007 of the Revenue Act of 1918, is re-enacted without change, as follows:

" SEC. 6. That the provisions of this Act shall not be construed to apply to the manufacture, sale, distribution, giving away, dispensing, or possession of preparations and remedies which do not contain more than two grains of opium, or more than one-fourth of a grain of morphine, or more than one-eighth of a grain of heroin, or more than one grain of codeine, or any salt or derivative of any of them in one fluid ounce, or, if a solid or semisolid preparation, in one avoirdupois ounce; or to liniments, ointments, or other preparations which are prepared for external use, only, except liniments, ointments, and other preparations which contain cocaine or any of its salts or alpha or beta uaine or any of their salts or any synthetic substitute for them: Provided, That such remedies and preparations are manufactured, sold, distributed, given away, dispensed, or possessed as medicines and not for the purpose of evading the intentions and provisions of this Act: Provided further, That any manufacturer, producer, compounder, or vendor (including dispensing physicians) of the preparations and remedies mentioned in this section shall keep a record of all sales, exchanges, or gifts of such preparations and remedies in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall direct. Such record shall be preserved for a period of two years in such a way as to be readily accessible to inspection by any officer, agent or employee of the Treasury Department duly authorized for that purpose, and the State, Territorial, District, municipal, and insular officers named in section 5 of this Act, and every such person so possessing or disposing of such preparations and remedies shall register as required in section 1 of this Act and, if he is not paying a tax under this Act, he shall pay a special tax of $1 for each year, or fractional part thereof, in which he is engaged in such occupation, to the collector of internal revenue of the district in which he carries on such occupation as provided in this Act. The provisions of this Act as amended shall not apply to decocainized coca leaves or preparations made therefrom, or to other preparations of coca leaves which do not contain cocaine."

For Act of Dec. 17, 1914, sec. 6, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 183.

SEC. 1007. [Confiscation and forfeiture of seized opium, coca leaves, etc.—disposition of forfeited drugs.] That all opium, its salts, derivatives, and compounds, and coca leaves, salts, derivatives, and compounds thereof, which may now be under seizure or which may hereafter be seized by the United States Government from any person or persons charged with any violation of the Act of October 1, 1890, as amended by the Acts of March 3, 1897, February 9, 1909, and January 17, 1914, or the Act of December 17, 1914, as amended, shall upon conviction of the person or persons from whom seized be confiscated by and forfeited to the United States; and the Secretary is hereby authorized to deliver for medical or scientific purposes to any department, bureau, or other agency of the United States Government, upon proper application therefor under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, any of the drugs so seized, confiscated, and forfeited to the United States.

The provisions of this section shall also apply to any of the aforesaid drugs seized or coming into the possession of the United States in the enforcement of any of the above-mentioned Acts where the owner or owners thereof are unknown. None of the aforesaid drugs coming into possession of the United States under the operation of said Acts, or the provisions of this section, shall be destroyed without certification by a committee appointed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, that they are of no value for medical or scientific purposes.

For the different Opium Acts, now in force and mentioned in the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 173.

TITLE XI.—STAMP TAXES.

SEC. 1100. [Instruments, matters and things affected by title.] That on and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, for and in respect of the several bonds, debentures, or certificates of stock and of indebtedness, and other documents, instruments, matters, and things mentioned and described in Schedule A of this title, or for or in respect of the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which such instruments, matters, or things, or any of them, are written or printed, by any person who makes, signs, issues, sells, removes, consigns, or ships the same, or for whose use or benefit the same are made, signed, issued, sold, removed, consigned, or shipped, the several taxes specified in such schedule. The taxes imposed by this section shall, in the case of any article upon which a corresponding stamp tax is now imposed by law, be in lien of such tax.

SEC. 1101. [Instruments, etc., not affected by title.] That there shall not be taxed under this title any bond, note, or other instrument, issued by the United States, or by any foreign Government, or by any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or local subdivision thereof, or municipal or other corporation exercising the taxing power; or any bond of indemnity required to be filed by any person to secure payment of any pension, allowance, allotment, relief, or insurance by the United States, or to secure a duplicate for, or the payment of, any bond, note, certificate of indebtedness, war-savings certificate, warrant or check, issued by the United States; or stocks and bonds issued by cooperative building and loan associations which are organized and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members and make loans only to their shareholders, or by mutual ditch or irrigation companies.

SEC. 1102. [Offenses — failure to pay tax or cancel stamps.] That whoever —

(a) Makes, signs, issues, or accepts, or causes to be made, signed, issued, or accepted, any instrument, document, or paper of any kind or description whatsoever without the full amount of tax thereon being duly paid;

(b) Manufactures or imports and sells, or offers for sale, or causes to be manufactured or imported and sold, or offered for sale, any playing cards, package, or other article without the full amount of tax being duly paid;

(c) Makes use of any adhesive stamp to denote any tax imposed by this title without canceling or obliterating such stamp as prescribed in section 1104;

Is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine of not more than $100 for each offense.

SEC. 1103. [Offenses — fraud — tampering with stamped instrument — insufficient stamping — used stamps — reuse and possession — counterfeit stamps.] That whoever —

(a) Fraudulently cuts, tears, or removes from any vellum, parchment, paper, instrument, writing, package, or article, upon which any tax is imposed by this title, any adhesive stamp or the impression of any stamp, die, plate, or other article provided, made, or used in pursuance of this title;

(b) Fraudulently uses, joins, fixes, or places to, with, or upon any vellum, parchment, paper, instrument, writing, package, or article, upon which any tax is imposed by this title, (1) any adhesive stamp, or the impression of any stamp, die, plate, or other article, which has been cut, torn, or removed from any other vellum, parchment, paper, instrument, writing, package, or article, upon which any tax is imposed by this title; or (2) any adhesive stamp or the impression of any stamp, die, plate, or other article of insufficient value; or (3) any forged or counterfeited stamp, or the impression of any forged or counterfeited stamp, die, plate, or other article;

(c) Willfully removes, or alters the cancellation, or defacing marks of, or otherwise prepares, any adhesive stamp, with intent to use, or cause the same to be used, after it has been already used, or knowingly or willfully buys, sells, offers for sale, or gives away, any such washed or restored stamp to any person for use, or knowingly uses the same;

(d) Knowingly and without lawful excuse (the burden of proof of such excuse being on the accused) has in possession any washed, restored, or altered stamp, which has been removed from any vellum, parchment, paper, instrument, writing, package, or article;

Is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, and any such reused, canceled, or counterfeit stamp and the vellum, parchment, document, paper, package, or article upon which it is placed or impressed shall be forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 1104. [Cancellation of stamps — method.] That whenever an adhesive stamp is used for denoting any tax imposed by this title, except as hereinafter provided, the person using or affixing the same shall write or stamp or cause to be written or stamped thereupon the initials of his or its name and the date upon which the same is attached or used, so that the same may not again be used: Provided, That the Commissioner may prescribe such other method for the cancellation of such stamps as he may deem expedient.

SEC. 1105. [Preparation and distribution of stamps — collection of stamp taxes omitted from instrument, etc.] (a) That the Commissioner shall cause to be prepared and distributed for the payment of the taxes prescribed in this title suitable stamps denoting the tax on the document, articles, or thing to which the same may be affixed, and shall prescribe such method for the affixing of said stamps in substitution for or in addition to the method provided in this title, as he may deem expedient.

(b) All internal revenue laws relating to the assessment and collection of taxes are hereby extended to and made a part of this title, so far as applicable, for the purpose of collecting stamp taxes omitted through mistake or fraud from any instrument, document, paper, writing, parcel, package, or article named herein.

SEC. 1106. [Distribution of stamps to postmaster.] That the Commissioner shall furnish to the Postmaster General without prepayment a suitable quantity of adhesive stamps to be distributed to and kept on sale by the various postmasters in the United States. The Postmaster General may require each such postmaster to give additional or increased bond as postmaster for the value of the stamps so furnished, and each such postmaster shall deposit the receipts from the sale of such stamps to the credit of and render accounts to the Postmaster General at such times and in such form as he may by regulations prescribe. The Postmaster General shall at least once monthly transfer all collections from this source to the Treasury as internal-revenue collections.

SEC. 1107. [Distribution of stamps to assistant treasurer, etc.] (a) That each collector shall furnish, without prepayment, to any assistant treasurer or designated depository of the United States, located in the district of such collector, a suitable quantity of adhesive stamps to be kept on sale by such assistant treasurer or designated depository.

(b) Each collector shall furnish, without prepayment, to any person who is (1) located in the district of such collector, (2) duly appointed and acting as agent of any State for the sale of stock transfer stamps of such State, and (3) designated by the Commissioner for the purpose, a suitable quantity of such adhesive stamps as are required by subdivisions 2; 3, and 4 of Schedule A of this title, to be kept on sale by such person.

(c) In such cases the collector may require a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a sum to be fixed by the Commissioner, conditioned for the faithful return, whenever so required, of all quantities or amounts undisposed of, and for the payment monthly of all quantities or amounts sold or not remaining on hand. The Secretary may from time to time make such regulations as he may find necessary to insure the safe-keeping or prevent the illegal use of all such adhesive stamps.

SCHEDULE A.—STAMP TAXES.

1. Bonds of indebtedness: On all bonds, debentures, or certificates of indebtedness issued by any person, and all instruments, however termed, issued by any corporation with interest coupons or in registered form, known generally as corporate securities, on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, 5 cents: Provided, That every renewal of the foregoing shall be taxed as a new issue: Provided further, That when a bond conditioned for the repayment or payment of money is given in a penal sum greater than the debt secured, the tax shall be based upon the amount secured.

2. Capital stock, issued: On each original issue, whether on organization or reorganization, of certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations, by any corporation, on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, 5 cents: Provided, That where a certificate is issued without face value, the tax shall be 5 cents per share, unless the actual value is in excess of $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 5 cents on each $100 of actual value or fraction thereof, or unless the actual value is less than $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 1 cent on each $20 of actual value, or fraction thereof.

The stamps representing the tax imposed by this subdivision shall be attached to the stock books and not to the certificates issued.

3. Capital stock, sales or transfers: On all sales, or agreements to sell, or memoranda of sales or deliveries of, or transfers of legal title to shares or certificates of stock or of profits or of interest in property or accumulations in any corporation, or to rights to subscribe for or to receive such shares or certificates, whether made upon or shown by the books of the corporation, or by any assignment in blank, or by any delivery, or by any paper or agreement or memorandum or other evidence of transfer or sale, whether entitling the holder in any manner to the benefit of such stock, interest, or rights, or not, on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, 2 cents, and where such shares are without par or face value, the tax shall be 2 cents on the transfer or sale or agreement to sell on each share: Provided, That it is not intended by this title to impose a tax upon an agreement evidencing a deposit of certificates as collateral security for money loaned thereon, which certificates are not actually sold, nor upon the delivery or transfer for such purpose of certificates so deposited, nor upon mere loans of stock nor upon the return of stock so loaned: Provided further, That the tax shall not be imposed upon deliveries or transfers to a broker for sale, nor upon deliveries or transfers by a broker to a customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased same, but such deliveries or transfers shall be accompanied by a certificate setting forth the facts: Provided further, That in case of sale where the evidence of transfer is shown only by the books of the corporation the stamp shall be placed upon such books; and where the change of ownership is by transfer of the certificate the stamp shall be placed upon the certificate; and in cases of an agreement to sell or where the transfer is by delivery of the certificate assigned in blank there shall be made and delivered by the seller to the buyer a bill or memorandum of such sale, to which the stamp shall be affixed; and every bill or memorandum of sale or agreement to sell before mentioned shall show the date thereof, the name of the seller, the amount of the sale, and the matter or thing to which it refers. Any person liable to pay the tax as herein provided, or anyone who acts in the matter as agent or broker for such person, who makes any such sale, or who in pursuance of any such sale delivers any certificate or evidence of the sale of any stock, interest or right, or bill or memorandum thereof, as herein required, without having the proper stamps affixed thereto with intent to evade the foregoing provisions, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine of not exceeding $1,000, or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

4. Produce, sales of, on exchange: Upon each sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell (not including so-called transferred or scratch sales), any products or merchandise at, or under the rules or usages of, any exchange, or board of trade, or other similar place, for future delivery, for each $100 in value of the merchandise covered by said sale or agreement of sale or agreement to sell, 2 cents, and for each additional $100 or fractional part thereof in excess of $100, 2 cents: Provided, That on every sale or agreement of sale or agreement to sell as aforesaid there shall be made and delivered by the seller to the buyer a bill, memorandum, agreement, or other evidence of such sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, to which there shall be affixed a lawful stamp or stamps in value equal to the amount of the tax on such sale: Provided further, That sellers of commodities described herein, having paid the tax provided by this subdivision, may transfer such contracts to a clearing-house corporation or association, and such transfer shall not be deemed to be a sale, or agreement of sale, or an agreement to sell within the provisions of this Act, provided that such transfer shall not vest any beneficial interest in such clearing-house association but shall be made for the sole purpose of enabling such clearing-house association to adjust and balance the accounts of the members of such clearing-house association on their several contracts. Every such bill, memorandum, or other evidence of sale or agreement to sell shall show the date thereof, the name of the seller, the amount of the sale, and the matter or thing to which it refers; and any person liable to pay the tax as herein provided, or anyone who acts in the matter as agent or broker for such person, who makes any such sale or agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, or who, in pursuance of any such sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, delivers any such products or merchandise without a bill, memorandum, or other evidence thereof as herein required, or who delivers such bill, memorandum, or other evidence of sale, or agreement to sell, without having the proper stamps affixed thereto, with intent to evade the foregoing provisions, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine of not exceeding $1,000 or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

No bill, memorandum, agreement, or other evidence of such sale, or agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, in case of cash sales of products or merchandise for immediate or prompt delivery which in good faith are actually intended to be delivered shall be subject to this tax.

This subdivision shall not affect but shall be in addition to the provisions of the "United States cotton futures Act," approved August 11, 1916, as amended, and "The Future Trading Act," approved August 24, 1921.

For "United States Cotton Futures Act," mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. 359.

For "The Future Trading Act," mentioned in the text, see supra, p. 5.

5. [Drafts, checks and notes.] Drafts or checks (payable otherwise than at sight or on demand) upon their acceptance or delivery within the United States whichever is prior, promissory notes, except bank notes issued for circulation, and for each renewal of the same, for a sum not exceeding $100, 2 cents; and for each additional $100, or fractional part thereof, 2 cents.

This subdivision shall not apply to a promissory note secured by the pledge of bonds or obligations of the United States issued after April 24, 1917, or secured by the pledge of a promissory note which itself is secured by the pledge of such bonds or obligations: Provided, That in either case the par value of such bonds or obligations shall be not less than the amount of such note.

6. Conveyances: Deed, instrument, or writing, whereby any lands, tenements, or other realty sold shall be granted, assigned, transferred, or otherwise conveyed to, or vested in, the purchaser or purchasers, or any other person or persons, by his, her, or their direction, when the consideration or value of the interest or property conveyed, exclusive of the value of any lien or encumbrance remaining thereon at the time of sale, exceeds $100 and does not exceed $500, 50 cents; and for each additional $500 or fractional part thereof, 50 cents. This subdivision shall not apply to any instrument or writing given to secure a debt.

7. Entry of any goods, wares, or merchandise at any customhouse, either for consumption or warehousing, not exceeding $100 in value, 25 cents; exceeding $100 and not exceeding $500 in value, 50 cents; exceeding $500 in value, $1.

8. Entry for the withdrawal of any goods or merchandise from customs bonded warehouse, 50 cents.

9. Passage ticket, one way or round trip, for each passenger, sold or issued in the United States for passage by any vessel to a port or place not in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, if costing not exceeding $30, $1; costing more than $30 and not exceeding $60, $3; costing more than $60, $5. This subdivision shall not apply to passage tickets costing $10 or less.

10. Proxy for voting at any election for officers, or meeting for the transaction of business, of any corporation, except religious, educational, charitable, fraternal, or literary societies, or public cemeteries, 10 cents.

11. Power of attorney granting authority to do or perform some act for or in behalf of the grantor, which authority is not otherwise vested in the grantee, 25 cents. This subdivision shall not apply to any papers necessary to be used for the collection of claims from the United States or from any State for pensions, back pay, bounty, or for property lost in the military or naval service, nor to powers of attorney required in bankruptcy cases nor to powers of attorney contained in the application of those who become members of or policyholders in mutual insurance companies doing business on the interinsurance or reciprocal indemnity plan through an attorney in fact.

12. Playing cards: Upon every pack of playing cards containing not more than fifty-four cards, manufactured or imported, and sold, or removed for consumption or sale, a tax of 8 cents per pack.

13. [Insurance policies.] On each policy of insurance, or certificate, binder, covering note, memorandum, cablegram, letter, or other instrument by whatever name called whereby insurance is made or renewed upon property within the United States (including rents and profits) against peril by sea or on inland waters or in transit on land (including transshipments and storage at termini or way points) or by fire, lightning, tornado, wind-storm, bombardment, invasion, insurrection or riot, issued to or for or in the name of a domestic corporation or partnership or an individual resident of the United States by any foreign corporation or partnership or any individual not a resident of the United States, when such policy or other instrument is not signed or countersigned by an officer or agent of the insurer in a State, Territory, or District of the United States within which such insurer is authorized to do business, a tax of 3 cents on each dollar, or fractional part thereof of the premium charged: Provided, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subdivision.

Any person to or for whom or in whose name any such policy or other instrument is issued, or any solicitor or broker acting for or on behalf of such person in the procurement of any such policy or other instrument, shall affix the proper stamps to such policy or other instrument, and for failure to affix such stamps with intent to evade the tax shall, in addition to other penalties provided therefor, pay a fine of double the amount of the tax.

TITLE XII.—TAX ON EMPLOYMENT OF CHILD LABOR.

SEC. 1200. [Kind of employment affected by title — hours of employment — amount of tax — net profits.] That every person (other than a bona fide boys' or girls' canning club recognized by the Agricultural Department of a State and of the United States) operating (a) any mine or quarry situated in the United States in which children under the age of sixteen years have been employed or permitted to work during any portion of the taxable year; or (b) any mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment situated in the United States in which children under the age of fourteen years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of seven o'clock post meridian, or before the hour of six o'clock ante meridian, during any portion of the taxable year, shall pay for each taxable year, in addition to all other taxes imposed by law (but in lieu of the tax imposed by section 1200 of the Revenue Act of 1918), an excise tax equivalent to 10 per centum of the entire net profits received or accrued for such year from the sale or disposition of the product of such mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment.

For sec. 1200 of the Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 179.

SEC. 1201. [Computation of net profits.] That in computing net profits under the provisions of this title, for the purpose of the tax there shall be allowed as deductions from the gross amount received or accrued for the taxable year from the sale or disposition of such products manufactured within the United States the following items:

- (a) The cost of raw materials entering into the production;
- (b) Running expenses, including rentals, cost of repairs, and maintenance, heat, power, insurance, management, and a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensations for personal services actually rendered, and for depreciation;
- (c) Interest paid within the taxable year on debts or loans contracted to meet the needs of the business, and the proceeds of which have been actually used to meet such needs;
- (d) Taxes of all kinds paid during the taxable year with respect to the business or property relating to the production; and
- (e) Losses actually sustained within the taxable year in connection with the business of producing such products, including losses from fire, flood, storm, or other casualties, and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

SEC. 1202. [Sale of products at less than fair market price — collusion.] That if any such person during any taxable year or part thereof, whether under any agreement, arrangement, or understanding or otherwise, sells or disposes of any product of such mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment at less than the fair market price obtainable therefor either (a) in such manner as directly or indirectly to benefit such person or any person directly or indirectly interested in the business of such person; or (b) with intent to cause such benefit; the gross amount received or accrued for such year or part thereof from the sale or disposition of such product shall be taken to be the amount which would have been received or accrued from the sale or disposition of such product if sold at the fair market price.

SEC. 1203. [Good faith as relieving employer from tax — employment certificate — mistake as to age.] (a) That no person subject to the provisions of this title shall be liable for the tax herein imposed if the only employment or permission to work which but for this section would subject him to the tax has been of a child as to whom such person has in good faith procured at the time of employing such child or permitting him to work, and has since in good faith relied upon and kept on file a certificate, issued in such form, under such conditions and by such persons as may be prescribed by a board consisting of the Secretary, the Commissioner, and the Secretary of Labor, showing the child to be of such age as not to subject such person to the tax imposed by this title. Any person who knowingly makes a false statement or presents false evidence in or in relation to any such certificate or application therefor shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100, nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

In any State designated by such board an employment certificate or other similar paper as to the age of the child, issued under the laws of that State, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this title, shall have the same force and effect as a certificate herein provided for.

(b) The tax imposed by this title shall not be imposed in the case of any person who proves to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the only employment or permission to work which but for this section would subject him to the tax, has been of a child employed or permitted to work under a mistake of fact as to the age of such child, and without intention to evade the tax.

SEC. 1204. [Returns.] That on or before the first day of the third month following the close of each taxable year, a true and accurate return under oath shall be made by each person subject to the provisions of this title to the collector for the district in which such person has his principal office or place of business, in such form as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe, setting forth specifically the gross amount of income received or accrued during such year from the sale or disposition of the product of any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment, in which children have been employed subjecting him to the tax imposed by this title, and from the total thereof deducting the aggregate items of allowance authorized by this title, and such other particulars as to the gross receipts and items of allowance as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may require.

SEC. 1205. [Assessment and collection of tax.] That all such returns shall be transmitted forthwith by the collector to the Commissioner, who shall, as soon as practicable, assess the tax found due and notify the person making such return of the amount of tax for which such person is liable, and such person shall pay the tax to the collector on or before thirty days from the date of such notice.

SEC. 1206. [Inspection of mines, factories, etc.—penalty for obstructing inspection.] That for the purposes of this Act the Commissioner, or any person duly authorized by him, shall have authority to enter and inspect at any time any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment. The Secretary of Labor, or any person duly authorized by him, shall, for the purpose of complying with a request of the Commissioner to make such an inspection, have like authority, and shall make report to the Commissioner of inspections made under such authority in such form as may be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Any person who refuses or obstructs entry or inspection authorized by this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

SEC. 1207. [“Taxable year” — meaning.] That as used in this title the term “taxable year” shall have the same meaning as provided for the purposes of income tax in section 200.

TITLE XIII.—GENERAL ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

SEC. 1300. Laws made applicable. That all administrative, special, or stamp provisions of law, including the law relating to the assessment of taxes, so far as applicable, are hereby extended to and made a part of this Act, and every person liable to any tax imposed by this Act, or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records and render, under oath, such statements and returns, and shall comply with such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 1301. Method of collecting tax. That whether or not the method of collecting any tax imposed by Titles V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, or X of this Act is specifically provided therein, any such tax may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, be collected by stamp, coupon, serial-numbered ticket, or such other reasonable device or method as may be necessary or helpful in securing a complete and prompt collection of the tax. All administrative and penalty provisions of Title XI, in so far as applicable, shall apply to the collection of any tax which the Commissioner determines or prescribes shall be collected in such manner.

SEC. 1302. Penalties. (a) That any person required under Titles V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, or XII, to pay, or to collect, account for and pay over any tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return or supply any information for the purposes of the computation, assessment, or collection of any such tax, who fails to pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax, make any such return or supply any such information at the time or times required by law or regulation shall in addition to other penalties provided by law be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000.

(b) Any person who willfully refuses to pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax, make such return or supply such information at the time or times required by law or regulation, or who willfully attempts in any manner to evade such tax, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and in addition to other penalties provided by law shall be fined not more than $10 000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

(c) Any person who willfully refuses to pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax shall in addition to other penalties provided by law be liable to a penalty of the amount of the tax evaded, or not paid, collected, or accounted for and paid over, to be assessed and collected in the same manner as taxes are assessed and collected: Provided, however, That no penalty shall be assessed under this subdivision for any offense for which a penalty may be assessed under authority of section 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, or for any offense for which a penalty has been recovered under section 3256 of the Revised Statutes.

(d) The term " person " as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

For R. S. sec. 3176, mentioned in the text, as amended, see 1918 Supp. 280.

SEC. 1303. Rules and regulations. That the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, is hereby authorized to make all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of the provisions of this Act.

The Commissioner, with such approval may by regulation provide that any return required by Titles V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, or X to be under oath may, if the amount of the tax covered thereby is not in excess of $10, be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

SEC. 1304. Overpayments and overcollections. That in the case of any overpayment or overcollection of any tax imposed by section 602 or by Title V, Title VIII, or Title IX, the person making such overpayment or overcollection may take credit therefor against taxes due upon any monthly return, and shall make refund of any excessive amount collected by him upon proper application by the person entitled thereto.

SEC. 1305. Articles exported. That under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe, the taxes imposed under the provisions of Titles VI, VII or IX shall not apply in respect to articles sold or leased for export and in due course so exported. Under such rules and regulations the amount of any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally collected in respect to exported articles may be refunded to the exporter of the article, instead of to the manufacturer, if the manufacturer waives any claim for the amount so to be refunded.

SEC. 1306. Fractional parts of a cent. That in the payment of any tax under this Act not payable by stamp a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

SEC. 1307. Returns. That whenever in the judgment of the Commissioner necessary he may require any person, by notice served upon him, to make a return or such statements as he deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable to tax.

SEC. 1308. Examination of books and witnesses. That the Commissioner, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or for the purpose of making a return where none has been made, is hereby authorized, by any revenue agent or inspector designated by him for that purpose, to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and may require the attendance of the person rendering the return or of any officer or employee of such person, or the attendance of any other person having knowledge in the premises, and may take his testimony with reference to the matter required by law to be included in such return, with power to administer oaths to such person or persons.

SEC. 1309. Unnecessary examinations. That no taxpayer shall be subjected to unnecessary examinations or investigations, and only one inspection of a taxpayer's books of account shall be made for each taxable year unless the taxpayer requests otherwise or unless the Commissioner, after investigation, notifies the taxpayer in writing that an additional inspection is necessary.

SEC. 1310. Jurisdiction of courts. (a) That if any person is summoned under this Act to appear, to testify, or to produce books, papers or other data, the district court of the United States for the district in which such person resides shall have jurisdiction by appropriate process to compel such attendance, testimony, or production of books, papers, or other data.

(b) The district courts of the United States at the instance of the United States are hereby invested with such jurisdiction to make and issue, both in actions at law and suits in equity, writs and orders of injunction, and of ne exeat republica, orders appointing receivers, and such other orders and process, and to render such judgments and decrees, granting in proper cases both legal and equitable relief together, as may be necessary or appropriate for the enforcement of the provisions of this Act. The remedies hereby provided are in addition to and not exclusive of any and all other remedies of the United States in such courts or otherwise to enforce such provisions.

(c) Paragraph Twentieth of section 24 of the Judicial Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"Concurrent with the Court of Claims, of any suit or proceeding, commenced after the passage of the Revenue Act of 1921, for the recovery of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority or any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, under the internal-revenue laws, even if the claim exceeds $10,000, if the collector of internal-revenue by whom such tax, penalty, or sum was collected is dead at the time such suit or proceeding is commenced."

For Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. 20, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 841.

AMENDMENTS TO REVISED STATUTES.

SEC. 1311. [R. S. secs. 3164, 3165, 3167, 3172, 3173, and 3176 amended.] That sections 3164, 3165, 3167, 3172, 3173, and 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, are reenacted, without change, as follows:

[Duty of collectors to report violations of law to district attorney.]

“ SEC. 3164. It shall be the duty of every collector of internal revenue having knowledge of any willful violation of any law of the United States relating to the revenue, within thirty days after coming into possession of such knowledge, to file with the district attorney of the district in which any fine, penalty, or forfeiture may be incurred, a statement of all the facts and circumstances of the case within his knowledge, together with the names of the witnesses, setting forth the provisions of law believed to be so violated on which reliance may be had for condemnation or conviction.

For R. S. sec. 3164 as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 989.

[Revenue officers who may administer oaths and take evidence.] “ SEC. 3165.

Every collector, deputy collector, internal-revenue agent, and internal-revenue officer assigned to duty under an internal-revenue agent, is authorized to administer oaths and to take evidence touching any part of the administration of the internal-revenue laws with which he is charged, or where such oaths and evidence are authorized by law or regulation authorized by law to be taken.

For R. S. sec. 3165, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 989.

[Disclosure by revenue officers of operations, etc., prohibited — penalty.]

“ SEC. 3167. It shall be unlawful for any collector, deputy collector, agent, clerk, or other officer or employee of the United States to divulge or to make known in any manner whatever not provided by law to any person the operations, style of work, or apparatus of any manufacturer or producer visited by him in the discharge of his official duties, or the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any income return, or to permit any income return or copy thereof or any book containing any abstract or particulars thereof to be seen or examined by any person except as provided by law; and it shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any income return, or any part thereof or source of income, profits, losses, or expenditures appearing in any income return; and any offense against the foregoing provision shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court; and if the offender be an officer or employee of the United States he shall be dismissed from office or discharged from employment.

For R. S. sec. 3167, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 990.

[Canvass of districts for persons liable to, and objects subject to, taxation.]

“ SEC. 3172. Every collector shall, from time to time, cause his deputies to proceed through every part of his district and inquire after and concerning all persons therein who are liable to pay any internal-revenue tax, and all persons owning or having the care and management of any objects liable to pay any tax, and to make a list of such persons and enumerate said objects.

For R. S. sec. 3172, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1002.

[Annual returns of persons liable to tax.] “ SEC. 3173. It shall be the duty of any person, partnership, firm, association, or corporation, made liable to any duty, special tax, or other tax imposed by law, when not otherwise provided for, (1) in case of a special tax, on or before the thirty-first day of July in each year, and (2) in other cases before the day on which the taxes accrue, to make a list or return, verified by oath, to the collector or a deputy collector of the district where located, of the articles or objects, including the quantity of goods, wares, and merchandise, made or sold and charged with a tax, the several rates and aggregate amount, according to the forms and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, for which such person, partnership, firm, association, or corporation is liable: Provided, That if any person liable to pay any duty or tax, or owning, possessing, or having the care or management of property, goods, wares, and merchandise, article [sic] or objects liable to pay any duty, tax, or license, shall fail to make and exhibit a list or return required by law, but shall consent to disclose the particulars of any and all the property, goods, wares, and merchandise, articles, and objects liable to pay any duty or tax, or any business or occupation liable to pay any tax as aforesaid, then, and in that case, it shall be the duty of the collector or deputy collector to make such list or return, which, being distinctly read, consented to, and signed and verified by oath by the person so owning, possessing, or having the care and management as aforesaid, may be received as the list of such person: Provided further, That in case no annual list or return has been rendered by such person to the collector or deputy collector as required by law, and the person shall be absent from his or her residence or place of business at the time the collector or a deputy collector shall call for the annual list or return, it shall be the duty of such collector or deputy collector to leave at such place of residence or business, with some one of suitable age and discretion, if such be present, otherwise to deposit in the nearest post office, a note or memorandum addressed to such person, requiring him or her to render to such collector or deputy collector the list or return required by law within ten days from the date of such note or memorandum, verified by oath. And if any person, on being notified or required as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to render such list or return within the time required as aforesaid, or whenever any person who is required to deliver a monthly or other return of objects subject to tax fails to do so at the time required, or delivers any return which, in the opinion of the collector, is erroneous, false, or fraudulent, or contains any undervaluation or understatement, or refuses to allow any regularly authorized Government officer to examine the books of such person, firm, or corporation, it shall be lawful for the collector to summon such person, or any other person having possession, custody, or care of books of account containing entries relating to the business of such person or any other person he may deem proper, to appear before him and produce such books at a time and place named in the summons, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories, under oath, respecting any objects or income liable to tax or the returns thereof. The collector may summon any person residing or found within the State or Territory in which his district lies; and when the person intended to be summoned does not reside and can not be found within such State or Territory, he may enter any collection district where such person may be found and there make the examination herein authorized. And to this end he may there exercise all the authority which he might lawfully exercise in the district for which he was commissioned: Provided, That 'person,' as used in this section, shall be construed to include any corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company when such construction is necessary to carry out its provisions.

For R. S. sec. 3173, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1002.

[On failure, return to be made by officer — penalty for failure to make return.] “SEC. 3176. If any person, corporation, company, or association fails to make and file a return or list at the time prescribed by law or by regulation made under authority of law, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return or list, the collector or deputy collector shall make the return or list from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise. In any such case the Commissioner may, from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise, make a return or amend any return made by a collector or deputy collector. Any return or list so made and subscribed by the Commissioner, or by a collector or deputy collector and approved by the Commissioner, shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

“ If the failure to file a return or list is due to sickness or absence, the collector may allow such further time, not exceeding thirty days, for making and filing the return or list as he deems proper.

“ The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall determine and assess all taxes, other than stamp taxes, as to which returns or lists are so made under the provisions of this section. In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of its amount, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case a false or fraudulent return or list is willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of its amount.

“ The amount so added to any tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as a part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, falsity, or fraud, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax.”

For R. S. sec. 3176, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1006.

SEC. 1312. Final determinations and assessments. That if after a determination and assessment in any case the taxpayer has without protest paid in whole any tax or penalty, or accepted any abatement, credit, or refund based on such determination and assessment, and an agreement is made in writing between the taxpayer and the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, that such determination and assessment shall be final and conclusive, then (except upon a showing of fraud or malfeasance or misrepresentation of fact materially affecting the determination or assessment thus made) (1) the case shall not be reopened or the determination and assessment modified by any officer, employee, or agent of the United States, and (2) no suit, action, or proceeding to annul, modify, or set aside such determination or assessment shall be entertained by any court of the United States.

SEC. 1313. Administrative review. That in the absence of fraud or mistake in mathematical calculation, the findings of facts in and the decision of the Commissioner upon (or in case the Secretary is authorized to approve the same, then after such approval) the merits of any claim presented under or authorized by the internal-revenue laws shall not be subject to review by any other administrative officer, employee, or agent of the United States.

SEC. 1314. Retroactive regulations. That in case a regulation or Treasury decision relating to the internal-revenue laws made by the Commissioner or the Secretary, or by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, is reversed by a subsequent regulation or Treasury decision, and such reversal is not immediately occasioned or required by a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction, such subsequent regulation or Treasury decision may, in the discretion of the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, be applied without retroactive effect.

REFUNDS.

SEC. 1315. [Refundment of taxes, penalties, etc.— R. S. sec. 3220 re-enacted.] That section 3220 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is reenacted without change, as follows:

“ SEC. 3220. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to remit, refund, and pay back all taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, all penalties collected without authority, and all taxes that appear to be unjustly assessed or excessive in amount, or in any manner wrongfully collected; also to repay to any collector or deputy collector the full amount of such sums of money as may be recovered against him in any court, for any internal revenue taxes collected by him, with the cost and expenses of suit; also all damages and costs recovered against any assessor, assistant assessor, collector, deputy collector, agent, or inspector, in any suit brought against him by reason of anything done in the due performance of his official duty, and shall make report to Congress at the beginning of each regular session of Congress of all transactions under this section.”

SEC. 1316. [Claims for refundment — limitation — R. S. sec. 3228 amended.] That section 3228 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

“ SEC. 3228. All claims for the refunding or crediting of any internal revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty alleged to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, must be presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue within four years next after payment of such tax, penalty, or sum.”

This section, except as modified by section 252, shall apply retroactively to claims for refund under the Revenue Act of 1916, the Revenue Act of 1917, and the Revenue Act of 1918.

For R. S. sec. 3228, as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1037.

SEC. 1317. [Permanent indefinite appropriations — refunding taxes illegally collected — R. S. sec. 3689 repealed in part.] That the paragraph of section 3689 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, reading as follows: “Refunding taxes illegally collected (internal revenue): To refund and pay back duties erroneously or illegally assessed or collected under the internal revenue laws," is repealed from and after June 30, 1920; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit for the fiscal year 1921, and annually thereafter, an estimate of appropriations to refund and pay back duties or taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected under the internal-revenue laws, and to pay judgments, including interest and costs, rendered for taxes or penalties erroneously or illegally assessed or collected under the internal-revenue laws.

For R. S. sec. 3689, partly repealed by this paragraph, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 141.

LIMITATIONS UPON SUITS AND PROSECUTIONS.

SEC. 1318. [Suits for recovery of taxes wrongfully collected — R. S. sec. 3226 amended.] That section 3226 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3226. No suit or proceeding shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, until a claim for refund or credit has been duly filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, according to the provisions of law in that regard, and the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury established in pursuance thereof. No such suit or proceeding shall be begun before the expiration of six months from the date of filing such claim unless the Commissioner renders a decision thereon within that time, nor after the expiration of five years from the date of the payment of such tax, penalty, or sum."

This section shall not affect any suit or proceeding instituted prior to the passage of this Act, but shall apply to all suits and proceedings instituted after the passage of this Act, whether or not barred by prior Acts of Congress.

For R. S. sec. 3226 as it formerly read, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1034.

SEC. 1319. [R. S. sec. 3227 repealed.] That section 3227 of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed but such repeal shall not affect any suit or proceeding instituted prior to the passage of this Act.

For R. S. sec. 3227, here repealed, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1037.

SEC. 1320. [Suits for collection of any internal revenue tax.] That no suit or proceeding for the collection of any internal revenue tax shall be begun after the expiration of five years from the time such tax was due, except in the case of fraud with intent to evade tax, or willful attempt in any manner to defeat or evade tax. This section shall not apply to suits or proceedings for the collection of taxes under section 250 of this Act, nor to suits or proceedings begun at the time of the passage of this Act.

SEC. 1321. [Prosecution for offenses against internal revenue laws — Act of July 5, 1884, amended.] (a) That the Act entitled "An Act to limit the time within which prosecutions may be instituted against persons charged with violating internal-revenue laws," approved July 5, 1884, is amended to read as follows:

"That no person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any of the various offenses arising under the internal-revenue laws of the United States unless the indictment is found or the information instituted within three years next after the commission of the offense: Provided, That the time during which the person committing the offense is absent from the district wherein the same is committed shall not be taken as any part of the time limited by law for the commencement of such proceedings: Provided further, That the provisions of this Act shall not apply to offenses committed prior to its passage: Provided further, That where a complaint shall be instituted before a commissioner of the United States within the period above limited, the time shall be extended until the discharge of the grand jury at its next session within the district: And provided further, That this Act shall not apply to offenses committed by officers of the United States."

(b) Any prosecution or proceeding under an indictment found or information instituted prior to the passage of this Act shall not be affected in any manner by this amendment, but such prosecution or proceeding shall be subject to the limitations imposed by law prior to the passage of this Act.

For Act of July 5, 1884, as it formerly read, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 330.

ASSESSMENTS.

SEC. 1322. [Time of assessments — effect of fraud, etc.] That all internal revenue taxes, except as provided in section 250 of this Act, shall, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3182 of the Revised Statutes or any other provision of law, be assessed within four years after such taxes became due, but in the case of fraud with intent to evade tax or willful attempt in any manner to defeat or evade tax, such tax may be assessed at any time.

For R. S. sec. 3182, mentioned in the text, see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1010.

FRAUDULENT RETURNS.

SEC. 1323. [Recovery of taxes collected under second assessment based on fraudulent returns — R. S. sec. 3225 re-enacted.] That section 3225 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, is reenacted without change as follows:

"SEC. 3225. When a second assessment is made in case of any list, statement, or return, which in the opinion of the collector or deputy collector was false or fraudulent, or contained any understatement or undervaluation, such assessment shall not be remitted, nor shall taxes collected under such assessment be refunded, or paid back, or recovered by any suit, unless it is proved that such list, statement, or return was not willfully false or fraudulent and did not contain any willful understatement or undervaluation."

For R. S. sec. 3225, as it formerly read, see 1918 Supp. 279.

SEC. 1324. Interest on refunds and judgments. (a) That upon the allowance of a claim for the refund of or credit for internal revenue taxes paid, interest shall be allowed and paid upon the total amount of such refund or credit at the rate of one-half of 1 per centum per month to the date of such allowance, as follows: (1) if such amount was paid under a specific protest setting forth in detail the basis of and reasons for such protest, from the time when such tax was paid, or (2) if such amount was not paid under protest but pursuant to an additional assessment, from the time such additional assessment was paid, or (3) if no protest was made and the tax was not paid pursuant to an additional assessment, from six months after the date of filing of such claim for refund or credit. The term "additional assessment" as used in this section means a further assessment for a tax of the same character previously paid in part.

(b) Section 177 of the Judicial Code is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 177. No interest shall be allowed on any claim up to the time of the rendition of judgment by the Court of Claims, unless upon a contract expressly stipulating for the payment of interest, except that interest may be allowed in any judgment of any court rendered after the passage of the Revenue Act of 1921 against the United States for any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or for any penalty collected without authority or any sum which was excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, under the internal-revenue laws."

For Jud. Code, sec. 177, as it formerly read, see 5 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 680.

SEC. 1325. Payments of taxes by check or United States securities. That collectors may receive, at par with an adjustment for accrued interest, notes or certificates of indebtedness issued by the United States and uncertified checks in payment of income, war profits and excess-profits taxes and any other taxes payable other than by stamp, during such time and under such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe; but if a check so received is not paid by the bank on which it is drawn the person by whom such check has been tendered shall remain liable for the payment of the tax and for all legal penalties and additions the same as if such check had not been tendered.

SEC. 1326. Frauds on purchasers. That whoever in connection with the sale or lease, or offer for sale or lease, of any article, or for the purpose of making such sale or lease, makes any statement, written or oral, (1) intended or calculated to lead any person to believe that any part of the price at which such article is sold or leased, or offered for sale or lease, consists of a tax imposed under the authority of the United States, or (2) ascribing a particular part of such price to a tax imposed under the authority of the United States, knowing that such statement is false or that the tax is not so great as the portion of such price ascribed to such tax, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

SEC. 1327. Tax simplification board. (a) That there is hereby established in the Department of the Treasury a board to be known as the "Tax Simplification Board" (hereinafter in this section called the "Board"), to be composed as follows:

(1) Three members who shall represent the public, to be appointed by the President; and

(2) Three members who shall represent the Bureau of Internal Revenue and shall be officers or employees of the United States serving in such Bureau, to be appointed by the Secretary.

(b) Any vacancy in the Board shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment. The members representing the public shall serve without compensation except reimbursement for traveling, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of the duties vested in them by this section. The members representing the Bureau of Internal Revenue shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their service in such Bureau.

(c) The Secretary shall furnish the Board with such clerical assistance, quarters and stationery, furniture, office equipment, and other supplies as may be necessary for the performance of the duties vested in them by this section.

(d) It shall be the duty of the Board to investigate the procedure of and the forms used by the Bureau in the administration of the internal revenue laws, and to make recommendations in respect to the simplification thereof. The Board shall make a report to the Congress on or before the first Monday of December in each year.

(e) The expenditures of the Board shall be paid upon vouchers approved by the Board and signed by the chairman thereof. For the expenditures of the Board for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000.

(f) The Board shall cease to exist on December 31, 1924.

SEC. 1328. Consolidation of Liberty bond tax exemptions. That the various Acts authorizing the issues of Liberty bonds are amended and supplemented as follows:

(a) On and after January 1, 1921, 4 per centum and $4\frac{1}{4}$ per centum Liberty bonds shall be exempt from graduated additional income taxes, commonly known as surtaxes, and excess-profits and war-profits taxes, now or hereafter imposed by the United States upon the income or profits of individuals, partnerships, corporations, or associations, in respect to the interest on aggregate principal amounts thereof as follows:

Until the expiration of two years after the date of the termination of the war between the United States and the German Government, as fixed by proclamation of the President, on $125,000 aggregate principal amount; and for three years more on $50,000 aggregate principal amount.

(b) The exemptions provided in subdivision (a) shall be in addition to the exemptions provided in section 7 of the Second Liberty Bond Act, and in addition to the exemption provided in subdivision (3) of section 1 of the Supplement to the Second Liberty Bond Act in respect to bonds issued upon conversion of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per centum bonds, but shall be in lieu of the exemptions provided and free from the conditions and limitations imposed in subdivisions (1) and (2) of section 1 of the Supplement to Second Liberty Bond Act and in section 2 of the Victory Liberty Loan Act.

SEC. 1329. Deposit of United States bonds or notes in lieu of surety. (See SURETY AND SURETYSHIP.)

SEC. 1330. Lost stamps for tobacco, cigars, and so forth — R. S. sec. 3315 re-enacted. That section 3315 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is re-enacted without change, as follows:

“ SEC. 3315. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue may, under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, issue stamps for restamping packages of distilled spirits, tobacco, cigars, snuff, cigarettes, fermented liquors, and wines which have been duly stamped but from which the stamps have been lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident."

For R. S. sec. 3315, as it formerly read, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 70.

SEC. 1331. Consolidated returns for year 1917. (a) That Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917 shall be construed to impose the taxes therein mentioned upon the basis of consolidated returns of net income and invested capital in the case of domestic corporations and domestic partnerships that were affiliated during the calendar year 1917.

(b) For the purpose of this section a corporation or partnership was affiliated with one or more corporations or partnerships (1) when such corporation or partnership owned directly or controlled through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees all or substantially all the stock of the other or others, or (2) when substantially all the stock of two or more corporations or the business of two or more partnerships was owned by the same interests: Provided, That such corporations or partnerships were engaged in the same or a closely related business, or one corporation or partnership bought from or sold to another corporation or partnership products or services at prices above or below the current market, thus effecting an artificial distribution of profits, or one corporation or partnership in any way so arranged its financial relationships with another corporation or partnership as to assign to it a disproportionate share of net income or invested capital. For the purposes of this section, public service corporations which (1) were operated independently, (2) were not physically connected or merged and (3) did not receive special permission to make a consolidated return, shall not be construed to have been affiliated; but a railroad or other public utility which was owned by an industrial corporation and was operated as a plant facility or as an integral part of a group organization of affiliated corporations which were required to file a consolidated return, shall be construed to have been affiliated.

(c) The provisions of this section are declaratory of the provisions of Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917.

For Revenue Act of 1917, see 1918 Supp. 270 et seq.

SEC. 1332. Alternative tax on personal service corporations. (a) That if either subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act is by final adjudication declared invalid, there shall, in addition to all other taxes, be levied, collected, and paid on the net income (as defined in section 232) received during the calendar years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921, by every personal service corporation (as defined in section 200) included within the provisions of such subdivisions, a tax equal to the taxes imposed by Titles II and III of the Revenue Act of 1918 and, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921, by Titles II and III of this Act.

(b) In such event every such personal service corporation shall, on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the date of entry of decree upon such final adjudication, make a return of any income received during each of the calendar years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921 in the manner prescribed by the Revenue Act of 1918 (or in the manner prescribed by this Act, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921). Such return shall be made and the net income shall be computed on the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in the manner provided for other corporations under the Revenue Act of 1918 and this Act.

(c) If either subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918, or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act is so declared invalid, claims for credit or refund of taxes paid under both such sections shall be allowed, if made within the time provided in subdivision (f) of this section.

(d) In case the claims for credit or refund, filed within six months from such date of entry of decree, represents less than 30 per centum of the outstanding stock or shares in the corporation, the amount of taxes imposed by this section upon such corporation shall be reduced to that proportion thereof which the number of stock or shares owned by the shareholders or members making such claims bears to the total number of stock or shares outstanding.

(e) The tax imposed by this section shall be assessed, collected, and paid upon the same basis, in the same manner, and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as the taxes imposed by sections 230 and 301 of the Revenue Act of 1918 (or by sections 230 and 301 of this Act, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921), but no interest or penalties shall be due or payable thereon for any period prior to the date upon which the return is by this section required to be made and the first installment paid. The amount of tax paid by any shareholder or member of a personal service corporation pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act shall be credited against the tax due from such corporation under this section upon the joint written application of such corporation and such shareholder or member or his representatives, heirs, or assigns, if such application is filed with the Commissioner within six months from such date of entry of decree.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no claim for a credit or refund of taxes paid under subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act, may be filed after the expiration of six months from such date of entry of decree: Provided, however, That a personal service corporation of which no shareholder or member has filed such claim within such period of six months shall not be subject to the tax imposed by this section.

For Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 90 et seq.

TITLE XIV.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 1400. Repeals. (a) That the following parts of the Revenue Act of 1918 are repealed, to take effect (except as otherwise provided in this Act) on January 1, 1922, subject to the limitations provided in subdivision (b):

Title II (called "Income Tax," as of January 1, 1921;

Title III (called "War-Profits and Excess-Profits Tax") as of January 1, 1921;

Title IV (called "Estate Tax") on the passage of this Act;

Title V (called "Tax on Transportation and Other Facilities, and on Insurance");

Sections 628, 629, and 630 of Title VI (being the taxes on soft drinks, ice cream, and similar articles);

Title VII (called "Tax on Cigars, Tobacco and Manufactures Thereof");
Title VIII (called "Tax on Admissions and Dues");

Sections 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1319, and 1320 of Title XIII (being certain administrative provisions) on the passage of this Act.

For Revenue Act of 1918, see 1919 Supp. 90 et. seq.

(b) The parts of the Revenue Act of 1918 which are repealed by this Act shall (unless otherwise specifically provided in this Act) remain in force for the assessment and collection of all taxes which have accrued under the Revenue Act of 1918 at the time such parts cease to be in effect, and for the imposition and collection of all penalties or forfeitures which have accrued or may accrue in relation to any such taxes. In the case of any tax imposed by any part of the Revenue Act of 1918 repealed by this Act, if there is a tax imposed by this Act in lieu thereof, the provision imposing such tax shall remain in force until the corresponding tax under this Act takes effect under the provisions of this Act. The unexpended balance of any appropriation heretofore made and now available for the administration of any such part of the Revenue Act of 1918 shall be available for the administration of this Act or the corresponding provision thereof.

An Act To amend the Transportation Act, 1920.

[“Transportation Act”—certifications under secs. 204 and 209—ascertainment of amounts payable—new section added.] That the Transportation Act, 1920, is hereby amended by adding after section 211 a new section to read as follows:

“SEC. 212. (a) In making certifications under section 204 or section 209, the Commission, if not at the time able finally to determine the whole amount due under such section to a carrier or the American Railway Express Company, may make its certificate for any amount definitely ascertained by it to be due, and may thereafter in the same manner make further certificates, until the whole amount due has been certified. The authority of and direction to the Secretary of the Treasury under such sections to draw warrants is hereby made applicable to each such certificate. Warrants drawn pursuant to this section, whether in partial payment or in final payment, shall be paid: (1) If for a payment in respect to reimbursement of a carrier for a deficit during the period of Federal control, out of the appropriation made by section 204; (2) if for a payment in respect to the guaranty to a carrier other than the American Railway Express Company, out of the appropriation made by subdivision (g) of section 209; and (3) if for a payment in respect to the guaranty to the American Railway Express Company, out of the appropriation made by the fifth paragraph of subdivision (i) of section 209.

“(b) In ascertaining the several amounts payable under either of such sections, the Commission is authorized, in the case of deferred debits and credits which can not at the time be definitely determined, to make, whenever in its judgment practicable, a reasonable estimate of the net effect of any such items, and, when agreed to by the carrier or express company, to use such estimate as a definitely ascertained amount in certifying amounts payable under either of such sections, and such estimates so agreed to shall be prima facie but not conclusive evidence of their correctness in amount in final settlement.”

Joint Resolution To exempt the New York State Barge Canal from the provisions of section 201 of the Transportation Act, 1920, and for other purposes.

[Res. of Feb. 27, 1921, No. 62.]

[“Transportation Act”—exemption of New York state barge canal from provisions of sec. 201.] That at the end of thirty days after the passage of this resolution the authority conferred upon the Secretary of War under section 201 of the Transportation Act, 1920, to operate for commercial purposes boats, barges, tugs, or other transportation facilities upon the New York State Barge Canal shall cease, and thereafter there shall be no such operation by the Secretary of War or any other agency of the United States. The Secretary of War shall as soon as is practicable, dispose of boats, barges, tugs, and other transportation facilities purchased or constructed for use upon the said canal, and, pending final disposition, the Secretary of War may lease the same: Provided; That all the money obtained from the sale or lease of these boats, barges, and tugs shall be available until expended by the inland and coastwise waterways service of the War Department in the inauguration and development of other inland, canal, and coastwise waterways in accordance with the expressed desire of Congress in section 500 of the Transportation Act, 1920: Provided further, That not to exceed 25 per centum of the boats, barges, and tugs built or purchased for the United States, herein authorized to be sold, may be retained by the United States for the operation of other inland, canal, or coastwise routes of the United States until such equipment can be replaced by other equipment to be purchased from funds received from the sale prescribed above.

For section 201 of “Transportation Act” affected by provisions of the text, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 73.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [“Transportation Act” — amendment of sec. 201 (c) — terminal facilities — construction by Secretary of War.] That section 201 (c), Transportation Act, 1920, be amended by striking out the words “whose constitution prohibits the ownership of such terminal facilities by other than the State or a political subdivision thereof,” and insert in lieu thereof the following: “municipality or transportation company; or to expend such moneys for necessary terminal improvements and facilities upon property leased from States, cities, or transportation companies under terms approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, or otherwise, in accordance with any order rendered by said commission under subheading (a), paragraph 13, section 6, Interstate Commerce Act.”

An Act To amend section 407 of the Transportation Act of 1920.

[Transportation Act — amendment of sec. 407 — consolidation of telephone companies.] That section 407 of the Transportation Act of 1920 be, and it is hereby, amended by adding thereto a new paragraph designated as paragraph (9), as follows:

“(9) Upon application of one or more telephone companies for authority to consolidate their properties or a part thereof into a single company, or for authority for one or more such companies to acquire the whole or any part of the property of another telephone company or other telephone companies or the control thereof by the purchase of securities or by lease or in any other like manner, when such consolidated company would be subject to this Act, the commission shall fix a time and place for a public hearing upon such application and shall thereupon give reasonable notice in writing to the governor of each of the States in which the physical property affected, or any part thereof, is situated, and to the State public service commission or other regulatory body, if any, having jurisdiction over telephone companies, and to such other persons as it may deem advisable. After such public hearing, if the commission finds that the proposed consolidation, acquisition, or control will be of advantage to the persons to whom service is to be rendered and in the public interest, it shall certify to that effect; and thereupon any Act or Acts of Congress making the proposed transaction unlawful shall not apply. Nothing in this paragraph contained shall be construed as in any wise limiting or restricting the powers of the several States, as now existing to control and regulate telephone companies.”

An Act Supplemental to the National Prohibition Act.*

[SEC. 1.] [Terms in Act defined.] That the words "person," "commissioner," "application," "permit," "regulation," and "liquor," and the phrase "intoxicating liquor," when used in this Act, shall have the same meaning as they have in Title II of the National Prohibition Act.

SEC. 2. [Prescriptions for medicinal purposes of spirituous and vinous liquors — importations, reimportation and manufacture.] That only spirituous and vinous liquor may be prescribed for medicinal purposes, and all permits to prescribe and prescriptions for any other liquor shall be void. No physician shall prescribe, nor shall any person sell or furnish on any prescription, any vinous liquor that contains more than 24 per centum of alcohol by volume, nor shall anyone prescribe or sell or furnish on any prescription more than one-fourth of one gallon of vinous liquor, or any such vinous or spirituous liquor that contains separately or in the aggregate more than one-half pint of alcohol, for use by any person within any period of ten days. No physician shall be furnished with more than one hundred prescription blanks for use in any period of ninety days, nor shall any physician issue more than that number of prescriptions within any such period unless on application therefor he shall make it clearly apparent to the commissioner that for some extraordinary reason a larger amount is necessary, whereupon the necessary additional blanks may be furnished him. But this provision shall not be construed to limit the sale of any article the manufacture of which is authorized under section 4, Title II, of the National Prohibition Act.

If the commissioner shall find after hearing, upon notice as required in section 5 of Title II of the National Prohibition Act, that any article enumerated in subdivisions b, c, d, or e of section 4 of Title II of said National Prohibition Act is being used as a beverage, or for intoxicating beverage purposes, he may require a change of formula of such article and in the event that such change is not made within a time to be named by the commissioner he may cancel the permit for the manufacture of such article unless it is made clearly to appear to the commissioner that such use can only occur in rare or exceptional instances, but such action of the commissioner may by appropriate proceedings in a court of equity be reviewed, as provided for in section 5, Title II, of said National Prohibition Act: Provided, That no change of formula shall be required and no permit to manufacture any article under subdivision (E), section 4, Title II of the National Prohibition Act shall be revoked unless the sale or use of such article is substantially increased in the community by reason of its use as a beverage or for intoxicating beverage purposes.

No spirituous liquor shall be imported into the United States, nor shall any permit be granted authorizing the manufacture of any spirituous liquor, save alcohol, until the amount of such liquor now in distilleries or other bonded warehouses shall have been reduced to a quantity that in the opinion of the commissioner will, with liquor that may thereafter be manufactured and imported, be sufficient to supply the current need thereafter for all nonbeverage uses: Provided, That no vinous liquor shall be imported into the United States unless it is made to appear to the commissioner that vinous liquor for such nonbeverage use produced in the United States is not sufficient to meet such nonbeverage needs: Provided further, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this Act: And provided further, That the commissioner may authorize the return to the United States under such regulations and conditions as he may prescribe any distilled spirits of American production exported free of tax and reimported in original packages in which exported and consigned for redeposit in the distillery bonded warehouse from which originally removed.

SEC. 3. [Territory affected by National Prohibition Act — Hawaii — Virgin Islands — courts.] That this Act and the National Prohibition Act shall apply not only to the United States but to all territory subject to its jurisdiction, including the Territory of Hawaii and the Virgin Islands; and jurisdiction is conferred on the courts of the Territory of Hawaii and the Virgin Islands to enforce this Act and the National Prohibition Act in such Territory and Islands.

SEC. 4. [Regulations — making by commissioner — penalty for violations.] That regulations may be made by the commissioner to carry into effect the provisions of this Act. Any person who violates any of the provisions of this Act shall be subject to the penalties provided for in the National Prohibition Act.

SEC. 5. [National Prohibition Act as affecting laws in existence at time of enactment — loss of distilled spirits as affecting payment of tax thereon.] That all laws in regard to the manufacture and taxation of and traffic in intoxicating liquor, and all penalties for violations of such laws that were in force when the National Prohibition Act was enacted, shall be and continue in force, as to both beverage and nonbeverage liquor, except such provisions of such laws as are directly in conflict with any provision of the National Prohibition Act or of this Act; but if any act is a violation of any of such laws and also of the National Prohibition Act or of this Act, a conviction for such act or offense under one shall be a bar to prosecution therefor under the other. All taxes and tax penalties provided for in section 35 of Title II of the National Prohibition Act shall be assessed and collected in the same manner and by the same procedure as other taxes on the manufacture of or traffic in liquor.

If distilled spirits upon which the internal-revenue tax has not been paid are lost by theft, accidental fire, or other casualty while in possession of a common carrier subject to the Transportation Act of 1920 or the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, or if lost by theft from a distillery or other bonded warehouse, and it shall be made to appear to the commissioner that such losses did not occur as the result of negligence, connivance, collusion, or fraud on the part of the owner or person legally accountable for such distilled spirits, no tax shall be assessed or collected upon the distilled spirits so lost, nor shall any tax penalty be imposed or collected by reason of such loss, but the exemption from the tax and penalty shall only be allowed to the extent that the claimant is not indemnified against or recompensed for such loss. This provision shall apply to any claim for taxes or tax penalties that may have accrued since the passage of the National Prohibition Act or that may accrue hereafter. Nothing in this section shall be construed as in any manner limiting or restricting the provisions of Title III of the National Prohibition Act.

Sec. 6. [Immunity of private dwelling from search without warrant — impersonating United States officer or employee.] That any officer, agent, or employee of the United States engaged in the enforcement of this Act, or the National Prohibition Act, or any other law of the United States, who shall search any private dwelling as defined in the National Prohibition Act, and occupied as such dwelling, without a warrant directing such search, or who while so engaged shall without a search warrant maliciously and without reasonable cause search any other building or property, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined for a first offense not more than $1,000, and for a subsequent offense not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Whoever not being an officer, agent, or employee of the United States shall falsely represent himself to be such officer, agent, or employee and in such assumed character shall arrest or detain any person, or shall in any manner search the person, buildings, or other property of any person, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

An Act To amend section 1 of an Act approved February 26, 1919, entitled "An Act to fix the salaries of the clerks of the United States district courts and to provide for their office expenses, and for other purposes."

[United States district courts — clerks — appointments — fees and emoluments — salaries.] That section 1 of the Act approved February 26, 1919, entitled "An Act to fix the salaries of the Clerks of the United States district courts and to provide for their office expenses, and for other purposes," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 1. That on and after the 1st day of July, 1918, all clerks of the United States district courts shall be appointed by the judge for the district, or the senior judge if there be more than one judge in the district, and all fees and emoluments authorized by law to be paid to the clerks of the United States district courts, except the clerks of the district courts of Alaska, shall be charged as heretofore and shall be collected, as far as possible, and paid into the Treasury of the United States in such manner and at such times as herein-after provided; and such clerks shall be paid, in lieu of the fees and emoluments now allowed by law, an annual salary as hereinafter provided: Provided, That this section shall not be construed to require or authorize fees to be charged or collected from the United States."

For this section as originally enacted, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 224.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [United States Court for China — expenses of judge and district attorney during sessions away from Shanghai.] The judge of the said court and the district attorney shall, when the sessions of the court are held at other cities than Shanghai, receive in addition to their salaries their necessary actual expenses during such sessions, not to exceed $8 per day each.

This is from the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation Act of March 2, 1921.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Marshals and deputy marshals — per diem in lieu of subsistence.] That marshals and office deputy marshals (except in the District of Alaska) may be granted a per diem of not to exceed $4 in lieu of subsistence, instead of, but under the conditions prescribed for, the present allowance for actual expenses of subsistence.

This and the four paragraphs which follow are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [District attorneys and assistants — per diem in lieu of subsistence.] That United States district attorneys and their regular assistants may be granted a per diem of not to exceed $4 in lieu of subsistence, instead of, but under the conditions prescribed for, the present allowance for actual expenses of subsistence.

See note to preceding paragraph.

* * * [Assistant district attorneys — compensation.] That except as otherwise prescribed by law the compensation of such of the assistant district attorneys authorized by section 8 of the Act approved May 28, 1896, as the Attorney General may deem necessary, may be fixed at not exceeding $3,000 per annum.

See note to the first paragraph of this section.

For Act of May 28, 1896, section 8, mentioned in the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 622.

* * * [Clerks of courts and assistants — salaries and compensation — District of Columbia — Hawaii — Porto Rico.] That provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to fix the salaries of the clerks of the United States district courts and to provide for their office expenses, and for other purposes," approved February 26, 1919, shall be applicable on and after July 1, 1921, to the clerk of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, excepting that said clerk shall be appointed as heretofore by said Court in General Term, and to the clerks of the district courts of the United States for Hawaii and Porto Rico: Provided further, That no clerk or deputy clerk or assistant in the office of the clerk of a United States district court shall receive any compensation or emoluments through any office or position to which he may be appointed by the court, other than that received as such clerk, deputy clerk, or assistant, whether from the United States or from private litigants.

See note to the first paragraph of this section.

For Act of Feb. 26, 1919, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 224.

* * * [Criers and bailiffs — attendance — vacation.] That all persons employed under section 715 of the Revised Statutes shall be deemed to be in actual attendance when they attend upon the order of the courts: Provided further, That no such person shall be employed during vacation.

See note to first paragraph of this section.

For R. S. sec. 715 (Jud. Code, sec. 5), mentioned in the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 819 note.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Foreign counsel employed by Attorney-General — oath of office.] For payment of foreign counsel employed by the Attorney General in special cases (such counsel shall not be required to take oath of office in accordance with section 366, Revised Statutes of the United States), to be available * * *

This and the two following paragraphs are from the Deficiency Appropriation Act of June 16, 1921.

For R. S. sec. 366, mentioned in the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 622.

* * * [United States District Courts — Clerks, deputies and assistants serving as United States Commissioners — compensation.] That clerks of United States district courts, their deputies and assistants, who are or may be appointed United States commissioners, may receive compensation for both offices in an aggregate amount not exceeding the rate of $2,000 per annum:

See note to preceding paragraph.

[Clerks, deputies and assistants — gratuities.] That the acceptance of payment for personal services from private litigants shall be deemed a vacation of their appointments as clerks, deputy clerks, or clerical assistants.

An Act To amend section 74 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

[District courts — Connecticut — terms — sec. 74 of Jud. Code amended.] That section 74 of the Judicial Code, as amended, be amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 74. The State of Connecticut shall constitute one judicial district, to be known as the District of Connecticut. Terms of the district court shall be held at New Haven on the fourth Tuesdays in February and September, at Hartford on the fourth Tuesday in May and the first Tuesday in December, and at Norwalk on the fourth Tuesday in April: Provided, however, That suitable rooms and accommodations shall be furnished for the holdings of said court and for the use of the officers of said court at Norwalk free of expense to the Government of the United States.”

For section 74 of Jud. Code here amended, see 5 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 557.

An Act To amend an Act entitled “ The New Mexico Enabling Act.”

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[District courts — New Mexico — circuit — officers — terms — sec. 13 of Act of June 20, 1910, amended.] That section 13 of the Act entitled “An Act to enable the people of New Mexico to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States,” approved June 20, 1910, is hereby amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 13. That the State, when admitted as aforesaid, shall constitute one judicial district, and the district court of said district shall be held at the capital of said State, and the said district shall, for judicial purposes, be attached to the eighth judicial circuit. There shall be appointed for said district one district judge, one United States attorney, and one United States marshal. The judge of said district shall receive a yearly salary the same as other similar judges of the United States, payable as provided for by law, and shall reside in the district to which he is appointed. There shall be appointed a clerk of said court, who shall keep his office at the capital of said State. The regular terms of said court shall be held on the first Monday in March and the first Monday in September of each year. The district court for said district and the judges thereof shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties required to be performed by the other district court and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations. The marshal, district attorney, and the clerks of the district court of said district, and all other officers and persons performing duties in the administration of justice therein, shall severally possess the powers and perform the duties lawfully possessed and required to be performed by similar officers in other districts of the United States, and shall, for the services they may perform, receive the fees and compensation now allowed by law to officers performing similar services for the United States in the Territory of New Mexico.”

An Act Authorizing the appointment of an additional judge for the district of North Dakota.

[SEC. 1.] [North Dakota judicial district — additional judge.] That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint an additional judge of the District Court of the United States for the judicial district of the State of North Dakota, who shall possess the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive the same compensation and allowance as the present judge of said district, and the judge so appointed shall be held and treated as the senior judge and shall exercise such powers and perform such duties in that judicial district as may be incident to seniority.

SEC. 2. [Retirement, etc., of senior judge — filling vacancy.] That whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of the district judge for the district of North Dakota, by the retirement, disqualification, or death of the judge senior in commission, such vacancy shall not be filled, and thereafter there shall be but one district judge in said district.

An Act Providing for the appointment of an additional district judge for the southern judicial district of the State of West Virginia.

[SEC. 1.] [West Virginia southern judicial district — additional judge.] That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint an additional judge of the district court of the United States for the southern judicial district of the State of West Virginia, who shall possess the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive the same compensation and allowance as the present judge of said district, and the judge so appointed shall be held and treated as the senior judge and shall exercise such powers and perform such duties in that judicial district as may be incident to seniority.

SEC. 2. [Retirement, etc., of senior judge — filling vacancy.] That whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of the district judge for the southern district of West Virginia senior in commission such vacancy shall not be filled, and thereafter there shall be but one district judge in said district.

SEC. 1310 (c). [Jurisdiction of district courts — of suits against the United States — sec. 24 of Jud. Code amended.] Paragraph Twentieth of section 24 of the Judicial Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“ Concurrent with the Court of Claims, of any suit or proceeding, commenced after the passage of the Revenue Act of 1921, for the recovery of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority or any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, under the internal-revenue laws, even if the claim exceeds $10,000, if the collector of internal-revenue by whom such tax, penalty, or sum was collected is dead at the time such suit or proceeding is commenced."

This and the section which follows are from the "Revenue Act of 1921" enacted Nov. 23, 1921.

For the paragraph here amended, as it formerly read, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1059.

SEC. 1324 (b). [Court of Claims — no interest on claim — sec. 177 of Jud. Code amended.] Section 177 of the Judicial Code is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 177. No interest shall be allowed on any claim up to the time of the rendition of judgment by the Court of Claims, unless upon a contract expressly stipulating for the payment of interest, except that interest may be allowed in any judgment of any court rendered after the passage of the Revenue Act of 1921 against the United States for any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or for any penalty collected without authority or any sum which was excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, under the internal-revenue laws."

See note to preceding paragraph.

Joint Resolution To amend an Act entitled "An Act to amend section 955 of the Revised Statutes by extending the jurisdiction of courts in cases of revivor."

[Res. of Dec. 22, 1921, No. 35.]

[Procedure in general — death of parties — revivor — R. S. sec. 955 amended.] That an Act entitled "An Act to amend section 955 of the Revised Statutes by extending the jurisdiction of courts in cases of revivor," approved November 23, 1921 (Public Numbered 104), be amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 955. When either of the parties, whether plaintiff or petitioner or defendant, in any suit in any court of the United States, dies before final judgment, the executor or administrator of such deceased party may, in case the cause of action survives by law, prosecute or defend any such suit to final judgment. The defendant shall answer accordingly, and the court shall hear and determine the cause and render judgment for or against the executor or administrator, as the case may require. And if such executor or administrator, having been duly served with a scire facias from the office of the clerk of the court where the suit is depending twenty days beforehand, neglects or refuses to become party to the suit, the court may render judgment against the estate of the deceased party in the same manner as if the executor or administrator had voluntarily made himself a party. The executor or administrator who becomes a party as aforesaid shall, upon motion to the court, be entitled to a continuance of the suit until the next term of said court.

"The provisions of this section shall apply to suits in equity and in admiralty as well as to suits at law, and the jurisdiction of all courts of the United States shall extend to and over executors and administrators of any party, who dies before final judgment or decree, appointed under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States, and such courts shall have jurisdiction within two years from the date of the death of the party to the suit to issue its scire facias to executors and administrators appointed in any State or Territory of the United States which may be served in any judicial district by the marshal thereof: Provided, however, That no executor or administrator shall be made a party unless such service is made before final settlement and distribution of the estate of said deceased party to the suit."

SEC. 2. That the provisions of section 955 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended by this Act shall apply to suits in which any party has deceased prior to the passage of this amendatory Act as well as to suits in which any party may die hereafter.

The Act of Nov. 23, 1921, amended by this resolution, differed from it in containing in the second paragraph of the first section after the words "or Territory of the United States," where they first occur, the words "in which the action is pending." These latter words were stricken out by the amending resolution.

Act of March 4, 1921 (Sundry Civil Appropriation Act), 238.

Sec. 1. Lighthouse Service—Officers and Employees—Retirement—Pay, 238.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Lighthouse service—officers and employees—retirement—pay.] The provision of section 6 of the Act entitled “An Act to authorize aids to navigation and for other works in the Lighthouse Service, and for other purposes,” approved June 20, 1918, relative to compulsory retirement shall not apply to an employee of the Lighthouse Service if within sixty days after the passage of this Act or not less than thirty days before the arrival of such employee at the age of seventy, the Secretary of Commerce shall certify as a matter of public record that by reason of his efficiency and willingness to remain in the Lighthouse Service of the United States the continuance of such employee therein would be advantageous to the public service. In that event such employee may be retained for a term not exceeding two years, and at the end of two years such employee may, by similar certification, be continued for an additional term not exceeding two years: Provided, however, That at the end of ten years after this Act becomes effective no employee shall be continued in the Lighthouse Service beyond the age of compulsory retirement defined in the Act of June 20, 1918, referred to in this paragraph: Provided further, That nothing herein shall exclude or prevent any employee of the Lighthouse Service who shall have reached the age of compulsory retirement within thirty days before or after the date of the passage of this Act from enjoying the privileges thereof.

MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING

Act of March 4, 1921 (Sundry Civil Appropriation Act), 241.

Sec. 1. Bureau of Mines — Officers of Public Health Service — Detail — Compensation, 241.

Employees — Detail — Expenses per Diem, 241.

Cooperative Work for Other Departments — Expenses — Transfer of Funds, 241.

Act of Aug. 24, 1921, 242.

Unpatented Mineral Claims — Annual Assessment Work — R. S. Sec. 2324 Amended, 242.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Bureau of Mines — officers of Public Health Service — detail — compensation.] The Secretary of the Treasury may detail medical officers of the Public Health Service for cooperative health, safety, or sanitation work with the Bureau of Mines, and the compensation and expenses of the officers so detailed may be paid from the applicable appropriations made herein for the Bureau of Mines;

This and the paragraphs which follow are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [Employees — detail — expenses per diem.] Persons employed during the fiscal year 1922 in field work outside of the District of Columbia under the Bureau of Mines may be detailed temporarily for service in the District of Columbia, for purposes of preparing results of their field work; all persons so detailed shall be paid in addition to their regular compensation only their actual traveling expenses or per diem in lieu of subsistence in going to and returning therefrom: Provided, That nothing herein shall prevent the payment to employees of the Bureau of Mines of their necessary expenses, or per diem in lieu of subsistence while on temporary detail in the District of Columbia, for purposes only of consultation or investigations on behalf of the United States. All details made hereunder, and the purposes of each, during the preceding fiscal year shall be reported in the annual estimates of appropriations to Congress at the beginning of each regular session thereof;

See note to preceding paragraph.

* * * [Cooperative work for other departments — expenses — transfer of funds.] During the fiscal year 1922, the head of any department or independent establishment of the Government having funds available for scientific investigations and requiring cooperative work by the Bureau of Mines on scientific investigations within the scope of the functions of that Bureau and which it is unable to perform within the limits of its appropriations, may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, transfer to the Bureau of Mines such sums as may be necessary to carry on such investigations. The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer on the books of the Treasury Department any sums which may be authorized hereunder and such amounts shall be placed to the credit of the Bureau of Mines for the performance of work for the department or establishment from which the transfer is made;

See note to first paragraph of this section.

An Act Changing the period for doing annual assessment work on unpatented mineral claims from the calendar year to the fiscal year beginning July 1 each year.

[Unpatented mineral claims — annual assessment work — R. S. Sec. 2324 amended.] That section 2 of “An Act to amend sections 2324 and 2325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States concerning mineral lands,” approved January 22, 1880, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 2. That section 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended by adding the following words ‘Provided, That the period within which the work required to be done annually on all unpatented mineral claims located since May 10, 1872, including such claims in the Territory of Alaska, shall commence at 12 o'clock meridian on the 1st day of July succeeding the date of location of such claim: Provided further, That on all such valid existing claims the annual period ending December 31, 1921, shall continue to 12 o'clock meridian July 1, 1922.’ ”

An Act To amend section 11 (m) of the Act approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the Acts approved September 7, 1916, and March 3, 1919.

[Powers of Federal Reserve Board — permitting Federal Reserve Banks to discount notes, etc., for member banks — sec. 11 (m) of Federal Reserve Act amended.] That section 11 of the Act approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, be further amended by striking out the whole of subsection (m), and by substituting therefor a subsection to read as follows:

“(m) Upon the affirmative vote of not less than five of its members, the Federal Reserve Board shall have power to permit Federal reserve banks to discount for any member bank notes, drafts, or bills of exchange bearing the signature or endorsement of any one borrower in excess of the amount permitted by section 9 and section 13 of this Act, but in no case to exceed 20 per centum of the member bank’s capital and surplus: Provided, however, That all such notes, drafts, or bills of exchange discounted for any member bank in excess of the amount permitted under such sections shall be secured by not less than a like face amount of bonds or notes of the United States issued since April 24, 1917, for which the borrower shall in good faith prior to January 1, 1921, have paid or agreed to pay not less than the full face amount thereof, or certificates of indebtedness of the United States: Provided further, That the provisions of this subsection (m) shall not be operative after October 31, 1921.”

Sec. 11(m) here amended was added to sec. 11 by Act of Sept. 16, 1916, set out in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 470. Sec. 11 as originally enacted is set out in 6 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 828.

[Creation of corporations to do foreign banking — depositaries in insular possession — sec. 25 (a) of Federal Reserve Act amended.] That the first paragraph of the Act approved December 24, 1919, known as the Edge Act, amending the Federal Reserve Act, be amended by adding at the end a proviso, so that the paragraph as amended will read as follows:

“SEC. 25. (a) Corporations to be organized for the purpose of engaging in international or foreign banking or other international or foreign financial operations, or in banking or other financial operations in a dependency or insular possession of the United States, either directly or through the agency, ownership, or control of local institutions in foreign countries, or in such dependencies or insular possessions as provided by this section, and to act when required by the Secretary of the Treasury as fiscal agents of the United States, may be formed by any number of natural persons, not less in any case than five: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to deny the right of the Secretary of the Treasury to use any corporation organized under this section as depositaries in Panama and the Panama Canal Zone, or in the Philippine Islands and other insular possessions and dependencies of the United States.”

For sec. 25 (a) as originally enacted see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 268.

An Act To amend section 5146 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in relation to the qualifications of directors of the National Banking Association.

[Requisite qualifications of directors — R. S. sec. 5146 amended.] That Section 5146 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be so amended as to read as follows:

“SEC. 5146. Every director must, during his whole term of service, be a citizen of the United States, and at least three-fourths of the directors must have resided in the State, Territory, or District in which the association is located, or within fifty miles of the location of the office of the association, for at least one year immediately preceding their election, and must be residents of such State or within a fifty-mile territory of the location of the association during their continuance in office. Every director must own in his own right at least ten shares of the capital stock of the association of which he is a director, unless the capital of the bank shall not exceed $25,000, in which case he must own in his own right at least five shares of such capital stock. Any director who ceases to be the owner of the required number of shares of the stock, or who becomes in any other manner disqualified, shall thereby vacate his place.”

An Act To amend the Act approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal Reserve Act.

[Act of June 14, 1921.]

[Creation of corporations to do foreign business — capital stock — sec. 25 (a) of Federal Reserve Act amended.] That section 25 (a) of the Federal Reserve Act, being the section added to said Act by the Act approved December 24, 1919, be amended so that the first sentence of the paragraph prescribing the amount of capital stock a corporation organized under that section is required to have and prescribing also the manner in which such capital stock must be paid in, said paragraph being the fourth paragraph following subparagraph (c) of said section shall read as follows:

“No corporation shall be organized under the provisions of this section with a capital stock of less than $2,000,000, one-quarter of which must be paid in before the corporation may be authorized to begin business, and the remainder of the capital stock of such corporation shall be paid in installments of at least 10 per centum on the whole amount to which the corporation shall be limited as frequently as one installment at the end of each succeeding two months from the time of the commencement of its business operations until the whole of the capital stock shall be paid in: Provided, however. That whenever

$2,000,000 of the capital stock of any corporation is paid in the remainder of the corporation's capital stock or any unpaid part of such remainder may, with the consent of the Federal Reserve Board and subject to such regulations and conditions as it may prescribe, be paid in upon call from the board of directors; such unpaid subscriptions, however, to be included in the maximum of 10 per centum of the national bank's capital and surplus which a national bank is permitted under the provisions of this Act to hold in stock of corporations engaged in business of the kind described in this section and in section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended: Provided further, That no such corporation shall have liabilities outstanding at any one time upon its debentures, bonds, and promissory notes in excess of ten times its paid-in capital and surplus.

Act of Oct. 22, 1921, 246.

Sec. 1. Deficient Midshipmen — Reinstatement, 246.

2. Repeal of Clause in Act of June 5, 1920, Respecting Deficient Midshipmen — Restoration of R. S. Sec. 1519, 246.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Midshipmen — clothing and equipment — allowance.] That hereafter each new midshipman shall, upon admission to the Naval Academy, be credited with the sum of $250 to cover the cost of his initial clothing and equipment issue, to be deducted subsequently from his pay: Provided further, That the foregoing proviso shall apply to midshipmen who enter the Naval Academy during the period between June 20, 1921, and the date of the approval of this Act.

This is from the Naval Appropriation Act of July 12, 1921.

An Act Providing for the readmission of certain deficient midshipmen to the United States Naval Academy.

[Act of Oct. 22, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Deficient midshipmen — reinstatement.] That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized, upon application, to admit to and reinstate in the United States Naval Academy, subject to examination as to physical qualifications, as provided by law, but waiving the provisions of law as to age requirements, all former midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy found deficient at the end of the first term of the academic year 1920-21 whose resignations were asked for and received by the Superintendent of the Naval Academy: Provided, That they shall upon admission be placed in the class one year behind their former class in each case: Provided further, That said midshipmen affected by this Act must signify their acceptance of the benefits thereof by presenting themselves for physical examination within one month of the date of its approval, and if found qualified will enter the Naval Academy immediately.

SEC. 2. [Repeal of clause in Act of June 5, 1920, respecting deficient midshipmen — restoration of R. S. sec. 1519.] That the clause in the Act approved June 5, 1920 (Forty-first Statutes, page 1028), entitled "An Act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, and for other purposes," which reads as follows: "That until otherwise provided by law no midshipmen found deficient at the close of the last and succeeding academic terms shall be involuntarily discontinued at the Naval Academy or in the service unless he shall fail upon reexamination in the subjects in which found deficient at an examination to be held at the beginning of the next and succeeding academic terms, and the Secretary of the Navy shall provide for the special instruction of such midshipmen in the subjects in which found deficient during the period between academic terms," be, and the same hereby is, repealed, and section 1519 of the Revised Statutes restored to its full force and effect.

For clause in Act of June 5, 1920, here repealed, see 1920 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 141.

for the use and occupancy of such lands by the United States, such compensation to be paid from appropriations made for payments for such lands: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy, in determining the compensation for the use and occupancy of such lands, is authorized, in his discretion, to sell and convey, under such terms and conditions as he may deem appropriate, to the parties entitled to receive the land such improvements or any part thereof as may have been placed in or on said lands by the United States: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to execute all necessary instruments to accomplish the purposes of aforesaid, and all moneys received from the disposition of such lands shall be covered into the Treasury as "miscellaneous receipts." Report shall be made to the Congress of the final disposition of the lands aforesaid.

* * * [Bureau of Ordnance — appropriations — application.] That no part of the appropriations heretofore, herein, or hereafter made for "Increase of the Navy" under the Bureau of Ordnance and no part of allotments of appropriations heretofore or hereafter made to said bureau shall be available for the payment for services or materials used in the construction of any shop, building, living quarters, or other structures, except such temporary structures costing not in excess of $5,000 each as may be incident to current work of said bureau, or for additions and betterments to any existing shore station facilities unless the appropriation shall in terms specifically authorize such construction or additions and betterments: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as interfering in any way with any existing contract or any work in progress on the date of the approval of this Act: Provided further, That hereafter no money appropriated for ordnance or ordnance material or material purchased therewith shall be used for any other purpose than that for which the appropriation was made: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed as preventing the allocation of armor, armament, ammunition, ordnance material, equipment, and accessories to ships according to the requirements of the naval service.

* * * [Naval Reserve Force — retainer pay.] That retainer pay provided by existing law shall not be paid to any member of the Naval Reserve Force who fails to train as provided by law during the year for which he fails to train.

* * * [Courts-martial prisoners — rations — commutation.] That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to commute rations for such general courts-martial prisoners in such amounts as seem to him proper, which may vary in accordance with the location of the naval prison, but which shall in no case exceed 30 cents per diem for each ration so commuted;

SEC. 2. [Enlisted men — reenlistment — honorable discharge gratuity.] That hereafter no enlisted man in the Navy shall be paid on reenlistment an honorable discharge gratuity, or any proportionate part thereof, in excess of any amount equal to one month's pay for each year of service in the last expiring enlistment of such enlisted man.

SEC. 3. [Bureau of Yards and Docks — appropriations.] That appropriations herein and hereafter made under the Bureau of Yards and Docks for public works, exclusive of repairs and preservation, shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 4. [Officers, enlisted men and midshipmen — rations — commutation.] That during the fiscal year 1922 the ration for officers and enlisted men of the Navy entitled thereto shall be commuted at the rate of 50 cents per diem; and the commuted value of the ration for midshipmen shall be $1.08 per diem; and commuted rations stopped on account of sick in hospital shall be credited at the rate of 75 cents per ration to the naval hospital fund.

SEC. 5. [Radio station in Porto Rico — exchange of land under naval control for site, etc.] That as consideration for a suitable site and requisite rights, privileges, and easements for a receiving and distant-control radio station in Porto Rico the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to exchange or lease for such period as he may deem proper any land under naval control in Porto Rico not otherwise required for naval purposes: Provided, That in time of war or national emergency, if necessary, the Navy Department shall have without cost free and unlimited use of any land so exchanged or leased.

SEC. 6. [Retirement of officers of Naval Reserve Force and temporary officers — physical disability.] That the last paragraph of section 2 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and for other purposes," approved June 4, 1920, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That all officers of the Naval Reserve Force and temporary officers of the Navy who have heretofore incurred or may hereafter incur physical disability in line of duty in time of war shall be eligible for retirement under the same conditions as now provided by law for officers of the Regular Navy who have incurred physical disability in line of duty: Provided, however, That application for such retirement shall be filed with the Secretary of the Navy not later than October 1, 1921."

For sec. 2 of Act of June 4, 1920, as it read prior to this amendment, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 146.

SEC. 7. [Office of solicitor for Navy Department — compensation of employees.] That the paragraph in the Act approved March 3, 1921, making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, providing for temporary employees in the office of the Solicitor for the Navy Department, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"For temporary employees in the office of the Solicitor for the Navy Department, $20,000: Provided, That no person shall be employed hereunder at a rate of compensation exceeding $1,800 per annum except the following: One at $3,000, one at $2,400, one at $2,250."

SEC. 8. [Bureau of aeronautics — creation — officers and employees.] That there is hereby created and established in the Department of the Navy a Bureau of Aeronautics, which shall be charged with matters pertaining to naval aeronautics as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy, and all of the duties of said bureau shall be performed under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, and its orders shall be considered as emanating from him, and shall have full force and effect as such.

There shall be a Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, from among the officers of the active list of the Navy or Marine Corps who shall within one year after his appointment qualify as an aircraft pilot or observer, for a period of four years, and who shall, while holding such position, have the corresponding rank and receive the same pay and allowances as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by or in pursuance of law for chiefs of bureaus of the Department of the Navy.

An officer of the active list of the Navy, or Marine Corps, may be detailed as Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and such officer shall receive the highest pay of his grade, and, in case of the death, resignation, absence, or sickness of the chief of the bureau shall, until otherwise directed by the President, as provided by section 179 of the Revised Statutes, perform the duties of such chief until his successor is appointed or such absence or sickness shall cease.

There shall be a chief clerk at a salary of $2,250 per annum.

The Secretary of the Navy is authorized to transfer to the Bureau of Aeronautics such number of the civilian, technical, clerical, and messenger personnel, together with such records, equipment, and facilities now assigned for aeronautic work under the various bureaus of the Department of the Navy or Marine Corps as in his judgment may be necessary. The unexpended and unobligated portion of all moneys heretofore appropriated for any bureau of the Department of the Navy or Marine Corps used in connection with aeronautics, including the appropriation "Aviation, Navy," is hereby made available for the use of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

The number of officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps detailed to duty in aircraft and involving actual flying and to duties in connection with aircraft shall hereafter be in accordance with the requirements of Naval Aviation as determined by the Secretary of the Navy: Provided, That not to exceed 30 per centum of the officers in each grade below that of rear admiral who fail to qualify as aircraft pilots or as aircraft observers within one year after the date of their detail into the Bureau of Aeronautics shall be permitted to remain detailed in this bureau: Provided, further, That flying units or detachments, with the exception of aircraft carriers or other vessels, shall in all cases be commanded by flying officers.

SEC. 9. [Conference with Great Britain and Japan for limitation of armaments.] That the President is authorized and requested to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval expenditures and building programs of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which understanding or agreement is to be reported to the respective Governments for approval.

An Act To extend temporarily the time for filing applications for letters patent, for taking actions in the United States Patent Office with respect thereto, for the reviving and reinstatement of applications for letters patent, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Applications for patents—rights of priority provided by R. S. sec. 4887 extended—previous applications in foreign countries.] That the rights of priority provided by section 4887 of the Revised Statutes, for the filing of applications for patent for inventions and designs, which rights had not expired on the 1st day of August, 1914, or which rights have arisen since the 1st day of August, 1914, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended until the expiration of a period of six months from the passage of this Act in favor of the citizens of the United States or citizens or subjects of all countries which have extended, or which now extend, or which within said period of six months shall extend substantially reciprocal privileges to citizens of the United States, and such extension shall apply to applications upon which patents have been granted, as well as to applications now pending or filed within the period herein: Provided, That such extension shall in no way furnish a basis of claim against the Government of the United States: Provided further, That such extension shall in no way affect the right of any citizen of the United States, who, before the passage of this Act, was bona fide in possession of any rights in patents or applications for patent conflicting with rights in patents granted or validated by reason of such extension, to exercise such rights by itself or himself personally, or by such agents, or licensees, as derived their rights from it, or him, before the passage of this Act, and such persons shall not be amenable to any action for infringement of any patent granted or validated by reason of such extension.

A patent shall not be refused on an application coming within the provisions of this Act, nor shall a patent granted on such application be held invalid by reason of the invention having been patented or described in any printed publication or in public use or on sale in the United States prior to the filing of the application, unless such patent or publication or such public use or sale was prior to the filing of the foreign application upon which the right of priority is based.

SEC. 2. [Payment of fees — taking any action with respect to application for patent — extension of time — reopening interference proceedings.] That the time now fixed by law for the payment of any fee or for the taking of any action with respect to an application for patent, which time had not expired on August 1, 1914, or which commenced after August 1, 1914, is hereby extended until the expiration of one year from the passage of this Act, without the payment of extension fees or other penalty in favor of the citizens or subjects of countries which have extended, now extend, or shall extend during a period of one year from the passage of this Act substantially reciprocal privileges to citizens of the United States, provided that no extension herein shall confer such privileges on the citizens or subjects of a foreign country for a longer term than the term during which such privileges are conferred by such foreign country on the citizens of the United States, but nothing in this Act shall give any right to reopen interference proceedings where final hearing before the examiner of interferences has taken place.

SEC. 3. [Patents granted or validated by reason of extensions as affecting vested rights.] That no patent granted or validated by reason of the extensions provided for in sections 1 and 2 of this Act shall abridge or otherwise affect the right of any citizen of the United States, or his agent or agents, or his successor in business, to continue any manufacture, use, or sale commenced before the passage of this Act by such citizen, nor shall the continued manufacture, use, or sale by such citizen, or the use or sale of the devices resulting from such manufacture or use constitute an infringement.

SEC. 4. [Applications by agents between Aug. 1, 1914 and June 15, 1920 — supplementary petition by principal.] That all applications for patent filed since August 1, 1914, and prior to June 15, 1920, which were executed by an agent of the applicant, and in which a petition, specification, and oath, signed by the inventor, or his executor or administrator, had been filed or shall have been filed within a period of one year from the passage of this Act, and the patents granted on such applications, shall have the same force and effect as if the papers signed by the inventor, or his executor or administrator, had been filed on the date on which the papers signed by the agent were filed.

SEC. 5. [Applications filed since Aug. 1, 1914 — authentication by consular officers — validity.] That all applications for patent filed since August 1, 1914, in which the oath was executed before or authenticated by a consular officer, or other representative qualified to administer oaths, of a Government acting in the interest of the Government of the United States, shall have the same force and effect as if said oath had been executed by the applicant before a consular officer of the United States.

SEC. 6. [Inventions by persons serving in World War — interference and other proceedings — priority rights — abandoned or forfeited applications — revival.] That where an invention was made by a person while serving abroad, during the war, with the forces of the United States, civil or military, the inventor thereof shall be entitled, in interference and other proceedings arising in connection with such invention, to the same rights of priority with respect of such invention as if the same had been made in the United States, and where an application became abandoned or forfeited, during the time the applicant was serving with the forces of the United States, by reason of his failure to take action or pay a fee within the time now required by law, such action may be taken, or the fee paid, within six months from the passage of this Act.

SEC. 7. [Patent rights of alien enemy — use by United States government since Aug. 1, 1914 — claims.] That no claim shall be made or action brought in respect of the use since August 1, 1914, up to the passage of this Act, by the Government of the United States, or by any persons acting on behalf of, or under contract with, or with the assent of the Government of the United States or of Governments or their representatives associated with the United States, under any patent rights owned in whole or in part since August 1, 1914, by an alien enemy, nor in respect of the use of any process during such period, or the sale, offering for sale, or use, at any time, of any products, articles, or apparatus whatsoever manufactured during such period to which such patent rights applied.

SEC. 8. [Acts done under Trading With the Enemy Act as affected by this Act.] That nothing in this Act shall affect any Act done by virtue of the special measures taken during the war under legislative, executive, or administrative authority of the United States in regard to the rights of an enemy, or ally of an enemy, as defined by the Trading with the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, in patents for inventions and designs.

The Trading with the Enemy Act is set out in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 846.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909 (Thirty-fifth Statutes at Large, page 1134).

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[Transportation of explosives — secs. 232 to 236 of Penal Laws amended.]

That sections 232, 233, 234, 235, and 236 of the Act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States, approved March 4, 1909, be amended to read, respectively, as follows:

"SEC. 232. It shall be unlawful to transport, carry, or convey, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States, any high explosive, such as, and including, dynamite, blasting caps, detonating fuzes, black powder, gunpowder, or other like explosive, on any vessel, car, or vehicle of any description operated in the transportation of passengers by a common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, which vessel, car, or vehicle is carrying passengers for hire: Provided, That it shall be lawful to transport on any such vessel, car, or vehicle smokeless powder, primers, fuses, not including detonating fuzes, fireworks, or other similar explosives, and properly packed and marked samples of explosives for laboratory examination, not exceeding a net weight of one-half pound each, and not exceeding twenty samples at one time in a single vessel, car, or vehicle; but such explosives shall not be carried in that part of a vessel, car, or vehicle which is being used for the transportation of passengers for hire: Provided further, That it shall be lawful to transport on any such vessel, car, or vehicle small-arms ammunition in any quantity, and such fusees, torpedoes, rockets, or other signal devices as may be essential to promote safety in operation: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the transportation of military or naval forces with their accompanying munitions of war on passenger-equipment vessels, cars, or vehicles.

"The words 'detonating fuzes,' as used in this section shall be interpreted to mean fuzes used in naval or military service to detonate the high explosive bursting charges of projectiles, mines, bombs, or torpedoes. The word 'fuses' as used herein shall be interpreted to mean devices used in igniting the bursting charges of projectiles. The word 'primers' as used herein shall be interpreted to mean devices used in igniting the propelling powder charges of ammunition. The word 'fusees' as used herein shall be interpreted to mean the slow-burning fuses used commercially and intended to convey fire to an explosive or combustible mass slowly or without danger to the person lighting. The word 'fuses' as used herein shall be interpreted to mean the fusees ordinarily used on steamboats and railroads as night signals.

" SEC. 233. The Interstate Commerce Commission shall formulate regulations for the safe transportation within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States of explosives and other dangerous articles, including inflammable liquids, inflammable solids, oxidizing materials, corrosive liquids, compressed gases, and poisonous substances, which shall be binding upon all common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce which transport explosives or other dangerous articles by land or water, and upon all shippers making shipments of explosives or other dangerous articles via any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by land or water. Said commission, of its own motion, or upon application made by any interested party, may make changes or modifications in such regulations, made desirable by new information or altered conditions. Such regulations shall be in accord with the best-known practicable means for securing safety in transit, covering the packing, marking, loading, handling while in transit, and the precautions necessary to determine whether the material when offered is in proper condition to transport. Such regulations, as well as all changes or modifications thereof, shall, unless a shorter time is authorized by the commission, take effect ninety days after their formulation and publication by said commission and shall be in effect until reversed, set aside, or modified. In the execution of the provisions of this Act the Interstate Commerce Commission may utilize the services of the bureau for the safe transportation of explosives and other dangerous articles, and may avail itself of the advice and assistance of any department, commission, or board of the Government, but no official or employee of the United States shall receive any additional compensation for such service except as now permitted by law.

" SEC. 234. It shall be unlawful to transport, carry, or convey within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States, liquid nitroglycerin, fulminate in bulk in dry condition, or other like explosive, on any vessel, car, or vehicle of any description operated in the transportation of passengers or property by land or water by a common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce.

" SEC. 235. Every package containing explosives or other dangerous articles when presented to a common carrier for shipment shall have plainly marked on the outside thereof the contents thereof; and it shall be unlawful for any person to deliver, or cause to be delivered, to any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by land or water, or to carry upon any vessel, car, or vehicle operated by any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by land or water any explosive, or other dangerous article, as specified in section 233 of this Act, under any false or deceptive marking, description, invoice, shipping order, or other declaration, or without informing the agent of such carrier in writing of the true character thereof, at or before the time such delivery or carriage is made. Whoever shall knowingly violate, or cause to be violated, any provision of this section, or of the three sections last preceding, or any regulation made by the Interstate Commerce Commission in pursuance thereof, shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than eighteen months, or both.

["] SEC. 236. When the death or bodily injury of any person results from the violation of any of the four sections last preceding, or any regulation made by the Interstate Commerce Commission in pursuance thereof, the person or persons who shall have so knowingly violated, or caused to be violated, such provision or regulation, shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both. [']

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Act of July 21, 1921, 257.

Limitation on Indebtedness — Temporary Certificates of Indebtedness, 257.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for these islands," approved August 29, 1916; and to amend an Act entitled "An Act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands," approved March 2, 1903.

[Act of July 21, 1921.]

[Limitation on indebtedness — temporary certificates of indebtedness.]

That the Act entitled "An Act to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for these islands," approved August 29, 1916, be amended, as follows:

That the proviso of section 11 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: "Provided, however, That the entire indebtedness of the Philippine government created by the authority conferred herein shall not exceed at any one time the sum of $30,000,000, exclusive of those obligations known as friar land bonds, nor that of any Province or municipality, a sum in excess of 7 per centum of the aggregate tax valuation of its property at any one time. In computing the indebtedness of the Philippine government, bonds not to exceed $10,000,000 in amount, issued by that government, secured by an equivalent amount of bonds issued by the Provinces or municipalities thereof, shall not be counted."

That for the purpose set forth in section 6 of the Act approved March 2, 1903, entitled "An Act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands," the government of the Philippine Islands may issue temporary certificates of indebtedness under the conditions therein provided, in addition to the amount therein fixed, to a further amount not exceeding $10,000,000.

The act of the Philippine Legislature providing for the issue of temporary certificates of indebtedness within the conditions of section 6 of the Act of March 2, 1903, entitled "An Act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands," shall apply to the issue of additional certificates authorized by this Act.

For Act of March 2, 1903, here amended, see 7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1182.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1917.

[SEC. 1.] [Bill of Rights — appropriation of public moneys for sectarian purposes — polygamous marriages — sec. 2 of Porto Rican Act amended.] That paragraph 19 of section 2 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1917, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That no public money or property shall ever be appropriated, applied, donated, used, directly or indirectly, for the use, benefit, or support of any sect, church, denomination sectarian institution, or association, or system of religion, or for the use, benefit, or support of any priest, preacher, minister, or other religious teacher or dignitary as such. Contracting of polygamous or plural marriages hereafter is prohibited."

SEC. 2. [Export duties — taxes and assessments — internal revenue — public indebtedness — bonds — exemption from taxation — Sec. 3 Porto Rican Act amended.] That section 3 of said Act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That no export duties shall be levied or collected on exports from Porto Rico, but taxes and assessments on property, internal revenue, and license fees, and royalties for franchises, privileges, and concessions may be imposed for the purposes of the insular and municipal governments, respectively, as may be provided and defined by the Legislature of Porto Rico; and, when necessary to anticipate taxes and revenues, bonds and other obligations may be issued by Porto Rico or any municipal government therein as may be provided by law, and to protect the public credit: Provided, however, That no public indebtedness of Porto Rico or of any subdivision or municipality thereof shall be authorized or allowed in excess of 10 per centum of the aggregate tax valuation of its property, and all bonds issued by the government of Porto Rico, or by its authority, shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of the United States or by the government of Porto Rico or of any political or municipal subdivision thereof, or by any State, or by any county, municipality, or other municipal subdivision of any State or Territory of the United States, or by the District of Columbia. In computing the indebtedness of the people of Porto Rico, bonds issued by the people of Porto Rico secured by an equivalent amount of bonds of municipal corporations or school boards of Porto Rico shall not be counted."

An Act Making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Vacancy in office of postmaster — temporary designation by Postmaster General — appointment of regular postmaster.] That hereafter, whenever the office of a postmaster becomes vacant through death, resignation, or removal, the Postmaster General shall designate some person to act as postmaster until a regular appointment can be made by the President in case the office is in the first, second, or third class, and by the Postmaster General when the office is in the fourth class; and the Postmaster General shall notify the Auditor for the Post Office Department of the change. The postmaster so appointed shall be responsible under his bond for the safekeeping of the public property pertaining to the post office and the performance of the duties of his office until a regular postmaster has been duly appointed and qualified and has taken possession of the office. Whenever a vacancy occurs from any cause the appointment of the regular postmaster shall be made without unnecessary delay.

* * * [Substitute clerks in first and second class postoffices and substitute letter carriers in City Delivery Service — appointment to regular service — credits for time served — promotions — service in World War.] That that portion of the Act reclassifying salaries of postmasters and postal employees, approved June 5, 1920, which provides " that hereafter substitute clerks in first and second class post offices and substitute letter carriers in the City Delivery Service when appointed regular clerks or carriers shall have credit for actual time served on a basis of one year for each three hundred and six days of eight hours served as substitute, and appointed to the grade to which such clerk or carrier would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade one " shall be amended by adding the following: Provided, That Postal employees and substitute Postal employees who served in the military, marine or naval service of the United States during the World War and have not reached the maximum grade of salary shall receive credit for all time served in the military, marine or naval service on the basis of one day's credit of eight hours in the Postal Service for each day served in the military, marine or naval service and be promoted to the grade to which such postal employee or substitute postal employee would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade one. The provisions herein shall be effective as of date of passage of the original Act of June 5, 1920.

For Act of June 5, 1920, affected by the text, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 168.

* * * [Special delivery matter — receipt.] That the Postmaster General may, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, authorize the delivery of special delivery matter without obtaining a receipt therefor: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as excusing the delivery of special delivery matter by messenger in the first instance.

* * * [Aeroplane mail service — contracts by Postmaster General.] That the Postmaster General may contract with any individual, firm, or corporation for the transportation of mail by aeroplane between such points as he may deem advisable and designate, in case such transportation service is furnished at a cost not greater than the actual cost of the same service by rail, and shall pay therefor out of the appropriation for inland transportation by railroad routes.

* * * [Post route maps and rural delivery maps or blue prints — sale proceeds.] The Postmaster General may authorize the sale to the public of post-route maps and rural delivery maps or blue prints at the cost of printing and 10 per centum thereof added, the proceeds of such sale to be used as a further appropriation for the preparation and publication of post-route maps and rural delivery maps or blue prints;

SEC. 3. [Congressional Commission created to investigate mail transportation, etc.— extension of time.] That the joint commission authorized under section 6 of the Act approved April 24, 1920, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and for other purposes," is hereby continued until June 30, 1922, to complete the investigation and to prepare a detailed report containing a summary of its findings thereof, and such recommendations as to legislation as it may deem proper: Provided, That the said commission shall not expend a greater sum than $150,000 during the fiscal year 1922.

For Act of April 24, 1920, sec. 6 affected by the text, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 167.

* * * [Claims against Department for damage to person and property — adjustment by Postmaster General.] When any damage is done to person or property by or through the operation of the Post Office Department in any branch of its service and such damage is found by the Postmaster General upon investigation to be a proper charge against the United States, the Postmaster General is hereby invested with power to adjust and settle any claim for such damage when his award for such damage in any case does not exceed $500; and the sum of $35,000 is hereby appropriated for the fiscal year 1922 to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

This is from the "Second Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1921," enacted June 16, 1921.

An Act To further reclassify postmasters and employees of the Postal Service and readjust their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, and for other purposes.

[Act of July 21, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Postmasters of fourth class — compensation — per centum of cancellations.] That from and after July 1, 1921, postmasters of the fourth class shall be paid the same compensation as now provided by law, except that they shall receive 145 per centum of the cancellations of the first $75 or less per quarter, 70 per centum of the next $100 or less per quarter, and on the balance 60 per centum.

SEC. 2. [Special clerks in first-class offices.] That as a reward for faithful and meritorious service special clerks may be appointed in the executive, finance, money order, postal savings, registry, mailing, and other divisions of first-class post offices. Clerks in the executive, finance, money order, postal savings, registry, and other divisions of first-class post offices who were designated as special clerks, finance clerks, cashiers, foremen, bookkeepers, chief stamp clerks, chief mailing clerks, and stenographers on June 30, 1920, and who were, on and after July 1, 1920, assigned as clerks of grade five shall, from and after the passage of this Act, unless they were demoted for cause, be given the designation and status of special clerks, and assigned to the first or second grade: Provided, That clerks who have been designated as special clerks shall not be demoted except for cause.

SEC. 3. [Clerks and carriers in intermediate or automatic grades — credit for time served as substitute — promotion.] That clerks and carriers in the intermediate or automatic grades who were appointed to regular positions before June 5, 1920, and are receiving less than the maximum grade of salary, shall receive credit for all time served as substitute on a basis of one year for each three hundred and six days of eight hours served as substitute, and be promoted to the grade to which such clerk or carrier would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade one.

SEC. 4. [Foreman in first-class offices — compensation.] That, effective July 1, 1921, the minimum salary of foreman in first-class offices shall be $2,100 per annum.

SEC. 5. [Assistant superintendents of mails — compensation.] That, effective July 1, 1921, the minimum salary of assistant superintendents of mails in post offices with receipts of $1,000,000, but less than $2,000,000, shall be $2,300 per annum.

SEC. 6. [Assistant postmasters of second-class offices.] That, effective July 1, 1921, the salary of assistant postmasters at offices of the second class, where the gross postal receipts are $8,000, but less than $12,000, shall be $1,850 per annum.

SEC. 7. [Clerks and laborers in first and second class offices — carriers in City Delivery Service — overtime compensation.] That the Postmaster General is hereby authorized to pay to the clerks and laborers in first and second class post offices and letter carriers in the City Delivery Service the amount due them as overtime in lieu of compensatory time for work performed by them on Sundays intervening between June 5 and July 1, 1920.

SEC. 8. [Retired employees re-employed — compensation.] That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to persons who have been retired under the Act of Congress entitled "An Act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920, and who have since their retirement been employed in the Postal Service, the sums to which they are entitled for services heretofore rendered.

For Act of May 22, 1920, mentioned in the text, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 16.

SEC. 9. [Supervisory officials, etc.—limitation on promotion—repeal of provision in Act of June 5, 1920.] That the paragraph in the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to reclassify postmasters and employees of the Postal Service and readjust their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis," approved June 5, 1920 (page 1053, Statutes at Large, second session, Sixty-sixth Congress), which reads as follows: "On and after July 1, 1921, no supervisory official or employee in the Postal Service shall be promoted more than $300 during any one year, except when appointed postmaster, inspector in charge, or superintendent of the Railway Mail Service," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

For provision in Act of June 5, 1920, here repealed, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 178.

SEC. 10. [Pan-American Postal Congress—appointment of delegates.] That the Postmaster General be, and he hereby is, authorized to appoint two delegates to the Pan-American Postal Congress, Buenos Aires, Argentina, beginning August 10, 1921, and for the purpose of paying the expenses of such delegates the sum of $5,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended in the discretion of the Postmaster General and to be accounted for on his certificate, which certificate shall be conclusive on the accounting officers of the United States.

An Act To amend section 3 of an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1901 (Thirty-first Statutes at Large, page 1133).

[Act of Jan. 6, 1921.]

[Desert lands — time limit for reclamation by states — extension — restoration to public domain.] That section 3 of the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1901 (Thirty-first Statutes at Large, page 1133), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That section 4 of the Act of August 18, 1894, entitled 'An Act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes,' be, and the same is hereby, amended so that the ten-year period within which any State shall cause the lands applied for under said Act to be irrigated and reclaimed, as provided in said section, as amended by the Act of June 11, 1896, shall begin to run from the date of approval by the Secretary of the Interior of the State's application for the segregation of such lands; and if actual construction of reclamation works is not begun within three years after the segregation of the lands or within such further period, not exceeding three years, as shall be allowed by the Secretary of the Interior, the said Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, may restore such lands to the public domain; and if the State fails, within ten years from the date of such segregation, to cause the whole or any part of the lands so segregated to be so irrigated and reclaimed, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, continue said segregation for a period not exceeding five years, or may, in his discretion, restore such lands not irrigated and reclaimed to the public domain upon the expiration of the ten-year period or of any extension thereof."

An Act To amend section 8 of an Act to provide for the sale of desert lands in certain States and Territories [sic] approved March 3, 1877, as amended by an Act to repeal timber culture laws, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1891.

[Act of Jan. 6, 1921.]

[Desert lands — entry — resident citizens — Colorado as included in "Desert Land Act."] That section 8 of an Act to provide for the sale of desert lands in certain States and Territories, approved March 3, 1877, as amended by an Act to repeal timber culture laws, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1891, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 8. That the provisions of the Act to which this is an amendment, and the amendments thereto, shall apply to and be in force in the State of Colorado, as well as the State named in the original Act; and, excepting in the State of Nevada, no person shall be entitled to make entry of desert lands unless he be a resident citizen of the State or Territory in which the land sought to be entered is located."

For section 8 as it read before this amendment, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 698.

An Act To provide for the disposition of certain public lands withdrawn and improved under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved June 25, 1910 (Thirty-sixth Statutes at Large, page 847), as amended by the Act of August 24, 1912 (Thirty-seventh Statutes at Large, page 497), and which are no longer needed.

[Act of Jan. 26, 1921.]

For Act of June 25, 1910, mentioned in the text, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 657.

SEC. 2. [Conveyance by appropriate patent of lands purchased — reservations and conditions.] That upon payment of the purchase price the Secretary of the Interior is authorized by appropriate patent to convey all the right, title, and interest in and to said lands to the purchaser at said sale, subject, however, to such reservations, limitations, or conditions as said Secretary may deem proper: Provided, That not over one hundred and sixty acres shall be sold to any one person: Provided further, That any patent issued hereunder shall contain a reservation to the United States of all oil, gas, coal, and other mineral.

SEC. 3. [Receipts from sale — disposition.] That the moneys derived from the sale of such lands and improvements be disposed of as are other receipts from the sale and disposal of public lands.

An Act Providing for the survey of public lands remaining unsurveyed in the State of Florida, with a view of satisfying the grant in aid of schools made to said State under the Act of March 3, 1845, and other Acts amendatory thereof.

[Act of Feb. 16, 1921.]

[Survey of public lands — Florida.] That it shall be lawful for the properly credited agent or official of the State of Florida having in charge the adjustment of its school grant to apply to the Commissioner of the General Land Office for the survey of any townships or parts of townships of public land unsurveyed in any of the surveying districts of said State, with a view to satisfy the grant in aid of schools made to said State of Florida by the Act of March 3, 1845, and other Acts amendatory thereto to the extent of the full quantity of land called for thereby; and upon the application of said agent or official, the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall proceed to have the survey or surveys so applied for made, as in the case of surveys of other public lands; and the lands that may be found to fall within the limits of such townships or parts of townships as ascertained by the survey shall be reserved, upon the filing of the application for survey from any adverse appropriation by settlement or otherwise, except under rights that may be found to exist of prior inception, for a period to extend from such application for survey until the expiration of sixty days from date of filing of the township plat of survey in the proper district land office, during which period of sixty days the State may select any of such lands not embraced in any valid adverse claim for the satisfaction of its school grant, as aforesaid, with the condition, however, that the agent or official of the State, within thirty days from the date of such filing of the application for survey, shall cause a notice to be published, which publication shall be continued for thirty days from date of first publication in some newspaper of general circulation in the vicinity of the lands likely to be embraced in such townships or parts of townships giving notice to all parties interested of the fact of such application for survey and the exclusive right of selection by the State for the aforesaid period of sixty days as herein provided for, and after the expiration of such sixty days any lands which may remain unselected by the State and not otherwise appropriated according to law shall be subject to disposal under general laws as other public lands: Provided, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall give notice immediately of the reservation of any township or parts of townships to the officials of the local land office of the land district in which the land is situated of the withdrawal of such townships or parts of townships for the purpose hereinbefore provided:

Provided further, That nothing herein shall be deemed to authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to survey any lands within the exterior boundaries of the Everglades, as defined in Everglades patent numbered one hundred and thirty-seven, issued to the State of Florida by the United States under the Swamp Land Act of 1850.

For Swamp Land Act of 1850 mentioned in the text, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 708.

An Act To amend acts to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 1, 1921.]

[Rights of way for irrigation and drainage — permits for adjoining land for dwellings, etc.— lands in national forests.] That in addition to the rights of way granted by sections 18, 19, 20, and 21 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891 (Twenty-sixth Statutes, page 1095), as amended by the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to amend the Irrigation Act of March 3, 1891 (Twenty-sixth Statutes, page 1095, section 18), and to amend section 2 of the Act of May 11, 1898 (Thirtieth Statutes, page 404)," approved March 4, 1917 (Thirty-ninth Statutes, page 1197), and, subject to the conditions and restrictions therein contained, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to grant permits or easements for not to exceed five acres of ground adjoining the right of way at each of the locations, to be determined by the Secretary of the Interior, to be used for the erection thereon of dwellings or other buildings or corrals for the convenience of those engaged in the care and management of the works provided for by said Acts: Provided, That this Act shall not apply to lands within national forests.

For Act of March 3, 1891, secs. 18-21, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 803.

For Act of March 4, 1917, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 713.

An Act For the relief of bona fide settlers who intermarry after having complied with the homestead law for one year.

[Act of March 1, 1921.]

[Homesteads — marriage of entryman and entrywoman — impairment of right to patent — Act of April 6, 1914 amended.] That the Act entitled "An Act providing that the marriage of a homestead entryman to a homestead entrywoman shall not impair the right of either to a patent, after compliance with the law a year, to apply to existing entries," approved April 6, 1914 (Thirty-eighth Statutes, page 312), be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following: "Provided further, That in the administration of this Act the terms 'entryman' and 'entrywoman' shall be construed to include bona fide settlers who have complied with the homestead law for at least one year next preceding such marriage."

For Act of April 6, 1914, here amended, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 620.

An Act To authorize certain homestead settlers or entrymen who entered the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Germany to make final proof of their entries.

[Act of March 1, 1921.]

[Homestead settlers or entrymen in World War — final proof of entries.]

That any settler or entryman under the homestead laws of the United States, who, after settlement, application, or entry and prior to November 11, 1918, enlisted or was actually engaged in the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps during the war with Germany, who has been honorably discharged and because of physical incapacities due to service is unable to return to the land, may make proof, without further residence, improvement, or cultivation, at such time and place as may be authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, and receive patent to the land by him so entered or settled upon: Provided, That no such patent shall issue prior to the survey of the land.

This Act was amended by Act of Dec. 15, 1921, set out infra, this title, p. 273.

[SEC. 1.] [Homestead entries — validation.] That all pending homestead entries made in good faith prior to January 1, 1916, under the provisions of the enlarged homestead laws, and all rights to enter land under said laws, based on settlement made thereon in good faith before said date, and while the land was unsurveyed, by persons who, before making such enlarged homestead entry, had acquired title to land under the homestead laws, and therefore were not qualified to make an enlarged homestead entry, or such settlement, be, and the same are hereby, validated, if in all other respects regular, in all cases where the original homestead entry was for less than one hundred and sixty acres of land, Provided, That no settlement claim shall be validated hereby where adverse claim for the land has been initiated before the passage of this Act.

SEC. 2. [Additional entry by homesteaders commuting first entry — cancellation.] That no homestead entry heretofore made under the provisions of section 2 of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act for the relief of the Colorado Cooperative Colony, to permit homestead entries in certain cases, and for other purposes," approved June 5, 1900, shall be cancelled for the reason that the former entry made by the entryman was commuted under the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act relating to the public lands of the United States," approved June 15, 1880 (Twenty-first Statutes, page 237). And all entries heretofore canceled on the ground that an entryman who commuted under the provisions of said Act of June 15, 1880, is not entitled to the benefits of the Act of June 5, 1900, shall be reinstated upon a showing by the entryman or his heirs, within one year from the approval of this Act, that there were no valid grounds for the cancellation of such entries except that a former entry was perfected under the Act of June 15, 1880, in all cases where valid adverse rights have not attached to the lands covered by such second entries since the date of their cancellation.

For Act of June 5, 1900, sec. 2, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 608.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Registers and receivers—consolidation of offices at certain places.] That the President is authorized to consolidate the offices of registers and receivers at Alliance, Nebraska, and at Vancouver and Seattle, Washington, and by Executive order to require either officer, upon resignation of the other, to give an additional bond and to perform the duties of both offices. All the powers, duties, obligations, and penalties imposed by law upon both the register and receiver of said office shall be exercised by and imposed upon the officer remaining in control, whose compensation shall be a salary of $500 per annum, together with the fees and commissions otherwise allowable to both register and receiver, but the salary, fees, and commissions of such officer shall not exceed $3,000 per annum.

This and the paragraphs which follow are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [Expenses incurred by registers and receivers—liability of government.] That no expenses chargeable to the Government shall be incurred by registers and receivers in the conduct of local land offices except upon previous specific authorization by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

See note to preceding paragraph.

* * * [Hearings in land entries—depositions—fees of officers taking.] For hearings or other proceedings held by order of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to determine the character of lands; whether alleged fraudulent entries are of that character or have been made in compliance with law; and of hearings in disbarment proceedings, $25,000: Provided, That where depositions are taken for use in such hearings the fees of the officer taking them shall be 20 cents per folio for taking and certifying same and 10 cents per folio for each copy furnished to a party on request.

See note to first paragraph of this section.

An Act For the consolidation of the offices of register and receiver in district land offices in certain cases, and for other purposes.

[Act of Oct. 28, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [District land offices—consolidation of offices of register and receiver.] That the President is authorized to consolidate the offices of register and receiver in any district land office, and to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a register for such land office and to abolish the office of receiver of such land office upon sixty days' notice of such abolition mailed to such register and receiver whenever the total compensation for both register and receiver of such land office shall fall below the sum of $4,000 per annum, and in his opinion the interests of the service warrant such abolition.

Within sixty days after the mailing of such notice the office of receiver of such land office shall cease to exist, and all the powers, duties, obligations, and penalties imposed by law upon both register and receiver of such office shall be exercised by and imposed upon the register so appointed, who shall be paid a salary of $500 per annum, together with the fees and commissions otherwise allowable to both register and receiver: Provided, That the salary, fees, and commissions of such register shall not exceed $3,000 per annum.

Sec. 2. [Vacancy in office of register — designation.] That in case of a vacancy in the office of register by reason of death, resignation, or removal, or in case of inability to act, the Secretary of the Interior may designate for the period of such vacancy or inability to act the chief clerk of such office, or any other qualified employee of the Department of the Interior to act as register, subject to the filing of such bond or bonds as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, and the same authority is conferred upon the person so designated which such register lawfully possesses, except that no contest or protest shall be decided or disposed of by such clerk or employee, but all such decisions shall be deferred until the appointment or return of the register.

An Act To authorize certain desert-land claimants who entered the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Germany to make final proof of their entries.

[Act of Dec. 15, 1921.]

[Desert-land claimants in World War — final proof of entries.] That the Act of March 1, 1921 (Forty-first Statutes, page 1202), entitled "An Act to authorize certain homestead settlers or entrymen who entered the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Germany to make final proof of their entries," be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto at the end thereof the following matter, which shall be known and designated as section 2 of said Act:

"SEC. 2. That any entryman under the desert-land laws, or any person entitled to preference right of entry under section 1 of the Act approved March 28, 1908 (Thirty-fifth Statutes at Large, page 52), who after application or entry for surveyed lands or legal initiation of claim for unsurveyed lands, and prior to November 11, 1918, enlisted or was actually engaged in the United States Army, Navy, or Marine Corps during the war with Germany, who has been honorably discharged and because of physical incapacities due to service is unable to accomplish reclamation of and payment for the land, may make proof without further reclamation thereof or payments thereon under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and receive patent for the land by him so entered or claimed, if found entitled thereto: Provided, That no such patent shall issue prior to the survey of the land."

For Act of March 1, 1921, here amended, see supra, this title, p. 271.

[Government employees — pay — telephone operators — assistant messengers — firemen — watchmen — laborers — charwomen.] That the pay of telephone-switchboard operators, assistant messengers, firemen, watchmen, laborers, and charwomen provided for in this Act, except those employed in mints and assay offices, unless otherwise specially stated, shall be as follows: For telephone-switchboard operators, assistant messengers, firemen, and watchmen, at the rate of $720 per annum each; for laborers, at the rate of $660 per annum each; assistant telephone-switchboard operators, at the rate of $600 each, and for charwomen, at the rate of $240 per annum each.

This and secs. 3 and 6 which follow are from the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1921.

SEC. 3. [Employees permanently incapacitated — right to compensation.] That the appropriations herein made for the officers, clerks, and persons employed in the public service shall not be available for the compensation of any persons incapacitated otherwise than temporarily for performing such service.

See note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Civilian employees of United States and District of Columbia — increase of salary — conditions — exceptions — appropriations.] That all civilian employees of the Governments of the United States and the District of Columbia who receive a total of compensation at the rate of $2,500 per annum or less, except as otherwise provided in this section, shall receive, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, additional compensation at the rate of $240 per annum: Provided, That such employees as receive a total of annual compensation at a rate more than $2,500 and less than $2,740 shall receive additional compensation at such rate per annum as may be necessary to make their salaries, plus their additional compensation, at the rate of $2,740 per annum, and no employee shall receive additional compensation under this section at a rate which is more than 60 per centum of the rate of the total annual compensation received by such employee: Provided further, That the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, shall not be computed as salary in construing this section: Provided further, That where an employee in the service on June 30, 1920 has received during the fiscal year 1921, or shall receive during the fiscal year 1922, an increase of salary at a rate in excess of $200 per annum, or where an employee whether previously in the service or not, has entered the service since June 30, 1920, whether such employee has received an increase in salary or not, such employees shall be granted the increased compensation provided herein only when and upon the certification of the person in the legislative branch or the head of the department or establishment employing such persons of the ability and qualifications personal to such employees as would justify such increased compensation.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the following: Employees paid from the postal revenues and sums which may be advanced from the Treasury to meet deficiencies in the postal revenues; employees whose pay is adjustable from time to time through wage boards or similar authority to accord with the commercial rates paid locally for the same class of service; employees of the Panama Canal on the Canal Zone; employees of the Alaskan Engineering Commission in Alaska; employees paid from lump-sum appropriations in bureaus, divisions, commissions, or any other governmental agencies or employments created by law since January 1, 1916, except employees of the United States Tariff Commission and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, who shall be included, and officers and members of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and the United States park police who receive the compensation fixed by the Act approved December 5, 1919, and officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia who receive the compensation fixed by the Act approved January 24, 1920, shall receive increased compensation at the rate allowed by this section for other employees. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees whose duties require only a portion of their time, except charwomen, who shall be included; employees whose services are utilized for brief periods at intervals; persons employed by or through corporations, firms, or individuals acting for or on behalf of or as agents of the United States or any department or independent establishment of the Government of the United States in connection with construction work or the operation of plants; employees who receive a part of their pay from any outside sources under cooperative arrangements with the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia; employees who serve voluntarily or receive only a nominal compensation and employees who may be provided with special allowances because of their service in foreign countries. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees of the railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems taken over by the United States, and nothing contained herein shall be deemed a recognition of the employees of such railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems as employees of the United States.

Section 6 of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act approved May 10, 1916, as amended by the Naval Appropriation Act approved August 29, 1916, shall not operate to prevent anyone from receiving the additional compensation provided in this section who otherwise is entitled to receive the same.

Such employees as are engaged on piecework, by the hour, or at per diem rates, if otherwise entitled to receive the additional compensation, shall receive the same at the rate to which they are entitled in this section when their fixed rate of pay for the regular working hours and on the basis of three hundred and thirteen days in the said fiscal year would amount to $2,500 or less: Provided, That this method of computation shall not apply to any per diem employees regularly paid a per diem for every day in the year.

So much as may be necessary to pay the additional compensation provided in this section to employees of the Government of the United States is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to employees of the government of the District of Columbia is appropriated, 40 per centum out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and 60 per centum out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, except to employees of the Washington Aqueduct and the water department, which shall be paid entirely from the revenues of the water department, and to employees of the Minimum Wage Board, the community center department, and the playgrounds department, which shall be paid wholly out of the revenue of the District of Columbia.

So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to persons employed under trust funds who may be construed to be employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia is authorized to be paid, respectively, from such trust funds.

Reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next regular session showing for the first four months of the fiscal year the average number of employees in each department, bureau, office, or establishment receiving the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum and the average number by grades receiving the same at each other rate.

See note to section 2 of this Act.

Act of Dec. 26, 1920, 282.

Diseased Alien Seamen—Treatment in Hospitals—Expenses by Whom Borne, 282.

An Act To provide for the treatment in hospital of diseased alien seamen.

[Act of Dec. 26, 1920.]

[Diseased alien seamen—treatment in hospitals—expenses by whom borne.] That alien seamen found on arrival in ports of the United States to be afflicted with any of the disabilities or diseases mentioned in section 35 of the Act of February 5, 1917, entitled “An Act to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States,” shall be placed in a hospital designated by the immigration official in charge at the port of arrival and treated, all expenses connected therewith, including burial in the event of death, to be borne by the owner, agent, consignee, or master of the vessel, and not to be deducted from the seamen’s wages, and no such vessel shall be granted clearance until such expenses are paid or their payment appropriately guaranteed and the collector of customs so notified by the immigration official in charge: Provided, That alien seamen suspected of being afflicted with any such disability or disease may be removed from the vessel on which they arrive to an immigration station or other appropriate place for such observation as will enable the examining surgeons definitely to determine whether or not they are so afflicted, all expenses connected therewith to be borne in the manner hereinbefore prescribed: Provided further, That in cases in which it shall appear to the satisfaction of the immigration official in charge that it will not be possible within a reasonable time to effect a cure, the return of the alien seamen shall be enforced on or at the expense of the vessel on which they came, upon such conditions as the Commissioner General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe, to insure that the aliens shall be properly cared for and protected, and that the spread of contagion shall be guarded against.

For section 35 of Act of Feb. 5, 1917, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 239.

Act as limited to passenger vessels.—This act is not limited to passenger vessels. Franco v. Seas Shipping Corp., (D. C. Md. 1921) 272 Fed. 542, wherein the court said:

“It is suggested on behalf of the ship that the act in question is nothing but an amendment to the earlier Immigration Act of 1917, which was by its terms limited to passenger vessels, which the Robin Hood was not. I can see nothing in the terms of the act of December 26, 1920, to sustain this contention. It is true that, without explanation of the reasons for such legislation, it may seem unfair for the Congress to impose upon the owners of ships the duty of paying hospital bills to cure alien seamen of diseases due to their own vices, but the courts may not substitute their judgment for that of Congress. The act declares that all expenses connected with the hospital treatment, as well as some other things, shall be borne by the owner, agent, consignee, or master of the vessel ‘and not to be deducted from the seamen’s wages.’ Such language is too clear to require construction.”

Penalty for delay in payment of expenses.—In a libel by alien seamen for full wages and compensation at the rate of two days’ wages for one for delay in making payment for hospital expenses arising under this act, the libel was sustained in so far as it required the payment of wages in full without deduction for the hospital charges and it was dismissed in so far as it asked damages or penalty for delay in paying the wages, it appearing that the owner of the vessel delayed payment because of a contention that it was entitled to have the hospital expenses deducted from the wages, and that it united with the libelants in bringing the question to the attention of the court at the earliest possible moment. *Franco v. An Act To provide for the award of a medal of merit to the personnel of the Merchant marine of the United States of America.

[SEC. 1.] [Merchant marine — medals of merit to personnel.] That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to present, but not in the name of Congress, a medal of merit of appropriate design with a bar and ribbon, together with a rosette or other device to be worn in lieu thereof, to any person who in the merchant marine of the United States between the 6th day of April, 1917, and the 11th day of November, 1918, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism or distinguished service at sea in the line of duty.

SEC. 2. [Successive deeds of service — number of medals awarded to one person.] That no more than one medal of merit shall be issued to any one person, but for each succeeding deed or service sufficient to justify the award of a medal, the President may award a suitable bar or other suitable emblem or insignia to be worn with the decoration and the corresponding rosette or other device.

SEC. 3. [Period within which medals may be issued.] That, except as otherwise prescribed herein, no medal or bar or suitable emblem or insignia in lieu of said medal shall be issued to any person after three years from the passage of this Act, unless a specific statement or report distinctly setting forth the act or distinguished service and suggesting or recommending official recognition thereof shall have been made and substantiated at the time of the act or service or within three years after the passage of this Act.

SEC. 4. [Issuance of medal to representative of deceased person.] That in case an individual who shall distinguish himself dies before the making of the award to which he may be entitled, the award nevertheless may be made and the medal or bar or other emblem or insignia presented to such representative of the deceased as the President may designate.

SEC. 5. [Rules and regulations — authority of President.] The President is authorized to make from time to time any and all rules, regulations, and orders which he shall deem necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [United States Emergency Fleet Corporation — expenses — sources of payment — additional vessels — rent of buildings — expenditures for printing — cost plus contracts.] The expenses of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, for administrative purposes, the payment of claims arising from the cancellation of contracts, damage charges and miscellaneous adjustments, maintenance and operation of vessels, the completion of vessels now under construction, and for carrying out the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine, to repeal certain emergency legislation, and provide for the disposition, regulation, and use of property acquired thereunder, and for other purposes," approved June 5, 1920, shall be paid from the following sources: (a) The amount on hand July 1, 1921; (b) the amount received during the fiscal year 1922 from the operation of ships, and (c) not to exceed $55,000,000 from deferred payments on ships sold prior to the approval of this Act, from plant and material sold during the fiscal year 1922, and from ships sold during the fiscal year 1922: Provided, That after the approval of this Act no contract shall be entered into or work undertaken for the construction of any additional vessels for the United States Shipping Board or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation.

No part of the funds of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation shall be available for rent of buildings in the District of Columbia during the fiscal year 1922 if suitable space is provided for the said corporation by the Public Buildings Commission.

No part of the funds made available in this Act for the Shipping Board or the Emergency Fleet Corporation shall be expended for the preparation, printing, or publication of any bulletins, newspapers, magazines, or periodicals, or for services in connection with same, not including preparation and printing of reports or documents authorized by law.

No contracts for ship construction to be entered into shall provide that the compensation of the contractor shall be the cost of construction plus a percentage thereof for profit, or plus a fixed fee for profit.

An Act To regulate interstate and foreign commerce in live stock, live-stock products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products, and eggs, and for other purposes.

[Act of Aug. 15, 1921.]

TITLE I.—DEFINITIONS.

[SEC. 1.] [Title of Act — “Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921.”] This Act may be cited as the “Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921.”

SEC. 2. (a) [Various terms defined.] When used in this Act —

(1) [“Person.”] The term “person” includes individuals, partnerships, corporations, and associations.

(2) [“Secretary.”] The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Agriculture;

(3) [“Meat food products.”] The term “meat food products” means all products and by-products of the slaughtering and meat-packing industry — if edible;

(4) [“Live stock.”] The term “live stock” means cattle, sheep, swine, horses, mules, or goats — whether live or dead;

(5) [“Live-stock products.”] The term “live-stock products” means all products and by-products (other than meats and meat food products) of the slaughtering and meat-packing industry derived in whole or in part from live stock; and

(6) [“Commerce.”] The term “commerce” means commerce between any State, Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State, Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or possession, or the District of Columbia.

(b) [Transaction in respect to any article when in commerce.] For the purpose of this Act (but not in any wise limiting the foregoing definition) a transaction in respect to any article shall be considered to be in commerce if such article is part of that current of commerce usual in the live-stock and meat-packing industries, whereby live stock, meats, meat food products, live-stock products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products, or eggs, are sent from one State with the expectation that they will end their transit, after purchase, in another, including, in addition to cases within the above general description, all cases where purchase or sale is either for shipment to another State, or for slaughter of live stock within the State and the shipment outside the State of the products resulting from such slaughter. Articles normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such current through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this Act. For the purpose of this paragraph the word "State" includes Territory, the District of Columbia, possession of the United States, and foreign nation.

TITLE II.—PACKERS.

SEC. 201. ["Packer" defined.] When used in this Act —

The term "packer" means any person engaged in the business (a) of buying live stock in commerce for purposes of slaughter, or (b) of manufacturing or preparing meats or meat food products for sale or shipment in commerce, or (c) of manufacturing or preparing live-stock products for sale or shipment in commerce, or (d) of marketing meats meat food products, live-stock products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products, or eggs, in commerce; but no person engaged in such business of manufacturing or preparing live-stock products or in such marketing business shall be considered a packer unless —

(1) Such person is also engaged in any business referred to in clause (a) or (b) above, or unless

(2) Such person owns or controls, directly or indirectly through stock ownership or control or otherwise, by himself or through his agents, servants, or employees, any interest in any business referred to in clause (a) or (b) above, or unless

(3) Any interest in such business of manufacturing or preparing live-stock products, or in such marketing business is owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, by himself or through his agents, servants, or employees, by any person engaged in any business referred to in clause (a) or (b) above, or unless

(4) Any person or persons jointly or severally, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, by themselves or through their agents, servants, or employees, own or control in the aggregate 20 per centum or more of the voting power or control in such business of manufacturing or preparing live-stock products, or in such marketing business and also 20 per centum or more of such power or control in any business referred to in clause (a) or (b) above.

SEC. 202. [Enumeration of practices by packers declared unlawful.] It shall be unlawful for any packer to:

(a) Engage in or use any unfair, unjustly discriminatory, or deceptive practice or device in commerce; or

(b) Make or give, in commerce, any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or locality in any respect whatsoever, or subject, in commerce, any particular person or locality to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; or

(c) Sell or otherwise transfer to or for any other packer, or buy or otherwise receive from or for any other packer, any article for the purpose or with the effect of apportioning the supply in commerce between any such packers, if such apportionment has the tendency or effect of restraining commerce or of creating a monopoly in commerce; or

(d) Sell or otherwise transfer to or for any other person, or buy or otherwise receive from or for any other person, any article for the purpose or with the effect of manipulating or controlling prices in commerce, or of creating a monopoly in the acquisition of, buying, selling, or dealing in, any article in commerce, or of restraining commerce; or

(e) Engage in any course of business or do any act for the purpose or with the effect of manipulating or controlling prices in commerce, or of creating a monopoly in the acquisition of, buying, selling, or dealing in, any article in commerce, or of restraining commerce; or

(f) Conspire, combine, agree, or arrange with any other person (1) to apportion territory for carrying on business in commerce, or (2) to apportion purchases or sales of any article in commerce, or (3) to manipulate or control prices in commerce; or

(g) Conspire, combine, agree or arrange with any other person to do, or aid or abet the doing of, any act made unlawful by subdivision (a), (b), (c), (d), or (e).

SEC. 203. (a) [Violation of provisions of title — complaint — hearing before Secretary of Agriculture — intervention.] Whenever the Secretary has reason to believe that any packer has violated or is violating any provision of this title, he shall cause a complaint in writing to be served upon the packer, stating his charges in that respect, and requiring the packer to attend and testify at a hearing at a time and place designated therein, at least thirty days after the service of such complaint; and at such time and place there shall be afforded the packer a reasonable opportunity to be informed as to the evidence introduced against him (including the right of cross-examination), and to be heard in person or by counsel and through witnesses, under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe. Any person for good cause shown may on application be allowed by the Secretary to intervene in such proceeding, and appear in person or by counsel. At any time prior to the close of the hearing the Secretary may amend the complaint; but in case of any amendment adding new charges the hearing shall, on the request of the packer, be adjourned for a period not exceeding fifteen days.

(b) [Findings — report — order — filing of testimony.] If, after such hearing, the Secretary finds that the packer has violated or is violating any provisions of this title covered by the charges, he shall make a report in writing in which he shall state his findings as to the facts, and shall issue and cause to be served on the packer an order requiring such packer to cease and desist from continuing such violation. The testimony taken at the hearing shall be reduced to writing and filed in the records of the Department of Agriculture.

(c) [Amendment of report or order.] Until a transcript of the record in such hearing has been filed in a circuit court of appeals of the United States, as provided in section 204, the Secretary at any time, upon such notice and in such manner as he deems proper, but only after reasonable opportunity to the packer to be heard, may amend or set aside the report or order, in whole or in part.

(d) [Service of complaints, orders and other processes.] Complaints, orders, and other processes of the Secretary under this section may be served in the same manner as provided in section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

For sec. 5 of the Act of Sept. 26, 1914, above mentioned, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 577.

SEC. 204. (a) [Conclusiveness of order — appeal to Circuit Court of Appeals — petition — bond.] An order made under section 203 shall be final and conclusive unless within thirty days after service the packer appeals to the circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which he has his principal place of business, by filing with the clerk of such court a written petition praying that the Secretary's order be set aside or modified in the manner stated in the petition, together with a bond in such sum as the court may determine, conditioned that such packer will pay the costs of the proceedings if the court so directs.

(b) [Transcript of record — amendment of petition.] The clerk of the court shall immediately cause a copy of the petition to be delivered to the Secretary, and the Secretary shall forthwith prepare, certify, and file in the court a full and accurate transcript of the record in such proceedings, including the complaint, the evidence, and the report and order. If before such transcript is filed the Secretary amends or sets aside his report or order, in whole or in part, the petitioner may amend the petition within such time as the court may determine, on notice to the Secretary.

(c) [Injunction pending appeal.] At any time after such transcript is filed the court, on application of the Secretary, may issue a temporary injunction restraining, to the extent it deems proper, the packer and his officers, directors, agents, and employees, from violating any of the provisions of the order pending the final determination of the appeal.

(d) [Evidence on appeal — preferred cause.] The evidence so taken or admitted, duly certified and filed as aforesaid as a part of the record, shall be considered by the court as the evidence in the case. The proceedings in such cases in the circuit court of appeals shall be made a preferred cause and shall be expedited in every way.

(e) [Disposition of case on appeal.] The court may affirm, modify, or set aside the order of the Secretary.

(f) [Reopening hearing — additional evidence — new findings.] If the court determines that the just and proper disposition of the case requires the taking of additional evidence, the court shall order the hearing to be reopened for the taking of such evidence, in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as the court may deem proper. The Secretary may modify his findings as to the facts, or make new findings, by reason of the additional evidence so taken, and he shall file such modified or new findings and his recommendations, if any, for the modification or setting aside of his order, with the return of such additional evidence.

(g) [Affirmance or modification of order by Circuit Court of Appeals.] If the circuit court of appeals affirms or modifies the order of the Secretary, its decree shall operate as an injunction to restrain the packer, and his officers, directors, agents, and employees from violating the provisions of such order or such order as modified.

(h) [Review by Supreme Court — certiorari.] The circuit court of appeals shall have exclusive jurisdiction to review, and to affirm, set aside, or modify, such orders of the Secretary, and the decree of such court shall be final except that it shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the Judicial Code, if such writ is duly applied for within sixty days after entry of the decree. The issue of such writ shall not operate as a stay of the decree of the circuit court of appeals, in so far as such decree operates as an injunction, unless so ordered by the Supreme Court.

(i) ["Circuit Court of Appeals" as including District of Columbia Court of Appeals.] For the purposes of this title the term "circuit court of appeals," in case the principal place of business of the packer is in the District of Columbia, means the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 205. [Failure of packer or employee to obey order of Secretary of Agriculture — penalty.] Any packer, or any officer, director, agent, or employee of a packer, who fails to obey any order of the Secretary issued under the provisions of section 203, or such order as modified —

(1) After the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition in the circuit court of appeals to set aside or modify such order, if no such petition has been filed within such time; or

(2) After the expiration of the time allowed for applying for a writ of certiorari, if such order, or such order as modified, has been sustained by the circuit court of appeals and no such writ has been applied for within such time; or

(3) After such order, or such order as modified, has been sustained by the courts as provided in section 204: shall on conviction be fined not less than $500 nor more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not less than six months nor more than five years, or both. Each day during which such failure continues shall be deemed a separate offense.

TITLE III.—STOCKYARDS.

SEC. 301. [Definition of terms.] When used in this Act —

(a) ["Stockyard owner."] The term "stockyard owner" means any person engaged in the business of conducting or operating a stockyard;

(b) ["Stockyard services."] The term "stockyard services" means services or facilities furnished at a stockyard in connection with the receiving, buying or selling on a commission basis or otherwise, marketing, feeding, watering, holding, delivery, shipment, weighing, or handling, in commerce, of live stock;

(c) ["Market agency."] The term "market agency" means any person engaged in the business of (1) buying or selling in commerce live stock at a stockyard on a commission basis or (2) furnishing stockyard services; and

(d) ["Dealer."] The term "dealer" means any person, not a market agency, engaged in the business of buying or selling in commerce live stock at a stockyard, either on his own account or as the employee or agent of the vendor or purchaser.

SEC. 302. (a) [Stockyards affected by title.] When used in this title the term "stockyard" means any place, establishment, or facility commonly known as stockyards, conducted or operated for compensation or profit as a public market, consisting of pens, or other inclosures, and their appurtenances, in which live cattle, sheep, swine, horses, mules, or goats are received, held, or kept for sale or shipment in commerce. This title shall not apply to a stockyard of which the area normally available for handling live stock, exclusive of runs, alleys, or passage ways, is less than twenty thousand square feet.

(b) [Public notice of stockyards affected by title.] The Secretary shall from time to time ascertain, after such inquiry as he deems necessary, the stockyards which come within the foregoing definition, and shall give notice thereof to the stockyard owners concerned, and give public notice thereof by posting copies of such notice in the stockyard, and in such other manner as he may determine. After the giving of such notice to the stockyard owner and to the public, the stockyard shall remain subject to the provisions of this title until like notice is given by the Secretary that such stockyard no longer comes within the foregoing definition.

SEC. 303. [Registration of persons carrying on business of market agency or dealer at stockyard.] After the expiration of thirty days after the Secretary has given public notice that any stockyard is within the definition of section 302, by posting copies of such notice in the stockyard, no person shall carry on the business of a market agency or dealer at such stockyard unless he has registered with the Secretary under such rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, his name and address, the character of business in which he is engaged and the kinds of stockyard services, if any, which he furnishes at such stockyard. Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $500 for each such offense and not more than $25 for each day it continues, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States.

SEC. 304. [Duty to furnish reasonable stockyard services.] It shall be the duty of every stockyard owner and market agency to furnish upon reasonable request, without discrimination, reasonable stockyard services at such stockyard.

SEC. 305. [Rates or charges for stockyard services.] All rates or charges made for any stockyard services furnished at a stockyard by a stockyard owner or market agency shall be just, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory, and any unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory rate or charge is prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

SEC. 306. (a) [Schedules of rates and charges.] Within sixty days after the Secretary has given public notice that a stockyard is within the definition of section 302, by posting copies of such notice in the stockyard, the stockyard owner and every market agency at such stockyard shall file with the Secretary, and print and keep open to public inspection at the stockyard, schedules showing all rates and charges for the stockyard services furnished by such person at such stockyard. If a market agency commences business at the stockyard after the expiration of such sixty days such schedules must be filed before any stockyard services are furnished.

(b) [Contents of schedules — posting.] Such schedules shall plainly state all such rates and charges in such detail as the Secretary may require, and shall also state any rules or regulations which in any manner change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such rates or charges, or the value of the stockyard services furnished. The Secretary may determine and prescribe the form and manner in which such schedules shall be prepared, arranged, and posted, and may from time to time make, such changes in respect thereto as may be found expedient.

(c) [Changes in rates and charges.] No changes shall be made in the rates or charges so filed and published, except after ten days' notice to the Secretary and to the public filed and published as aforesaid, which shall plainly state the changes proposed to be made and the time such changes will go into effect; but the Secretary may, for good cause shown, allow changes on less than ten days' notice, or modify the requirements of this section in respect to publishing, posting, and filing of schedules, either in particular instances or by a general order applicable to special or peculiar circumstances or conditions.

(d) [When filing of schedule may be refused.] The Secretary may reject and refuse to file any schedule tendered for filing which does not provide and give lawful notice of its effective date, and any schedule so rejected by the Secretary shall be void and its use shall be unlawful.

(e) [Hearing concerning lawfulness of rates, charges, etc., after filing of schedule.] Whenever there is filed with the Secretary any schedule, stating a new rate or charge, or a new regulation or practice affecting any rate or charge, the Secretary may either upon complaint or upon his own initiative without complaint, at once, and if he so orders without answer or other formal pleading by the person filing such schedule, but upon reasonable notice, enter upon a hearing concerning the lawfulness of such rate, charge, regulation, or practice, and pending such hearing and decision thereon the Secretary, upon filing with such schedule and delivering to the person filing it a statement in writing of his reasons for such suspension, may suspend the operation of such schedule and defer the use of such rate, charge, regulation, or practice, but not for a longer period than thirty days beyond the time when it would otherwise go into effect; and after full hearing, whether completed before or after the rate, charge, regulation, or practice goes into effect, the Secretary may make such order with reference thereto as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after it had become effective. If any such hearing can not be concluded within the period of suspension the Secretary may extend the time of suspension for a further period not exceeding thirty days, and if the proceeding has not been concluded and an order made at the expiration of such thirty days, the proposed change of rate, charge, regulation, or practice shall go into effect at the end of such period.

(f) [Necessity of abiding by rates and charges named in schedules.] After the expiration of the sixty days referred to in subdivision (a) no person shall carry on the business of a stockyard owner or market agency unless the rates and charges for the stockyard services furnished at the stockyard have been filed and published in accordance with this section and the orders of the Secretary made thereunder; nor charge, demand, or collect a greater or less or different compensation for such services than the rates and charges specified in the schedules filed and in effect at the time; nor refund or remit in any manner any portion of the rates or charges so specified (but this shall not prohibit a cooperative association of producers from bona fide returning to its members, on a patronage basis, its excess earnings on their live stock, subject to such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe) ; nor extend to any person at such stockyard any stockyard services except such as are specified in such schedules.

(g) [Failure to comply with provisions of section or regulations thereunder — penalty.] Whoever fails to comply with the provisions of this section or of any regulation or order of the Secretary made thereunder shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $500 for each such offense, and not more than $25 for each day it continues, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States.

(h) [Failure to comply with provisions of section or regulations thereunder — fine or imprisonment.] Whoever willfully fails to comply with the provisions of this section or of any regulation or order of the Secretary made thereunder shall on conviction be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

SEC. 307. [Reasonable regulations and practices respecting stockyard services.] It shall be the duty of every stockyard owner and market agency to establish, observe, and enforce just, reasonable, and non-discriminatory regulations and practices in respect to the furnishing of stockyard services, and every unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory regulation or practice is prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

SEC. 308. (a) [Damages for violation of provisions of this title.] If any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer, violates any of the provisions of sections 304, 305, 306, or 307, or of any order of the Secretary made under this title, he shall be liable to the person or persons injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of such violation.

(b) [Remedies for enforcement of liability.] Such liability may be enforced either (1) by complaint to the Secretary as provided in section 309, or (2) by suit in any district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction; but this section shall not in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this Act are in addition to such remedies.

SEC. 309. (a) [Complaints against stockyard owners, market agencies or dealers — petition to Secretary of Agriculture — investigation by Secretary.] Any person complaining of anything done or omitted to be done by any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "defendant") in violation of the provisions of sections 304, 305, 306, or 307, or of an order of the Secretary made under this title, may, at any time within ninety days after the cause of action accrues, apply to the Secretary by petition which shall briefly state the facts, whereupon the complaint thus made shall be forwarded by the Secretary to the defendant, who shall be called upon to satisfy the complaint, or to answer it in writing, within a reasonable time to be specified by the Secretary. If the defendant within the time specified makes reparation for the injury alleged to be done he shall be relieved of liability to the complainant only for the particular violation thus complained of. If the defendant does not satisfy the complaint within the time specified, or there appears to be any reasonable ground for investigating the complaint, it shall be the duty of the Secretary to investigate the matters complained of in such manner and by such means as he deems proper.

(b) [Investigation by Secretary of complaints by agency of State or Territory.] The Secretary, at the request of the live-stock commissioner, Board of Agriculture, or other agency of a State or Territory, having jurisdiction over stockyards in such State or Territory, shall investigate any complaint forwarded by such agency in like manner and with the same authority and powers as in the case of a complaint made under subdivision (a).

(c) [Inquiries by Secretary on own motion.] The Secretary may at any time institute an inquiry on his own motion, in any case and as to any matter or thing concerning which a complaint is authorized to be made to or before the Secretary, by any provision of this title, or concerning which any question may arise under any of the provisions of this title, or relating to the enforcement of any of the provisions of this title. The Secretary shall have the same power and authority to proceed with any inquiry instituted upon his own motion as though he had been appealed to by petition, including the power to make and enforce any order or orders in the case or relating to the matter or thing concerning which the inquiry is had, except orders for the payment of money.

(d) [Dismissal of complaint — absence of direct damage.] No complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant.

(e) [Order by Secretary after hearing directing payment of damages.] If after hearing on a complaint the Secretary determines that the complainant is entitled to an award of damages, the Secretary shall make an order directing the defendant to pay to the complainant the sum to which he is entitled on or before a day named.

(f) [Failure to comply with order for payment of damages — remedies.] If the defendant does not comply with an order for the payment of money within the time limit in such order, the complainant, or any person for whose benefit such order was made, may within one year of the date of the order file in the district court of the United States for the district in which he resides or in which is located the principal place of business of the defendant or in any State court having general jurisdiction of the parties, a petition setting forth briefly the causes for which he claims damages and the order of the Secretary in the premises. Such suit in the district court shall proceed in all respects like other civil suits for damages except that the findings and orders of the Secretary shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated, and the petitioner shall not be liable for costs in the district court nor for costs at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless they accrue upon his appeal. If the petitioner finally prevails, he shall be allowed a reasonable attorney's fee to be taxed and collected as a part of the costs of the suit.

SEC. 310. [Unreasonable rates and charges — power of Secretary to remedy.] Whenever after full hearing upon a complaint made as provided in section 309, or after full hearing under an order for investigation and hearing made by the Secretary on his own initiative, either in extension of any pending complaint or without any complaint whatever, the Secretary is of the opinion that any rate, charge, regulation, or practice of a stockyard owner or market agency, for or in connection with the furnishing of stockyard services, is or will be unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory, the Secretary [sic]—

(a) May determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable rate or charge, or rates or charges, to be thereafter observed in such case, or the maximum or minimum, or maximum and minimum, to be charged, and what regulation or practice is or will be just, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory to be thereafter followed; and

(b) May make an order that such owner or operator (1) shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the Secretary finds that it does or will exist; (2) shall not thereafter publish, demand, or collect any rate or charge for the furnishing of stockyard services other than the rate or charge so prescribed, or in excess of the maximum or less than the minimum so prescribed, as the case may be; and (3) shall conform to and observe the regulation or practice so prescribed.

SEC. 311. [Rates, charges, etc., in intrastate commerce discriminatory against interstate commerce — power of Secretary to remedy.] Whenever in any investigation under the provisions of this title, or in any investigation instituted by petition of the stockyard owner or market agency concerned, which petition is hereby authorized to be filed, the Secretary after full hearing finds that any rate, charge, regulation, or practice of any stockyard owner or market agency, for or in connection with the buying or selling on a commission basis or otherwise, receiving, marketing, feeding, holding, delivery, shipment, weighing, or handling, not in commerce of live stock, causes any undue or unreasonable advantage, prejudice, or preference as between persons or localities in intrastate commerce in live stock on the one hand and interstate or foreign commerce in live stock on the other hand, or any undue, unjust, or unreasonable discrimination against interstate or foreign commerce in live stock, which is hereby forbidden and declared to be unlawful, the Secretary shall prescribe the rate, charge, regulation, or practice thereafter to be observed, in such manner as, in his judgment, will remove such advantage, preference, or discrimination. Such rates, charges, regulations, or practices shall be observed while in effect by the stockyard owners or market agencies parties to such proceeding affected thereby, the law of any State or the decision or order of any State authority to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 312. (a) [Unfair practices by stockyard owners, etc., affecting live stock.] It shall be unlawful for any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer to engage in or use any unfair, unjustly discriminatory, or deceptive practice or device in connection with the receiving, marketing, buying or selling on a commission basis or otherwise, feeding, watering, holding, delivery, shipment, weighing or handling, in commerce at a stockyard, of live stock.

(b) [Remedy for such practices.] Whenever complaint is made to the Secretary by any person, or whenever the Secretary has reason to believe, that any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer is violating the provisions of subdivision (a), the Secretary after notice and full hearing may make an order that he shall cease and desist from continuing such violation to the extent that the Secretary finds that it does or will exist.

SEC. 313. [Orders of Secretary under this title — when in effect — continuance in force.] Except as otherwise provided in this Act, all orders of the Secretary under this title, other than orders for the payment of money, shall take effect within such reasonable time, not less than five days, as is prescribed in the order, and shall continue in force until his further order, or for a specified period of time, according as is prescribed in the order, unless such order is suspended or modified or set aside by the Secretary or is suspended or set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 314. (a) [Failure to obey orders of Secretary — forfeiture of money.] Any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer who knowingly fails to obey any order made under the provisions of sections 310, 311, or 312 shall forfeit to the United States the sum of $500 for each offense. Each distinct violation shall be a separate offense, and in case of a continuing violation each day shall be deemed a separate offense. Such forfeiture shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States.

(b) [Recovery of forfeitures.] It shall be the duty of the various district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General, to prosecute for the recovery of forfeitures. The costs and expense of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States.

SEC. 315. [Failure to obey orders of Secretary — injunction.] If any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer fails to obey any order of the Secretary other than for the payment of money while the same is in effect, the Secretary, or any party injured thereby, or the United States by its Attorney General, may apply to the district court for the district in which such person has his principal place of business for the enforcement of such order. If after hearing the court determines that the order was lawfully made and duly served and that such person is in disobedience of the same, the court shall enforce obedience to such order by a writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, to restrain such person, his officers, agents, or representatives from further disobedience of such order or to enjoin upon him or them obedience to the same.

SEC. 316. [Laws affecting orders of Interstate Commerce Commission as applicable to this title.] For the purposes of this title, the provisions of all laws relating to the suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of, or the setting aside in whole or in part the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, are made applicable to the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the Secretary in enforcing the provisions of this title, and to any person subject to the provisions of this title.

TITLE IV.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 401. [Keeping of records by packers, etc.— penalty for failure to keep.] Every packer, stockyard owner, market agency, and dealer shall keep such accounts, records, and memoranda as fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in his business, including the true ownership of such business by stockholding or otherwise. Whenever the Secretary finds that the accounts, records, and memoranda of any such person do not fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in his business, the Secretary may prescribe the manner and form in which such accounts, records, and memoranda shall be kept, and thereafter any such person who fails to keep such accounts, records, and memoranda in the manner and form prescribed or approved by the Secretary shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

SEC. 402. [Laws affecting Federal Trade Commission as applicable to this Act.] For the efficient execution of the provisions of this Act, and in order to provide information for the use of Congress, the provisions (including penalties) of sections 6, 8, 9, and 10 of the Act entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, are made applicable to the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the Secretary in enforcing the provisions of this Act and to any person subject to the provisions of this Act, whether or not a corporation. The Secretary, in person or by such agents as he may designate, may prosecute any inquiry necessary to his duties under this Act in any part of the United States.

For secs. 6, 8, 9, and 10 of the Act of Sept. 26, 1914, above mentioned, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 580-583.

SEC. 403. [Act or omission of agent as act or omission of principal.] When construing and enforcing the provisions of this Act, the act, omission, or failure of any agent, officer, or other person acting for or employed by any packer, stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer, within the scope of his employment or office, shall in every case also be deemed the act, omission, or failure of such packer, stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer, as well as that of such agent, officer, or other person.

SEC. 404. [Prosecution of violations by Attorney General.] The Secretary may report any violation of this Act to the Attorney General of the United States, who shall cause appropriate proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted in the proper courts of the United States without delay.

SEC. 405. [Provisions of Act as affecting proceedings under other specified Acts.] Nothing contained in this Act, except as otherwise provided herein, shall be construed —

(a) To prevent or interfere with the enforcement of, or the procedure under, the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, the Act entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Interstate Commerce Act as amended, the Act entitled "An Act to promote export trade, and for other purposes," approved April 10, 1918, or sections 73 to 77, inclusive, of the Act of August 27, 1894, entitled "An Act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," as amended by the Act entitled "An Act to amend sections seventy-three and seventy-six of the Act of August twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, entitled 'An Act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' " approved February 12, 1913, or

(b) To alter, modify, or repeal such Acts or any part or parts thereof, or

(c) To prevent or interfere with any investigation, proceeding, or prosecution begun and pending at the time this Act becomes effective.

Acts above mentioned are set out as follows in Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.): Act of July 2, 1890, in vol. 9, p. 644; Act of Oct. 15, 1914, in vol. 9, p. 730; Interstate Commerce Act in vol. 4, p. 331, and 1918 Supp. 387; Act of April 10, 1918, in 1918 Supp. 246; secs. 73-77 as amended, in vol. 9, p. 726.

SEC. 406. (a) [Provisions of Act as affecting power of Interstate Commerce Commission.] Nothing in this Act shall affect the power or jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, nor confer upon the Secretary concurrent power or jurisdiction over any matter within the power or jurisdiction of such Commission.

(b) [Provisions of Act as affecting power of Federal Trade Commission.] On and after the enactment of this Act, and so long as it remains in effect, the Federal Trade Commission shall have no power or jurisdiction so far as relating to any matter which by this Act is made subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary, except in cases in which, before the enactment of this Act, complaint has been served under section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, or under section 11 of the Act entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and except when the Secretary of Agriculture, in the exercise of his duties hereunder, shall request of the said Federal Trade Commission that it make investigations and report in any case.

For sec. 5 of Act of Sept. 26, 1914, and sec. 11 of Act of Oct. 15, 1914, referred to above, see respectively vol. 4, p. 577, and vol. 9, p. 741, Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.).

SEC. 407. [Miscellaneous powers of Secretary.] The Secretary may make such rules, regulations and orders as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act and may cooperate with any department or agency of the Government, any State, Territory, District, or possession, or department, agency or political subdivision thereof, or any person; and shall have the power to appoint, remove, and fix the compensation of such officers and employees, not in conflict with existing law, and make such expenditures for rent outside the District of Columbia, printing, telegrams, telephones, law books, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel, and other supplies and expenses as shall be necessary to the administration of this Act in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and as may be appropriated for by Congress, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for such purpose.

SEC. 408. [Partial invalidity of Act — effect on remainder.] If any provision of this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SURETY AND SURETYSHIP

Act of Nov. 23, 1921 ("Revenue Act of 1921"), 301.

Sec. 1329. Deposit of United States Bonds or Notes in Lieu of Surety, 301.

SEC. 1329. Deposit of United States bonds or notes in lieu of surety. That wherever by the laws of the United States or regulations made pursuant thereto, any person is required to furnish any recognizance, stipulation, bond, guaranty, or undertaking, hereinafter called "penal bond," with surety or sureties, such person may, in lieu of such surety or sureties, deposit as security with the official having authority to approve such penal bond, United States Liberty bonds or other bonds or notes of the United States in a sum equal at their par value to the amount of such penal bond required to be furnished, together with an agreement authorizing such official to collect or sell such bonds or notes so deposited in case of any default in the performance of any of the conditions or stipulations of such penal bond. The acceptance of such United States bonds or notes in lieu of surety or sureties required by law shall have the same force and effect as individual or corporate sureties, or certified checks, bank drafts, post-office money orders, or cash, for the penalty or amount of such penal bond. The bonds or notes deposited hereunder and such other United States bonds or notes as may be substituted therefor from time to time as such security, may be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, a Federal reserve bank, or other depository duly designated for that purpose by the Secretary, which shall issue receipt therefor, describing such bonds or notes so deposited. As soon as security for the performance of such penal bond is no longer necessary, such bonds or notes so deposited, shall be returned to the depositor: Provided, That in case a person or persons supplying a contractor with labor or material as provided by the Act of Congress, approved February 24, 1905 (33 Stat. 811), entitled "An Act to amend an Act approved August thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, entitled 'An Act for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works,'" shall file with the obligee, at any time after a default in the performance of any contract subject to said Acts, the application and affidavit therein provided, the obligee shall not deliver to the obligor the deposited bonds or notes nor any surplus proceeds thereof until the expiration of the time limited by said Acts for the institution of suit by such person or persons, and, in case suit shall be instituted within such time, shall hold said bonds or notes or proceeds subject to the order of the court having jurisdiction thereof: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall affect or impair the priority of the claim of the United States against the bonds or notes deposited or any right or remedy granted by said Acts or by this section to the United States for default upon any obligation of said penal bond: Provided further, That all laws inconsistent with this section are hereby so modified as to conform to the provisions hereof: And provided further, That nothing contained herein shall affect the authority of courts over the security, where such bonds are taken as security in judicial proceedings, or the authority of any administrative officer of the United States to receive United States bonds for security in cases authorized by existing laws. The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations necessary and proper for carrying this section into effect.

TIME

Act of March 4, 1921, 305.

Sec. 1. Standard Central Time — Western Boundary Line, 305.

2. Repeal of Conflicting Laws, 306.

An Act To transfer the Panhandle and Plains section of Texas and Oklahoma to the United States standard central time zone.

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] [Standard Central Time — western boundary line.] That the Panhandle and Plains section of Texas and Oklahoma be, and the same are hereby, transferred to and placed within the United States standard central time zone.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby authorized and directed to issue an order placing the western boundary line of the United States standard central time zone in so far as the same affect Texas and Oklahoma as follows:

Beginning at a point where such western boundary time zone line crosses the State boundary line between Kansas and Oklahoma; thence westerly along said State boundary line to the northwest corner of the State of Oklahoma; thence in a southerly direction along the west State boundary line of Oklahoma and the west State boundary line of Texas to the southeastern corner of the State of New Mexico; thence in a westerly direction along the State boundary line between the States of Texas and New Mexico to the Rio Grande River; thence down the Rio Grande River as the boundary line between the United States and Mexico: Provided, That the Chicago, Rock Island and Gulf Railway Company and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company may use Tucumcari, New Mexico, as the point at which they change from central to mountain time and vice versa; the Colorado Southern and Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Companies may use Sixela, New Mexico, as such changing point; the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and other branches of the Santa Fe System may use Clovis, New Mexico, as such changing point, and those railways running into or through El Paso may use El Paso as such point: Provided further, That this Act shall not, except as herein provided, interfere with the adjustment of time zones as established by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

SEC. 2. [Repeal of conflicting laws.] That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

Joint Resolution Declaring that certain Acts of Congress, joint resolutions, and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired.

[Res. of March 3, 1921, No. 64.]

[Repeal of war time legislation — exceptions — Trading with the Enemy Act — Liberty Bond Acts — War Finance Corporation Act — Selective Service Act—Act amending sec. 3 of Espionage Act—deserters in army and navy.] That in the interpretation of any provision relating to the duration or date of the termination of the present war or of the present or existing emergency, meaning thereby the war between the Imperial German Government and the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government and the Government and people of the United States, in any Acts of Congress, joint resolutions, or proclamations of the President containing provisions contingent upon the duration or the date of the termination of such war or of such present or existing emergency, the date when this resolution becomes effective shall be construed and treated as the date of the termination of the war or of the present or existing emergency; notwithstanding any provision in any Act of Congress or joint resolution providing any other mode of determining the date of such termination. And any Act of Congress, or any provision of any such Act, that by its terms is in force only during the existence of a state of war, or during such state of war and a limited period of time thereafter, shall be construed and administered as if such war between the Governments and people aforesaid terminated on the date when this resolution becomes effective, any provision of such law to the contrary notwithstanding; excepting, however, from the operation and effect of this resolution the following Acts and proclamations to, wit: Title 2 of the Act entitled "The Food Control and District of Columbia Rents Act," approved October 22, 1919 (Forty-first Statutes, page 297), the Act known as the Trading with the Enemy Act, approved October 6, 1917 (Fortieth Statutes, page 411), and all amendments thereto, and the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Liberty Bond Acts, the Supplement to the Second Liberty Bond Act, and the Victory Liberty Loan Act; titles 1 and 3 of the War Finance Corporation Act (Fortieth Statutes, page 506) as amended by the Act approved March 3, 1919 (Fortieth Statutes, page 1313), and Public Resolution Numbered 55, Sixty-sixth Congress, entitled "Joint resolution directing the War Finance Corporation to take certain action for the relief of the present depression in the agricultural sections of the country, and for other purposes," passed January 4, 1921; also the proclamations issued under the authority conferred by the Acts herein excepted from the effect and operation of this resolution: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as effective to terminate the military status of any person now in desertion from the military or naval service of the United States, nor to terminate the liability to prosecution and punishment under the selective service law, approved May 18, 1917 (Fortieth Statutes, page 76), of any person who failed to comply with the provisions of said Act, or of Acts amendatory thereof: Provided further, That the Act entitled "An Act to amend section 3, title 1, of the Act entitled 'An Act to punish acts of interference with foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes,' approved June 15, 1917 (Fortieth Statutes, page 217), and for other purposes," approved May 16, 1918 (Fortieth Statutes, page 553), be, and the same is hereby, repealed, and that said section 3 of said Act approved June 15, 1917, is hereby revived and restored with the same force and effect as originally enacted.

Nothing herein contained shall be held to exempt from prosecution or to relieve from punishment any offense heretofore committed in violation of any Act hereby repealed or which may be committed while it remains in force as herein provided.

An Act Authorizing bestowal upon the unknown, unidentified British soldier buried in Westminster Abbey and the unknown, unidentified French soldier buried in the Arc de Triomphe of the congressional medal of honor.

[Act of March 4, 1921.]

[Congressional medal of honor — bestowal on unknown British and French soldier buried in Westminster Abbey and Arc de Triomphe.] Whereas Great Britain and France, two of the Allies of the United States in the World War, have lately done honor to the unknown dead of their armies by placing with fitting ceremony the body of an unknown, unidentified soldier, respectively, in Westminster Abbey and in the Arc de Triomphe; and

Whereas, animated by the same spirit of comradeship in which we of the American forces fought alongside these allies, we desire to add whatever we can to the imperishable glory won by the deeds of our allies and commemorated in part by this tribute to their unknown dead: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized to bestow with appropriate ceremonies, military and civil, the congressional medal of honor upon the unknown, unidentified British soldier buried in Westminster Abbey, London, England, and upon the unknown, unidentified French soldier buried in the Arc de Triomphe, Paris, France.

An Act To authorize the Secretary of War to furnish to the National Museum certain articles of the arms, matériel, equipment, or clothing heretofore issued or produced for the United States Army, and to dispose of colors, standards, and guidons of demobilized organizations of the United States Army, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [National Museum furnished with articles issued to Army and of general interest.] That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized to furnish to the National Museum, for exhibition, upon request therefor by the administrative head thereof, such articles of arms, matériel, equipment, or clothing as have been issued from time to time to the United States Army, or which have been or may hereafter be produced for the United States Army, and which are objects of general interest or of foreign or curious research, provided that such articles are surplus or can be spared.

SEC. 2. [Colors, standards and guidons of demobilized organizations of Army — disposition.] That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized to dispose of all colors, standards, and guidons of demobilized organizations of the United States Army in the following manner: Any which were used during their service by such organizations and which were brought into the service of the United States from the National Guard of any State may be returned to that State upon request therefor from the governor thereof; and all others may be sent, upon request of the governor thereof, to whatever State the Secretary of War may determine to have furnished the majority of men to any such organization at the time of its formation: Provided, however, That where it is impossible to determine what State furnished a majority of the men of an organization at the time of its formation, or where any organization was so cosmopolitan in its original make-up that it is impossible to identify it with any particular State, the colors of such organization will be turned in to the Quartermaster General for such national use as the Secretary of War may direct: Provided further, That the title to all such colors, standards, and guidons shall remain in the United States: And provided further, That the Secretary of War shall require assurance that proper provision has been or will be made for their care and preservation before returning or sending the same as herein authorized.

SEC. 3. [Ratification of prior Acts of Secretary of War disposing of property affected by this Act.] That in all cases in which the Secretary of War has heretofore furnished to the National Museum any property of the kinds described in section 1 hereof, or has disposed of any colors, standards, or guidons of demobilized organizations of the United States Army in the manner provided by section 2 hereof, his acts and doings in the premises are hereby ratified and confirmed.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Bureau of War Risk Insurance — allotments to Public Health Service.] The allotments made by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance to the Public Health Service for the care of beneficiaries of that bureau by the said service shall also be available for expenditure by the Public Health Service on that account for necessary personnel, regular and reserve commissioned officers of the Public Health Service and clerical help in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, maintenance, equipment, leases, fuel, lights, water, printing, freight, transportation and travel, and maintenance and operation of passenger motor vehicles.

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

An Act Making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

[Act of June 30, 1921.]

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Medical Reserve Corps — officers and nurses — care of beneficiaries of Bureau of War Risk Insurance — pay.] That pay and allowances of such additional officers and nurses of the Medical Reserve Corps as are required to supplement the like officers and nurses of the Regular Army in the care of beneficiaries of the Bureau of the War Risk Insurance treated in Army hospitals may be paid from the funds allotted to the War Department by that bureau under existing law.

* * * [Enlisted men under eighteen — discharge — transportation.] The Secretary of War shall discharge from the military service with pay and with the form of discharge certificate to which the service of each, after enlistment, shall entitle him, all enlisted men under the age of eighteen on the application of either of their parents or legal guardian, and shall also furnish to each transportation in kind from the place of discharge to the railroad station at or nearest to the place of acceptance for enlistment, or to his home if the distance thereto is no greater than from the place of discharge to the place of acceptance for enlistment, but if the distance be greater he may be furnished with transportation in kind for a distance equal to that from place of discharge to place of acceptance for enlistment;

* * * [Enlisted men — reduction in number.] The Secretary of War is directed under such reasonable regulations as he may prescribe to grant applications for discharge of enlisted men serving in the continental United States without regard to the provisions of existing law respecting discharges until the number in the Army has been reduced to 150,000 enlisted men, not including the Philippine Scouts. The provisions of this paragraph shall take effect immediately upon the approval of this Act.

For sec. 27 of Act of June 4, 1920, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 316.

* * * [Flying cadets — enlistment.] Nothing contained in Public Resolution Numbered 59 of the Sixty-sixth Congress shall be held to prohibit the enlistment of flying cadets to the number of five hundred.

* * * [Clerks, messengers and laborers — assignment to duty.] That no clerk, messenger, or laborer at headquarters of tactical divisions, military departments, brigades, service schools, and office of the Chief of Staff shall be assigned to duty in any bureau of the War Department.

* * * [Supplies — purchase of fuel.] That hereafter when, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, it is in the interest of the United States so to do, he is authorized to enter into contracts and to incur obligations for fuel in sufficient quantities to meet the requirements for one year without regard to the current fiscal year, and payments for supplies delivered under such contracts may be made from funds appropriated for the fiscal year in which the contract is made, or from funds appropriated or which may be appropriated for such supplies for the ensuing fiscal year.

* * * [Transportation on Army transports — members, etc., of Porto Rican Government.] That hereafter when, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, accommodations are available, transportation on Army transports may be provided for the members and employees of the Porto Rican Government and their families on official business without expense to United States:

* * * [Motor-propelled vehicles — purchase.] That none of the funds appropriated or made available under this Act or any of the unexpended balances of any other Act shall be used for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger or freight carrying vehicles for the Army except those that are purchased solely for experimental purposes.

* * * [Transportation of civilian employees and materials — cost charged to what appropriation.] That hereafter the cost of transportation of civilian employees and of materials in connection with the construction or maintenance of seacoast fortifications, or the acquisition of land therefor, by the Engineer Department, or with the manufacturing and purchase activities of the Ordnance Department and the Chemical Warfare Service, shall be charged to the appropriations for the work in connection with which such transportation charges are incurred.

* * * [Clothing accounts of enlisted men — settlement.] That hereafter the settlement of clothing accounts of enlisted men, including charges for clothing drawn in excess of clothing allowance and payments of amounts due them when they draw less than their allowance, shall be made at such periods and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

* * * [Issuance of uniforms to discharged enlisted men — repeal of Act of Feb. 28, 1919.] That portion of the Act of February 28, 1919, relating to the issuance of uniforms to discharged enlisted men is hereby repealed: Provided, That such uniforms shall be issued in accordance with the provisions of said Act to those enlisted men who served in the Army of the United States at any time between April 6, 1917, and January 1, 1920, whose applications therefor shall have been received at the War Department prior to June 1, 1921: Provided further, That there may be transferred during the fiscal year 1922 from the appropriations contained herein for "Subsistence of the Army," "Regular Supplies, Quartermaster Corps," "Incidental Expenses, Quartermaster Corps," "Water and sewers at military posts," and "Clothing and camp and garrison equipage," to the appropriation for "Transportation of the Army and its supplies," such amounts as may be necessary.

For Act of Feb. 28, 1919, repealed in part by the text, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 370.

* * * [Riding horses — encouragement of breeding — donations and prizes.] That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, accept donations of animals for breeding and donations of money or other property to be used as prizes or awards at agricultural fairs, horse shows, and similar exhibitions, in order to encourage the breeding of riding horses suitable for Army purposes:

* * * [National Guard — Federal pay.] That members of the National Guard who have or shall become entitled for a continuous period of less than one month to Federal pay at the rates fixed for the Regular Army, whether by virtue of a call by the President, of attendance at school or maneuver, or of any other cause, and whose accounts have not yet been settled, shall receive such pay for each day of such period; and the thirty-first day of a calendar month shall not be excluded from the computation:

* * * [National Guard — clothing and equipment.] That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to issue from surplus or reserve stores and matériel now on hand and purchased for the United States Army such articles of clothing and equipment and Field Artillery matériel and ammunition as may be needed by the National Guard organized under the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the Act approved June 4, 1920. This issue shall be made without charge against militia appropriations.

For Act of June 3, 1916, as amended, see 1920 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 279.

Joint Resolution Authorizing and directing the accounting officers of the Treasury to allow credit to the disbursing clerk of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in certain cases.

[Res. of July 26, 1921, No. 11.]

[Bureau of War Risk Insurance — accounts of disbursing clerk — credits.] That for such reasonable time as may be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but not extending beyond the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of the disbursing clerk of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance for all payments of insurance installments heretofore or hereafter made under the provisions of article 4 of the War Risk Insurance Act in advance of the verification of the deduction on the pay rolls or of the payment otherwise of all premiums.

For Art. 4 of the War Risk Insurance Act, mentioned in the text, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

An Act To establish a Veterans' Bureau * and to improve the facilities and service of such bureau, and further to amend and modify the War Risk Insurance Act.

[Act of Aug. 9, 1921.]

TITLE I.—VETERANS' BUREAU.

SECTION 1. [Creation of bureau — appointment of director — salary — powers — abolishment of director of bureau of War Risk Insurance.] There is hereby established an independent bureau under the President to be known as the Veterans' Bureau, the director of which shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The director of the Veterans' Bureau shall receive a salary of $10,000 per annum, payable monthly.

The word "director," as hereinafter used in this Act, shall mean the Director of the Veterans' Bureau.

The powers and duties pertaining to the office of the Director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance now in the Treasury Department are hereby transferred to the director, subject to the general direction of the President, and the said office of the Director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance is hereby abolished.

There shall be included on the technical and administrative staff of the director such staff officers, experts, and assistants as the director shall prescribe; and there shall be in the Veterans' Bureau such sections and subdivisions thereof as the director shall prescribe.

SEC. 2. [Execution of provisions of Act by director — rules and regulations.] The director, subject to the general direction of the President, shall administer, execute, and enforce the provisions of this Act, and for that purpose shall have full power and authority to make rules and regulations not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, which are necessary or appropriate to carry out its purposes and shall decide all questions arising under this Act except as otherwise provided herein.

SEC. 3. [Transfer of functions, powers and duties of other bureaus and boards to Veterans' Bureau — War Risk Insurance — vocational education.] The functions, powers, and duties conferred by existing law upon the Bureau of War Risk Insurance are hereby transferred to and made a part of the Veterans' Bureau.

The functions, powers, and duties conferred upon the Federal Board of Vocational Education by the Act entitled "An Act to provide for vocational rehabilitation and return to civil employment of disabled persons discharged from the military or naval forces of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 27, 1918, and amendments thereto, are hereby transferred to and made a part of the Veterans' Bureau.

For Act of June 27, 1918, and amendments, above mentioned, see 1918 Supp. 875 and 1919 Supp. 359.

SEC. 4. [Transfer of personnel, facilities, obligations, etc., of other bureaus and boards to Veterans' Bureau — War Risk Insurance — Public Health Service — Rehabilitation Division of Vocational Education Board.] All personnel,

* Name of Bureau changed.— By Resolution of August 24, 1921, No. 19, it was provided: "That the Veterans' Bureau, created by the Act entitled 'An Act to establish a Veterans' Bureau and to improve the facilities and service of such bureau, and further to amend and modify the War Risk Insurance Act,' approved August 9, 1921, shall be known as the 'United States Veterans' Bureau,' and whenever used in such Act the term 'Veterans' Bureau' shall mean 'United States Veterans' bureau.'" facilities, property, and equipment, including leases, contracts, and other obligations and instrumentalities in the District of Columbia and elsewhere of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, of the United States Public Health Service, as described and provided in a written order of the Treasury Department issued and signed by the Secretary of the Treasury on April 19, 1921, and designated "Order relative to the transfer of certain activities of the United States Public Health Service, relating to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, including the trainees of the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education," and of the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, as a result of the administration of the Act approved June 27, 1918, and amendments thereto, are hereby transferred to and made a part of the Veterans' Bureau under the control, management, operation, and supervision of the director, and subject to such change in designation and organization as he may deem necessary in carrying out the provisions of this Act: Provided, That all commissioned personnel detailed or hereafter detailed from the United States Public Health Service to the Veterans' Bureau, shall hold the same rank and grade, shall receive the same pay and allowances, and shall be subject to the same rules for relative rank and promotion as now or hereafter may be provided by law for commissioned personnel of the same rank or grade or performing the same or similar duties in the United States Public Health Service.

SEC. 5. [Transfer of records, etc., from other bureaus and boards to Veterans' Bureau.] All records, files, documents, correspondence, and other papers relating to service rendered or to be rendered by the United States Public Health Service in the medical examination, assignment to hospitals, and treatment of persons who are now or have been patients and beneficiaries of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance or of the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, as a result of the administration of the Act approved June 27, 1918, and amendments thereto, and as described and provided in a written order of the Treasury Department issued and signed by the Secretary of the Treasury on April 19, 1921, and designated "Order relative to the transfer of certain activities of the United States Public Health Service relating to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, including the trainees of the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education," shall be transferred to the Veterans' Bureau.

All records, files, documents, correspondence, and other papers in the possession of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, and those which as a result of the administration of the Act approved June 27, 1918, and amendments thereto, are in the possession of the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education shall be transferred to the Veterans' Bureau.

SEC. 6. [Offices and suboffices — regional offices.] The director shall establish a central office in the District of Columbia, and not more than fourteen regional offices and such suboffices, not exceeding one hundred and forty in number, within the territory of the United States and its outlying possessions as may be deemed necessary by him and in the best interests of the work committed to the Veterans' Bureau and to carry out the purposes of this Act.

Such regional offices may, pending final action by the director in case of an appeal, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the director, exercise such powers for hearing complaints and for examining, rating, and awarding compensation claims, granting medical, surgical, dental, and hospital, care, convalescent care, and necessary and reasonable after care, making insurance awards, granting vocational training, and all other matters delegated to them by the director as could be performed lawfully under this Act by the central office. The suboffices shall have such powers as may be delegated to them by the director, except to make compensation and insurance awards and to grant vocational training.

The regional offices and suboffices, with all authority to establish such offices, shall terminate on June 30, 1926, but nothing herein shall prevent the director from terminating any regional offices or suboffices when in his judgment this may be done without detriment to the administration of this Act, and upon such termination all records and supplies pertaining thereto shall be delivered to the central office.

SEC. 7. [Beneficiaries of Veterans' Bureau, who are — individual records.] The beneficiaries of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board for Vocational Education shall hereafter be the beneficiaries of the Veterans' Bureau, and complete individual record of each beneficiary shall be kept by the Veterans' Bureau.

SEC. 8. [Appropriations and expenditures.] All sums heretofore appropriated for carrying out the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act and amendments thereto, and to carry out the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for vocational rehabilitation and return to civil employment of disabled persons discharged from the military or naval forces of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 27, 1918, and amendments thereto, shall, where unexpended, be made available for the Veterans' Bureau, and may be expended in such manner as the director deems necessary in carrying out the purposes of this Act, with the restrictions heretofore imposed as to number of persons that may be employed at stated salaries.

SEC. 9. [Responsibility of director for care of beneficiaries — hospital and other facilities — inspection service.] The director, subject to the general directions of the President, shall be responsible for the proper examination, medical care, treatment, hospitalization, dispensary, and convalescent care, necessary and reasonable after care, welfare of, nursing, vocational training, and such other services as may be necessary in the carrying out of the provisions of this Act, and for that purpose is hereby authorized to utilize the now existing or future facilities of the United States Public Health Service, the War Department, the Navy Department, the Interior Department, the National Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and such other governmental facilities as may be made available for the purposes set forth in this Act; and such governmental agencies are hereby authorized and directed to furnish such facilities, including personnel, equipment, medical, surgical, and hospital services and supplies as the director may deem necessary and advisable in carrying out the provisions of this Act, in addition to such governmental facilities as are hereby made available.

In order to standardize the character of examination, medical care, treatment, hospitalization, dispensary, and convalescent care, nursing, vocational training, and such other services as may be necessary for beneficiaries under this Act, the director shall maintain an inspection service, with authority to examine all facilities and services utilized in carrying out the purpose of this Act, and for this purpose, with the approval of the President, may utilize such other Government or private agencies as may be deemed practicable and necessary. The head of the inspection service shall report to the director in the manner the director may prescribe the result of each examination of facilities and services, and shall recommend to him methods of standardizing such facilities and services.

When, in the opinion of the director, the facilities and services utilized for the hospitalization, medical care, and treatment for beneficiaries under this Act are unsatisfactory, the director shall make arrangements for the further hospitalization, care, and treatment of such beneficiaries by other means.

In the event that there is not sufficient Government hospital and other facilities for the proper medical care and treatment of beneficiaries under this Act, and the director deems it necessary and advisable to secure additional Government facilities, he may, within the limits of appropriations made for carrying out the provisions of this paragraph, and with the approval of the President, improve or extend existing governmental facilities, or acquire additional facilities by purchase or otherwise. Such new property and structures as may be so improved, extended, or acquired shall become part of the permanent equipment of the Veterans' Bureau or of some one of the now existing agencies of the Government, including the War Department, Navy Department, Interior Department, Treasury Department, the National Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, in such a way as will best serve the present emergency, taking into consideration the future services to be rendered the veterans of the World War, including the beneficiaries under this Act.

In the event Government hospital facilities and other facilities are not thus available or are not sufficient, the director may contract with State, municipal, or private hospitals for such medical, surgical, and hospital services and supplies as may be required, and such contracts may be made for a period of not exceeding five years and may be for the use of a ward or other hospital unit or on such other basis as may be in the best interest of the beneficiaries under this Act.

The President is hereby authorized, should he deem it necessary and advisable for the proper medical care and treatment of beneficiaries under this Act, to transfer to the director the operation, management, and control of specifically designated hospitals now under the jurisdiction of the Public Health Service. Such hospitals when transferred shall be used exclusively for beneficiaries under this Act and shall be under the operative control of the director for such period of time as the President may prescribe.

SEC. 10. [Examination of compensation and insurance claims—detail of clerks.] For the purpose of this Act, the director is authorized to detail from time to time clerks or persons employed in the bureau, to make examinations into the merits of compensation and insurance claims, whether pending or adjudicated, as he may deem proper, and to aid in the preparation, presentation, or examination of such claims; and any such person so detailed shall have power to administer oaths, take affidavits, and certify to the correctness of the papers and documents pertaining to the administration of this Act. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize a travel allowance to clerks or persons for transportation or subsistence outside of the district in which they are employed.

SEC. 11. [Rules and regulations for good conduct of beneficiaries receiving treatment or training—penalties for breach—board of discipline and morale.] The director is hereby authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary in order to promote good conduct on the part of persons who are receiving care or treatment in hospitals, homes, or institutions as patients or beneficiaries of said bureau during their stay in such hospitals, homes, institutions, or training centers. Penalties for the breach of such rules and regulations may, with the approval of the director, extend to a forfeiture by the offender of such portion of the compensation payable to him, not exceeding three-fourths of the monthly installment per month for three months, for a breach committed while receiving treatment in such hospital, home, institution, or training center as may be prescribed by such rules and regulations: Provided, That the offender shall have the right to appeal the decision involving the forfeiture of a part of his compensation to a board of three persons which shall be established and appointed by the director in September of each year for each regional district. Such board shall be known as the Board on Discipline and Morale. It shall serve without compensation, and at least one of the members of such board shall be an ex-service man and a member of some war veterans' organization. No person who is in the employ of the United States shall be a member of such board. The decision of such board, after hearing all the evidence presented by the offender and those charging a breach of the rules and regulations, shall be final.

SEC. 12. [Allotment by beneficiaries of monthly compensation—regulations prescribing conditions and limitations.] The director may set forth in regulations to be prescribed by him the conditions and limitations whereby all patients or beneficiaries of the Veterans' Bureau who are receiving treatment through the bureau as inmates of a hospital may allot any proportion or proportions or any fixed amount or amounts of their monthly compensation for such purposes and for the benefit of such person or persons as they may direct.

In case such inmate has not allotted three-fourths of his monthly compensation, regulations to be made by the director may provide that any unallotted portion of such three-fourths compensation may be deposited to his credit with the Treasurer of the United States to accumulate at such rate of interest as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine but at a rate never less than 3½ per centum per annum, payable for no period, however, of less than six months, and when payable shall be paid, principal and interest, to such patient if living; otherwise, to any beneficiary or beneficiaries he may have designated, or, if there be no such beneficiary, then to the executor or administrator of the estate of such deceased person: Provided, That this paragraph shall not be so construed as to prevent payment by the bureau from the amounts due to the decedent's estate of his funeral expenses, expenses of last illness, board, rent, lodging, or other household expenses for which decedent is liable, provided a claim therefor is presented by the creditors or by the person or persons who actually paid the same before settlement by the Veterans' Bureau.

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to invest and reinvest the said allotments deposited with him, or any part thereof, in interest-bearing obligations of the United States and to sell the obligations for the purposes of said funds.

SEC. 13. [Treatment by bureau of disabled members of military and naval forces.] In addition to the care, treatment, and appliances now authorized by law, said bureau also shall provide without charge therefor hospital, dental, medical, surgical, and convalescent care and treatment and prosthetic appliances for any member of the military or naval forces of the United States separated therefrom under honorable conditions disabled by reason of any wound or injury received or disease contracted, or by reason of any aggravation of a preexisting injury or disease, specifically noted at examination for entrance into or employment in the active military or naval service, while in the active military or naval service of the United States on or after April 6, 1917: Provided, That the wound or injury received or disease contracted, or aggravation of a preexisting injury or disease, for which such hospital, dental, medical, surgical, and convalescent care and treatment and prosthetic appliances shall be furnished, was incurred in line of duty and not caused by his own willful misconduct: Provided further, That application for such care and treatment and appliances provided for in this section shall be made within one year from date of separation from service or from the date this Act goes into effect, whichever is the later.

SEC. 14. [Reports to Congress by director — false and fraudulent claims, etc.] The director shall file with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate on the first day of the next regular session after this Act takes effect an itemized account of all expenditures, classified by regional offices and suboffices, made under this Act, including names, classifications, and salaries of all staff officers, experts, assistants, and employees, and the nature and terms of all contracts made under the authority of this Act, and the names and principal place of business of the parties thereto. Thereafter, on the first Monday in December of each year, the director shall make a report to Congress of his doings under this Act for the preceding fiscal year.

Any person who shall knowingly make or cause to be made, or conspire, combine, aid or assist in, agree to, arrange for, or in anywise procure the making or presentation of a false or fraudulent affidavit, declaration, certificate, statement, voucher, or paper or writing purporting to be such, concerning any claim or the approval of any claim for compensation or the payment of any money, for himself or for any other person, under Article III of the War Risk Insurance Act, or any Acts amendatory of or supplemental to such Article III, shall forfeit all rights, claims, and benefits under such Article III, and in addition to any and all other penalties imposed by law shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, for each such offense.

For Art. III of the War Risk Insurance Act with amendments, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1317; 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 383. And see infra, this title.

TITLE II.—AMENDMENTS TO THE WAR RISK INSURANCE ACT.

SEC. 15. [Discharge or dismissal from military or naval forces as affecting right to compensation — enemy aliens — Sec. 29 amended.] Section 29 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 29. The discharge or dismissal of any person from the military or naval forces on the ground that he is an enemy alien, conscientious objector, or a deserter, or is guilty of mutiny, treason, spying, or any offense involving moral turpitude, or willful and persistent misconduct, shall terminate any insurance granted on the life of such person under the provisions of Article IV, and shall bar all rights to any compensation under Article III or any insurance under Article IV: Provided, That, as to converted insurance, the cash surrender value thereof, if any, on the date of such discharge or dismissal shall be paid the insured, if living, and if dead to the designated beneficiary: Provided further, That an enemy alien who volunteered or who was drafted into the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during the World War, and who was not discharged from the service on his own application or solicitation, by reason of his being an enemy alien, and whose service was honest and faithful, shall be entitled to the benefit of the War Risk Insurance Act and all amendments thereto: Provided further, That in case any person has been dishonorably discharged from the military or naval forces as a result of a court-martial trial, and it is thereafter established to the satisfaction of the director that at the time of the commission of the offense resulting in such court-martial trial and discharge that such person was insane, such person shall be entitled to the compensation and insurance benefits of the War Risk Insurance Act."

For sec. 29 as it read previous to this amendment, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1311.

SEC. 16. [Persons provisionally accepted in military or naval service as entitled to benefits of Act — Sec. 31 amended.] Section 31 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended by adding thereto a subsection to be known as subsection (a) and to read as follows:

"(a) Any person who between the 6th day of April, 1917, and the 11th day of November, 1918, applied for enlistment or enrollment in the military or naval forces, and who was accepted provisionally and directed or ordered to a camp, post, station, or other place for final acceptance into such service, shall be deemed to have the same status as an inducted man not yet accepted and enrolled for active service during the period while such person was complying with such order or direction, and during such compliance, and until his final acceptance or rejection for enlistment or enrollment into the military or naval forces, shall be entitled to the same benefits under Articles III and IV of the War Risk Insurance Act as an inducted man not yet accepted and enrolled for active service."

For sec. 31 as it read previous to this amendment, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 384.

SEC. 17. [Investigation of application for family allowance — Sec. 210 amended.] Section 210 of the War Risk Insurance Act as amended is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 210. Upon receipt of any application for family allowance, the director shall make all proper investigations and shall make an award, on the basis of which award the amount of the allotments to be made by the man shall be certified to the War Department or Navy Department, as may be proper. Whenever the director shall have reason to believe that an allowance has been improperly made or that the conditions have changed, he shall investigate or reinvestigate and may modify the award. The amount of each monthly allotment and allowance shall be determined according to the family conditions existing on the first day of the month: Provided, That whenever an award of allotment or allowance, or both, covering any period has been paid to, or on behalf of, a person designated by the enlisted man as beneficiary of his allotment, no recovery of the allotments paid in such cases shall hereafter be made for any reason whatsoever; and no recovery of the allowances paid in such cases shall hereafter be made for any reason whatsoever except where it is shown that the person receiving the allowance does not bear the relationship to the enlisted man which is required by the War Risk Insurance Act, and except, also, in cases of manifest fraud."

For sec. 210 as it read previous to this amendment, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1316.

SEC. 18. [Compensation for death or disability — Sec. 300 amended.] Section 300 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 300. For death or disability resulting from personal injury suffered or disease contracted in the line of duty on or after April 6, 1917, or for an aggravation of a disability existing prior to examination, acceptance, and enrollment for service, when such aggravation was suffered and contracted in the line of duty on or after April 6, 1917, by any commissioned officer or enlisted man, or by any member of the Army Nurse Corps (female) or of the Navy Nurse Corps (female) when employed in the active service under the War Department or Navy Department, the United States shall pay to such commissioned officer or enlisted man, member of the Army Nurse Corps (female) or of the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or, in the discretion of the director, separately to his or her dependents, compensation as hereinafter provided; but no compensation shall be paid if the injury, disease, or aggravation has been caused by his own willful misconduct. That for the purposes of this section every such officer, enlisted man, or other member employed in the active service under the War Department or Navy Department who was discharged or who resigned prior to the date of approval of this amendatory Act, and every such officer, enlisted man, or other member employed in the active service under the War Department or Navy Department on or before November 11, 1918, who hereafter is discharged or resigns, shall be held and taken to have been in sound condition when examined, accepted, and enrolled for service, except as to defects, disorders, or infirmities, made of record in any manner by proper authorities of the United States at the time of, or prior to, inception of active service, to the extent to which any such defect, disorder, or infirmity was so made of record: Provided further, That an ex-service man who is shown to have an active pulmonary tuberculosis or neuropsychiatric disease (of more than 10 per centum degree of disability in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (2) of section 302 of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended) developing within two years after separation from the active military or naval service of the United States shall be considered to have acquired his disability in such service, or to have suffered an aggravation of a preexisting pulmonary tuberculosis or neuropsychiatric disease in such service, but nothing in this proviso shall be construed to prevent a claimant from receiving the benefits of compensation and medical care and treatment for a disability due to these diseases of more than 10 per centum degree (in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (2) of section 302 of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended) at a date more than two years after separation from such service, if the facts of the case substantiate his claim. This section shall be deemed to be in effect as of April 6, 1917."

For sec. 300 as it read previous to this amendment, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 386.

SEC. 19. [Review of awards — Sec. 305 amended.] Section 305 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“ SEC. 305. Upon its own motion or upon application the bureau may at any time review an award, and, in accordance with the facts found upon such review, may end, diminish, or increase the compensation previously awarded, or, if compensation is increased, or, if compensation has been refused, reduced or discontinued, may award compensation in proportion to the degree of disability sustained as of the date such degree of disability began, but not earlier than the date of discharge or resignation.”

For sec. 305 as it read previous to this amendment, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1321.

SEC. 20. [Time of death or disability as affecting compensation — Sec. 306 amended.] Section 306 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“ SEC. 306. No compensation shall be payable for death or disability which does not occur prior to or within one year after discharge or resignation from the service, except that where, after a medical examination made pursuant to regulations, a certificate has been obtained from the director at the time of discharge or resignation from the service, or within one year thereafter, or within one year after the passage of this amendatory Act, whichever is the later, to the effect that the injured person at the time of his discharge or resignation was suffering from injury likely to result in death or disability, compensation shall be payable for death or disability whenever occurring, proximately resulting from such injury.”

For sec. 306 as it read previous to this amendment, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1321.

SEC. 21. [Assignment to United States of right of action for injuries or death — fees and mileage to witnesses, etc. — Sec. 313 amended.] Section 313 of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding thereto, immediately following subsection (2) thereof, a new subsection to be known as subsection (2a) and to read as follows:

“(2a) The Veterans' Bureau is hereby authorized to pay the beneficiary or other person or persons in whose name an action may have been commenced or prosecuted, and to all witnesses in such action, fees and mileage, the same as is now paid and allowed to witnesses in the United States courts, in going to, remaining at, and returning from, place of trial, and without any regard to whether the action, if any, is brought or prosecuted in a court of the United States or some other court.

“ In all cases of assignment of causes of action under this section, whether the assignment be heretofore or hereafter made, where it shall appear to the director to be to the best interests of the beneficiary so to do, the director, acting for and in the name of the United States, may assign the cause of action back to the beneficiary or to his personal representatives.”

For sec. 313, here amended, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1323.

SEC. 22. [Persons admitted into military or naval forces after passage of this amendatory Act — right to benefits of Act — Sec. 315 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article III of the War Risk Insurance Act to be known as section 315, and to read as follows:

“ SEC. 315. That no person admitted into the military or naval forces of the United States after six months from the passage of this amendatory Act shall be entitled to the compensation or any other benefits or privileges provided under the provisions of Article III of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended."

For Art. III of the War Risk Insurance Act, here amended, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1317.

SEC. 23. [Change of status of designated beneficiary — permitted class — Sec. 402 amended.] Section 402 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended by adding thereto a subsection to be known as subsection (a) and to read as follows:

"(a) Where a beneficiary at the time of designation by the insured is within the permitted class of beneficiaries and is the designated beneficiary at the time of the maturity of the insurance because of the death of the insured, such beneficiary shall be deemed to be within the permitted class even though the status of such beneficiary shall have been changed."

For sec. 402, here amended, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1326 and 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 389.

SEC. 24. [Form of insurance — Sec. 404 amended.] Section 404 of the War Risk Insurance Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 404. During the period of the war and thereafter until converted the insurance shall be term insurance for successive terms of one year each. Not later than five years after the date of the termination of the war as declared by proclamation of the President of the United States the term insurance shall be converted, without medical examination, into such form or forms of insurance as may be prescribed by regulations and as the insured may request. Regulations shall provide for the right to convert into ordinary life, twenty-payment life, endowment maturing at age sixty-two, and into other usual forms of insurance, and shall prescribe the time and method of payment of the premiums thereon, but payments of premiums in advance shall not be required for periods of more than one month each and may be deducted from the pay or deposit of the insured or be otherwise made at his election.

"In case where an insured whose yearly renewable term insurance has matured by reason of total permanent disability is found and declared to be no longer permanently and totally disabled, and where the insured is required under regulations to renew payment of premiums on said term insurance, and where this contingency is extended beyond the five-year period during which said yearly renewable term insurance otherwise must be converted, there shall be given such insured an additional period of two years from the date on which he is required to renew payment of premiums in which to convert said term insurance as hereinbefore provided."

For sec. 404 as it read previous to this amendment, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1328.

SEC. 25. [Payment of benefits — liability of United States — transfer of moneys by director — Sec. 406 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act to be known as section 406, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 406. Whenever benefits under United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) become or have become payable because of total permanent disability of the insured or because of the death of the insured as a result of disease or injury traceable to the extra hazard of the military or naval service as such hazard may be determined by the director, the liability shall be borne by the United States, and the director is hereby authorized and directed to transfer from the military and naval insurance appropriation to the United States Government life insurance fund a sum which, together with the reserve of the policy at the time of maturity by total permanent disability or death, will equal the then value of such benefits. When a person receiving total permanent disability benefits under a United States Government life policy (converted policy) recovers from such disability and is then entitled to continue a reduced amount of insurance, the director is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to the military and naval insurance appropriation all of the loss reserve to the credit of such policy claim except a sum sufficient to set up the then required reserve on the reduced amount of insurance that may be continued, which sum shall be retained in the United States Government life insurance fund for the purpose of such reserve."

For Art. IV, here amended, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

SEC. 26. [Failure of beneficiaries of permitted class to survive insured — payment to estate — escheat — Sec. 407 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act (including therein section 14 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend and modify the War Risk Insurance Act," approved December 24, 1919), to be known as section 407, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 407. If no person within the permitted class of beneficiaries survive the insured, then there shall be paid to the estate of the insured the monthly installments payable and applicable under the provisions of Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act: Provided, That in cases where the estate of the insured would escheat under the laws of the place of his residence the insurance shall not be paid to the estate of the insured, but shall escheat to the United States and shall be credited to the United States Government life insurance fund or the military and naval insurance appropriation, as may be proper. This section shall be deemed to be in effect as of October 6, 1917."

For sec. 14 of Act of Dec. 24, 1919, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 389.

Art. IV, here amended, is set out in 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

SEC. 27. [Reinstatement of lapsed or cancelled yearly renewable term insurance — Sec. 408 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act, to be known as section 408, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 408. In the event that all provisions of the rules and regulations other than the requirements as to the physical condition of the applicant for insurance have been complied with, an application for reinstatement of lapsed or canceled yearly renewable term insurance or application for United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) hereafter made may be approved: Provided, That the applicant's disability is the result of an injury or disease or of an aggravation thereof suffered or contracted in the active military or naval service during the World War: Provided further, That the applicant during his lifetime submits proof satisfactory to the director showing the service origin of the disability or aggravation thereof and that the applicant is not totally and permanently disabled. As a condition, however, to the acceptance of an application for the reinstatement of lapsed or canceled yearly renewable term insurance or United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) the applicant shall be required to pay all the back monthly premiums which would have become payable if such insurance had not lapsed, together with interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum compounded annually on each premium from the date said premium is due by the terms of the policy: Provided further, That where any soldier has heretofore allowed his insurance to lapse, while suffering from wounds or disease suffered or contracted in line of service, and was at the time he allowed his said policy to lapse entitled to compensation on account thereof in a sum equal to or in excess of the amount due from him in premiums on his said insurance, and has since died from said wounds or disease without collecting or making claim for said compensation, or being allowed to reinstate his said policy on account of his physical condition, then and in that event said policy shall not be considered as lapsed, and the Veterans' Bureau is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the beneficiaries of said soldier under said policy the amount of said insurance less the premiums and interest thereon at 5 per centum per annum compounded annually in installments as provided by law."

Art. IV, here amended, is set out in 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

SEC. 28. [Payment of premiums — waiver — interest — Sec. 409 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act to be known as section 409, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 409. The Veterans' Bureau is authorized to make provision in accordance with regulations, whereby the payment of premiums on yearly renewable term insurance and United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) on the due date thereof may be waived and the insurance may be deemed not to lapse in the cases of the following persons, to wit: (a) Those who are confined in a hospital under said bureau for a compensable disability during the period while they are so confined; (b) those who are rated as temporarily totally disabled by reason of an injury or disease entitling them to compensation during the period of such total disability and while they are so rated: Provided, That such relief from payment of premiums on renewable term insurance on the due date thereof shall be for full calendar months, beginning with the month in which said confinement to hospital, or temporary total disability rating begins, and ending with that month during the half or major fraction of which the person is confined in hospital, or is rated as temporarily totally disabled: Provided further, That all premiums, the payment of which when due is waived as above provided, shall bear interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum compounded annually from the due date of each premium, and if not paid by the insured shall be deducted from the insurance when the same matures either because of permanent total disability or death."

Art. IV, here amended, is set out in 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

SEC. 29. [Authority of Postmaster General to receive premiums and applications for reinstatement of lapsed insurance, etc.— Sec. 410 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act to be known as section 410, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 410. Under such rules and regulations as the Director of the Veterans' Bureau and the Postmaster General may prescribe, the Postmaster General is hereby authorized to receive the premiums on yearly renewable term insurance and United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) and to act for and turn over to the Treasurer of the United States the money so received, and if the money-order system is used as an agency for the transmission of such money, the Postmaster General may adopt a specially-designed money-order form for such purpose, and he also is authorized to received [sic] and transmit to the Veterans' Bureau applications for reinstatement of lapsed insurance and applications for conversion of yearly renewable term insurance."

Art. IV, here amended, is set out in 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

SEC. 30. [Incontestability of policies of insurance — Sec. 411 added.] A new section is hereby added to Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act to be known as section 411, and to read as follows:

"SEC. 411. Subject to the provisions of section 29 of the War Risk Insurance Act and amendments thereto policies of insurance heretofore or hereafter issued in accordance with Article IV of the War Risk Insurance Act shall be incontestable after six months from date of issuance, or reinstatement, except for fraud or nonpayment of premiums."

Art. IV, here amended, is set out in 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1325.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Reclamation service — expenditures for projects.] Under the provisions of this Act no greater sum shall be expended, nor shall the United States be obligated to expend, during the fiscal year 1922, on any reclamation project appropriated for herein at amount in excess of the sum herein appropriated therefor, nor shall the whole expenditures or obligations incurred for all of such projects for the fiscal year 1922 exceed the whole amount in the "reclamation fund" for that fiscal year;

This and the paragraphs which follow are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1921.

* * * [Traveling expenses — automobiles and motor cycles — mileage.] Whenever, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the Director of the Reclamation Service shall find that the expenses of travel can be reduced thereby, he may, in lieu of actual traveling expenses, under such regulations as he may prescribe, authorize the payment of not to exceed 3 cents per mile for a motor cycle or 7 cents per mile for an automobile, used for necessary travel on official business;

See note to preceding paragraph.

* * * [Reclamation fund — sources — expenditures — purposes.] All moneys hereafter received from any State, municipality, corporation, association, firm, district, or individual for investigations, surveys, construction work, or any other development work incident thereto involving operations similar to those provided for by the reclamation law shall be covered into the reclamation fund and shall be available for expenditure for the purposes for which contributed in like manner as if said sums had been specifically appropriated for said purposes;

See note to first paragraph of this section.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

Act of March 3, 1921 (Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act), 335.

Sec. 1. Bureau of Standards—Investigations for Departments and Independent Establishments—Transfer of Funds, 335.

[SEC. 1.] * * * [Bureau of Standards—investigations for departments and independent establishments—transfer of funds.] During the fiscal year 1922 the head of any department or independent establishment of the Government having funds available for scientific investigations and requiring cooperative work by the Bureau of Standards on scientific investigations within the scope of the functions of that bureau and which it is unable to perform within the limits of its appropriations may, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, transfer to the Bureau of Standards such sums as may be necessary to carry on such investigations. The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer on the books of the Treasury Department any sums which may be authorized hereunder and such amounts shall be placed to the credit of the Bureau of Standards for the performance of work for the department or establishment from which the transfer is made.

AGRICULTURE

1918 Supp., p. 8, sec. 4.

State act as invalid.—In Farmers' Grain Co. v. Langer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 635, a law of North Dakota attempting to regulate the shipment of grain by imposing certain license fees and providing for the establishment of uniform grades and weights and for the inspection of grain was held to be invalid as being both contrary to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution and also as being in conflict with the United States Grain Standards Act. The court said as to the question of conflict with the federal act:

"There remains to be considered the question as to whether the state law conflicts with the United States Grain Standards Act. As we have said with reference to the question as to whether the law is a burden on interstate commerce, so we say now that if the purchase of grain in North Dakota under the evidence in this case, and the shipment thereof to the terminal markets mentioned for sale, is a unit in interstate commerce, then of course any attempt to regulate that commerce by the state of North Dakota is in direct conflict with the Grain Standards Act, wherein Congress sought to establish a uniform system for the inspection and grading of such grain moving in interstate commerce. Both acts ought not to be and cannot be enforced, without confusion and embarrassment as the state inspector declared. Section 4 of the Grain Standards Act, heretofore quoted, makes it unlawful to ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any such grain which is sold, offered for sale, or consigned for sale by grade, unless the grain shall have been inspected and graded by an inspector licensed under the act. By the second proviso of said section such grain may be shipped or delivered for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce without inspection at point of shipment by an inspector licensed under the act to or through any place at which an inspector licensed under the act is located, subject to be inspected by a licensed inspector at the place to which shipped or at some convenient point through which shipped for inspection, which inspection shall be under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe. This proviso, as we understand it, would authorize a shipment of grain in interstate commerce from a point in North Dakota where there was no licensed inspector under the federal act to Minneapolis or Duluth, in Minnesota, to be there inspected by a federal inspector. The state law, however, declares that one may not even buy a bushel of wheat for shipment in interstate commerce without taking out a license to do so and promising to obey all the provisions of the state law and the regulations of the state inspector, and the wheat purchased must be inspected in North Dakota and again at Duluth or Minneapolis. This brings the two laws clearly in conflict, if they both have to do with interstate commerce.

"As we have said before, the state law authorizes the state inspector to establish grades for grain and the Secretary of Agriculture by the Grain Standards Act is vested with the same power. These powers are directly in conflict, if they both relate to interstate commerce in grain. The United States Grain Standards Act provides that no person licensed by the Secretary of Agriculture to inspect or grade grain during the term of such license or employment shall be interested, financially or otherwise, directly or indirectly, in any grain elevator or warehouse, or in the merchandising of grain, nor shall he be in the employment of any person or corporation owning or operating any grain elevator or warehouse. The state law provides that the term 'deputy inspector of grades, weights and measures,' within the meaning of the law, shall mean any firm, person, company, corporation, or association that buys, weighs, and grades grain, seeds, and other agricultural products who holds a license issued therefor by the state inspector of grades, weights and measures. Thus one law requires that the inspector shall have no interest in the business and the other law requires that he shall. Which law is to prevail? Certainly the federal law, if the business is interstate commerce. It is useless to discuss further the matter of conflict, for the reason that, if both laws relate to the same subject, the state law attempts to regulate something that the state has no power to regulate, and, Congress having acted, the state law is in direct conflict with the federal law.

"It is our opinion that the state law is invalid for the reasons stated, and that the decree below should be reversed, and the case remanded, with directions to the court below to issue a permanent injunction, as prayed in the appellant's complaint."

Right to add terms to description.—In Hayes Grain Co. v. Rea Patterson Milling Co., (1920) 145 Ark. 65, 223 S. W. 390, the court, in sustaining the right of a buyer of corn to stipulate that it should be "choice 3 white kiln-dried," referred to sundry departmental rulings and said:

"Of course, these departmental rulings are no part of the law; but we do not interpret the ruling as sustaining appellant's contention that the explanatory words 'choice' and

'kiln-dried' must be treated as surplusage. The department appears to hold that it is not a violation of the federal act to add prefixes or suffixes to the terms designating the official grade, provided such explanatory words are not false or misleading as to the official grade of the grain.

"This appears to be the fair and reasonable construction to give the act of Congress, as the testimony at the trial was to the effect that a wide difference may exist in corn falling within the same official classification or grade. The official inspector at Coffeyville, Kan., who inspected the corn in question, testified at the trial and exhibited to the court three pans of corn, all of which graded No. 3 white; yet he explained that one pan was suitable for milling, and another pan was not, for the reason that it would color the meal.

"On December 1, 1916, the Department of Agriculture was asked whether the following classification was permissible under the federal act: 'Yellow milling corn, subject to discount for moisture over 17½ per cent.' After expressing the opinion that the provisions of the act were applicable to transactions involving the delivery for shipment in interstate commerce of shelled corn that was sold or consigned for sale by any grade whatever, the department ruled that—"It would seem that your transactions could easily be so framed as to state the grade of the corn involved, according to the grades of the official grain standards of the United States, and that at the same time you could make the specific requirements which must be met by corn of the designated grade for the purposes of your business."

"We think this ruling conforms to our interpretation that it was not the intention of the statute to deprive persons of the right to contract for specific requirements, provided the specifications employed were not false or misleading and conformed to the classifications previously adopted by the Department.

"We conclude, therefore, that the requirements of the memorandum that the corn should be 'choice' and 'kiln-dried' did not offend against the provisions of the federal statute and are not to be disregarded as surplusage."

1918 Supp., p. 14, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—The creation of Federal land banks and joint stock land banks by this act, as amended by the act of January 18, 1918, (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 41) and the grant of authority to them to act for the government as depositaries of public moneys and purchasers of government bonds, brings them within the creative power of Congress although they may be intended, in connection with other privileges and duties, to facilitate the making of loans upon farm security at low rates of interest. Smith v. Kansas City Title, etc., Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 180, 41 S. Ct. 243, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 36, sec. 26.

Exemption from state taxation sustained.—Federal land banks and joint stock land banks, having been created by Congress in the exercise of its legitimate authority by this act, as amended by the act of January 18, 1918, (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 41) the power to make the farm loan bonds issued by them under the authority of those acts on the security of farm mortgages and notes exempt as to principal and interest from federal, state, municipal, and local taxation necessarily follows. Smith v. Kansas City Title, etc., Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 180, 41 S. Ct. 243, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

ALASKA

Vol. I, p. 251, sec. 3. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 19.]

Double taxation.—A manufacturer of fish oil, fertilizer, and fish meal from herring may not complain that he is doubly taxed, first by the United States and then by the territory of Alaska, in view of the provisions of this section, giving the territorial legislature power to impose taxes or licenses other than and additional to federal taxes on business and trade. Alaska Fish, etc., Co. v. Smith, (1921) 255 U. S. 44, 41 S. Ct. 219, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

License tax law not impairment of fish law.—License taxes of $2 a barrel and $2 a ton, respectively, upon persons manufacturing fish oil, fertilizer, and fish meal, in whole or in part, from herring, imposed by the territorial legislature of Alaska, cannot be deemed to be repugnant to this section, as an attempt to modify or repeal the fish laws of the United States, or the laws of the United States providing for taxes on business or trade, on the theory that federal statutes imposing a tax on fish oil works and on fertilizer works in general terms (which can hardly be considered fish laws), import a license to a specific kind of works deemed undesirable by the local powers,—especially since such section expressly declares that its provisions shall not operate to prevent the territorial legislature from imposing other and additional taxes or licenses. Alaska Fish, etc., Co. v. Smith, (1921) 255 U. S. 44, 41 S. Ct. 219, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Uniformity of taxation.—The requirement of this section, that all taxes in Alaska shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, is not violated by treating the making of oil and fertilizer from herring as a different class, for purposes of license taxes, from the making of the same from salmon offal. Alaska Fish, etc., Co. v. Smith, (1921) 255 U. S. 44, 41 S. Ct. 219, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Taxation in excess of one per cent.—The restriction against taxation in excess of 1 per cent of the assessed valuation of property in Alaska, which is made by this section, does not apply to a license tax upon the manufacture of fish oil, fertilizer, and fish meal from herring. Alaska Fish, etc., Co. v. Smith, (1921) 255 U. S. 44, 41 S. Ct. 219, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Session law as to forfeiture invalid.—"The act of the territorial Legislature of 1915 is in conflict with the general law of the United States which gives to the owner of a located mining claim the right to hold and occupy the same so long as he shall perform the requisite annual assessment work thereon, and Congress reaffirmed that law as applicable to the territory of Alaska by the act of 1907, adding thereto only the provision above quoted. That act permits the filing of affidavits which shall be prima facie proof of the performance of annual work. But it makes provision for forfeiture only upon failure to perform the work. The act of the Alaskan Legislature set that provision aside, and declared that performance of the work shall not be sufficient, that forfeiture shall follow the failure to file an affidavit. To legislate thus was to transcend the authority conferred by the Enabling Act, was to interfere with the right of Congress to dispose of the public domain, was to destroy an estate which Congress grants in public lands, and was to exercise a power which Congress never intended to delegate, the power to declare the forfeiture of mining claims." Betsch v. Umphrey, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 45.

Vol. I, p. 264, sec. 6. [First ed., vol. I, p. 24.]

Jurisdiction of commissioners.—The court of the commissioner in Alaska is one of limited jurisdiction and a compliance with the requirements of the statute is essential to vest any jurisdiction in it. Tuppela v. Chichagoff Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 753.

Vol. I, p. 355, sec. 5. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 22.]

Refusal to allow continuance in a prosecution under this section held proper, see Alaska Pac. Fisheries v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 778.

1918 Supp., p. 51, sec. 1. [Intoxicating liquors, etc.]

The National Prohibition Act did not repeal the provisions of this act. Koppitz v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 96; Abbate v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 735. In the latter case the court said:

"Congress enacted the Bone Dry Law for Alaska, and 20 months later it enacted the National Prohibition Act. In enacting the latter Congress was adopting legislation for the whole United States to carry out the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment. In enacting the Bone Dry Law, on the other hand, Congress was pursuing its policy of prohibition in Indian country. That policy as to Alaska was first manifested by legislation enacted on July 27, 1868, for the prevention of the importation and sale of intoxicating liquors in Alaska, the population of which was largely composed of Indians, and it was continued without interruption until the enactment of the Bone Dry Law of February 14, 1917. That act contains provisions peculiarly applicable to Alaska, and which are more drastic and far-reaching, and involve severer penalties for the same offense, than do the provisions of the National Prohibition Act.

"What is there to show that the National Prohibition Act was intended to replace the Bone Dry Law of the territory of Alaska? It is not to be found in the statute, which provides that the Constitution of the United States and all the laws thereof 'which are not locally inapplicable' shall have the same force and effect within the said territory as elsewhere in the United States. That is a general provision which is found in the organic act of all the territories. It is simply an extension of the laws of the United States to the territory. It does not stand in the way of or affect the construction of special congressional legislation solely for the territory.

"The provision of the National Prohibition Act for the punishment of selling liquor in Alaska is 'locally inapplicable' in Alaska, for the reason that Congress has provided for a severer penalty for the act when committed there. * * * In brief, we think that the Bone Dry Law of Alaska remains in force, just as do the prohibition laws of the states, and the National Prohibition Act, although in force in all jurisdictions, affects no more the Alaskan act than it does the state acts."

ALIENS

Vol. I, p. 365, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. I, p. 437.]

Right of British subject, resident of Canada, to inherit real property in United States.—British subjects, citizens and residents of Canada, do not inherit real property in the United States, contrary to local laws, by virtue of the stipulations of the treaty with Great Britain of March 2, 1899, nor by reason of the most-favored-nation clause of said treaty, in the absence of notice of adhesion to the treaty on behalf of the Dominion of Canada, as required by art. 4, which provides that the stipulations of such treaty shall not be applicable to any British colonies or foreign possessions unless notice to that effect shall be given on behalf of such colony or foreign possession by the British representative at Washington to the Secretary of State of the United States. Sullivan v. Kidd, (1921) 254 U. S. 433, 41 S. Ct. 158, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Treaty right to hold realty.—State prohibition of alien ownership.—A treaty giving the right to hold realty in states "in which foreigners shall be entitled to hold or inherit real estate" does not invalidate a state constitutional provision against the holding of real estate by aliens. State v. Staeheli, (Wash. 1920) 102 Pac. 991.

ANIMALS

Vol. I, p. 377, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 43.]

Request of shipper extending time.—A request by the shipper extending to 36 hours the time for unloading does not create an agreement by the carrier not to unload for 36 hours, so that in the absence of negligence a carrier taking a shipment with such a request attached to the contract is not liable for unloading the live stock before the end of that period at a place where they contract disease. Bradford v. Hines, (Mo. 1921) 227 S. W. 889.

Duty of caretakers.—It is the duty of the caretakers furnished free transportation to assist in unloading, feeding, watering, resting and reloading the cattle, and if the caretakers, by using their reasonable diligence and the means at their command could have prevented or diminished the damage done, then any such damage which might have been so prevented, or the amount in which such damage might have been diminished, the defendant is not responsible for. Atchinson, etc., R. Co. v. Merchants' Live Stock Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 130.

Evidence.—It has been held in an action to recover damages for failure to comply with this Act that evidence is not admissible in behalf of the shipper of the time consumed in transporting a subsequent shipment or as to the difference in shrinkage in weight. Atchinson, etc., R. Co. v. Merchants' Live Stock Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 130. The court said:

"The effect of this was to bring into the case many collateral issues, to present issues of fact which the Railway Company was not prepared to meet, and to lead the jury aside on an inquiry of facts which would not furnish it a safe guide in reaching a correct and just conclusion on the questions which it was called to hear and determine. What were the comparative ages and physical strength of the cattle in the two shipments? What were the comparative conditions as to flesh? When and to what extent had the cattle in each shipment been fed and watered prior to being put on the cars? Was three days the average run from Avalon to Kansas City or was it exceptionally short? The first would be a fair guide, the latter misleading. How much time was consumed in driving the last shipment in from the range and what were the conditions as to feed and water on the way, as compared to the first shipment? What was the difference in weather conditions, and its effect? Even if these inquiries had not been collateral and therefore irrelevant, the defendant could not have been expected to be prepared to meet them. We think the challenged proof was irrelevant, misleading and prejudicial."

Vol. I, p. 397, sec. 1. [Meat, etc.] [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 46.]

Duty to destroy condemned animal.—"After the inspector discovered symptoms of disease in said hog, it became his duty to have said hog slaughtered and to then further inspect the same, and, upon then finding the same to be in a diseased condition and unfit for human food, to condemn said hog and cause the same to be destroyed for food purposes. It would have been a violation of the duty of said inspector, under the federal statute, if, after discovery of symptoms of disease in said hog he had returned the same to respondent, as the statute plainly directs the inspector what to do when he finds symptoms of disease in live animals." Wess v. South Dakota Packing, etc., Co., (S. D. 1920) 180 N. W. 510.

Vol. I, p. 408, sec. 3. [First ed., vol. I, p. 452.]

Validity of regulations.—"Pursuant to this authority the United States Bureau of Animal Industry appointed an inspector with supervision over the Kansas City Stockyards at Kansas City, Mo. His duties required him to inspect all cattle from southern points before they were unloaded, and to place cattle which were clean and free from ticks in certain pens, and those infected with fever ticks in other pens. Such laws are valid." Payne v. Cotner, (1921) 148 Ark. 401, 230 S. W. 275.

1918 Supp., p. 61. [Act of March 4, 1917.]

Contractual obligation of United States to pay for seized serum.—No contractual obligation on the part of the United States to pay for anti-hog-cholera serum, anti-cholera virus, and serum blood, seized without agreement to purchase by agents of the Bureau of Animal Industry, and thereafter destroyed, can be implied from the provisions of the Act of March 4, 1915, which was similar to the provision in the text, that, in case of an emergency arising out of the existence of certain contagious or infectious diseases of animals, which, in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture, threatens the live-stock industry, he may expend a specified sum, which sum is thereby appropriated, or so much thereof as he deems to be necessary, in the arrest and eradication of any such disease, including the payment of claims growing out of past and future purchases and destruction, in co-operation with the states, of animals affected by, or exposed to, or of materials contaminated by or exposed to, any such disease. Great Western Serum Co. v. U. S., (1920) 254 U. S. 240, 41 S. Ct. 65, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 54 Ct. Cl. 203.

ARTICLES FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NAVY

Vol. I, p. 426, art. 14. [Other fraud.] [First ed., vol. I, p. 466.]

Effect of release from active duty of member of reserve force.—The release from active duty of a member of the naval reserve force is equivalent to an honorable discharge, after which he cannot be recalled into service, except upon the intervention of some actual continuation of service in time of war or of national emergency, nor can he be brought to trial by court-martial for an offense alleged to have been committed prior to his release. Hence, a member of the naval reserve force who is recalled to active service for use as a witness in a case before a court-martial and to answer any charge that may be brought against himself, is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus when it is attempted to bring him to trial before a court-martial for a violation of this article alleged to have been committed prior to his release from active service. U. S. v. MacDonald, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 695. To same effect, see U. S. v. Warden, etc., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 787.

ARTICLES OF WAR

Vol. I, p. 458, art. 58. [First ed., vol. I, p. 492.]

Jurisdiction of assaults.—A general court-martial has no jurisdiction under this article to impose a sentence of imprisonment upon a civilian teamster found guilty of assaulting another person by cutting him with a knife and by shooting at him with a pistol with intent to kill. Anderson v. Crawford, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 504.

Regarding the jurisdiction of a general court-martial under this article, the court said:

"Upon a comparison of the specifications of the offense charged against appellee, and of the findings made, with the terms of the article of war under which he was tried and sentenced, it will be observed that as to specification 1, he was acquitted of the charge of felonious assault upon Watkins by cutting him with a knife with intent to kill, but found guilty of assaulting him by cutting him with a knife. This was clearly not an offense under this article of war, because there must have been an 'assault and battery with an intent to kill' or 'wounding, by shooting or stabbing, with an intent to commit murder.' The appellee was found guilty under the second specification, in that he feloniously assaulted Watkins by shooting at him with a pistol with intent to kill. The article of war conferred jurisdiction upon a general court-martial to try and to punish the offense of assault and battery with an intent to kill, but it did not confer jurisdiction over a charge of assault with intent to kill. It was not alleged that in making the assault by shooting at Watkins the appellee wounded him, or in any way caused any force to be exerted upon the person of Watkins. While a battery always included an assault, assaults often fall short of a battery. An assault is an attempt, which, if consummated, would result in a battery. Mr. Justice Washington, in United States v. Hand, 2 Wash. C. C. 435, 437, 26 Fed. Cas. 103, No. 15,297, made the distinction in these words:

"The definition of an assault (1 Bac. Abr. tit. "Assault," 242) is an offer or attempt by force to do a corporal injury to another, as if one person strike at another with his hands, or with a stick, and misses him; for, if the other be stricken, it is a battery which is an offense of a higher grade.'

"It is essential to a battery that some force shall be actually applied, not merely threatened or attempted to be applied, to the person of another, or to some article so closely connected with his person as to be regarded as a part of it. 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 62, § 2; 1 Russell on Criminal Law (7th Eng. & Can. Ed.) 881; 2 Whart. Cr. Law (11th Ed.) § 811; 2 Bishop, Cr. Law, § 72-(1).

"It is not necessary to invoke the rule that penal laws are to be strictly construed, although a trial by court-martial in the state of Mexico for an offense alleged to have been committed there would present an appropriate occasion for the application of that salutary rule of construction, for in this case the plain words of the statute include a battery as an essential element of the offense, before there can be a legal conviction and sentence, and none was alleged or found."

Taking of tidelands.—Tidelands as well as uplands must be deemed to have been taken by the government in condemnation proceedings begun under this act, which provides for the taking of "the whole of" a specified island, and for the determination and appraisement of any rights private parties may have in such island, where the bill follows the act, and prays that if the defendant company has any right to the tract or any part thereof, the right and "the whole thereof" may be "appraised and condemned." *U. BAIL AND RECOGNIZANCES

Vol. I, p. 490, sec. 1015. [First ed., vol. I, p. 521.]

Duty to admit to bail.—Construing this section with 1016 and 1019 of the Revised Statutes the Circuit Court of Appeals has said:

"We find the intent of the lawmakers to declare that a person under indictment for a noncapital offense shall not be imprisoned prior to his trial if he is willing and able to give bail. The word 'shall' in section 1015 is mandatory. This is apparent not only from the word itself, but from the contrast with the permissive word 'may' in section 1016. To abscond and forfeit one's bail is not included in the list of federal crimes. Even if it were, a person could not be punished therefor by imprisonment in advance of his indictment, trial, and sentence for that offense. If he were indicted for absconding and forfeiting bail, he would be absolutely entitled to be set at large pending his trial upon furnishing bail, unless the punishment for such absconding was death.

"Refusal to admit appellant to bail means that the District Court has adjudged a forfeiture of appellant's otherwise clear right under section 1015 solely by reason of finding that there is such a high degree of probability that appellant will again abscond that he should now be held without bail. It seems to us utterly immaterial on what character of evidence the trial court should base a finding that there is a high degree of probability that a defendant in a noncapital case will abscond. The question is what is the duty of the trial court when any showing is made that would justify such a finding of probability. And the answer is found in section 1019. It then becomes the duty of the judge to exercise his sound discretion under the law in fixing the amount of the bail. That is as far as his discretion goes. Taking all of the circumstances into consideration the trial court should fix the bail at such an amount as would be reasonably likely to assure the presence of the defendant when the case is called for trial." Rowan v. Randolph, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 527.

Vol. I, p. 492, sec. 1020. [First ed., vol. I, p. 523.]

Historical.—"This power of remission came to us from the English law, as asserted by Chief Justice Marshall, in 1813, in United States v. Feely, Fed. Cas. No. 15,082, 1 Brock. 255, and was but redeclared by the statute of February 22, 1839, now R. S. § 1020."

Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

Construction.—The statute being highly remedial ought to be liberally construed and not in favor of the forfeiture. Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

Discretion of court.—The power here given is a discretion to remit in whole or in part under stated conditions a forfeiture which has really occurred. The provision for remission is not of law but of grace. Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

"Willful default."—The original statute of 1839 made the relief conditional on there being "no willful default of the parties," meaning possibly that all the parties to the recognizance who could be in default, both the principal and his sureties, must appear to be free of willful fault. Yet under the act so written it was held in 1863 (U. S. v. Duncan, Fed. Cas. No. 15,004) that a surety who was himself free from willful fault might be relieved; the forfeiture standing as to the principal. All doubt was removed by the Revised Statutes changing the word "parties" to "party," plainly meaning that party who was applying for the remission. Had the defendant or the principal been meant, a term definitely referring to him would have been used, instead of one that would apply as well to the surety. Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

Penalty alone remitted.—The judgment is not vacated or set aside. It must always stand as to costs, the penalty alone being capable of remission. Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

Time of applying for remission.—In general.—"No doubt the proper time to apply for the remission is on the return of the rule nisi, if the facts exist and are known which are to be relied on, and a failure to apply promptly ought to be considered as an unfavorable circumstance, and if injury has occurred to the public interests by the delay, the application ought to be denied." Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

After term.—The power of remission after term does not involve a question of the power to set aside a judgment after the term nor conflict with the executive power of pardon. The relief may be had in the discretion of the court as well after, as at, the term of the rule absolute. "The judgment on the rule absolute necessarily involves only the well-known absolute defenses to the recognizance, such as impossibility of performance by the act of God or of the law, and these only are concluded by the judgment." Griffin v. U. S., (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 263.

BANKRUPTCY

Vol. I, p. 504. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 464.]

General purposes of the Act.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of original annotation, see Farnsworth v. Union Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 92.

"One of the general purposes of the bankruptcy law is to provide a uniform national law by which insolvent debtors can make a pro rata distribution of their assets among creditors. Prior to this amendment if a corporation sought to wind up its affairs and distribute its assets by means of a receivership, such a proceeding did not constitute an act of bankruptcy, and, consequently, creditors were entirely deprived of the valuable rights and safeguards provided by the bankruptcy law. This amendment was designed to correct that evil." In re Sedalia Farmers' Co.-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898.

"Congress enacted the bankruptcy statute in the exercise of a public policy, for the benefit, not of debtors and creditors, but of society at large. It realized, of course, that unscrupulous and dishonest men would take advantage wherever they could of its provisions. Equally of course, it was not intended to enable a debtor to rush into bankruptcy just in time to prevent his creditors from satisfying their claims out of property he was about to come into possession of. But the difficulty in any law upon so complicated a subject as business relations is to make it cover every particular case that may possibly arise. It does not seem to us that the act takes into account the motives of creditors in involuntary proceedings, or of debtors in voluntary proceedings; but instead of that, in view of the fact that such a practical subject as business relations between debtor and creditor is being dealt with, it concerns itself rather with conditions as they exist, and undertakes to fix definitely the obligations of the debtor and the rights and remedies of the creditor. In our judgment, it was thought best by Congress to prescribe general rules, which would usually promote satisfactory results, notwithstanding the fact that in isolated instances it would be difficult, if not impossible, to attain to the high standards of exact justice." Elberton Bank v. Swift, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 305.

Finding as conclusive that petitioner not creditor.—The legal presumption is that the finding of the court below that a petitioner was not a creditor of the company was correct, and that finding should not be reversed or dismissed by an appellate court, unless the record clearly shows that in making it the chancellor fell into a controlling error of law or made a decisive mistake of fact. Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 836.

Vol. I, p. 511, sec. 1a (15). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 465.]

Fair valuation.—As the term is used in this section it means a value that can be made promptly effective by the owner of property to pay debts. In re Sedalia Farmers' Co.-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898. It is said that "The inquiry is simply this: What in the actual circumstances was the fair value of the assets of the debtor (afterwards the bankrupt) when he paid or secured the antecedent debt?" In re Fred D. Jones Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 818.

Contingent assets.—Where the assets consisted principally of claims and choses in action many of which were disputed and the total of which was much less than the established liabilities, the evidence was held to show insolvency. Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 510.

Vol. I, p. 516, sec. 2. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 469.]

Equitable jurisdiction.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Schilling, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 264 Fed. 357; Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 391; Regal Cleaners, etc., v. Merlis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 915.

Vol. I, p. 518, sec. 2 (1). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 470.]

Corporation's principal place of business.—In general.—The state in which a corporation is licensed to do business and maintains its plant is regarded as the state in which it has its principal place of business and not the state in which it is not licensed to do business but in which it maintains its corporate offices, keeps its books and records and holds its stockholders', directors', and executive committees' meetings and directs its business. And the situation is not affected by the appointment of a receiver by a court of the former state. In re Monarch Oil Corp., (S. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 524. The state in which a corporation is incorporated and in which it names its principal place of business in its articles of incorporation, at which place its producing plant is located and an office is maintained in which all of its books and records are kept, its banking done and from which all of its official business is conducted, is held to be the corporation's principal place of business. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 527, wherein the court said:

"What is the principal place of business of a corporation must be determined from a consideration of all of the facts; the place fixed in its articles of incorporation, the character of the corporation, its purposes, especially its dominant purpose, the kind of business it is engaged in, where its manufacturing plant and business offices are, its principal and not incidental transactions, in carrying on its business."

Burden of proof.—It is the rule that, when the articles of incorporation name a place as the principal place of business of a corporation, the burden is upon the petitioning creditors to show it is elsewhere. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 527.

Domicil of corporation.—A state in which a corporation is organized and which is the only one in which it has an office or does business is the domicil of the corporation. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 527.

Vol. I, p. 522, sec. 2 (3). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 472.]

Receivers' powers and duties in general.—"The receivers are officers of the court, appointed to conserve the property, and are not successors in title to the bankrupts, nor charged with notice of how or by what means such possession or title was acquired." In re Fosgate, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 985.

Vol. I, p. 528, sec. 2 (5). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 475.]

Order to continue business.—The court has jurisdiction to authorize the trustee to operate the bankrupt's property as a going concern for a limited period. In re People's Warehouse Co., (S. D. Miss. 1921) 273 Fed. 611.

Vol. I, p. 529, sec. 2 (7). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 476.]

Money paid to trustee through mistake.—The court has jurisdiction under this section to order the trustee to refund money which he has received on a conveyance made by him of real estate in which he and all parties concerned mistakenly supposed the bankrupt had a vested interest, such mistake being regarded under the state law to be one of fact and not purely one of law. In re Russell, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 273 Fed. 724.

Vol. I, p. 531, sec. 2 (8). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 476.]

The proceeding to reopen an estate authorized by this section need not be formal.

In re Carlucci Stone Co., (M. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 795.

The order may be based on a petition without technical conformity of any kind, if it contains sufficient information to satisfy the court of the necessary jurisdictional fact, to wit, that the estate was closed before it was fully administered. In re Carlucci Stone Co., (M. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 795.

Discretion of court.—When the petition contains allegations of fact satisfying the conscience of the court, prima facie, that assets of the bankrupt remain unadministered, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, may reopen the proceedings. In re Carlucci Stone Co., (M. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 795.

It is only for the abuse of discretion that the court will be reversed; that is, where the court acts arbitrarily, or without apparent reason and authority. In re Carlucci Stone Co., (M. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 795.

Vol. I, p. 533, sec. 2 (11). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 478.]

Extent of jurisdiction—Generally.—Unless the situation discloses a formal waiver and a failure to claim exemption in the bankruptcy court it is bound to act on the mandate of the Bankruptcy Act and set off the exempt property. In re Dautz, (D. C. Ind. 1921) 272 Fed. 348.

Vol. I, p. 538, sec. 2 (20). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 480.]

Under the amendment of 1910.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Flaherty, (N. D. Ia. 1920) 265 Fed. 741.

Vol. I, p. 544, sec. 3a (2). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 483.]

Preferences in general.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation see In re Saludes Lumber Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 303.

Transfer of stolen automobile sold to bankrupt.—Where a bankrupt bought an automobile in good faith not knowing it was stolen and, after adding various accessories to it which he paid for, transferred it to a creditor, it was held that the automobile was "property" within the meaning of this section and the transfer a preferential one and an act of bankruptcy. In re Schenderlein, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1018.

Who may object to transfer—Subsequent creditors.—Where a corporation transfers a part of its property to one of its principal stockholders, who is also a creditor, other creditors whose claims arise subsequently to such transfers, may not attack it as being a preference and an act of bankruptcy. Phillips v. Carter, (S. D. Ga. 1920) 266 Fed. 444.

Vol. I, p. 555, sec. 3a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 488.]

II. APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER OR TRUSTEE
(p. 558)

"Because of insolvency."—"The words 'because of insolvency' should be, and are, broad enough to include all cases where the requisite degree of insolvency is present, and was the proximate cause of the receivership." In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898. Where a receiver is appointed for an indefinite period to marshal the assets, collect the indebtedness, and realize on the assets in order to pay debts and distribute the proceeds for the benefit of the stockholders, creditors and all concerned, it is held that he is appointed because of insolvency within the meaning of this Act. In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898. It has been held that a receiver is appointed "because of insolvency" where it was alleged and admitted, on the application for a receiver in a state court, that the debtor's property was so mortgaged and pledged that the debtor was insolvent and could not meet its obligations and that its officers had abandoned its business. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 826. The word "insolvency" as here used does not necessarily mean insolvency within the definition of that word in the Bankruptcy Act. In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898. The court said:

"It will be noted that Congress herein nowhere says that the word 'insolvent' (or, by analogy, 'insolvency'), as used within the provisions of this act, shall be defined thus and so. It merely declares under what conditions a person shall be deemed insolvent to such extent as to bring him within its provisions. This may be a fine distinction, but it is a significant one, because in the provision in question we are dealing with a proceeding in a court of a state in which 'insolvency' has its common-law meaning; to wit, inability to meet obligations as they become due; and the petitioning creditors charge that the receiver was put in charge of this property under the laws of this state because of such insolvency. It is a matter of common knowledge at the bar that receivers are appointed by state courts under precisely such circumstances. This is done because of such insolvency; and it would probably rarely, if ever, occur that the exclusive form of insolvency, as defined in the Bankruptcy Act, would be specifically stated in a petition addressed to a circuit court of this state; particularly would this be true if the pleader desired the estate to be administered and distributed by the state court and not by a court of bankruptcy. This would open an obvious avenue for evasion of one of the most important provisions of the national act."

Insolvency essential—In general.—It is, "of course, necessary to find that the bankrupt was actually insolvent, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, both at the time of the alleged act and at the time of filing the involuntary petition." In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898.

The act of bankruptcy is complete where a receiver is appointed because of insolvency and the property is placed in his charge though the court may have been without jurisdiction and the appointment have been improvidently made. In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 898.

Liquidating commissioners.—In Standard Warehouse, etc., Co. v. George H. McFadden Bros. Agency, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 251, it was held that acts of liquidating commissioners appointed by the board of directors of a corporation in filing a petition in pursuance of which they were appointed judicial liquidators under the Louisiana statutes were not the acts of the alleged bankrupt so as to authorize an adjudication of bankruptcy under this section.

The application of a corporation for dissolution under the statutes of a state is not an act of bankruptcy which will authorize involuntary proceedings under the Bankruptcy Act. Baker v. Monarch Wholesale Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 289 Fed. 794. The court said:

"The bankruptcy statute was not enacted for the purpose of enabling creditors to harass a debtor, or to prevent a debtor corporation from resorting to the laws of the state which created it for the purpose of winding up its affairs and procuring its dissolution. It would be mere officious interference with salutary statutory provisions of Texas to force the dissolution of appellees through bankruptcy proceedings."

Vol. I, p. 568, sec. 4a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 495.]

Motive as immaterial.—Undoubtedly any person owing debts has the right to seek the bankruptcy court for the purpose of winding up his affairs, and his motive in doing so is immaterial. In re People's Warehouse Co., (S. D. Miss. 1921) 273 Fed. 611.

Solvent person.—On a voluntary petition an adjudication may be made as to a perfectly solvent person. In re People's Warehouse Co., (S. D. Miss. 1921) 273 Fed. 611.

Corporations—Power of directors to file petition.—"Whether the directors of a corporation, without the authority from the stockholders, have power to file a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, must be determined by the law of the state in which the corporation is organized. Home Powder Co. v. Geis, 204 Fed. 568, 570, 123 C. C. A. 94

(Eighth Circuit); Dodge v. Kenwood Ice Co., 204 Fed. 577, 123 C. C. A. 103.

"In Home Powder Co. v. Geis, supra, this court said:

"It is not to be presumed that there will be found in the general laws of the state, or in the articles of incorporation or by-laws, any express provision authorizing such admission; but under the general law the board of directors or trustees of a corporation have the power to authorize execution of an assignment of all property of the corporation for the benefit of its creditors, when such a step is advisable, unless such an assignment is prohibited by law, the articles, or by-laws."

"This is, we understand, the general rule. See Dodge v. Kenwood Ice Co., supra; Rudebeck v. Sanderson, Trustee, 227 Fed. 575, 142 C. C. A. 207; In re Foster Paint Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 652; In re Russell Wheel Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 569." Fitts v. Custer Slide Min. etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 864, holding that under the laws of Colorado the directors had such power.

A corporation in the hands of a state receiver will not be allowed to make a surrender in bankruptcy. In re Associated Oil Co., (E. D. La. 1921) 271 Fed. 788, wherein it was said:

"In the exercise of discretion, I think I should decline to interfere with the state court in this matter. To allow the adjudication to stand would undo all that has been accomplished in the state court. The receiver was appointed because of the mismanagement of the officers. It was alleged and admitted that the officers of the Oil Company and the Adey Johnson Company are the same. That company is the sole ordinary creditor shown on the schedules. Necessarily, if the sworn schedules are true, it would elect the trustee. In that event the custody and control of the assets of the Oil Company would in effect be restored to the very men from whom the state court saw fit to take them. This would enable the officers of the Oil Company to perpetrate a fraud on the state court through the agency of the bankruptcy court, something unthinkable."

Vol. I, p. 569, sec. 4b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 495.]

I. Generally.

II. Statutory exceptions.

IV. Corporations and unincorporated companies.

I. GENERALLY (p. 569)

Purpose of section.—The intent of Congress to protect men engaged in agriculture, who might fall behind from the failure of crops for one or two seasons, has always been recognized as the basis for this provision in the statute. In re Doroski, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 8.

II. STATUTORY EXCEPTIONS (p. 570)

Date of status of statutory exceptions.—

The time from which the status of exemptions under this section is to be determined must be either the date of the commission of an act of bankruptcy or the date at which the debts to which the act of bankruptcy relate were incurred. Hence a man engaged in farming at the time his debts were incurred is not subject to involuntary proceedings therefor, though immediately after the expiration of the four months' exemption period, the same individual might be adjudicated a bankrupt for acts of bankruptcy while insolvent and after he had ceased the occupation of farming, and in that proceeding the debts accruing during his farming operations might be proven in connection with the debts accruing thereafter. In re Doroski, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 8.

Persons engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil.—What is farming or tillage of soil.—In re Sutter, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 270 Fed. 248, a person was held to be within this exception where, in connection with other evidence, it appeared that he had cultivated a farm of about 300 acres for a period of twenty years during which he had bought, fed and sold cattle and hogs and had produced farm fruit, garden vegetables and poultry.

Persons engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil.—A person engaged chiefly in farming.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see In re Sutter, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 270 Fed. 248.

IV. CORPORATIONS AND UNINCORPORATED COMPANIES (p. 574)

Prior to the enactment of the amendment of June 25, 1910.—Mining corporations.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Jutte, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 367.

Unincorporated companies.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see In re Tidewater Coal Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 1008.

It is not necessary that an association must be an entity recognized by the law as a legal person in order to fall within the phrase "unincorporated company." In re Tidewater Coal Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 1008.

Insurance corporation.—There is such an absence of jurisdiction in a court of bankruptcy, where it appears from the averments of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy that the person proceeded against is an insurance corporation, and therefore within the exception of this section, that its adjudication, rendered upon due service of process and default, and not appealed from, should be vacated, and the proceeding be dismissed upon the motion of the bankrupt, after the time for appeal has expired. Valley v. Northern F., etc., Ins. Co., (1920) 254 U. S.

348, 41 S. Ct. 116, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein it was held that the insurance company by acquiescing in the adjudication of bankruptcy, and aiding the trustee in the performance of his duties in administering the estate, was not estopped thereby from thereafter questioning the adjudication, and the power of the bankruptcy court and the trustee to proceed.

Vol. I, p. 578, sec. 4b. [Liability of officers, etc.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 501.]

Discharge of bankrupt corporation as releasing individual liability of officers and directors.—See annotations under section 16a, infra, p. 360.

Vol. I, p. 578, sec. 5a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 501.]

Construction.—“After much discussion among the authorities as to the separate entity of the partnership, as such, they are now practically unanimous in holding that the adjudication of the firm as an entity is provided for by this act.” In re Ollinger, (S. D. Ala. 1921) 274 Fed. 970.

Petition by one partner.—It is said that when the court wrote general order No. 8 it must have intended that, where a partner of a firm refuses to join in the petition with the other partners or partner, the petition must contain the statement of facts contained in form No. 3 wherein is a charge of insolvency and the commission of an act of bankruptcy, which such nonassenting partner may deny. In re Ollinger, (S. D. Ala. 1921) 274 Fed. 970.

Vol. I, p. 583, sec. 5c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 504.]

Jurisdiction over nonresident partner.—Where a bankruptcy court has jurisdiction of a partnership and one of the partners, it may adjudicate the partnership a bankrupt in involuntary proceedings, if it has committed an act of bankruptcy, and by ancillary proceedings compel the partner outside of its jurisdiction to file a schedule of his assets with the bankrupt's trustee and contribute to the payment of claims of creditors against the bankrupt estate. In re Flaherty, (N. D. Ia. 1920) 265 Fed. 741.

Vol. I, p. 591, sec. 5h. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 508.]

Bankruptcy of several partners as releasing solvent partner and surety from liability.—The bankruptcy of several members of a partnership does not relieve a remaining solvent member from the duty of completing contracts made by the firm, nor does it release from liability a surety on a partnership bond. Kimmel v. State, (Ind. App. 1921) 130 N. E. 239.

Vol. I, p. 592, sec. 6a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 508.]

III. Matters affecting right to exemption.

IV. Recognition of state and federal exemption law.

III. MATTERS AFFECTING RIGHT TO EXEMPTION (p. 596)

Fraud—Homestead purchased with non-exempt funds.—The right to a homestead exemption has been denied where the bankrupt ceased to make further payments on trade obligations and retained the proceeds for merchandise sold in his personal possession with which funds the homestead was purchased. Kangas v. Robie, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 92.

Assignment for benefit of creditors.—A voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors which is set aside does not affect the right of the bankrupt to claim his exemption. In re Dautz, (D. C. Ind. 1921) 272 Fed. 348.

An execution creditor has no rights superior to those of the bankrupt in exempt property. Such a creditor, with a lien by levy on personal property prior to an adjudication in bankruptcy, cannot claim funds secured by the trustee to the extent of the difference between the property set aside to the bankrupt, and his exemption allowed by the state law, when the bankrupt has not made any further claim for exemption. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Right cannot be assigned.—In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Waiver.—The right to exemption is regarded as a personal privilege which may be waived. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Where a bankrupt fails to make claim for his exemption in the manner and within the time provided by the Bankruptcy Act and General Orders in Bankruptcy, the right of exemption is waived. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Where the bankrupt files no schedule or makes no request on the trustee to set aside specific articles as exempt until after a sale he must be regarded as having waived his right of exemption. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

A bankrupt by making a claim to certain articles as exempt waives claim to exemption on any other property than that specified. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

IV. RECOGNITION OF STATE AND FEDERAL EXEMPTION LAW (p. 601)

State law adopted—Michigan.—While, however, the bankruptcy court will follow and adopt the statutes of a state, as construed and applied by the highest courts thereof, in determining the nature and extent of the exemptions created by the laws of such state, yet the manner in which such exemptions are to be claimed, set apart, and awarded is regulated and determined by the federal courts, as matter of procedure in the course of bankruptcy administration, as to which they are not bound or limited by state decisions or statutes. In re Moore, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 645.

Pennsylvania.—Under the law in Pennsylvania the bankrupt must take the property which is claimed as exempt and cannot take the proceeds of a sale of the property. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Texas.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Stratton v. Ermis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 533.

Homestead exemptions—Colorado.—To the same effect as the original annotation. see Edgington v. Taylor, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 48.

Lease of part for business purposes.—Where by the state law the homestead of every resident of the state, with the improvements and appurtenances, not exceeding in value a stated sum, may be claimed and set aside as exempt from levy and sale under process for the collection of debts, and, after the homestead shall have been claimed in the manner prescribed, the act of the owner in leaving it temporarily or in leasing it does not operate as an abandonment, the mere fact that part of the premises on which the owner resides is adapted to and is used for business purposes does not stand in the way of the property being considered as his homestead, unless the use of a part as a place of habitation is incidental or secondary to the business use of the remainder. Burrow, etc., Shoe Co. v. Wallace, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 532.

Unsevered crops.—Where the decisions of a state are to the effect that unsevered crops on land embraced in a rural homestead are included in the homestead exemption, such construction of the state law will be followed in bankruptcy proceedings. Stratton v. Ermis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 533.

I. SCHEDULE OF ASSETS (p. 612)

Failure to file claim for exemption as waiver.—Where an involuntary bankrupt neglects to file his claim for exemption within the time specified by this section, or before a sale of his assets as required by the state law, his rights thereto are waived. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

(L. ed.) —, wherein it was further held that an involuntary bankrupt did not, by filing schedules of assets and liabilities without objection, waive his constitutional privilege to refuse to answer questions respecting them that might tend to incriminate and degrade him.

Construction.—The word "arrest" in this section covers imprisonment. Ex p. Harrison, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 543.

This provision as to exemption from "arrest" becomes effective at the time of adjudication and authorizes the release of a debtor imprisoned in a state court on poor debtor proceedings prior to his becoming a bankrupt. Ex p. Harrison, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 543.

Vol. I, p. 627, sec. 9a (2). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 530.]

Judgment for negligent injury as debt.—There has been some difference of judicial opinion as to whether a judgment upon a claim for negligent injury constitutes a "debt," which can be proved and is discharged by bankruptcy proceedings; but the weight of authority now appears to be that the judgment can be proved and is discharged and therefore the bankrupt is exempt from arrest. Ex p. Harrison, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 543.

- I. In General.
- III. Stay as Dependent on Dischargeability of Debt.
- IV. Stay of Proceedings on Valid Liens.
- V. Where State Court Has Complete Jurisdiction.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 630)

Power to grant stay.—Under the present Bankruptcy Act no authority can be found for staying suits by or against bankrupts except in this section. In re Havens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 975.

Section as mandatory.—"Until after an adjudication or dismissal of the petition against an alleged bankrupt a suit which is founded upon a claim for which a discharge would be a release and which is pending against the alleged bankrupt at the time of filing such petition must be stayed. * * *

The language of the Bankruptcy Act is peremptory." Star Braiding Co. v. Stienen Dyeing Co., (R. I. 1921) 114 Atl. 129.

Application to state court for stay.—In Star Braiding Co. v. Stienen Dyeing Co., (R. I. 1921) 114 Atl. 129, it was claimed that the state court in which a suit was brought against the debtor had no notice of the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings against him. The court said: "The allegations of the defendant's motion supported by the certified copy of the records of the bankruptcy court required the superior court to refrain from proceeding with the trial of the cause."

III. STAY AS DEPENDENT ON DISCHARGEABILITY OF DEBT (p. 632)

Stay of actions on dischargeable debts.—The bankrupt undoubtedly has the right to have a stay of proceedings against him in a state court for such time as may be necessary to secure his discharge. As he has 12 months in which to apply for his discharge, the court should not interfere with his discretion in applying for it within that period. In re People's Warehouse Co., (S. D. Miss. 1921) 273 Fed. 611.

Stay of actions on nondischargeable debts.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Kalk, (N. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 627.

Under the rule that proceedings on a debt which is not dischargeable should not be stayed by a bankruptcy court, unless they interfere with the administration of the res in the possession of the court, proceedings by a creditor for a capias ad satisfaciendum against the body of the bankrupt on a claim which would not be released by his discharge in bankruptcy will not be stayed. Bloemecke v. Applegate, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 595.

Action for fraud and misappropriation.—An action against a bankrupt for fraud and misappropriation of the funds of a corporation while acting as one of its officers will not be stayed, since a judgment, if obtained, would not be dischargeable under section 17a (4) of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Bloemecke, (D. C. N. J. 1920) 265 Fed. 343.

Action for wilful conversion.—Where the pleadings in an action in a state court charge a wilful and deliberate conversion of the property of the plaintiff by the bankrupt, the court should deny the bankrupt's application to stay the plaintiff from the further prosecution of the action. In re Northrup, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 420. Regarding the granting of such a stay, the court said: "I think the plaintiff, Taylor, in the action brought in the Supreme Court, county of Madison, is entitled to a trial of the issues in that court. The evidence on that trial may satisfy the court and jury that there was no conversion, in which case the claim of the plaintiff will be discharged by a discharge in the bankruptcy proceedings. The evidence may satisfy the court and jury that there was a conversion, but at the same time the conversion established by the evidence may not be such an act as constitutes a wilful and malicious, or a willful or malicious, injury to the property of another. When the bankrupt applies for a discharge, if a discharge is granted, the claim of the plaintiff in the action referred to will be extinguished by the discharge, unless the record in the suit shows a wilful and malicious injury to the property of the plaintiff in the suit. Whether the discharge in bankruptcy, if granted, operates as a discharge of the claim of the plaintiff in the action referred to, will be a matter for the court to pass upon, when an effort is made by the plaintiff in that suit to enforce any judgment he may obtain against the bankrupt subsequent to his discharge. Then the discharge in bankruptcy can be pleaded as a bar to the enforcement of the judgment, and it will be the duty of the court to pass upon the question whether the plaintiff's claim, whatever the form it assumes, was discharged or released by the discharge in bankruptcy."

IV. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS ON VALID LIENS (p. 635)

Stay allowed.—The fact that the plaintiff in a suit in a state court has obtained an attachment lien upon the defendant's personal property more than four months prior to the filing of bankruptcy proceedings against the latter, which lien is not discharged by the bankruptcy, does not relieve the state court from granting a stay in compliance with the provisions of this section. Star Braiding Co. v. Stienen Dyeing Co., (R. I. 1921) 114 Atl. 129, wherein it was said: "The plaintiff's lien would not have been lost by the stay. If a stay had been granted, after the adjudication of the dismissal of the bankruptcy petition the superior court might remove the stay and permit the suit to proceed. As was held in Butterick v. Bowen, 33 R. I. 40, 80 Atl. 277, although the defendant receives a discharge in bankruptcy, which he sets up in a plea puis darrien continuance, the suit may still proceed to a qualified or special judgment against the defendant for the purpose of permitting the plaintiff to enforce his lien or for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to bring suit against sureties on a bond given to release such attachment."

V. WHERE STATE COURT HAS COMPLETE JURISDICTION (p. 636)

Suit commenced after discharge.—Where after a discharge has been granted the bankrupt a suit is commenced against him in the state court and judgment is obtained the federal court will not enjoin the issuance of an execution on the judgment. In such a case it was said:

"In the ordinary case, * * * a discharge is a defense; such defense is one that the state or any other court is bound to consider (Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631, 2 Sup. Ct. 404, 27 L. ed. 493), and if error is committed in failing to accord to the discharge its due weight, the way is open to the national Supreme Court (Dimock v. Revere, etc., Co., 117 U. S. 559, 6 Sup. Ct. 855, 29 L. ed. 994). But no authority exists for leaving the tribunal, where the discharge was or might have been pleaded, and enjoining the collection of a judgment against a discharged bankrupt because the bankruptcy court thinks that some other tribunal erred either in fact or law as to the effect of such discharge." In re Havens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 975.

Vol. I, p. 641, sec. 11c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 539.]

Substitution of trustee as plaintiff.—A trustee cannot cause himself to be substituted as party plaintiff in an action commenced by the bankrupt by merely filing a paper asking to be made a party. It takes judicial action of the court and this action evidenced by an order made in the cause. Western Star Lodge v. Burkes Constr. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 550.

Vol. I, p. 643, sec. 11d. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 540.]

Time within which trustee may sue.—It is held that this section is confined to suits founded strictly on the Bankruptcy Act and that the state statute of limitations applies to a suit by a trustee under section 70e of the Bankruptcy Act to recover an alleged fraudulent transfer. Davis v. Willey, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 397.

"Meeting of creditors."—The provisions of this section as to compositions before adjudication contemplate proof at the meeting of the claims of such creditors as are to be counted when the confirmation of the composition is considered. No trustee has been elected at the time of the meeting for allowance of claims, and there is no one to contest their validity except the creditors. They should know what claims may be allowed and counted in connection with the composition, and should be able to contest their validity before the referee allows them or certifies to the court that the composition has been accepted. In re Chinese Fur Importers, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 269 Fed. 669. The court further said:

"If it be said that this interpretation of the statute will impose too heavy a burden upon bankrupts offering a composition, the answer is that, in cases where the facts call for an adjournment of the meeting, so that other claims which any party desires to have considered upon the composition may be proved, application may be made to the referee for such adjournment. In my opinion, the claims of all creditors that are to be counted in consideration of the composition should be proved before the meeting called for that purpose is finally closed."

Vol. I, p. 647, sec. 12c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 542.]

Practice in cases of composition.—As to the practice in such cases it is said in In re Bernstein (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 1018:

"Under our practice, the duties of the referee, after the filing of an offer in composition, are (1) to allow claims; (2) to certify the acceptance of the offer by a majority in number and amount of claims allowed, if it be accepted; (3) to fix the amount of deposit required from the alleged bankrupt; and (4) to return the papers into court with his (the referee's) report. The proceedings are governed by the provisions of the act and General Orders, and by rules in bankruptcy of this court numbered 7, 8, and 9. Rule 8 requires that:

"The deposit shall be sufficient to pay the proposed percentage upon all unsecured debts scheduled by the bankrupt, unless the court should otherwise order."

"In this respect the practice here differs from that in some other districts, where the deposit required need be sufficient to cover only the proposed percentage on debts proved and allowed. The practice here was established by the late Judge Francis C. Lowell, soon after the passage of the act, and has worked well. It has been the custom for referees to keep open the first meeting and allow claims to be proved from time to time, until either the bankrupt applied for a certificate that a majority in number and amount of the claims proved had assented and the required deposit had been made, or upon motion of some creditor, or upon the referee's own motion, the papers were returned to the court because the alleged bankrupt had not diligently followed up his offer.

"In cases of composition after adjudication, the offer is made at a meeting of creditors, further liquidation proceedings are stayed while it is pending, and the practice follows that in cases of composition before adjudication. The proceedings of the learned referee in the present case accord with the established practice."

In this case the meeting of the creditors was held on April 12th, and was adjourned. On April 20th, the meeting being apparently still open, and a majority in number and amount of claims proved being at that time not in favor of the composition, the objecting creditors requested the referee to return the case to the District Court for adjudication. From his refusal to do so the present review was taken. Thereafter further claims were proved and allowed by the referee, and eventually, on May 12th, a majority in number and amount of claims proved and allowed having assented to the offer in composition, the learned referee returned the papers to the court with a certificate showing the requisite assent by creditors. The court further said:

"The contention of the objecting creditors is that the meeting should have been closed on or before April 20th, and that the referee erred in accepting assents on debts proved and allowed after that date. In re Chinese Fur Importers, Inc., 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336, (D. C. S. D. N. Y.) 269 Fed. 669, is cited in support of their position. The practice in that district evidently differs in important particulars from the practice here, as above outlined. A modification of our practice to accord with the opinion in that case would not, in my opinion, be an improvement. Only 10 days' notice is given to creditors of meetings to consider offers in composition, which is a rather short time for those remotely situated. If the composition can be definitely and finally accepted by a majority of the creditors who prove on the date of the meeting, it would give the bankrupt a distinct advantage. He would know what the offer was to be, and could obtain the assents of friendly creditors, while creditors not in his confidence would not know the terms of the offer before the meeting. Moreover, the creditors would naturally be separated and would not be likely to act together until brought together at the meeting. On the other hand, it would be possible for an active organization of creditors to take control of the meeting, and disapprove an offer in composition which was acceptable to a majority in number and amount of all the creditors. These considerations and others which might be mentioned were carefully weighed when the present practice here was established. It does not seem to me that it is inconsistent with the language of the act; and, as above stated, it has worked satisfactorily, both in cases of composition before adjudication and of composition after adjudication.

"It seems to me that it is within the discretion of the referee to adjourn a meeting from time to time within wide limits, which were not exceeded in this case. When, in his opinion, the time has come to close the matter, he can close the meeting and make his certificate. That is what was done in this case.

"Under the practice in this district there is no such distinction between cases of composition before adjudication and composition afterwards as is spoken of in the opinion in In re Chinese Fur Importers, Incorporated, supra."

Historical.—"In the United States the first Bankruptcy Act was passed in 1800, and it followed in its main features and often in its language the English bankruptcy laws, and it provided under certain limitations for a discharge of the bankrupt. 2 Statutes at Large, pp. 19, 30, 31. Discharge was provided for, too, in the second act, passed in 1841. 5 Statutes at Large, pp. 440, 443. The third act, passed in 1867, also provided for a discharge, but still made it very difficult for the discharge to be obtained. 14 Statutes at Large, pp. 517, 531, 532, 533. And see 15 Stat. at Large, p. 227.

"The main purpose of the bankruptcy statutes of both countries was to furnish a better protection to creditors, and it was not within the purpose to grant a discharge even to honest debtors. The early Bankruptcy Acts were acts for creditors and against debtors. It is surely a matter of some significance, therefore, that when the United States provided for the discharge of bankrupt debtors an assignment for the benefit of creditors, while in England regarded as an act of bankruptcy, was not considered as morally objectionable and did not prevent a discharge. If Congress intended that an assignment for the benefit of creditors should have a different effect under our system, we are inclined to think that intention would have been clearly indicated.

"Under the act of 1867 the grounds for refusing a discharge were collated in ten separate paragraphs. The act of 1898 when it was originally introduced into Congress, specified nine distinct classes of cases in which no discharge was to be granted, and they continued in the bill until its final revision by the conference committee. It provided that the bankrupt should be discharged—

"unless he has * * * (2) given a preference as herein defined, and within six months prior to the filing of the petition against him, which has not been surrendered to the trustee; * * * (4) made a transfer of any of his property which any creditor who has proved his claim in the proceedings might, at the time of the filing of the petition, have impeached as fraudulent if he had been a judgment creditor, unless such property shall have been surrendered to the trustee; * * * or (7) secreted or conveyed any of his property to avoid its being administered in bankruptcy, or any document relating to his property in contemplation of bankruptcy; or (8) transferred any property otherwise than in the ordinary course of his business, in contemplation of bankruptcy. * * *

"As finally adopted there were only two grounds left in the act for denying the charge. These were: (1) That the bankrupt had committed an offense punishable by imprisonment as provided in the act. (2) That with fraudulent intent to conceal his true financial condition, and in contemplation of bankruptcy, he had destroyed, concealed, or failed to keep books of account or records from which his true condition might be ascertained.

"The amendment of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. 797), enlarged the grounds for refusing a discharge, adding the only one which it is now material for us to consider, and which is found in section 14b, which reads as follows:

"Or (4) at any time subsequent to the first day of the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition transferred, removed, destroyed, or concealed, * * * any of his property, with intent to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors. * * *"
Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619.

The act necessarily contemplates: (1) That a voluntary petitioner will be discharged from the burden of his debts; and (2) that all the property owned by him at the time he filed his petition will be distributed among his creditors. The discharge of the bankrupt does not affect the rights of the creditors to property which passes into the hands of the trustee. To insure distribution of all the bankrupt's property the trustee is given the power to assert, not only any right which the debtor could have asserted, but also any right, remedy, or power of a creditor holding a lien or unsatisfied execution. The statute, as already pointed out, specifically sets forth the grounds of objection to a discharge. But nowhere is it declared to be a ground of objection that after-acquired property would be unaffected by the claims of creditors. On the contrary, one of the main purposes of the act is to relieve after-acquired property from such claims. Elberton Bank v. Swift, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 305.

Vol. I, p. 661, sec. 14b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 549.]

I. Generally.

II. Objections to Bankrupt's Discharge.

IV. Determination.

I. GENERALLY (p. 662)

Discharge as a matter of right.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of original annotation, see Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619.

Summary jurisdiction over bankrupt after discharge.—Although a bankrupt has been discharged, he may be summarily compelled to surrender property which he has concealed from his trustee. In re Margolies, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 203. Regarding the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court in such a case, the court said:

"Bankrupt's doctrine is that because, and solely because, he has a discharge, the court is without power (unless and until the discharge is revoked) to compel him by order to surrender concealed property, which, except for the discharge, it would be a contempt for him, after such order, to retain. Sections 2 (7), (13), (15), and 7 (2), of Bankruptcy Act. It is not argued that discharge gives complete immunity for undisclosed wrong; it is admitted that plenary suits under sections 67 and 70 may still be brought; but it is said that the personal control of court over bankrupt, by which he may be summarily required under pain of contempt to surrender whatever he unlawfully retains from his trustee (In re Schlesinger, 102 Fed. 117, 42 C. C. A. 207), vanished with, and by reason of, discharge.

"No such quality is expressly given discharge by the act; but by inference from section 14 it is urged that, since a discharge must be refused if a bankrupt has concealed his property with intent to hinder, etc., or has refused to obey lawful orders of the court, it follows that, when the court discharges, it 'certifies' that the applying bankrupt has not concealed, etc., and has obeyed all lawful orders; wherefore it is a disregard of its own judgment summarily to hale a discharged bankrupt before the court that found so much in his favor.

"This view of discharge is merely wrong. In granting discharges the court adjudges or 'certifies' nothing further than that affirmative proof has not been given establishing the existence of one or more of the grounds for refusing discharge. The language of section 14 is that the judge 'shall * * * discharge the applicant unless' he has done a forbidden thing; and that this language has been construed to mean unless the objecting parties show that he has done the forbidden is too well known to require citation. That discharge is not a certificate of character we have recently pointed out. In re Hughes, 262 Fed. 500 (opinion Dec. 10, 1919). Indeed the act itself defines 'discharge' to mean a 'release' from provable debts other than those excepted by the statutes. Section 1, subsec. 12. As has recently been said, a 'discharge operates merely to extinguish creditors' claims.' In re Walsh, 256 Fed. 654, 168 C. C. A. 47. * * * The whole act should be construed in the spirit of the last paragraph of section 2, which declares that 'nothing in this section contained shall be construed to deprive a court of bankruptcy of any power it would possess were certain specific powers not herein enumerated.' But the court's power over the estate does not end until the estate is closed by the discharge of the trustee upon the settlement of this account (Clark v. Pidcock, 129 Fed. 750, 64 C. C. A. 273), or by the reversion of the estate in the bankrupt by the confirmation of a composition (In re Hollins, 238 Fed. 787, 151 C. C. A. 637). It is also opposed to the history and spirit of bankruptcy legislation to affix or annex to discharge anything more than the statute explicitly gives to it. All discharges are a comparatively modern innovation, mitigating the status of bankruptcy, which historically was terminable only by death or annulment.

"The point before us was presented in Ex parte Walters, L. R. 18 Eq. 701, in 1874, where one partner, a discharged bankrupt, had used his employment by the creditors' committee to devote funds of the estate to paying his private creditors. He was proceeded against as for a contempt, and it was held:

"There is no distinction by reason of the fact that the debtors' discharge had been granted before this money was misapplied. The discharge only releases them from the debts provable * * * — not from the obligation to perform the duties prescribed by the statute."

"In later English statutes a discharged bankrupt is specifically subjected to punishment as for contempt if he fails to give the trustee such assistance as is required in the 'realization' of the estate—Bankruptcy Act 1914, part I, § 26 (9)—but the Waters Case rests on language as general as that of our statute.

"The question argued has been decided adversely to this petitioner in the lower courts—assuming (as we do) that the power to examine a bankrupt as to his estate is fundamentally the same as that which compels him to give up or turn over whatever he has no right to retain. Mr. Olmstead, referee, in the Massachusetts district, considered it at large in In re Peters, 1 Am. Bankr. R. 248, as did also Mr. Wise, referee in the Southern district of New York in In re Westfall, 8 Am. Bankr. R. 431, and the latter decision was expressly approved and confirmed by Adams, District Judge." To same effect, see Levy v. Schorr, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 207.

Grounds for refusing discharge in general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Robinson v. Williston, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 970.

Laches.—A delay of eighteen months after the application for a discharge is made before a hearing is had has been held not to be neglect or laches which will justify a dismissal. In re Neal, (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 289, wherein the court said:

"While undoubtedly the applicant for discharge is under the usual duties of diligence imposed on suitors, they are not to be derived from or measured by the quoted section. The judge is commanded to do three things: (1) Hear the application for discharge and the proofs and pleas in opposition to it; (2) investigate the merits of the application; and (3) discharge the applicant, unless he has done the things named in the statute.

"To dismiss this application unheard would be simply to fly in the face of this mandate. The fact that from some unknown cause the hearing was not had seasonably will not warrant the judge in refusing to hear at all, in declining to investigate the merits of the application, or to discharge the applicant. It would be to amend the statute and add another specification to the grounds for refusing a discharge, to penalize a want of diligence in pressing for a hearing as heavily as the commission of the crimes and frauds mentioned in the section. A bankruptcy case is one in equity. The extreme penalty for negligence in failing to press for a trial, as fixed by equity rule No. 57 (198 Fed. xxxiv, 115 C. C. A. xxxiv) is dismissal without prejudice; but a dismissal of this application would be to bar a discharge entirely, for a new application could not now be filed in this case, nor could these debts be discharged, even by another bankruptcy, In re Silverman, 157 Fed. 675, 85 C. C. A. 224, and cases cited. Parties at interest whose rights are suffering from delay in hearing an application for discharge may move the court to fix a time for the hearing under penalty of dismissal, should the applicant not proceed with the giving of his notices, but there appears in this case only acquiescence in the delay. No sufficient reason to the contrary being shown, the discharge applied for will be granted."

II. OBJECTIONS TO BANKRUPT'S DISCHARGE (p. 664)

Specifications of objections—General requisites.—Specifications of objection are sufficient, if they fairly apprise the bankrupt of the nature and grounds of the objection which is being made to his discharge. In re Simon, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1006.

IV. DETERMINATION (p. 673)

Motion to vacate order dismissing petition for discharge.—Although the dismissal of a petition for a discharge may have been error yet the court may on the ground of laches refuse to vacate such order of dismissal. In re Overstreet, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 987.

Vol. I, p. 677, sec. 14b (1). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 557.]

Making false oath.—In In re Lundberg, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 272 Fed. 107, "the objections charged that appellant made a false oath in his schedule, in that he denied ownership of any real estate, whereas the objections asserted that he in fact owned lots 23 and 24 in block 4 of Rood & Weston's addition, etc. On July 18, 1917, appellee got a judgment against appellant, which became a lien upon, and for several times the value of, those lots. Within less than 20 days after the making of the alleged false oath, appellee got a tax title to the lots. More than 2 years before he made the alleged false oath, the bankrupt executed a warranty deed to the property in question, but it had never been recorded." It was held that a discharge was not barred on the ground that the bankrupt had made a false oath.

In In re Schroeder, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 264 Fed. 862, in which case it was claimed that a transfer to the bankrupt's wife was in anticipation of his being drafted, the evidence was held to show that the transfer was made because he feared an action against him would result in a judgment, and that no real transfer was intended, and that he was guilty of making a false oath in failing to set forth in the schedule his rights in the property transferred.

Offense must be knowingly and fraudulently committed—In general.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see In re Wilson, (D. C. Md. 1920) 269 Fed. 845.

The making of a false oath is not a ground for denying a discharge, unless it was knowingly and fraudulently made, and that it was so made must be shown by clear and convincing evidence. Humphries v. Nalley, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 607.

Making false oath.—Where a bankrupt stated under oath that he had no property when his voluntary petition was filed when in fact $30 in money was due to him from his employer on account of wages earned, and he had in his possession and owned $25 in lawful money and household goods and furniture of the value of about $150, it was held that he was not guilty of wilfully, knowingly and fraudulently making a false oath in regard to his property where it appeared that he used the only money he had in paying costs in the bankruptcy proceedings and that he was entitled to the other property under a claim of exemption. Humphries v. Nalley, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 607. The court said:

"No evidence adduced was inconsistent with the conclusion that the bankrupt was innocent of any fraudulent purpose or intent to deprive the trustee or any creditor of any right. So far as appears, the bankrupt, who was a laborer working for wages, voluntarily made a full and true disclosure of his condition when he testified at the meeting of his creditors. The use of the only money he had in paying costs of the proceeding indicates the absence of any intention to improperly withhold that part of his property for his own use or benefit. The only other property he is shown to have been entitled to was such that it could have been retained under a claim of exemption. It was not disclosed that he did anything to conceal or hide any of his property."

Concealment of financial condition—Alteration of books.—The fact that there was an alteration in two items of one of the ledger accounts has been held not to show a falsification of the bankrupt's books of account with intent to conceal his financial condition where there is no evidence showing that the change was made by the bankrupt, and it appeared that the cash book showed the items correctly and that the change in no way affected the status of the business as to its financial condition. In re Rivas, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 690.

Destruction of cancelled checks and stubs.—The fact that a bankrupt destroyed his cancelled checks and stubs when he turned his business over to his largest creditor has been held not to establish an intent to conceal his financial condition where there was no proof that any ledger was destroyed and the bankrupt and his attorney stood ready at all times to produce any or all of the books desired by the trustee. In re Rivas, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 690.

"Failed to keep books of account".—In In re Simon, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1006, it was said:

"The absence of personal books and papers has made it impossible to trace what became of large amounts of cash received by the bankrupt. I am unable to believe that this result is accidental. I have no doubt that the lack of all data about personal transactions, aggregating many thousand dollars, was intentional, and was brought about by the bankrupt for the purpose of concealing what had been done. The specification based on concealment of books of account is sustained."

Effect of acquittal on charge of fraud.—The fact that the bankrupt was acquitted by direction of the court on the trial of an indictment for fraudulent concealment of assets has no bearing on specifications of objections to discharge based on concealment of financial condition. In re Simon, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1006.

Construction.—This provision and section 17, infra, are not mutually exclusive. So it is said in a case where the contrary contention was made:

"Although section 17 can have no application to a bankrupt who has been refused a discharge under section 14b, I do not think the two sections are mutually exclusive, or even in pari materia. Section 17 is for the benefit of the creditor whose claim is covered thereby, and to be invoked by him only. It comes into operation only after the bankruptcy court has done its work, and can hardly ever be applied by such court, unless in a second bankruptcy. Section 14b is addressed to the bankruptcy court only, and is not for the benefit of any particular creditor or class of creditors, and by its express terms may be invoked on any application for discharge by the trustee or other party in interest to entirely defeat the discharge. The purpose of the section is to preserve the discharge feature of the Bankruptcy Act from abuse, and deny its benefits to one who has shown himself unworthy of them in any of the ways specified in the section. The section is at bottom one of penalty or forfeiture, and one of the things penalized is the commercial dishonesty manifested by obtaining a credit on a materially false statement in writing, made to induce the credit. This section, having its own purpose, must be construed according to its own terms, and independently of section 17." In re Day, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 871.

Application.—There is nothing in the words of this provision nor in the history of its adoption and its amendment to confine it in its application to merchants. It applies to all who ask for a discharge in bankruptcy. In re Day, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 871.

False statement in writing—In general.—"It is plain that the intention of Congress was to extend not the statute to all cases of false written statements where credit happens to be given, and the thought being to confine the statute to cases where the decision to give credit was induced by the false statement. Such statement must be a financial statement, as distinguished from a mere misrepresentation." In re Morgan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 959.

A "materially false statement in writing" cannot be confined to a financial statement made by the bankrupt, or a statement of his financial condition, but may include any "materially false statement in writing" made by the bankrupt for the purpose of obtaining money or property on credit and by which property or money is obtained. Such a false statement, however, should not be created by inference alone from acts of the bankrupt. Robinson v. Williston, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 970.

This provision is not to be confined to statements of general financial condition but covers any material statement of fact made in writing to the creditor to induce the credit. In re Day, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 871.

"The phrase 'for the purpose of obtaining credit' contemplates a statement fitted to such purpose. It is intended to mean 'to obtain money or property on credit.' Each of the phrases in the statute must be given its appropriate meaning. The phrases 'on credit' and 'for the purpose of obtaining credit' should not be treated as redundant. The phrase 'upon a materially false statement' follows immediately after 'on credit,' and therefore it is apparent that Congress intended to qualify the whole clause, to 'obtain money or property on credit.' We think it was intended to mean that the credit obtained upon a materially false statement required the falsity to be tested as to its materiality to the obtaining of the credit."

In re Morgan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 959.

Intent—Guilty knowledge essential.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Matthews, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 263.

In order to bring a statement within this section it must have been intentionally and knowingly false and coupled with an intention to deceive and the creditor must have relied on the statement when parting with his money or property. In re Lundberg, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 272 Fed. 107.

Statement negligently made.—Although a statement may have been negligently made yet the bankrupt may be granted a discharge where there is an absence of intent to defraud. In re Matthews, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 263.

Statement of amount invested.—A statement made in writing by the bankrupt that he has a specified sum "invested" is a statement of fact, not an estimate of value, and where it appears that it was false and that credit was obtained by means of such statement a discharge is properly refused. In re Simon, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1006.

False statement to trust company.—A discharge may be refused on a finding that the bankrupt obtained money on credit on a materially false statement in writing made by him to a trust company for the purpose of obtaining credit. Perlmutter v. Hudspeth, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 957.

Signing of worthless check.—A bankrupt, by signing a worthless check, does not make a "materially false statement in writing" within the meaning of this section. Robinson v. Williston, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 970, wherein it was said:

"Did the bankrupt in this case, by signing a check, which is simply a request to a bank to pay to the payee a certain sum of money upon its presentation, make any 'materially false statement in writing'? It is true that a check purports to be drawn upon a bank where the maker has funds or credit, and from his act in giving the check this may be inferred. If the bankrupt had made an oral statement at the time the check was given, that it was good, or would be paid when presented, or that his account was overdrawn but that he had made arrangements with the bank on which it was drawn by which it would be paid, none of these oral statements would have been a bar to his discharge.

"We think it was the evident design of Congress to confine the objecting creditor to the limits of a specific statement in writing made by the bankrupt, and that such statement cannot be extended beyond the fair and necessary meaning. This is the view taken of this section by the Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in International Harvester Co. of America v. Carlson, 217 Fed. 736, 133 C. C. A. 430. In this case the bankrupt had made a financial statement, and under the head of 'assets' upon one page had listed certain property which he possessed and stated its value; and upon another page, under the heading of 'business liability,' there were numerous subheads, such as 'Owing for merchandise, notes, or accounts past due, owing to banks, borrowed money other than bank, taxes, rent, or other bills payable,' etc., and opposite these various items was a column for the insertion of the proper amount. He left the schedule of liabilities entirely blank in the statement, and it was contended that, because he had done so, he had stated that he owed nothing that could properly come under either of these heads, whereas, in fact, he was indebted in considerable sums under each head; and the court said (217 Fed. at page 739, 133 C. C. A. 432):

"We do not think that an omission constitutes a 'material statement,' within the meaning of section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act. There is nothing in any other part of the form which declares that blanks unfilled are to be construed as representing that nothing is owing under the heading. A 'material statement' means, not a blank, nor an inference from a blank. There must be a direct statement, either negative or positive, which is false, to justify the denial of the bankrupt's discharge."

"We think this is the correct construction to be placed upon this section. In In re Rea Brothers, (D. C.) 251 Fed. 431, District Judge Bourquin held that a check drawn upon a bank where the maker had neither money nor credit, while a false representation, was not a false statement which will defeat the bankrupt's right to a discharge.

"While we do not fully concur in the distinction, which is made by the learned judge, between a false representation and a false statement, we think the conclusion that he reached was right. No other reported case has been cited by counsel, and after a careful examination we have been unable to find one in which the exact question which we are considering has been before the court."

Refusal of discharge.—It was not intended that a bankrupt should be refused a discharge from all of his debts because he had contracted one or more fraudulently. In re Morgan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 959.

Vol. I, p. 694, sec. 14b (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 562.]

What constitutes concealment, removal, or destruction of property.—A suspicion that the bankrupt has concealed assets is not sufficient ground for refusing him his discharge under this section. McCutcheon v. Townley, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 985.

What constitutes concealment, removal or destruction of property — Transfer to wife's brother-in-law.—In In re Rosenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 658, it was held that concealment of assets was not established by evidence showing a transfer by the bankrupt to his wife's brother-in-law of property which was not listed in the bankrupt's schedules.

Use of money to pay living expenses and debts.—The fact that the bankrupt lived on money collected and paid some individual debts does not constitute concealment of assets with intent to hinder or delay creditors. In re Rivas, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 690.

A general assignment for the benefit of creditors where not made with any actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, has been held to be no ground for refusing a discharge even though made within four months prior to the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings. If a discharge is to be refused to a bankrupt because he has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, he is punished for an act which was not illegal at the time it was done, which was neither malum in se nor malum prohibitum, not being "prohibited by the bankruptcy law absolutely in every event," but "voidable only in case bankruptcy proceedings should be begun"; and as "at the time when it was made the institution of such proceedings was uncertain" it seems to this court a hard and subtle construction to say that such an act, legal when done and morally unobjectionable, shall have the effect of depriving a bankrupt of his discharge in the event of its turning out that bankruptcy proceedings happen to be instituted against him. We will not hold that such a penalty shall be imposed upon the bankrupt, in the absence of a clear provision in the act imposing it upon him. Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619.

Intent.—The word intent as used in this section has been construed as meaning actual intent. Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619.

Evidence — Property in bankrupt must be shown.—In In re Croonborg, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 352, it was held that a recommendation made by a special master for a discharge should be sustained where the evidence though conflicting tended to show that certain property which was not scheduled belonged to the wife of the bankrupt.

Vol. I, p. 703, sec. 15a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 568.]

Notice not given of application for discharge.—Where a petition to set aside a discharge is based on the fact that no notice of an application for a discharge was given as required by section 58a (9) of this act but no fraud is alleged the limitation as to time contained in this section is not applicable. Ellison v. Weintrob, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 466.

Vol. I, p. 706, sec. 16a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 569.]

Discharge of bankrupt corporation as releasing individual liability of officers and directors.—In view of the provisions of section 4b [1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 578] and of this section, a confirmation of a composition offered by a bankrupt corporation does not release its president from liability under a state statute providing that the president, treasurer, and directors of every domestic corporation shall be jointly and severally liable for its debts and contracts contracted or entered into while they are officers, if any statement or report required by the provisions of the state statutes was made and signed by them which was false in any material representation, and which they knew, or on reasonable examination could have known, to be false. E. S. Parks Shellac Co. v. Harris, (Mass. 1921) 129 N. E. 617.

A surety on a contractor's bond is not released from liability by the contractor's discharge in bankruptcy nor by the confirmation of a composition offered by him. McClintic-Marshall Co. v. New Bedford, (Mass. 1921) 131 N. E. 444.

Construction.—This section and section 14b (3) are not mutually exclusive. So it is said in a case where the contrary contention was made:

"Although section 17 can have no application to a bankrupt who has been refused a discharge under section 14b, I do not think the two sections are mutually exclusive, or even in pari materia. Section 17 is for the benefit of the creditor whose claim is covered thereby, and to be invoked by him only. It comes into operation only after the bankruptcy court has done its work, and can hardly ever be applied by such court, unless in a second bankruptcy. Section 14b is addressed to the bankruptcy court only, and is not for the benefit of any particular creditor or class of creditors, and by its express terms may be invoked on any application for discharge by the trustee or other party in interest to entirely defeat the discharge. The purpose of the section is to preserve the discharge feature of the Bankruptcy Act from abuse, and deny its benefits to one who has shown himself unworthy of them in any of the ways specified in the section. I. False pretenses or representations.

II. Wilful and malicious injuries.

III. Miscellaneous.

I. FALSE PRETENSES OR REPRESENTATIONS
(p. 716)

Liability for obtaining money by false pretenses or false representations.—In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation see M. C. Kiser Co. v. Gerald, (1920) 17 Ala. App. 648, 88 So. 49.

"Judgments in actions for frauds."—A judgment in replevin for goods which the bankrupt obtained on a note by a false representation that he was solvent and owned a farm when in fact he was hopelessly insolvent at the time and shortly after filed a petition and schedules in bankruptcy is not released. In re Kalk, (N. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 627.

Money is "property" within the meaning of this section. Bloemcke v. Applegate, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 595.

False report as to purchase price of property.—Money obtained by the president of a corporation by false representation that he paid more for property bought for the corporation than he actually did pay, is obtained by false pretenses and representations within the meaning of this section and therefore is a liability from which a discharge in bankruptcy will not release him. Bloemcke v. Applegate, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 595.

II. WILFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURIES (p. 720)

Physical injury.—A judgment for physical injuries caused by a person who was negligently driving an automobile while intoxicated has been held not to be within the exception it being declared that Congress intended to draw a hard and fast line between cases in which the bankrupt intended to do harm and those in which no such intention existed. In re Wilson, (D. C. Md. 1920) 269 Fed. 845.

Misappropriation of funds.—An indebtedness "procured unlawfully and by misapplication of funds, credit and property" is not discharged. Young v. City Nat. Bank, (Tex. 1920) 223 S. W. 340.

A conversion of property.—The weight of authority is that judgments grounded in conversion are dischargeable unless actual fraud was the basis of the judgment. In re Kalk, (N. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 627.

A merchant to whom goods are shipped for sale under a contract that the proceeds thereof should belong to the shipper until all indebtedness was paid cannot be released by a discharge in bankruptcy from his liability to the shipper for misappropriation of the proceeds of the goods sold. Baker v. Bryant Fertilizer Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 473.

III. MISCELLANEOUS (p. 722)

Support of wife or child.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Blackstock v. Blackstock, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 249.

The word "officer" includes an officer of a private corporation. Bloemcke v. Applegate, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 595.

Fiduciary capacity—Corporate officer.—An officer of a corporation who purchases property for the corporation for a less sum than he reports and who retains the difference for himself, is liable for a debt created while acting in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of this section. Bloemcke v. Applegate, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 595, affirming In re Bloemcke (D. C. N. J. 1920) 265 Fed. 343.

Proceedings are governed by equity rules except where prescribed by the statute. In re Fosgate, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 268 Fed. 985.

Petition.—In Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 826, the claim of the petitioner in involuntary proceedings was held to be sufficiently pleaded where it was alleged that the petitioner's claim was for a certain sum, money had and received by the bankrupt on account of a protested check, representing this indebtedness issued by the bankrupt to the petitioner, a copy of which was attached to the petition.

Necessity of pleading.—An appearance under this section is not recognized without a pleading. In re Puget Sound Engineering Co., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 353.

Vol. I, p. 738, sec. 18b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 581.]

The time to plead.—This provision does not grant a fixed term of twenty days for appearance and answer. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 826.

Answer—Generally.—An answer which does not put in issue any material allegation of the petition will be disregarded by the court. In re Tidewater Coal Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 1011.

Where a subpoena gave the bankrupt the five days to answer before instead of after the return day, it was held that this did not deprive the bankrupt of full notice of the proceeding but was a mere irregularity which presented no substantial ground for an avoidance of the subpoena. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 826.

Intervention.—In In re Tidewater Coal Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 1011, the court denied as a matter of discretion a motion to be allowed to intervene and to file an answer where a default of nearly two months had run against the petitioner without any excuse.

Vol. I, p. 740, sec. 18c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 582.]

Verification—Form.—A verification to a petition by the president of a bankrupt corporation for the transfer of the case to another district is sufficient, where it alleges "that the facts therein set out are true to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief." In re Okmulgee Producing, etc., Co., (D. C. Del. 1920) 265 Fed. 736. The court said:

"It is contended that this is not a compliance with section 18c of the Bankruptcy Act which provides: 'All pleadings setting up matters of fact shall be verified under oath.' The form of the oath is not prescribed by the act. Section 30, however, provides that—

"All necessary rules, forms, and orders as to procedure and for carrying this act into force and effect shall be prescribed, and may be amended from time to time, by the Supreme Court of the United States."

"In pursuance of the power and authority thus conferred the Supreme Court prescribed certain forms, and by General Order 38 directed:

"The several forms annexed to these General Orders shall be observed and used with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case."

"The form of verification prescribed for an involuntary petition in bankruptcy (form 3) is absolute, namely, 'That the statements contained in the foregoing petition, subscribed by them, are true,' while the form for verification to a voluntary petition (forms 1 and 2) is qualified, thus, 'That the statements contained therein are true according to the best of my [their] knowledge, information and belief.' The Supreme Court thereby recognized both the absolute and the qualified form of oath as being within the meaning of the statute. Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 505, 139 C. C. A. 49.

"No form was prescribed for a motion or petition to transfer a case to another district. The form of verification annexed to the motion in the case at bar is therefore not in conflict with any form or General Order prescribed by the Supreme Court. It is not in conflict with the statute, unless the verification to a voluntary petition in bankruptcy is also in conflict therewith, which cannot, owing to its origin, be here presumed. The creditors, in support of their contention upon this point, cite In re Vastbinder (D. C.) 126 Fed. 417, and United States v. Collins (D. C.) 79 Fed. 65. The latter case is not one arising under the Bankruptcy Act, and the former considers the sufficiency of a qualified verification to an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. Such verification, being in conflict with the form prescribed by the Supreme Court, presented a question differing materially from the one now before this court. I am of opinion that, assuming, but not deciding, the motion to transfer to be a pleading, its verification satisfies the statutory requirement. In re Milgraum & Ost (D. C.) 129 Fed. 827."

Vol. I, p. 741, sec. 18d. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 583.]

Presumption as to insolvency prior to adjudication.—While the general rule is that no presumption of insolvency at a date prior to that of filing the petition in bankruptcy arises from the adjudication, yet this rule does not forbid a presumption, in the absence of countervailing evidence, that such condition existed at the close of the preceding day. In re Star Spring Bed Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 133.

Vol. I, p. 745, sec. 18e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 585.]

Vacating adjudications.—An application by the alleged bankrupt to set aside an adjudication pro confesso in bankruptcy will be dismissed where an examination of the answer which is presented discloses that the matters therein pleaded are not a defense. In re Puget Sound Engineering Co., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 353.

Adjudications in voluntary cases.—A creditor has no right to oppose an adjudication in bankruptcy except as expressly given by statute (which gives him no right to contest an adjudication upon a voluntary petition), and so cannot maintain a petition to vacate an adjudication in such case after it is made. In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 24.

Trial according to common law.—The incidents of a jury trial at common law including the right of the judge to direct a verdict, as in other jury cases, attend such jury trials in bankruptcy. Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 510.

Limitation as to questions submitted.—Where on the filing of a petition to have a defendant adjudged a bankrupt a jury trial is demanded on the questions of insolvency and the commission of acts of bankruptcy the trial by jury is confined to these two issues. Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 510.

Direction of verdict.—Where both the petitioning creditors and the defendant ask for a peremptory instruction on the issue as to acts of bankruptcy, the direction of the court thereon is unassailable unless there is no sufficient evidence to support it. Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 510.

Waiver of right to jury trial—Failure to demand.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Flaherty, (N. D. Ia. 1920) 265 Fed. 741.

Purpose and scope of examination—Corporate official.—Where acts inquired of, seemingly personal to a witness, arose out of his close official relations with the bankrupt and out of business dealings between the two which were so closely interwoven that conduct of the bankrupt cannot be fully made known without revealing some personal conduct of the witness, it is imperative to a proper administration of this section that much latitude be permitted in the examination, keeping in mind as the test of its scope that the inquiry concerns, primarily and objectively, "the acts, conduct, or property of [the] bankrupt." In re Standard Aero Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 783, wherein the court so declared in the case of one who besides being president of the corporation was its principal stockholder and had been its active manager in its very substantial business of manufacturing aeroplanes.

Examination of alleged bankrupt before adjudication.—As to the power to order an examination of an alleged bankrupt prior to adjudication it is said that this section, when considered with subdivision (9) of section 7, necessarily grants the authority in question, and, in addition, that the general equity powers with which bankruptcy courts are invested make it within the province of the court to authorize such procedure. In re Stell, (E. D. Tex. 1920) 269 Fed. 1008.

Showing an application for examination before adjudication.—It should appear from the application, or from evidence in support of it, that some extraordinary condition exists with reference to the assets of the estate which makes it necessary for an examination to be made at such time. The alleged bankrupt has the right to have the issue of insolvency tried by a jury, and it would be improper to use the authority of the court to require him to submit to an investigation and analysis of his affairs prior to the determination of that issue, unless an unusual condition is shown. Using the language employed in the Rawlins Case:

"We are not prepared to say that there might not be a case when the utility of such an examination for the purpose intended, even in the absence of a receivership, might not be shown."

But the parties applying for such should allege and show that such an examination is necessary to the rights of the parties interested. In re Stell, (E. D. Tex. 1920) 269 Fed. 1008.

Scope of examination before adjudication.—It is said to be clear that the purpose in permitting an examination of an alleged bankrupt prior to adjudication is to "show the condition of the estate, to enable the court to discover its extent and whereabouts, and to get into possession of it, in order that the rights of creditors may be preserved." It cannot be employed to obtain evidence for use on the issue of insolvency. "It would be a perversion of the purpose of section 21a to exercise the power it confers to obtain evidence for use on the trial of the issue of solvency or insolvency." In re Stell, (E. D. Tex. 1920) 269 Fed. 1008.

Application for examination.—Any creditor may apply for examination.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Henderson, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 266 Fed. 254.

Incriminating evidence.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Arndstein v. McCarthy, (1920) 254 U. S. 71, 379, 41 S. Ct. 26, 136, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

I. JURISDICTION OF ADVERSE CLAIMS (p. 761)

Bona fide adverse claims.—Claim of assignee for creditors for services and disbursements.—A court of bankruptcy is without jurisdiction to adjudicate in a summary proceeding, over a protest, the merits of the claim of an assignee for creditors of the bankrupt to retain out of the bankrupt's estate his fees and disbursements under the assignment for administering the estate prior to the bankruptcy proceedings. As to these moneys the assignee is an adverse claimant. Galbraith v. Vallye, (1921) 256 U. S. 46, 41 S. Ct. 415, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 670; (D. C. N. D. 1918) 253 Fed. 390, and following Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor cited in the original annotation. The court said:

"We think the referee was right in holding that the case was governed by Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, supra. In that case a general assignment for the benefit of creditors was made within four months of the bankruptcy proceeding; the assignment was therefore an act of bankruptcy. A receiver was appointed in the bankruptcy court. The assignee turned over the proceeds of sale of the property, retaining his fees as assignee and his disbursements to counsel. A summary proceeding was begun in the District Court, ordering the assignee to show cause why he should not pay to the receiver the amounts retained. This order was made against the objection of the assignee that the court had no authority to proceed in that manner. This court held that the assignee was an adverse claimant as to these amounts, and that the District Court was without jurisdiction to determine the controversy in a summary proceeding. This case has been repeatedly cited as determinative of the law and practice in similar cases.

"The Circuit Court of Appeals made no reference to the Comingor Case, and held the case was ruled by Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 47 L. ed. 1165, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; but that case did not present the question here involved. In that case there had been an assignment prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, and the question presented was whether a claim for professional services, rendered in the course of a general assignment, before the bankruptcy, was entitled to be paid as a preferential claim out of the estate in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy when the adjudication of bankruptcy had been made within four months after the making of the assignment, and the assignment set aside as in contravention of the Bankruptcy Law. It was held that the claim for compensation could be allowed so far as the services were shown to be beneficial to the estate.

"In Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 54 L. ed. 402, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, also cited in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, it was held that books and records of a corporation, upon adjudication in bankruptcy, passed to the trustee, and belonged in the custody of the bankruptcy court, there being no adverse claim to them. Upon that state of facts it was held that, on a rule to show cause, the court could properly make an order compelling the delivery of the books to the trustee. In the opinion in that case, Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, supra, and other cases, are cited for the purpose of showing that a different rule would prevail when an adverse claimant set up a right to be heard in other than a summary proceeding.

"It may be, as suggested by the Circuit Court of Appeals, that a summary proceeding at the instance of the trustee would afford a more speedy and economical administration of the estate in bankruptcy. But the right to recover in such instances only in suits of the ordinary character, with the rights and remedies incident thereto, has been consistently maintained by this court. The principle of the Comingor Case has never been departed from in this court. It establishes the right of an assignee for the benefit of creditors, to the extent that he asserts rights to expenses incurred and compensation earned under an assignment in good faith, before the bankruptcy proceedings, to have the merits of his claim determined in a judicial proceeding suitable to that purpose, and not by summary proceedings where punishment for contempt is the means of enforcing the order. We see no occasion to depart from this practice. There was no waiver by the assignee of his rights in this respect. He made no attempt to retain the body of the estate as against the trustee in bankruptcy. As to his disbursements and compensation while acting as assignee, he asserted an adverse claim. Under the settled rule of this court he could not be proceeded against summarily for such disbursements and compensation over his protest, duly made, against that method of procedure.

"In our view the courts below erred in deciding otherwise, and the order of the Circuit Court of Appeals is, accordingly, reversed."

Limitations.—A federal court has no jurisdiction of an action by a trustee to recover, on the ground of mental incapacity of the transferor, property transferred by the mother of the bankrupt to his wife, there being no diversity of citizenship and no federal question involved. A trustee must rely for jurisdiction on the exceptions stated. Kaigler v. Gibson, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 240.

Pleading.—While it is true ordinarily that, when a federal court appears on the face of a petition to have jurisdiction because a substantial federal question is involved, it has the right and duty to decide all questions, regardless of how the federal question is decided, or whether it is decided at all, yet it is held that this principle cannot control in an action under section 23b where the only case stated within the exceptions is untruly stated. The court said:

"If a pleader is permitted to state a case within the exceptions untruly, whether by design or by mistake, and then to state it truly and make a case within the rule, and if the court is held to thereby acquire jurisdiction over the whole, it would be possible in every controversy to evade the denial of jurisdiction and make the exceptions to annul the rule. The denial of jurisdiction is as authoritative and binding as are the permissions of the exceptions to it. If the trustee desired to assert a title at law and also a title in equity, he could not do so in a law case with two counts, but would have to go into a court that might entertain questions of law and equity. So, if he desires to press, at the same time, two alternative views of his right to recover against an adverse claimant, he must seek a court that has jurisdiction to entertain the questions arising in both of the views." Kaigler v. Gibson, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 240.

III. JURISDICTION BY CONSENT (p. 767)

The consent provided for was not intended to enlarge the jurisdiction of the District Courts.—Kaigler v. Gibson, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 240.

Effect of objection to jurisdiction.—Where an answer to the merits is accompanied with a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, which is expressly reserved in the answer, any inference of consent that might have arisen from the filing of an answer to the merits is rebutted. Kaigler v. Gibson, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 240.

IV. RECOVERY OF PREFERENTIAL AND FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS (p. 769)

Jurisdiction to recover property fraudulently or preferentially transferred.—Consent of the defendant is unnecessary to a plenary suit brought by the trustee under section 70e of this act. In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 330.

Amount as immaterial.—Transfers by a bankrupt in fraud of his creditors are voided by the Bankruptcy Act and suits to annul them are treated as suits arising under the laws of the United States with no fixed amount required to be involved. Kaigler v. Gibson, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 240.

V. SUMMARY AND PLENARY JURISDICTION (p. 770)

Necessity of plenary action.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Looschen Land, etc., Co. v. Milson, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 359.

Summary jurisdiction.—Where assets are a part of the general estate of the bankrupt the court may by a summary proceeding direct the surrender of such assets to the trustee of the bankrupt though an adverse claim has been set up. In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 915.

Estoppel to challenge.—Where a claimant of property in the possession of the bankrupt's receiver submits his claim to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court and acquiesces in an order surrendering the property to him and providing for payment in five days, he cannot thereafter in a summary proceeding challenge the jurisdiction of the court to enforce as against him the terms of the order regarding payment. In re Barnes Gear Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 597, wherein the court said:

"The contention of the petitioner is that it has a claim for breach of contract against the bankrupt, and that it should have an opportunity in this proceeding to set up and litigate its claim for damages for this breach and this counterclaim against the bankrupt. It contends that the respondent should pursue his remedy in a plenary action, and that the court has not the power to grant relief in this summary proceeding. The difficulty, however, in this position of the petitioner, is that it invoked the aid of the District Court, obtaining some benefit in the immediate turn-over of its property upon which the bankrupt was performing service, and that upon a condition imposed to pay the amount due for the work performed. It now wishes to avoid the terms of the order under which it accepted these benefits. The order was entered by mutual agreement and it was considered to the mutual benefit of both litigants.

"The petition itself alleged that the brake company had a large contract with the British government for munitions, this being a part of the work covered by its contract with the British government; that the brake company was in default on its contract and had been granted a 60-day extension by the British government; that by reason of the failure of the bankrupt, and its consequent inability to perform its contract, the petitioner was or would be damaged; that the petitioner had furnished material to the bankrupt of the value of $18,794.84, and this material was to be worked and improved for the consideration set forth in the contract between it and the brake company; that $4,000 was on deposit with the petitioner for the faithful performance of the contract; that all of the material was in the actual possession of the receiver; that some of it was completed, and some partially completed; that the brake company would be unable to complete its contract with the British government unless it immediately secured possession of this material and that the bankrupt had ceased operations under the contract. From this it conclusively appears that the petitioner could complete its contract with the British government, if it speedily received relief and was not compelled to await the outcome of the involuntary proceedings then pending and undetermined and the appointment of a trustee. In the prayer for relief, it said:

"Your petitioner further shows that considerably less than one fourth in amount of said labor has been performed under said contract, for which labor your petitioner is ready and willing to pay said bankrupt, or its receiver or trustee, at any time upon the order of this court; that it will be impracticable for said brake company, your petitioner, to procure this material to be properly inspected and passed upon in accordance with the terms of said contract, but that said inspection can be had immediately upon delivery of said partially completed pieces at its plant at Watertown, N. Y."

"From the foregoing proceeding, it is clear that the petitioner instituted this proceeding in bankruptcy. By its petition it became a party thereto, and submitted all its rights to the bankruptcy court for determination. It accepted the benefits derived from the order of July 26, 1917, as well as the condition imposed to pay the amount found to be due. It chose its own proceedings to obtain relief, and the bankruptcy court in which it instituted it. It cannot now be heard in a plea that it wishes to have its counterclaim heard in a plenary action. After the amount was found to be due, the District Court had jurisdiction to direct its payment within 5 days. But for this submission to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, the petitioner had the right to set off its damages against any claim of the bankrupt for work done by it in a plenary action. Its petition was a proceeding in bankruptcy, and the controversy was one arising out of the settlement of the estate. First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 198 U. S. 280, 25 Sup. Ct. 693, 49 L. ed. 1051."

Form of proceeding.—It is immaterial that a proceeding by the trustee is denominated a summary proceeding when it is in fact a plenary proceeding where the case is within the jurisdiction of the court and the defendant answers and has ample opportunity, of which it avails itself, to be heard on the merits. In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 330.

VI. JURISDICTION OF STATE COURTS (p. 772)

Jurisdiction of state courts.—Where the proceedings to review the referee's order permitting replevin against a trustee were seasonably taken, the rights of the parties are not affected by the fact that the goods have actually been replevied under the order of the referee as replevin action will fall with the order on which it was based. In re International Piano Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1920) 263 Fed. 430.

- I. Relation of section 24a to Circuit Court of Appeals Act and other provisions.
- II. Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings.

I. RELATION OF SECTION 24a TO CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS ACT AND OTHER PROVISIONS (p. 774)

Exclusiveness of remedy.—The remedies by appeal and by petition to revise under section 24b are mutually exclusive. Petition of Na- tional Discount Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 570.

II. CONTROVERSIES ARISING IN BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS (p. 776)

In general.—The Bankruptcy Act distinguishes between an appeal and a petition to revise, and it distinguishes between proceedings in bankruptcy and controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings. Proceedings in bankruptcy relate to questions arising between the bankrupt and his creditors. Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings are distinct and separable issues raised between intervening parties and involving substantial rights. In re Prudential Lithograph Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 469.

When a bankruptcy court is called on to deal with the disposition of assets not belonging to ordinary creditors there may then arise a "controversy in bankruptcy." Keith v. Kilmer, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 643.

Where the controversy involves facts as well as legal questions a party who seeks a review is confined to the remedy by appeal under this provision. In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 91a.

Decisions held appealable.—In the following cases decisions were expressly or impliedly held to be appealable to the Circuit Court of Appeals under section 24a:

A decree on a petition by a trustee in bankruptcy directing a sale by him of certain lands of the bankrupt free from all attachment liens obtained by certain creditors more than four months prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition and overruling a motion by such creditors to dismiss the trustee's petition. Griffin v. Lenhart, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 675.

A decree confirming sale of leasehold by trustee where landlord asserts title to the property. In re Prudential Lithograph Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 469.

A decree in suit to vacate a preference where the matters involved took such shape that it was necessary for the court to pass on the facts. City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 11.

A decree relating to a claimant's rights to funds. Petition of National Discount Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 570.

A reclamation by a third party of his own property in the hands of the trustee is a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings, and the proper remedy is appeal under section 24a, and not a petition to revise under section 24b of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Toole, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 196.

Vol. I, p. 791, sec. 24b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 611.]

Proceedings in bankruptcy.—The Bankruptcy Act distinguishes between an appeal and a petition to revise, and it distinguishes between proceedings in bankruptcy and controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings. Proceedings in bankruptcy relate to questions arising between the bankrupt and his creditors. Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings are distinct and separable issues raised between intervening parties and involving substantial rights. In re Prudential Lithograph Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 469.

Where the remedy is provided by this section appellate jurisdiction under section 25a of this act is excluded. It is now the settled law that the remedy provided by this section and the appeals provided for in section 25a are mutually exclusive. Henkin v. Fousek, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 557.

"It has become settled law that one who is entitled, under section 25a of the Bankruptcy Act, to an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, is not also entitled to a review by petition under section 24b." In re Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 913.

Questions and orders reviewable or not reviewable on petition.—Allowance of counsel fees and expenses.—A petition to revise is the proper method for reviewing an order allowing fees to the counsel of the trustee in bankruptcy. Yaryan Rosin, etc., Co. v. Isaac, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 710.

An order setting aside an adjudication is reviewable by a petition to revise. In re DeCamp Glass Casket Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 568.

Vacating adjudication in bankruptcy for want of jurisdiction.—A petition to revise in matter of law under the Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, § 24b, is the proper remedy to review an order of an inferior court of bankruptcy, vacating an adjudication and dismissing the bankruptcy proceeding for want of jurisdiction, upon the motion of the bankrupt, after the expiration of the time for appeal, he having neither contested the involuntary petition against him, nor appealed from the adjudication. Vallely v. Northern F., etc., Ins. Co., (1920) 254 U. S. 348, 41 S. Ct. 116, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

An order refusing to set aside an adjudication of bankruptcy made on a voluntary petition is subject to review only by petition to revise. In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 24.

An order directing that an amended proof of claim be expunged because not signed and filed by both executors of an estate is properly brought up for review by a petition to revise. In re Schaffner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 977.

Order adjudging contempt.—An order adjudging a bankrupt guilty of contempt in failing and refusing to pay over certain funds to the trustee in compliance with an order of the referee in bankruptcy is reviewable under this section. Henkin v. Fousek, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 557.

Order directing trustee to pay money.—An order directing the trustee in bankruptcy to pay a specified sum in accordance with authority for making a settlement given to him on his application to the court is an administrative order in the ordinary course of bankruptcy which is reviewable by a petition to revise. Petition of Baxter, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 344.

Discretionary orders can be revised only for abuse of discretion, which is error of law. In re Margolies, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 203.

Interlocutory orders.—While the court may refuse to revise an interlocutory order in bankruptcy, yet it may revise such an order where questions of law going to the jurisdiction are involved and it will speed distribution to dispose of the order. In re Schaffner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 977.

Refusal of petition for intervention.—An order refusing permission to file an intervening petition in bankruptcy proceedings to determine the ownership of certain moneys turned over to the court by the petitioner in accordance with the terms of an order, "with reservation as to the ownership of said fund," is reviewable by a petition for review and not by appeal. In re Consumers' Packing Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 198.

Validity of judicial sale.—The question of the invalidity of a judicial sale is not reviewable on a petition to revise an order reopening the estate of a bankrupt because of an alleged fraudulent concealment of assets. In re Leigh, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 678.

Summary order.—Where the merits of an adverse claim are sought to be summarily adjudicated, the order may be reviewed on petition. Charles H. Brown Paint Co. v. Rockhold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 139.

Time for filing petition.—Rule of court.—A rule of the Circuit Court of Appeals requiring a petition to revise under this section be filed within twenty days of the entry of the order sought to be revised but authorizing the district judge to enlarge the time for such filing has been construed as not imperatively requiring the extending authority to be exercised within the twenty-day period. In re De Camp Glass Casket Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 558.

Suspension of.—The pendency of a motion for a rehearing suspends the time for filing a petition to revise. Yarvan Rosin, etc., Co. v. Isaac, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 710.

Findings of fact.—Conclusions of fact adopted by the court below must be accepted by the reviewing court where there is substantial evidence to sustain them. In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 24.

Where the effect of findings was simply to declare that a claim was proper in form and entitled to be filed, not that it was allowed, and then to declare that the claim was disallowed, the case is not one for revision under section 24b and reasons given in the finding for disallowing it do not change the effect of the order. In re Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 913.

Scope of review.—A petition to revise opens only questions of law, questions of fact being peculiarly within the province of the court below. Yarvan Rosin, etc., Co. v. Isaac, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 710.

In a proceeding to revise under this section only questions of law can be determined, and those questions must arise out of the facts found by the court below or admitted by the parties. In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 24.

On a petition to revise the court is not authorized to substitute its discretion for that of the trustee and the court, who are charged with the administration of the estate, in effecting a compromise. Petition of Stuart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 938. The court said:

"We cannot, as matter of law, say that the trustee and the court have, in adopting this compromise, exceeded the limits of reasonable discretion, taking into account all the considerations to which attention has been called. Setting to one side questions of the legal right of the respective classes of creditors (in the absence of compromise) to participate in the recovery from stockholders, not only may it well be that no compromise was possible unless all creditors share equally, but presumably the trustee and the court regarded such compromise for the best interest, not only of creditors generally, but of each class of creditors. We do not think the action of the District Court can properly be said to amount to a judicial determination of the legal defenses made by the stockholders against their liability."

"Matter of law."—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Barnes Gear Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 597; Petition of Stuart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 938.

"Controversies" and "proceedings."—The Bankruptcy Act distinguishes between an appeal and a petition to revise, and it distinguishes between proceedings in bankruptcy and controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings. Proceedings in bankruptcy relate to questions arising between the bankrupt and his creditors. Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings are distinct and separable issues raised between intervening parties and involving substantial rights. In re Prudential Lithograph Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 469.

Appeal or petition to revise as exclusive or optional right.—See note under this catchline to sec. 24b, supra, p. 366.

Questions considered and determined in general.—A decision involving the right to prove a claim is appealable under this section, being regarded as a "proceeding in bankruptcy." Keith v. Kilmer, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 643.

Vol. I, p. 824, sec. 25a (1). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 632.]

Order vacating adjudication.—An order vacating an adjudication of bankruptcy is reviewable by a petition to revise and not by appeal. In re De Camp Glass Casket Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 558.

Refusal to set aside adjudication.—An order of the District Court dismissing a petition to set aside an adjudication in bankruptcy on the ground of fraud is not one that can be reviewed on appeal under the provision of this section. Elberton Bank v. Swift, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 305.

Vol. I, p. 826, sec. 25a (2). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 633.]

An order granting or denying a discharge is one from which an appeal can be taken under this section and a petition to revise will be dismissed and the case decided on the appeal. Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619.

Exclusiveness of remedy by appeal.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 913.

Judgment "rendered."—Where an order of adjudication is set aside on motion and subsequently a second order of adjudication is made which does not affirm the earlier order nor refer to it but is an independent order made on the pleadings and proof the time for taking an appeal is to be computed from the date of the second order. Cameron v. National Surety Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 874.

Effect of proceedings for rehearing.—The pendency of a motion for a rehearing suspends the running of the time for taking an appeal. Yaryan Rosin, etc., Co. v. Isaac, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 710.

Petition for rehearing as not reviving right.—Where the time to appeal has expired the right cannot be revived by filing a petition for rehearing where the only apparent purpose of such petition is to procure the entry of a judgment as of a later date so that an appeal can be taken in compliance with the statute. In re Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 913.

Petition to revise.—The Bankruptcy Act contains no express time limit within which a petition to revise must be filed. Feder v. Goetz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 619, holding that in the second circuit the petition must be filed and served within ten days after the entry of the order sought to be revised.

Jurisdiction of court.—The provision in General Order in Bankruptcy No. 12 that after a general reference "all proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these general orders to be had before the judge, shall be had before the referee" does not take from the judge authority to hear in the first instance an application by the trustee for authority to compromise a claim. Petition of Baxter, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 344.

This section does not limit the right of compromise to all controversies in which all the creditors have the same interest. Petition of Stuart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 938.

Application for authority to settle a controversy by agreement with the other party held sufficient under General Order in Bankruptcy No. 33, see Petition of Baxter, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 344.

Consideration for compromise.—An attack on a compromise by a trustee on the ground of a lack of consideration cannot be sustained where it appears that he acted in good faith and that the compromise which called for the payment of a comparatively small sum disposed of a controversy which threatened possible loss of a large fund. Petition of Baxter, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 344.

In determining the advisability of compromise, the trustee and the court had the right to take into account the uncertainty and cost of litigation, as well as the existence of unsettled questions of liability. Petition of Stuart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 938. The court said:

"The fact (which we assume for the purposes of this opinion) that the stockholders had no effective defense against the claims of petitioners, and others (if any) similarly situated, does not, in our opinion, exclude the exercise of discretion as to compromise. Assuming that the stockholders affirmatively recognized a liability to or on account of petitioners (although that does not clearly appear), to say the least it is not shown that the stockholders were willing to pay over to the trustee the amount to which either petitioners alone, or petitioners and others similarly situated, claimed to be entitled, reserving their defense as to the remaining creditors, nor does it appear which ones of the creditors, other than petitioners, and in what amounts, were situated similarly to them. The trustee was confronted by a condition; he could not split up the estate's cause of action, and bring separate suit in the interest alone of petitioners, or in the interest only of petitioners and those believed by the trustee to be similarly situated. He must sue, if at all, for the benefit of all creditors, unless those who clearly had no rights. He had no authority to decide for himself, as against claims of other creditors to the contrary, that petitioners and others similarly situated were the only ones entitled to relief. He could not accept, in discharge pro tanto of stockholders' liability, even voluntary payments for the benefit of petitioners and those whom he thought were similarly entitled, unless it was clear that the unpaid and enforceable stockholders' subscriptions were sufficient to provide for all creditors entitled. Whether the trustee did so or not, he had the right to take into account the possibility that a recovery merely on account of the claims of petitioners might under the Bankruptcy Law be distributable among all creditors, as well as the fact that no creditors situated similarly to petitioners (if there were any) objected to the compromise, and the further fact that if at the end of the litigation recovery should be had only on account of petitioners' claims and entirely for their benefit, the expenses of litigation might reduce their net recovery to less than reasonably assured under the compromise, which was expected to realize a net aggregate (taking into account prior dividends), without litigation, three-fourths as great as by the proposed assessment, after successful litigation."

Compromise of stockholders' liability.—Where the question whether a certain liability of stockholders for unpaid stock subscriptions is a corporate asset or belongs to the creditors only depends on the laws of a state, and under the laws of that state, as settled by the decision of its Supreme Court, the liability in question belongs to the corporation, it may be enforced by the trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit of general creditors. The bankruptcy court thus has jurisdiction generally, under this section, to authorize a compromise of the stockholders' liability. Petition of Stuart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 938.

Vol. I, p. 844, sec. 29b (1). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 646.]

Evidence—Proof of trustee's appointment.—In a prosecution of a bankrupt under this section, the appointment of his trustee may be proved by the trustee's oral testimony at the trial. Sharfsin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 916.

Defenses—Failure of trustee to qualify.—It is no defense to a prosecution of a bankrupt under this section that his trustee has failed to qualify by giving bond within ten days after his appointment as required by section 50b of the Bankruptcy Act. Sharfsin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 916. The court said:

"It was shown by the evidence presented in support of the motion for a new trial on after-discovered evidence that Warner did not qualify as trustee by giving the bond required by the statute until June 10, 1919. Section 50k of the bankruptcy statute provides:

"If any referee or trustee shall fail to give bond, as herein provided and within the time limited, he shall be deemed to have declined his appointment, and such failure shall create a vacancy in his office."

"Although the trustee did not give bond, and although the statute provides that the office shall be vacant upon his failure to do so within 10 days, he nevertheless remained the de facto trustee, charged with all the official duties of the position, and entitled to enforce all the rights of a trustee against the defendant. These rights and duties could only be ended by the judicial declaration of a vacancy. The principle has been too often decided to require discussion."

Vol. I, p. 849, sec. 29b (2). First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 650.]

Evidence.—Advice of counsel.—On a prosecution for false swearing in making an affidavit subsequent to the original proof of claim evidence as to the advice of counsel in making the original proof is not admissible where there is no pretense that the affidavit was made on the advice of counsel. Lybrand v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 601.

Vol. I, p. 852, sec. 30a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 652.]

Force and effect of General Order No. 6.—Since General Order No. 6 is subordinate to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, and was not designed to effect any change in the law, it can have no bearing upon the question under section 32 as to whether a motion to transfer a case to another district is premature. In re Okmulgee Producing, etc., Co., (D. C. Del. 1920) 265 Fed. 736.

Fractions of day.—While this section fairly implies that fractions of a day are to be disregarded, yet where one day only is involved, and the rights of litigants depend on priority in time of two occurrences on that day, and the priority can be established, the courts will ascertain and regard the actual priority. There is only a presumption that they occurred at the same time. In re Ledbetter, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 893.

Transfer for convenience of parties.—"The 'greatest convenience' depends upon all the circumstances—proximity of creditors of every kind to the court, proximity to the court of bankrupts and witnesses necessary to proper administration, the location of assets, and perhaps numerous other factors that appeal to a court as in the interest of an orderly, economical, and efficient administration of the assets." In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 527. In this case the court declared:

"It may be conceded in this case that the majority in amount and number of general creditors live in Kentucky, and that the majority of stockholders live there, as do many witnesses necessary to the determination of the two claims heretofore mentioned, and yet it seems to me that all other considerations favor retention of jurisdiction in this district. In this district are practically all of the assets of the company, its official headquarters; its books and records are here, and above all there is pending in the common pleas court of Lorain county, a county in this district, an action to foreclose two mortgages, totaling over $10,000, which are alleged to be liens upon what apparently is the bulk of the company's assets—its real property, its plant. This action, having been brought prior to any bankruptcy proceeding, must be tried in the state court. The witnesses who live in Kentucky, and who are alleged to have important testimony to give in connection with these claims, will have to come to the Lorain county common pleas court in any event. * * * A transfer of these bankruptcy proceedings to the Kentucky District Court will not result in promoting their convenience."

The words "parties in interest" include not only general creditors, but prior and secured creditors as well; also the bankrupt and every other party whose pecuniary interest is affected by the proceedings. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 527.

The bankrupt is a "party in interest" within the meaning of this section and may petition the court to have the case transferred to another district. In re Okmulgee Producing, etc., Co., (D. C. Del. 1920) 265 Fed. 736. In discussing this question, the court said:

"This question may be best disposed of by considering the dominant purposes of the act, the nature of a proceeding in bankruptcy, and whether an alleged bankrupt is a party in interest, within the meaning of section 32 of the act. The dominant purposes of the act were pointed out by Sanborn, C. J., speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 3, 54 C. C. A. 387, 389, thus:

"No one can become familiar with the bankrupt law of 1898 without a settled conviction that the two dominant purposes of the framers of that act were: (1) The protection and discharge of the bankrupt; and (2) the distribution of the unexempt property which the bankrupt owned four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him, share and share alike, among his creditors. All the earlier sections of the act are devoted to the security and relief of the bankrupt, and, when the distribution of his property is reached, the provisions relating to it are all drawn from the standpoint of the insolvent, and not from that of his creditors. The rights and privileges of the bankrupt, and the equal distribution of his property, dominate every provision, while the rights, wrongs, benefits, and injuries of his creditors are always incidental, and secondary to these controlling purposes."

"The nature of a bankruptcy proceeding was well defined by Woodruff, C. J., in In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 1,677, where he said:

"At first view, it is natural and agreeable to our ordinary ideas upon this subject, to assume that a petition by an alleged creditor against his debtor, to compel a submission of his estate to the bankruptcy court, is a contest between two parties, with which a third person may not meddle. But this is by no means a complete view of the scope and effect of the proceeding. It is not a mere suit inter partes. It rather partakes of the nature of a proceeding in rem. * * *

"That the bankrupt is a party in interest in the proceeding for transfer was expressly decided by this court in In re United Button Co., 137 Fed. 668, 672, where Judge Bradford said:

"The Bankruptcy Act does not define or describe 'greatest convenience' or 'parties in interest,' as those phrases are used in section 32 and General Order 6. Both expressions are elastic and largely indefinite. It is manifestly too narrow a construction of the phrase 'parties in interest' to restrict it merely to unsecured creditors in bankruptcy. The bankrupt is not only literally but substantially a party in interest."

"The petitioning creditors cite no authority in support of their contention that the alleged bankrupt is not a competent or proper party to move for a transfer, but say that the alleged bankrupt's position until adjudication is in the nature of that of a defendant, and this proceeding, if allowed, would grant it a change of venue without the law making any provision therefor. But as the result of a transfer would be the same, by whomsoever the application therefor is made, this contention is relevant, not to the question of the right of the alleged bankrupt to apply for a transfer, but only to the power of the court to order a transfer before adjudication. I am of opinion that the motion for a transfer is not defective by reason of its having been made by the alleged bankrupt only."

Necessity of adjudication.—No adjudication of the bankrupt need be made prior to the filing of a petition under this section for the transfer of the case to another district. In re Okmulgee Producing, etc., Co., (D. C. Del. 1920) 265 Fed. 736, wherein it was said:

"The point, however, upon which the creditors mainly rely in support of their motion to dismiss the application to transfer, is that, no adjudication having been made either here or in Oklahoma, the application to transfer is premature, and that the court is without power to grant it. The transfer of cases is provided for by section 32 of the Bankruptcy Act. This section, in so doing, prescribes the conditions under which or when 'the cases shall be transferred,' how and by whom they 'shall be transferred,' and whether they 'shall be transferred.' In considering whether the application to transfer is premature, we are concerned only with the happening of those events or the existence of those facts which are conditions precedent to the perfection of the right or power to transfer. These conditions are thus specified by the statute:

"In the event petitions are filed against the same person * * * in different courts of bankruptcy each of which has jurisdiction, the cases shall be transferred. * * *

"When the language of a statute is unambiguous, and its meaning evident, it must be held to mean what it plainly expresses, and no room is left for construction." Johnson v. Southern Pac. Co., 117 Fed. 462, 465, 54 C. C. A. 508, 511.

"The terms of the foregoing statute are clear and certain, and its meaning is plain. The court is therefore without power, under the guise of construction, to require the existence of an additional event, fact, or condition not prescribed by the statute as a prerequisite to an order of transfer or to make such order in the absence of one that is required. As the statute does not make adjudication a condition precedent to transfer, the courts may not do so."

Sufficiency of petition.—See In re Okmulgee Producing, etc., Co., (D. C. Del. 1920) 265 Fed. 736.

Jurisdiction to review order of court.—A referee has no jurisdiction to review an order of a bankruptcy court granting ancillary proceedings against a nonresident partner of a bankrupt partnership. In re Flaherty, (N. D. Ia. 1920) 265 Fed. 741. In discussing the referee's jurisdiction in such a case, the court said:

"The referee, instead of requiring obedience to the order of this court authorizing ancillary proceedings in aid of the United States District Court of Montana, decided that this court had no jurisdiction to make such order. In deciding that this court, or the United States District Court of Montana had no jurisdiction to grant ancillary proceedings in this district, the referee exceeded his authority. If he felt that this court had no jurisdiction to grant ancillary proceedings, he should have simply declined to act, and so reported to this court. Neither the referee nor this court will review the judgment of the District Court of Montana adjudicating the copartnership of George L. Flaherty a bankrupt."

Determination on review.—Where the District Court reverses an order of a referee allowing a part of a claim and sends the case back to the referee for a new hearing upon affirmative defenses, the order is not final and on a second appeal to the District Court, the entire case is before it. In re Franklin Brewing Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 301.

Weight of referee's findings of fact.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Prentice, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 267 Fed. 1019; In re Ponzi, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 997.

Where the evidence is not reported the referee's findings must be accepted unless they appear on his report to be clearly wrong. In re Jaffee, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 899.

Where a finding by the referee has been approved by the District Court it will be accepted by the Circuit Court of Appeals unless justice requires a different conclusion. In re Bradley, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 784.

Determination on review—Vacating order in replevin proceedings.—Where the proceedings to review the referee's order permitting replevin against a trustee were seasonably taken, the rights of the parties are not affected by the fact that the goods have actually been replevied under the order of the referee as the replevin action will fall with the vacating of the order on which it was based. In re International Piano Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 430.

Overruling proofs of assignments to one creditor by others.—Where an interest in their claims has been assigned to one creditor by several others, the assignee agreeing to make a contest to recover assets and pay all costs if unsuccessful and if successful the creditors to pay their pro rata share of the costs, an overruling of the proofs of assignment by the referee has been held to be error, a consideration for the assignment being shown and no complaint being made by the assigning creditors. In re Kenny, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 54.

Power to surcharge trustee.—Where no exceptions have been filed to the account of the trustee or having been filed have been overruled there is said to be no power in the referee to surcharge the trustee. In re Kenny, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 269 Fed. 54.

Vol. I, p. 904, sec. 38a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 659.]

Summary jurisdiction as to claims.—The property being in possession of the bankrupt, and therefore in custodia legis, constructively, if not actually, the referee had the jurisdiction to determine in summary manner the existence or nonexistence of asserted claims to or liens upon such property. At least, no objection anywhere along the line to the jurisdiction of the referee having been made, it would seem that under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act summary jurisdiction, based upon consent of the parties involved, was proper. In re Hansen, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 268 Fed. 904.

Turning property over to trustee—Summary proceedings.—It has been held that a referee has no power to make a summary order directing one claiming property transferred to him more than four months prior to bankruptcy to pay over the value of such property to the trustee. Charles H. Brown Paint Co. v. Rockhold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 139.

Determining status of alleged secured claim.—Where a claimant has filed a verified claim before a referee on a debt claimed to be secured by a chattel mortgage it thereupon becomes the duty of the referee to pass on the question whether or not the claim is secured by a chattel mortgage as asserted. In re Hansen, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 268 Fed. 904.

Enjoining suit in state court.—While a referee, under General Order 12, subd. 3 (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 855), may not "enjoin any court or officer of the United States or of a state," he may temporarily enjoin a landlord from a suit of ejectment against a bankrupt in a state court. In re Lombardy Inn Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 266 Fed. 394. In affirming the order of the referee, the court said:

"At the time when the receiver in bankruptcy was appointed he found the bankrupt still in possession of the premises, claiming to hold under a written lease. The lessor, alleging a breach of condition, had already instituted ejectment proceedings in the state court. The learned referee temporarily enjoined the prosecution of these proceedings to give the receiver time to turn around. The premises are a hotel of some 30 rooms and a restaurant having a substantial business of its own.

"In holding that the receiver should not be immediately turned into the street, but should have an opportunity to look things over and decide whether or not to defend the ejectment case and try to retain the lease for the benefit of the estate, and in staying the ejectment proceedings for that purpose, it seems to me that the learned referee was right. Under the circumstances a high degree of diligence will be required of the receiver; and after a reasonable time has elapsed the lessor can move to vacate the restraining order."

Stenographer's fee held not to be unreasonable, see In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588.

Evasive testimony as contempt, see In re Rosenblum, (W. D. Mo. 1919) 268 Fed. 381, wherein the court declared as follows:

"The judgment of the court will be that the bankrupt is guilty of contempt, and shall be committed to the Jasper county jail for a period of six months from this date. If, after five days of such imprisonment, he wishes to have an opportunity to be again examined, the marshal will be directed to take him before the referee for re-examination, and if, upon such examination, he shall make a full and satisfactory disclosure of all the material facts in the case within his knowledge, an application may be made to the court for a discharge from imprisonment; but if he declines to submit to such examination, or if, having applied for it, he is guilty of the same evasions and duplicity which characterized the ones already had, such imprisonment shall continue for the term already stated."

Vol. I, p. 923, sec. 41b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 674.]

Violation of order against interference with assets.—Interference with the assets of the estate in violation of an order of the court against such interference does not come within the phrase "any of the things forbidden in this section," the bankrupt in such a case being answerable directly to the court in a proceeding for contempt. Biderman v. Cooper, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 683, holding in this case that the proceeding was for a civil contempt and that an order imposing imprisonment should be annulled.

Referee's powers as to approval of trustee selected.—The referee has power to refuse to approve as trustee a person elected by the creditors because he resides and does business at a place other than where the bankrupt's place of business is located. And if on any state of facts consistent with his report he has power to disapprove on the ground stated his action must be confirmed. In re Jaffee, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 899, holding that the question whether General Order 12 (89 Fed. vii, 32 C. C. A. xvi) goes beyond the act, and is invalid in so far as it gives the referee power to decide upon the competency of the person elected by the creditors as trustee, can hardly be considered in a court of first instance; it must be decided by the Supreme Court, by which the General Orders were made.

Construction.—The 1910 amendment to this section, conferring on trustees "all the rights, remedies and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings," does not give to the trustee in bankruptcy any greater or other right in the premises than any creditor of the bankrupt would have had, if bankruptcy had not intervened. This amendment to the Bankruptcy Act changed the rule, previously in force, that a trustee merely stood in the shoes of the bankrupt, and acquired only the title and rights previously vested in the bankrupt; and now, under this amendment, the trustee possesses, in addition to the title and rights of the bankrupt, also the rights, remedies, and powers which belonged, at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, to creditors of the bankrupt, and might have been exercised by them, if such bankruptcy petition had not been filed. In re Bonk, (E. D. Mich. 1920) 268 Fed. 1012, so declaring in the case of chattel mortgages not filed for record.

Rights of trustee exceed those of bankrupt.—"While the trustee is relegated to the forum of the bankrupt estate to enforce collections, he is not necessarily subject to the limitations of the bankrupt corporation, in the form of his action or the nature of the relief sought. Creditors' rights, which are enforceable under state laws, accrue to a trustee in bankruptcy, and he may maintain or defend proceedings and collect assets under circumstances where the bankrupt would not be at liberty to act." Kelley v. Abbott, (Cal. 1921) 196 Pac. 39, holding that a trustee may maintain creditors' bill.

Rights of trustee independent of state law.—The right of a trustee to sue to avoid a fraudulent conveyance by the bankrupt arises from this section and in no way depends on state statutes. Allen v. Hillman, (Mich. 1921) 183 N. W. 936.

Trustee's right to collect assets.—To the same effect as the second paragraph of the original annotation, see Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 33.

Effect of state law as to possession of property sold.—Where under the law of the state although a purchaser does not take possession of the property at once yet if in the interim of possession no execution creditor of the seller levies and the buyer thereafter takes possession, the sale takes effect as of its date, a trustee in bankruptcy of the seller subsequently appointed acquires no title to property purchased more than four months before bankruptcy of which the buyer took possession within four months before that event, since under the state law the right of the execution to levy was at an end. Zehner v. Southern Surety Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 954.

Bankrupt's interest in trust estate.—Under this section a trustee in bankruptcy has the power to subject the bankrupt's interest in a trust estate to the payment of his debts, and his right to sell all of the bankrupt's property does not preclude him from obtaining possession of such interest. Forbes v. Snow, (Mass. 1921) 131 N. E. 298.

Chattel mortgage by dealer.—Where a chattel mortgage on merchandise allowed to remain in the possession of the mortgagor for the purposes of sale is void under a state law as against the creditors of the mortgagor it is void as against his trustee in bankruptcy. General Securities Co. v. Driscoll, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 295.

Unrecorded shipbuilding contract.—Where an unrecorded shipbuilding contract provides that the title to the hulls, together with all materials purchased or intended for use in the construction of the vessel, shall be vested in and become the property of the purchaser, and the shipbuilding corporation becomes bankrupt, the title to the material not actually on the boats remains the property of the bankrupt and passes to his trustee. Gielow v. Eastern Shore Shipbuilding Corp., (D. C. Md. 1919) 265 Fed. 845.

Title superior to unenrolled judgment.—Where state statutes provide that a judgment or decree of the United States District Court, or of the state Supreme Court or chancery court or any state court of a different county shall not be a lien on defendant's property until enrolled in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county, and that a judgment shall not be a lien on any property unless it is enrolled where a judgment rendered in a federal District Court was not enrolled until after the bankruptcy of the defendant, the claim of the trustee was held to be superior under this section to the claim of the unenrolled judgment. In re Jackson Light, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 223.

Right to sue—Necessity of proof of trustee's appointment.—In an action by a bankrupt's trustee against a creditor to recover an alleged preferential payment of money, the trustee must prove his appointment in order to recover the money. Van Slyke v. Hunt- ington, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 86. The court said:

"The defendant denied in his answer every averment of the complaint not expressly admitted, and he did not admit, and there is no evidence or proof in the record, that the plaintiff was ever appointed or elected a trustee in bankruptcy of any of the assets of any of the alleged bankrupts, and the absence of both admission and proof of that alleged fact is fatal to the decree for the recovery of the $909.09 from the defendant. The plaintiff was entitled to no such recovery, unless he was the trustee of the assets of one or both of the bankrupts, who owned the $909.09 the defendant received."

Sales of property—Power to order sale without liens.—"The power to sell a bankrupt's property free from liens is not expressly conferred by the statute. But such a sale is often necessary to the due execution of the power and duty to reduce the assets to money and distribute it to creditors. This necessarily implied power of the court of bankruptcy as a court of equity has been asserted in numerous cases." Gantt v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 117.

Proceeds of property sold free from liens.—The proceeds of sale come into the hands of the bankrupt court for distribution among creditors precisely as if the mortgage had been formally foreclosed. The same incidents attach to the surplus over the lien debts. Gantt v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 117.

Title of purchaser where property sold without liens.—At a sale of the bankrupt's property without liens in pursuance of an order of court the purchaser takes the same title as if the sale were made in any other court of equity to foreclose the mortgages or to marshal the assets of an insolvent, with all lienholders and other parties in interest before the court. This title is good against the mortgagor, the mortgagees, and all their privies, including the wife of the mortgagor, who has renounced her dower. Gantt v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 117.

Time as of which trustee takes status of creditor.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see General Securities Co. v. Driscoll, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 295.

Vol. I, p. 942, sec. 47a (11). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 686.]

The bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction over the exempted property except to make the appraisal and set it apart to the bankrupt. In re Gunzberger, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 673.

Effect of setting apart homestead.—When a bankrupt claims his homestead and has it set apart, it is excluded from the bankruptcy proceedings and the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court as completely as if it had never been placed upon the bankrupt's schedules, and thereafter a creditor with a lawful special or general waiver of the exemption, or against whom the exemption does not apply, would have to resort to the state courts for its enforcement. Schexnaider v. Fontenot, (1920) 147 La. 467, 85 So. 207.

Mortgage on exempt land.—A discharge in bankruptcy does not destroy a mortgage lien upon the bankrupt's real property subject to exemption, but merely his personal liability. Schexnaider v. Fontenot, (1920) 147 La. 467, 85 So. 207.

Vol. I, p. 950, sec. 48d. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 690.]

Receiver's fees.—The court is limited by section 72 of this act to an allowance to the receiver not in excess of that permitted by this section. In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588.

The court has no jurisdiction to confirm a composition which allows a receiver an amount in excess of that specified in this section, although the statutory allowance may be grossly inadequate. In re Gross, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 741.

Vol. I, p. 956, sec. 51a (2). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 695.]

Necessity of paying filing fee.—A bankrupt who on filing his voluntary petition is able to pay his attorney and who is earning money and by proper saving and conduct can accumulate or procure money with which to pay the filing fee will not be permitted to maintain the proceedings without paying such fee. In re Latham, (N. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 538.

Vol. I, p. 960, sec. 55f. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 698.]

Necessity of final meeting.—To same effect as original annotation, see Levy v. Schorr, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 207.

Necessity and manner of proving claim.—The "statement under oath" referred to in this section "is at once the claimant's pleading and his evidence, and makes for him a prima facie case." In re Welborne, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 385.

Amendment of proofs—Supplementing proofs by oral testimony.—Where the proof of claim required by this section is defective, the referee may permit the claimant to supplement the defects of the claim by oral testimony, and such testimony will be regarded as written into the claim and as constituting part of it. In re Welborne, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 385.

Who may prove claims—An executor.—One of two executors may sign and verify a claim on behalf of the estate. In re Schaffner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 977. The court said:

"We do not agree with the District Judge that the proof of claim must be signed by both executors. We think that one may sign and verify a claim on behalf of the estate. The whole bankruptcy proceeding constitutes one suit, and a proof of claim is not an action at law or in equity, but is a demand against a fund in possession of the court for distribution, just like a proceeding to limit the liability of a vessel owner or to wind up a corporation in equity. Strict rules of pleading are not necessary or applicable. We can see no objection to one executor signing and filing a proof of claim upon behalf of the estate, just as section 1 of the General Order permits one partner to do for the firm; both having the right to collect or release a debt or dispose of assets of the estate or the firm. Geyer v. Snyder, 140 N. Y. 394, 35 N. E. 784. In such exceptional cases as this great mischief might ensue, if the view of the District Judge were enforced. One executor, by refusing to sign, might prevent a proof of claim ever being filed, and important controversies ever determined. It is suggested that by proceedings in the probate court the letters of such an executor might be revoked; but this would be a long proceeding, which might subject the bankruptcy court to the control of the probate court, as, for example, if that court refused to discharge the executor."

Purchaser of bankrupt's stock of goods.—Where a purchaser of the stock of goods of the bankrupt acted in good faith and the sale was annulled solely on the ground that it was made in violation of the Bulk Sales Law of the state, it has been held that the purchaser should be subrogated as a claimant to the rights of those creditors whose debts were paid out of the purchase money by the bankrupt and those of which payment was assumed by the purchaser and the estate released from payment of the same. In re Fox, (D. C. Kan. 1920) 266 Fed. 134. The court said:

"Again, the order of the referee, as shown by his certificate, is based in part on the thought the creditors who received payment from the cash paid by claimants to bankrupt, and the creditors of bankrupt whose debts were assumed by claimants, by reason of the transaction obtained payment in full, while those not so satisfied will receive only a portion of their claims. Hence, it is contended, those creditors who obtained payments in full from the bankrupt in this manner received fraudulent and void preferences. If this position be correct, the same, however, might be said of the individual amounts of claimants standing now allowed under the order of the referee.

"But the fact is there is no proof found in the record claimants knew or had reasonable cause to believe the amount they were paying as purchase price to the bankrupt was not sufficient to pay and discharge all of his indebtedness. Without such knowledge or notice on the part of claimants, no fraud inhered in the transaction so far as they were concerned, and, as the sale has now been annulled on another ground, the property of the estate in bankruptcy or its value has been placed in the hands of the trustee for the benefit of creditors, I fail to see on this head any reason for not allowing the claimants to take that place in the case, through subrogation, such creditors would have assumed, had they not been paid and satisfied out of the purchase price paid by claimants."

Effect of proving claims—Effect on other remedies.—Proof of a claim on notes against the estate in bankruptcy of the maker does not operate as an estoppel against an action by the holder of such notes against his attorney, as agent, for the conversion of the holder's funds in the purchase of the notes. Parkerson v. Borst, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 761.

Vol. I, p. 967, sec. 57c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 703.]

Power of referee.—A referee has no right to refuse to file a claim on the ground of its informality. In re Drexel Hill Motor Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 673.

Vol. I, p. 967, sec. 57d. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 703.]

Allowance of claims—Effect of formal proof.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Welborne, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 385.

Disallowance with reservation.—In Keith v. Kilmer, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 643, it was declared in the case of the disallowance of the claim of a stockholder with reservation:

"The claim should have been disallowed without reservation. If, to avoid possible future doubt, it be desirable to incorporate in the memorandum of decision a statement to the effect that such disallowance is without prejudice to any rights claimant may hereafter, by proper proceedings, seek to establish against any of the stockholders of the bankrupt corporation, or against any assets of such corporation not distributed by the trustee in bankruptcy to the creditors in the bankruptcy proceedings, there could be no objection to such limiting and guarding statement."

Claims for debts of third persons.—Where a bankrupt is defrauded of a stock of goods, and the person perpetrating the fraud conducts a business in his own name with such goods and incurs debts, the bankrupt's estate is not liable therefor. Van Slyke v. Huntington, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 86.

Vol. I, p. 972, sec. 57g. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 706.]

Surrender essential.—When a creditor voluntarily surrenders a preference, he may prove his claim, whether or not he was deliberately attempting to obtain a preference; also, when he is compelled to surrender his preference, he may prove his debt, without reference to whether or not he had knowledge of just what he was doing when the preference was created. In re Franklin Brewing Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 301.

Independent transactions.—It is in general the rule that a creditor holding two debts at the same time, on one of which he has received a preference, may not prove on the other without surrendering the preference on the one. In re Dix, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 1016, wherein the court further said:

"If a bankrupt gives a voidable preference of the single debt which he owes to a creditor, and actually extinguishes it, he need not surrender the preference as a condition of proving a debt subsequently arising; but if the preference leave the old debt in part surviving, so that upon incurring the new debt he is still indebted upon the old, he must surrender his preference upon the old in order to prove upon the new. In short, it is only when the debt on which he seeks to prove came into existence after the extinction of the debt on which the bankrupt has made a preferential payment that he may prove without surrendering his preference on the other debt."

Laches.—A bankrupt's trustee is not barred by laches because of the fact that he does not file his petition under this section to have a creditor's claim expunged until four and one-half months after the creditor has filed his claim. In re Star Spring Bed Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 133.

Vol. I, p. 976, sec. 57h. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 709.]

Determination of value of securities by referee.—In Dodge Sales, etc., Co. v. Pittston First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 364, the Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the findings of the District Court confirming the report of a referee as to the value of second mortgage bonds of the bankrupt company held as collateral security by certain creditors.

Vol. I, p. 982, sec. 57n. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 712.]

Time for proving claims—Extension of time for filing claims.—In In re Malkan, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 867, an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the debtor on December 24, 1918, and on January 7, 1919, he was adjudicated a bankrupt. Thereafter, upon the written consent of the majority of creditors, and after due notice to all other creditors, an application was made for an order vacating the adjudication and the order appointing the receiver and dismissing the petition in bankruptcy. Only one creditor made objection, and an order was granted April 3, 1919, vacating the adjudication and dismissing the bankruptcy proceedings.

Upon appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals the order of April 3, 1919, was vacated, and on November 29, 1919, an order was filed in the District Court, pursuant to the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals vacating the order of April 3, 1919, and reinstating the receiver, and reinstating the order of the appointment of the receiver, and reinstating the order of adjudication in bankruptcy of January 7, 1919. On December 24, 1919, the District Court granted an order allowing creditors to file their claims within a period of one year from November 29, 1919. One of the creditors then moved to vacate the order of December 24, 1919, on the ground "that the said order was improvidently granted, and that the court was without power and jurisdiction to grant the relief purporting to be granted by the said order." In denying the motion to vacate such order, the court said:

"Briefly stated, the point is this: That the year provided under section 57n of the Bankruptcy Act expired before the order sought to be vacated was made, and hence the court was without power to make the order. Section 57n reads as follows:

"Claims shall not be proved against a bankrupt estate subsequent to one year after the adjudication; or if they are liquidated by litigation and the final judgment therein is rendered within thirty days before or after the expiration of such time, and then within sixty days after the rendition of such judgment."

"Subdivision 2 of section 1 reads as follows:

"'Adjudication' shall mean the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant, in a bankruptcy proceeding, is a bankrupt, or, if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such decree is finally confirmed."

"The meaning of the word 'confirmed,' as distinguished from 'affirmed,' is discussed in Black on Bankruptcy, p. 1129; Re Lee, (D. C.) 171 Fed. 266.

"In the case at bar the decree of adjudication was not directly appealed, but a proceeding was had which in every practical sense was equivalent to an appeal. By virtue of the order made April 3, 1919, the adjudication was vacated. From April 3, 1919, to November 29, 1919, there was no officer with whom a creditor could file his claim. See General Orders XX and XXI; J. B. Orcutt

Co. v. Green, 204 U. S. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. 195, 51 L. ed. 390. See, also, Collier on Bankruptcy, p. 818 et seq. There was neither a referee, a receiver, nor a trustee; thus there was a period of nearly eight months when all proceedings in bankruptcy and the consequent administration of this estate were not 'suspended,' but were in an absolutely blank state. There was nothing before the District Court, not an estate, not a referee, not a receiver, not a trustee, not a creditor—indeed, nothing.

"Section 57n was enacted for purely administrative purposes, to the end that estates should be promptly administered; but it contemplated that creditors should have a full year within which to file their claims. If the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals had not come down until after January 7, 1920, we might have had the situation of no claims whatever having been filed, in which event, if the moving creditor herein is right, the bankrupt would have escaped without his estate being subject to the payment of any of his debts—reductio ad absurdum. Here, if the motion is granted, this creditor may receive 100 cents on the dollar, and laymen creditors, relying on the court proceedings, will be barred from participating in the dividends on claims. No such result will be tolerated, if it can possibly be avoided.

"Applying the fundamental principle of gathering the intent of a statute, when all its relevant provisions are read, I am satisfied that the year, under section 57n, will not expire until a year from November 29, 1919. If the situation is one of casus omissus, then surely a court of bankruptcy (which in many respects is a court of equity) will hold that the year began November 29, 1919, or, in any event, that the time from April 3, 1919, to November 29, 1919, should be deducted. From April 3, 1919, until November 29, 1919, was 241 days; 241 days after January 7, 1920 (as I figure it), will be September 4, 1920. By way of extra caution it would be well to notify creditors that they must file their claims by that date.

"There is another point, not raised by counsel, which may be worth considering. This creditor stood idly by until March 31, 1920 (the date of his motion papers), long after January 7, 1920. He thereby lulled the receiver and the creditors into reliance upon the order of December 24, 1919. Had he moved seasonably, the claims could have been filed before January 7, 1920. He should now be estopped, and not allowed to advance the contention that the order was void. I am fully aware of the proposition that a void order cannot be made valid, however hard the circumstances; but, if no one attacks the order, it will stand. I conclude, therefore, as an additional ground, that the creditor, because of his delay beyond January 7, 1920, will not be heard to attack the order. On the other hand, it may be said that the order of December 24, 1919, was superfluous. If by operation of law the time will not expire until a year from November 29, 1919, or, in any event, until September 4, 1920, an order extending the time is not necessary. If, by operation of law, the time expired January 7, 1920, the order cannot extend it. In order, however, to allow the question to be reviewed promptly, if desired, the order will stand."

Amendment after one year period.—An objection that an amended proof of claim was allowed to be filed more than a year after adjudication has been declared to be without merit. In re Schaffner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 977.

Where the paper presented contained the substance of the formal proof of a claim it is sufficient to constitute the basis of an amended claim after the expiration of the year. In re Drexel Hill Motor Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 673.

Right to participate in composition fund.—This section, denying to unproven claims participation in the distribution of a bankruptcy estate fund, does not deny to any creditor the right to participate in a composition fund being distributed under section 12. In re Englander's (E. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 1012.

Vol. I, p. 987, sec. 58a (7). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 716.]

Necessity of notice.—Although it is said that it is not quite clear whether the provision in this section or in General Order in Bankruptcy No. 28, as to notice applies to a summary order giving authority to a trustee to compromise a claim, yet it has been held that even if it does, such an order is not subject to attack for want of notice where all steps were taken in good faith by the parties, without fraud on their parts, that counsel for the trustee had full knowledge of the facts relating to the transaction and that the complaining creditors in person or by counsel had actual knowledge of it and made no objection until several years after. Petition of Baxter, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 344.

Notice essential.—"A discharge is a benefit conferred by the statute on an insolvent debtor. One of the conditions precedent to the enjoyment of this benefit, prescribed by section 58 of the statute, is that creditors should have 30 days' notice, so that they may have an opportunity to present objections to the discharge. If this condition is not complied with, the order of discharge is invalid, and must be so declared. The rights of creditors were involved in the hearing on the petition for discharge, and they cannot be bound without an opportunity to be heard. . . . It is, we think, elementary that one who claims the benefit of a statute must see that the conditions precedent to awarding the benefit have been complied with. As between the bankrupt and his creditors, it is the duty of the bankrupt, and not of his creditors, to see that they have notice of the application for discharge." Ellison v. Weintrob, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 466.

Waiver of right to notice.—After the order of discharge is made the creditors may waive their rights by laches or be estopped from asserting them. Ellison v. Weintrob, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 466.

Opposing petition.—In Regal Cleaners, etc., v. Merlis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 915, it was said as to the right of the president of a corporation to oppose a petition in bankruptcy filed by its directors:

"If there exists a defense to this petition, while ordinarily it is beyond the authority conferred upon a president of a corporation to interpose an answer, still circumstances may exist which, in equity, would require his filing an answer, although he has not the authority of a resolution of the board of directors of his corporation. If the company is solvent, for the president not to prevent such a result might cause irreparable injury, or perhaps total failure of justice to the stockholders. Under these circumstances, we think the president should, in the due performance of the duties of his office, verify and file an answer as such officer. Ordinarily he must make an earnest effort with the managing body of the corporation, the directors, to induce remedial action on their part, and this must be made apparent to the court. If he fails with the directors, he may then proceed. If he does not make request of the directors, he may show that a request would be futile. Such appears from the facts here. There is no showing that the directors have been requested and have refused, but it does expressly appear that two of the four directors are in favor of the adjudication in bankruptcy. Thus the vote is a tie. Under these circumstances, to apply to the directors for instructions would be futile. We think that the answer should be permitted to stand, and the issues as to the questions involved tried."

A voluntary petition for adjudication of a corporation—Directors of corporation.—The board of directors of a corporation may authorize voluntary bankruptcy proceedings. In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 24.

The directors of a corporation may vote to admit its insolvency, even though they be creditors of the corporation, if they do so in good faith. Regal Cleaners, etc., v. Merlis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 915.

A petition may be filed by a director who is the retained attorney for the corporation where his action is ratified by a majority of the stockholders and by the only directors who are entitled to vote on the question. In re People's Warehouse Co., (S. D. Miss. 1921) 273 Fed. 611.

"Whether the directors of a corporation, without authority from the stockholders, have power to file a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, depends upon the laws of the state in which the corporation was organized, in the absence of restrictive provisions in its charter. . . . According to the trend of authority, in the absence of restrictive provisions in either statute or charter, a board of directors may authorize the filing of a petition in voluntary bankruptcy." In re De Camp Glass Casket Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 558.

Officer of corporation.—There is no presumption of authority in an officer of a corporation to make and file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy and he may not do so without the consent of the directors. Regal Cleaners, etc., v. Merlis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 915.

Filing of petition as incumbering corporation's property.—Regarding the question as to whether the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy by the directors of a corporation constituted an incumbering of its property within the meaning of a state statute, the court, in Fitts v. Custer Slide Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 260 Fed. 864, said:

"Counsel for petitioner claims that the laws of Colorado expressly provide that the directors of a corporation have no power without the consent of the stockholders to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Section 865, Rev. Stat. of Colo., as amended by Session Laws of 1915, page 175, is cited in support of this contention. This statute reads as follows:

"The board of directors or trustees of a mining or manufacturing corporation shall not have power to incumber the mines or plant of such corporation, or the principal machinery incident to the production from such mine or plant until the question shall have been submitted at a proper and legal meeting of the stockholders and a majority of all the shares of stock shall have been voted in favor of such proposition; and any mortgaging or incumbering of such property, without such consent shall be absolutely void."

"In order to make this statute applicable the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy must be an 'incumbering' of the property of the bankrupt. This court in Westerlund v. Black Bear Mining Co., 203 Fed. 599, 121 C. C. A. 627, construed this statute and expressly defined what the words

'incumber' and 'incumbering' used in the statute mean. In the case cited it was said:

"The words 'incumber' and 'incumbering,' when used in reference to property and its title, are words of this character, and the known legal meaning of these words in their popular sense, in the sense that would be attributed to them by conveyancers, lawyers, and judges, the persons most conversant with them, included when this statute was enacted, and still includes, not only mortgages, deeds of trust, and pledges for the payment of money, but every right or interest in the land which may subsist in third persons to the diminution of the value of the land or its title, but consistent with the passing of the fee by the conveyance of the owner."

"And again on page 610 of 203 Fed., on page 636 of 121 C. C. A., in the same opinion, it is said:

"When this statute was enacted, the popular sense, the ordinary significance, and the known legal meaning of the words 'incumber' and 'incumbering,' when used with reference to property or its title, included every right or interest in land which may subsist in third persons to the diminution of the value of the land, or its title, but consistent with the passing of the fee by the conveyance of the owner."

"This language is fully supported by a number of cases cited in the opinion. The statute in question was passed in 1895, and the amendment of 1915 simply added the proviso that a lease for a period of not exceeding five years should not be deemed an incumbering of property. At the time the statute was passed there was no bankruptcy law, so that it cannot be claimed that the Legislature of Colorado had the provisions of that bankruptcy law in mind. We do not believe that the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy can reasonably be held to be an incumbering of property. The voluntary petition of a person or corporation to be adjudged a bankrupt results, of course, in an adjudication in bankruptcy; but this adjudication in and of itself, without any assignment, transfer, or other act of the bankrupt, operates to divest him of all title and to vest it in the trustee of his creditors. Remington on Bankruptcy, § 1112; Robertson v. Howard, 229 U. S. 254, 33 Sup. 854, 57 L. ed. 1174.

"The words 'incumber' and 'incumbering' in the statute, as this court said, must be construed in accordance with their popular sense, a sense that would be attributed to them by conveyancers, lawyers, and judges, the persons most conversant with them. Given their popular meaning, these words do not apply to an instrument or proceeding which has the effect to convey the whole estate absolutely. Such a conveyance is not an incumbrance."

Beneficiary under will of person living.—The fact that a person files a petition in bankruptcy in order to prevent his creditors from satisfying their debts out of a legacy which he expects to receive is held to be no reason for denying him the right to avail himself of the benefits of this act. Elberton Bank v. Swift (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 305. In this case a petition by a creditor to set aside an adjudication of bankruptcy alleged that a note which the creditor held was dated April 16, 1917, and due December 1, 1917; that at the time the bankrupt filed his petition his mother was 98 years old and at the point of death, and that she actually died shortly thereafter; that the bankrupt knew at the time of filing his petition in bankruptcy that by his mother's will he would be left a legacy of about $20,000; that he knew the will could never be changed, because, after his mother had made it, a guardian of her property had been appointed by the ordinary's court, on the ground of her imbecility from old age; that the bankrupt's debts, other than to the bank, were insignificant; and that according to his schedule of assets the only property he had was a watch and wearing apparel worth less than $100.

- I. Who may file petition in involuntary bankruptcy.
- II. Form, averments and amendments of petition.

I. WHO MAY FILE PETITION IN INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY (p. 990)

Creditors having provable claims.—It has been held that a seller of rings was not a creditor under this section where he sold rings under an agreement to repair any that were broken and rings which were sent back to him for repair were never repaired or returned, notwithstanding repeated requests, and the buyer was obliged to purchase others to replace them in excess of the agreed price of those returned for repair, and the purchaser had paid a sum to the seller in excess of the value of the rings retained. Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 836.

Attachment creditor.—A creditor, who in good faith obtains an attachment against a debtor's property within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, may join in the petition to have the debtor adjudicated an involuntary bankrupt; and this, although the attachment has not been formally released. In re Automatic Typewriter, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 1, wherein the court said:

"If an adjudication be had here, the effect would be a dissolution of the attachment obtained, and therefore there would be no preference to the petitioning creditor. It is thus obvious that the fact that an attachment was obtained here, and was not formally vacated by an order of the court at the time of the filing of the petition, did not give a preference, and did not incapacitate the petitioner from filing the petition. The advantage, if any were gained by the writ of attachment, cannot avail the petitioner in the bankruptcy court, and it therefore cannot defeat the right of a creditor having a provable claim of the requisite nature and amount to file a petition in involuntary bankruptcy.

"We find nothing in the Bankruptcy Act itself which forbids a creditor filing a petition under similar circumstances. While the attachment obtained by the respondent remains unvacated of record, this respondent could not secure any advantage by that fact. When the order is entered vacating the attachment, it will be effective as of the date of decision of the court below vacating the same. This was a date before the bankruptcy. Furthermore, the preferred creditor who files a claim may surrender his preference at any time before the claim is allowed. This he need not do before the filing of the claim. We think the court below committed no error in refusing to dismiss the petition in bankruptcy because of this."

Three provable claims jurisdictional.—"The law is now settled beyond dispute that the existence of three provable claims held by three petitioners, respectively, of the alleged bankrupt and, if challenged by pleading, plenary proof thereof is jurisdictional and indispensable to the maintenance of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy." Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 836.

Secured creditors.—This section refers to the actual value of securities held by creditor. Hence, an involuntary petition which alleges that two of the petitioning creditors hold security in the form of maritime liens on vessels of the bankrupt, which are valueless because the vessels have left the court's jurisdiction, is sufficient on demurrer as to the qualifications of such petitioning creditors under this section. In re Triangle Steamship Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 300.

II. FORM, AVERMENTS, AND AMENDMENTS OF PETITION (p. 994)

Averment of commission of act of bankruptcy—Sufficiency of averment.—A petition which states that the alleged bankrupt, with intent to prefer, paid $500,000 on "indebtedness" to a certain named creditor and on other indebtedness to other creditors at some time after a specified date, is not sufficiently specific. In re Triangle Steamship Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 300, wherein it was said:

"The second objection is more serious. In re Rosenblatt, 193 Fed. 638, 113 C. C. A. 506, turned upon a petition which simply copied the language of the statute without specification of any sort whatever. This petition states that the alleged bankrupt, with intent to prefer, paid $500,000 upon 'indebtedness' to the Foreign Trade Banking Corporation, a creditor, and upon other indebtedness to other creditors. Probably the allegation that part of the sum was paid to 'other creditors' is invalid under the cases, and, if so, it must be accepted that the amount of the payment to the Foreign Trade Banking Corporation is left uncertain. The allegation amounts to this: That the alleged bankrupt, at some time after August 10, 1919, with intent to prefer, paid some part of the sum of $500,000 to the Foreign Trade Banking Corporation upon its existing indebtedness. As matter of first impression I own that I should have thought this enough. The omissions are only of the exact dates and the exact amounts of the payments made and that I should think could be supplied by a bill of particulars and full justice be done. The allegations as to 'other creditors' might be treated as surplusage. However, I cannot distinguish the case at bar from In re Mason-Seaman Transportation Co., (D. C.) 235 Fed. 974, decided by Judge Manton while District Judge, where the allegations were certainly as specific as those here, or from In re Blumberg, (D. C.) 133 Fed. 845, which was an almost exactly similar case. In re Hallin, (D. C.) 199 Fed. 807, may be distinguished, as well as In re Pure Milk Co., (D. C.) 154 Fed. 682, and In re Nelson (D. C.) 98 Fed. 76. These are like In re Rosenblatt, supra, and do not in my judgment control. It seems to me a harsh rule that requires petitioning creditors, who in the nature of things cannot usually be well informed of the alleged bankrupt's dealings, to specify with exactness the amounts and the times of any preferential payments they allege, and it is especially harsh if it results in preventing any amendment, as was held in In re Pure Milk Co., supra. Through a trifling omission in pleading, which perhaps the pleader had no information to supply, a creditor like the demurrant may be enabled to prevent any inquiry into the good faith of the payment to him.

"However, in the face of In re Pure Milk Co., supra, it is at least an open question whether, if an amendment is necessary which shall specify more particularly the acts of bankruptcy, it would not be regarded as setting up new acts of bankruptcy, and if it were so regarded, then it is settled that the period of four months dates from the amendment. If this be the rule in cases of inadequate specification, then if I overrule this demurrer, and my decision is wrong, it will be too late for the petitioning creditors to allege preferences occurring between, say, November 20th and December 11th, when the petition was filed. There may be such, and if I sustain the demurrer the petitioning creditors may still avail themselves of those preferences.

"Moreover if I am wrong in sustaining the demurrer no harm has been done, because, if there are preferences between November 20th and December 11th, they can now be pleaded. If on the other hand, there are no such preferences, the petitioning creditors may refuse to amend, and may test this order on appeal; or, if they wish, they may amend and show only preferences more than four months before the amendment. Thereupon the question may be raised on demurrer of the validity of the new petition, and on that appeal may be raised the correctness of my order sustaining this demurrer because the amendment cannot be heard without the original petition.

"Under such circumstances I think I ought to follow In re Mason-Seaman Transportation Co., supra, and In re Blumberg, supra, especially as it is not our general custom, except in clear cases, to disregard an earlier decision in the Southern district."

Allegation as to giving preference—In general.—It is a rule that the allegation of the commission of an act of bankruptcy should state the specific facts relied on, with time, place and circumstances, so that the alleged bankrupt may be apprised of what he is required to answer, and that, when the act was an alleged preferential payment, the allegation must show that thereby one creditor was enabled "to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class." In re Standard Aero Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 779.

Sufficiency.—An allegation of an act of bankruptcy by the making of a preferred payment may be sufficient although the facts stated are meager. In re Standard Aero Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 779, wherein the court declared: "That the petitioner's allegation of the act of bankruptcy stated the circumstances with sufficient particularity to apprise the corporation of what it was called upon to meet, as later proved by the event, and showed that, because of the preference, the petitioner will suffer in the payment of his claim—if his claim is provable in bankruptcy."

Vol. I, p. 1001, sec. 59f. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 727.]

Opposing petition.—Debtors are not entitled to oppose an involuntary petition. In re Tidewater Coal Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 1008.

Intervention as discretionary with bankruptcy court—Review on petition to revise.

—The question as to whether a creditor shall be allowed to intervene in a bankruptcy proceeding is not the subject of trial upon the merits but is a matter determinable upon the face of the petition for leave to intervene and is within the discretion of the bankruptcy court. Hence, a petition to revise an order of the bankruptcy court dismissing the petition, in intervention of a creditor, shall be denied where it appears that the court was guilty of no abuse of discretion. Fitts v. Custer Slide Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 864.

- I. Creation of preferences.
- II. Constituent elements.

I. CREATION OF PREFERENCES (p. 1005)

Preference created by transfer.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Dix, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 1016; In re Puget Sound Engineering Co., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 353; Gray v. Tantleff, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 524.

The transfer of corporate property, in payment of an antecedent debt, within four months of bankruptcy may be avoided by the trustee where the transferee had reasonable ground to believe that the transfer constituted a preference. Bronaugh v. Evans, (1920) 204 Ala. 153, 85 So. 556.

Applicability of state statute.—A statute which does not contemplate the avoidance of a preferential transfer, but an affirmation of it, so as to make it inure to all creditors alike, is inapplicable on the bankruptcy of the debtor since under the Bankruptcy Act the trustee is only empowered to avoid transfers as for fraud or as preferences. In re Grocers' Baking Co., (N. D. Ala. 1920) 266 Fed. 900.

Conditional sale—Bankrupt's own property transferred.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Bennett, (W. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 533, holding that the surrender of the goods sought to be reclaimed would not effect an unlawful preference.

Preference created by payment—Retention of money by joint adventurer.—Where a person engaged in a joint adventure with a bankrupt retains money accruing from a sale of property in which they are jointly interested, such retention does not constitute a preferential payment. Nestor v. Joseph, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 246.

Payments made on open accounts and in due course of business.—Payments on a running account, where new sales succeed payments, and the net result is to increase the value of the estate, do not constitute preferential transfers under this section. In re Grocers' Baking Co., (N. D. Ala. 1920) 266 Fed. 900.

Payments by receiver in proceedings in state court.—Where one of the members of a partnership brought suit in the state court for the dissolution of the partnership on the ground that it was in such financial straits as not to be able to continue in business and a receiver was thereupon appointed the court said on the question of the payment of a dividend in such proceedings being a preference:

"It appears that the bankrupts, R. M. Smith & Co., (1) while insolvent, (2) within four months prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy, (3) in a suit in the state court which they instituted and controlled, (4) procured payment to the other creditors of a dividend of 12½ per cent. out of the partnership assets then in the hands of the receiver, and (5) that the necessary result or such payment was to give to them a percentage of their respective claims which appellant has not received on the claim subsequently established by him. Thus all the elements of a voidable preference are present, and the transaction must be regarded as of that character. The facts are somewhat novel, it is true; but the question presented seems to us not doubtful, either as a matter of first impressions or as viewed in the light of decisions in analogous cases . . .

"On the facts of record, which carry their own comment, it must be held that appellant is entitled to be placed on an equality with creditors who received the 12½ per cent.; and it is therefore the duty of the bankruptcy court, as a court of equity, to direct such payment to him from the funds now held by the trustee, and which are understood to be ample for that purpose, as will equalize the 12½ per cent. paid to them, the remainder to be divided pro rata among all the creditors. It appears, however, that those who received the 12½ per cent. credited it on their respective claims, and proved in bankruptcy, if they proved at all, only for the balance. It results that the payments afterwards made to them by the trustee were not 15 per cent. of their original claims, but of only seven-eighths thereof, whereas appellant has had 15 per cent. of the full amount allowed him, and this should be taken into account in equalizing the further dividends. In other words, the funds in hand should be so distributed as to give to the creditors who got the 12½ per cent., and proved the balance in bankruptcy, the same aggregate percentage of their original claims as appellant gets in the aggregate on his claim." Farnsworth v. Union Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 92.

Attorney's fees.—Where an attorney retains as a fee a portion of a fund which he has recovered for the bankrupt, such fee may not be recovered by the bankrupt's trustee as a preference. Van Slyke v. Huntington, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 86.

Banking transactions—Preferential payment to bank.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Cross, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 769.

Where in an action by the trustee of a bankrupt against a bank it appeared that the defendant complained to the bankrupt of the practice of depositing checks and drawing against them before they were collected, thus practically compelling the defendant to use its cash reserves to make its payments to the clearing house, thereby requiring it to keep a larger reserve, and subjecting it to annoyance, trouble, and risk, and the bankrupt thereupon agreed to compensate the defendant by paying it sums of money based upon the advances made and the time during which it was out the use of the moneys advanced, it was held that the payments so made were not preferences. Snipes v. Mutual Trust Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 318.

The part payment of a note before maturity and within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the maker, does not constitute a preference where it appears that the bank had no knowledge of his affairs nor of any facts giving it reasonable cause to believe that the payment would effect a preference. Cregg v. Puritan Trust Co., (Mass. 1921) 129 N. E. 428. The court said:

"The note upon which a partial payment was made by the bankrupt had been running from November 26, 1910. It was originally for $10,000, and had been renewed every six months, the last renewal being on November 29, 1915. The debt of the original note reduced by successive payments was $6,500 on November 29, 1915, and the renewal note of that date called for the payment of that sum. April 16, 1916, the bankrupt made the payment in question at the note window of the defendant bank. He made no explanation to the defendant whatever of the payment on account before the maturity of the note, did not know whom he saw at the window, and did not make any statement when the rest of the note would be paid.

"The bankrupt lived and carried on business in Lawrence while the defendant bank was located and carried on its business in Boston. There was evidence that a fire had occurred in the bankrupt's place of business on February 28, 1916; that on April 11, 1916, he was behind in his bills, was receiving demands from creditors for payments which were not made; that drafts of considerable size had been made on him through his bank, the Merchants' Trust Company at Lawrence, Mass.; that they were unpaid; that his account at the Merchants' Trust Company had been transferred to the name of his father as his agent; that his assets before the payment on the note to the defendant on April 11, 1916, were worth in stock and trade $750 and $5,000 in cash; and that his liabilities were $11,000. There was no evidence that the defendant had knowledge of the fire, of the assets and liabilities of the bankrupt or of any of the foregoing facts other than attendant upon the receipt of the payment. It also was in evidence that the payment to the defendant was made with a check signed by the agent of the bankrupt drawn on the Merchants' Trust Company.

"The fact that the note was partially paid before it was due, the fact that the payment on account was larger than the sum of all other previous partial payments, and the fact that the payment was made with a check of an agent, taken together might reasonably have aroused suspicion of the motive which influenced the bankrupt to make the payment, but in the opinion of the court falls short of their probative weight in evidence which would warrant a finding that the defendant had reasonable cause to believe the bankrupt was insolvent when the payment on the note was made."

II. CONSTITUENT ELEMENTS (p. 1014)

Preference must be given to creditor.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Benjamin v. Buell, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 792.

Greater percentage.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 133, holding an assignment of accounts which had such effect to be preferential.

Necessity of diminishing estate.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 133; In re Grocers' Baking Co., (N. D. Ala. 1920) 266 Fed. 900.

Transfer for present consideration.—If a note or money is turned over as a present consideration for goods then purchased and delivered, or if future credit is secured by reason of that payment, there would be no unlawful preference, unless good faith was lacking on the part of the creditor, even though he had reason to know that the bankrupt was in perilous financial condition. Gray v. Tantleff, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 524.

Where a bankrupt paid for stocks and bonds delivered to him a few hours before the filing of his petition it was in fact a cash transaction in return for an adequate consideration, and did not constitute a preference within the meaning of this section. In re Perpall, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 466, wherein it was said:

"The Bankruptcy Act does not provide that any and all transfers made by the bankrupt subsequent to the filing of the petition and prior to the adjudication are absolutely void. The act provides that transfers may be voided by the trustee if they constitute a preference, and a preference is described by the act. It is only preferential transfers which are voidable. Preference implies paying or securing a pre-existing debt of a person preferred. Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. 438, 37 S. Ct. 130, 61 L. ed. 419. Where one gives an insolvent person value for a transfer of property, where he makes an exchange of property, there is no preference. Ernst v. Bank, 201 Fed. 664, 120 C. C. A. 92.

"Payment by the bankrupt on the day of the filing of the petition was, in effect, a cash transaction, and was in return for an adequate consideration received by the bankrupt at the time. The delivery of the stock and the receipt of the check on the same day should be regarded as one transaction. The fact that a few hours transpired, and they could not be said to be literally contemporaneously made, was because of the nature of the business transacted and the practice that prevailed as the custom of this business."

Vol. I, p. 1026, sec. 60b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 739.]

I. Elements of voidability.

II. Recovery of voidable preferences.

I. ELEMENTS OF VOIDABILITY (p. 1026)

Reasonable cause to believe transaction would effect preference.—Where the transaction is an ordinary one, under the circumstances as they appear and without the attendance of features that excite suspicion it has been held that a trustee cannot recover a payment as a preferential one under this section, the creditor not having reasonable cause to believe that the payment would effect a preference. Lake Benton First Nat. Bank v. Galbraith, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 687.

Where a creditor who knows the debtor to be for the moment insolvent in the sense of the statute, yet honestly supposes that some of his assets, worthless for the moment, will, if he be allowed to continue, realize enough to pay his debts in full, takes security from the debtor, such act does not effect a preference within the meaning of this section. Kennard v. Behrer, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 661.

As including debtor's insolvency.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120.

Effect of master's report.—As to the effect of a master's report on knowledge or reasonable cause to believe it is said that although a "master's report under an ordinary reference has not the binding force of a jury's verdict, is simply advisory to the chancellor, and is only presumptively correct, yet when the chancellor after a full hearing on exceptions has confirmed the report, and on appeal we are asked to base error on the chancellor's refusal to accept appellant's testimony on a matter of fact as against testimony of appellee's witnesses to the contrary, we find appellant in no better position than if he were assailing a jury's verdict. Neither the chancellor nor ourselves saw the witnesses; the master did; and the master's report involved a finding on credibility of witnesses personally appearing before him and nowhere else." In re Fred D. Jones Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 818.

Reason to suspect insufficient.—"When the present Bankruptcy Law was enacted, the phrase 'reasonable cause to believe,' in this very connection, had been judicially defined to mean, not mere suspicion, but 'such knowledge of the facts as to induce a reasonable belief,' 'cause for well-grounded belief.' That definition follows the phrase into this act; and it has been so construed and applied." City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 11.

The statute requires belief that a preference will result and it is not sufficient to create a preference that the circumstances in connection with the taking of security only show that the creditor had cause to believe that a preference might result. It is said that the difference is only one of degree but that the statute establishes it nevertheless. Sumner v. Parr, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 270 Fed. 675. The court said:

"There were no immediate suspicious circumstances. Nothing had just happened which should have caused him to suppose that the bankrupt was any nearer insolvency than she had been for some time past. Finding his debtor unable to make ready payments, and knowing that she had substantial property, he became suspicious, and dissatisfied with the delays, and took security. If this charges him with knowledge that the security will create a preference, then so is every creditor who takes security because he has become doubtful and suspicious of the eventual insolvency of his debtor."

"It is obvious, therefore, that, as a foundation for reasonable cause to believe that the transfer will effect a preference, the creditor at the time of the payment must have notice or knowledge of the debtor's insolvency." People's Bank v. McAleer, (1920) 204 Ala. 101, 85 So. 413.

Positive knowledge unnecessary.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 133.

Subsequent knowledge of the creditor is not material. Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120.

Instances of reasonable cause to believe.—In Benjamin v. Buell, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 792, the court said:

"Whether appellant knew, or had cause to believe, that the bankrupt was then insolvent, and that the payment would constitute a preference, is dependent upon conflicting evidence, and facts and circumstances which the evidence disclosed. From appellant's long course of dealings with the bankrupt, and his financial interest in him through being so long his creditor, coupled with his frequent presence at bankrupt's place of business, and conversations concerning his affairs, and opportunity for intimate knowledge of them, we cannot say that the chancellor, who heard and saw the witnesses, was not justified in the conclusion he must of necessity have reached, to support the decree, that at and before time of the payment appellant was aware of the bankrupt's insolvency, and of his very desperate financial straits, and of the large excess of liabilities over assets which the undisputed evidence seems to establish."

Instances of lack of reasonable cause of belief.—It was held in the following case decided subsequent to the amendment of 1910, that the facts in evidence were insufficient to show that the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that the transfer would effect a preference. Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120; Mantz v. Capital City State Bank, (Ia. 1921) 181 N. W. 2.

"Required" recordation.—Recordation is to be deemed "required," within the meaning of this section, "when, through delay of it, a position superior to the challenged transfer has been gained during the period that the mortgage was unrecorded by some creditor whom the trustee represents, or whose place he is entitled to take." Bradley v. Robie, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 884.

II. RECOVERY OF VOIDABLE PREFERENCES (p. 1038)

Recovery of voidable preferences.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Lowell v. Ashton, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 536.

Mortgage given before but not recorded until within four months of filing of petition.—A trustee cannot assail an unrecorded mortgage as a preference as of the date of its recordation under this section, if he represents no lien on the property other than the lien mentioned in section 47a arising subsequently to the recordation. Bradley v. Robie (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 884.

A bona fide purchaser for value may get a good title from a person in possession of title by a preferential transfer. Gray v. Breslof, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 526.

Recovery of proceeds of sale.—Where a person in possession of title by a preferential transfer sells the property to a bona fide purchaser the trustee may recover from the bankrupt and his preferential transferee the proceeds received from the sale. Gray v. Breslof, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 526.

Evidence.—The burden of proof is on the trustee to show reasonable cause to believe that the transaction would effect a preference. This rule was not changed by the amendment of 1910 to the Bankruptcy Act though the fact to be proved was affected. City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 11.

Bondholders—where bonds held void.—Where a mortgage was executed to cover the claim of a creditor and the bonds secured by such mortgage were delivered to the creditor and accepted in full settlement and subsequently the mortgage was declared void as a preference by an insolvent corporation under the state law and was set aside and the bonds declared void, it was held that even if there had been an accord and satisfaction when the mortgage was executed and the bonds delivered the creditor was thrown back to his original rights when the mortgage and bonds were declared void. In re Franklin Brewing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 828.

The interest due.—See to the same effect as the original annotation, Ferguson v. Lyle, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 817.

Fraud—Bankrupt's fraud.—Where fraud was practiced by the bankrupt in the transaction out of which a creditor's claim arises, if the creditor could have waived the fraud and sued the bankrupt in assumpsit it is said that he has a provable claim but otherwise not. In re Schenderlein, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 1018.

Vol. I, p. 1064, sec. 63a (3). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 760.]

The words "before the filing" in this section do not mean the day before the filing but refer to the very instant of filing if ascertainable. In re Ledbetter, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 893.

The court costs are expressly controlled by this section and section 63a (5), infra. In re Ledbetter, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 893.

Costs in general.—Where a debt sued on was a provable debt, costs which were incurred in good faith before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy are a provable debt against the bankrupt's estate. But if, after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the creditor elects to pursue to judgment his remedy in the state court, instead of relying on that afforded by the bankrupt court, costs subsequently arising are not provable and will be disallowed. In re Ledbetter, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 893.

Attorney's fees incurred in good faith in a suit on a provable debt before the filing of the petition are said to stand on a similar footing to costs. Of such a claim it has been said:

"It thus has many of the incidents of an item of costs, and it is not improbable that Congress intended attorney's fees so circumstanced to be dealt with as taxable costs for bankruptcy purposes, as well as those the amount of which is fixed by law as an item of costs." In re Ledbetter, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 893.

Vol. I, p. 1065, sec. 63a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 760.]

Contracts and open accounts—Money advanced for purchase of stock exchange seat.—Where a father advanced money to his son, who was a member of a firm of stockbrokers, to purchase a seat on the stock exchange and executed and delivered to the son a release of all claims and demands by reason of the advance made, as required by the rules of the exchange, it was held, on the adjudication of the firm as a bankrupt, that the father was precluded by such release from asserting a claim for such advance as against the creditors of the firm, and the fact that interest was paid to the father on the advance thus made was held to be immaterial. In re Atwater, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 278.

Renting contracts.—An action for waste based on the covenants of a lease arises from a contract of demise and the claim being contractual in its nature, the Bankruptcy Act takes cognizance of it and it may be proved and used as the basis of a petition in bankruptcy. In re Standard Aero Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 779.

Breach of contract.—To the same effect as the original contract, see Heyward v. Goldsmith, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 946.

Breach occasioned by bankruptcy.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Heyward v. Goldsmith, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 946.

Claims arising out of street cleaning contract.—Where the bankrupts, who were under contract to dispose of the ashes and refuse collected by the street cleaning department of New York city, had chartered several scows, which were loaded at the time of bankruptcy, and the city notified the bankrupts that it had taken possession of the scows and final disposition of the ashes and refuse, and ordered the owners of the scows to discharge the loads on the scows at some other place than at the plants of the bankrupts, it was held that the city having ordered delivery of its property on the scows at a new and different destination must pay for the expense of doing so, which cost it could not recover from the bankrupts' estates. Connett v. New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 197.

Claim for embezzlement, larceny or conversion—Implied contract.—"It is an established rule in the national courts that if a bankrupt has become unjustly enriched by his embezzlement, larceny, or conversion of the goods of another, the owner may, if he chooses to do so, waive any action of tort that he might have against the bankrupt for such acts, and prove a claim against the bankrupt's estate for the value of the goods, because the law implies a contractual obligation by the bankrupt to pay the owner therefor. . . . But it is also established that a claim for unliquidated damages is not a provable debt, when it arises out of a pure tort, and when there is no breach of an express contract, nor such enrichment of the wrongdoer as may form a basis for an implied contract." Stalick v. Slack, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 123.

Power of court to determine amount or legality of tax.—In In re General Film Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 903, the court said:

"We regard this section as binding upon the government because it is named therein and, while conferring priority, as giving the bankruptcy court the power to hear and determine any question that arises as to the amount or legality of a tax assessed by it. The provision applies to taxes of all the persons mentioned, and we could not differentiate the government from the other persons in the absence of language justifying it." It was also held that R. S. sec. 3226 could under no circumstances apply to the case under consideration because the trustee was not seeking to maintain a suit for the recovery of internal revenue taxes illegally assessed.

Where it is claimed that the bankrupt owes income taxes to the United States and proof of such claim is filed against his estate, the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to ascertain the correct amount due thereon, rather than to order the trustee to pay the claim and remit him to the remedy of a suit against the United States to determine whether the payment should be refunded. In re W. P. Williams Oil Corp., (W. D. Ky. 1920) 265 Fed. 401, wherein the court said:

"It was the intention of the Bankruptcy Act that estates should be promptly wound up. To require the sort of procedure suggested here would make it impossible to say when there could be a winding up of a bankruptcy proceeding and a distribution of the assets. The trustee, in paying out the bank-rupt's estate, must always act under the order of the referee or the court, and without such order could not pay the taxes now involved out of the bankrupt's assets. The contention on behalf of the government would require, first, an order of that character; second, a payment in full of the taxes claimed out of those assets; third, an application to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue under section 1316a of the Revenue Act, approved February 24, 1919, for the refunding of the amount so paid; fourth, a delay almost certainly of six months for the Commissioner to act on the application; and, fifth, a suit at law for the recovery of the amount, if the refunding is refused—all while the bankruptcy proceeding stood practically still.

"In this case, if the United States has any priority, it can easily be ascertained in this proceeding, and it was never intended, in a case like this, that there should be any such delay as that indicated. This is demonstrated by the express provision of section 64a of the Bankruptcy Act, which reads as follows:

"The court shall order the trustee to pay all taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality in advance of the payment of dividends to creditors, and upon filing the receipts of the proper public officers for such payment he shall be credited with the amount thereof and in case any question arises as to the amount or legality of any such tax the same shall be heard and determined by the court."

"As is obvious, this statute embraces taxes due the United States, as well as those due states and municipalities, and it is expressly provided that all questions raised upon such claims shall be determined in the bankruptcy court. This situation would seem to leave no doubt about what course should be pursued at this stage. As we have said, many authorities were cited; but they seem to us to have no bearing on the real questions involved here, with one exception, namely, the case of In re Fisher, (D. C.) 229 Fed. 313, cited for the trustee. . . . It seems to the court to be entirely obvious that it was the purpose of section 64a to have such matters as are therein referred to settled promptly in the bankruptcy proceeding itself. Here the claim of the United States was filed voluntarily and properly. Its appearance was thereby entered in the bankruptcy case. Its claim was allowed, but the trustee, as he had a perfect right to do, has asked for its re-examination, so that the justness of the claim of the United States may be examined into under the provisions of the section. The referee concluded that the bankruptcy court had no jurisdiction to do this. We think this conclusion of the referee was erroneous, and the order sought to be reviewed will therefore be reversed, with directions to re-examine the claim on behalf of the United States, and ascertain the correct amount due thereon."

Internal revenue regulations as nullifying section.—This section is not nullified by any regulations regarding the collection of taxes made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. In re W. P. Williams Oil Corp., (W. D. Ky. 1920) 265 Fed. 401. The court said:

"Insistence is made in behalf of the United States that certain regulations made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, should nullify the provisions of section 64a of the Bankruptcy Act. It is altogether true that the Revenue Act does, and properly does, authorize generally the making of regulations by the Commissioner; but the Commissioner is not given authority by a regulation to nullify or in any way to interfere with statutory provisions respecting other matters, such as section 64a. Any construction that would give the Commissioner's regulations any broader significance or force than is authorized by the Revenue Act would be inadmissible."

A creditor who recovers a fund for the common benefit of creditors is entitled to have his costs and expenses out of the fund. Services rendered to bankrupt—In involuntary cases.—Where there is nothing to show but what the employment was necessary, nor is there anything to show but what the services were rendered in good faith and for the real purpose of administering the act as to accomplish its purposes; if it be urged, or claimed even, that the employment was to protect the bankrupt from imputations of wrong, such service, if made in good faith, is necessary, and for it reasonable compensation should be allowed. In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588.

Allowance confined to one fee.—It is said to be clear that the phrase "one reasonable attorney's fees," "does not mean that only one attorney may be paid out of the funds of the estate, but it is very clear that the allowance to be made to the attorneys for the bankrupt, just as to the attorneys for the petitioning creditors, shall be paid and can be only one fee." In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588.

Discretion as to attorney's fees.—The amount to be allowed to attorneys for the creditors is not wholly a matter of discretion but must be reasonably determined on evidence of the services performed and of the value of such services. In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588.

Who may claim wages—General manager of business.—A manager of a store has been held not to be included in the term "workmen, clerks, traveling or city salesmen, or servants." In re Bonk, (E. D. Mich. 1920) 270 Fed. 657. The court said:

"From the testimony on the hearing before the referee, transcript of which, returned by the referee with his opinion, has been carefully examined by this court, it appeared that the claimant, pursuant to his contract with the bankrupt just quoted, took charge of the drug store and managed it for the bankrupt, purchasing the merchandise for the store and paying the rent and the other expenses in connection with the operation of such store, including the salary of a pharmacist, who was employed there while claimant was in charge, and who, in addition to his other duties, had charge of the cash register and kept all of the records showing the receipts and expenditures of the business. It does not appear that claimant rendered services in any other capacity than as manager of the store, operating the same for the owner, but exercising his own discretion in the performance of his duties. His claim for wages is based, not on a quantum meruit for work and labor performed, but on the contract under which he had agreed 'to manage and operate' the store on the terms and conditions specified in the contract. Under such circumstances, it is clear that the claimant is not included in the class of 'workmen, clerks, traveling or city salesmen, or servants' within the meaning of section 64b, subd. 4, of the Bankruptcy Act; the language there used not being intended to apply to the manager of a business."

Priority of creditors contributing to expense of litigation by trustee.—Creditors contributing to and guaranteeing the expenses of a trustee in bringing and conducting a suit to recover money belonging to the bankrupt's estate are not entitled to have the amount recovered treated as a special fund and devoted first to the payment of their claims. In re Butcher, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 266 Fed. 239, wherein it was said: "The present proceedings raise no question as to the allowance of expenses of litigation from the amount recovered; it being taken for granted, apparently, by all parties concerned, that they are allowable. The prayer of the petition is that the amount recovered 'should be treated as a special fund and should be first devoted to the payment of the claims of those creditors who contributed to and guaranteed the expense of the trustee in bringing and carrying forward said litigation . . . in proportion to the amount of their contribution thereto.'

"The amount recovered is now part of the estate in bankruptcy, the distribution of which is governed by the Bankruptcy Act. As said in In re Morris, 204 Fed. 770, 123 C. C. A. 220, the act contemplates equality of treatment among creditors of the same class. It is at least doubtful whether the court has power to make a different distribution of assets from that provided in the act. To award preferences among creditors for supposedly meritorious or helpful service by them in the administration of the estate would introduce a wide, and I think unwise, element of discretion. It certainly ought not to be done unless the effect of a refusal to contribute to the fund required for litigation by the estate was squarely put to creditors at the time when they were asked to contribute, as it was in Cornell v. Nichols, 201 Fed. 320, 119 C. C. A. 558."

A debt due United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation is not in law a debt due to the United States. In re Eastern Shore Shipbuilding Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 893, so holding but not deciding that the United States under the Bankruptcy Act is entitled to prior payment of ordinary debts due to it as against the general creditors of the bankrupt.

Unpaid freight charges.—A claim for unpaid freight charges due from a bankrupt to a railroad while it was operated under federal control was held to be a debt due the United States and entitled to priority. In re E. J. Hibner Oil Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 687, 14 A. L. R. 629.

Constitutionality.—This section is not unconstitutional on the ground that the moneys deposited in court which remain unclaimed for a certain period are, under the provisions of the Revised Statutes, paid over to the United States, and that such funds really belong to the state as property which has escheated. In re Orona Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 260 Fed. 855. The court said:

"The dividends in question are not being dealt with in a final way. The referee has merely ordered that they be paid into court, where they can still be claimed by the creditors entitled to them, and, if not claimed, will, according to the usual practice, be eventually divided among other creditors of the estate, unless too small in amount to justify the expense and trouble of so doing. This method of disposing of such funds seems to me reasonable, and to be unobjectionable on constitutional grounds. It serves a very useful purpose in enabling trustees to close out estates completely and finally, and concentrates unclaimed funds in the hands of the court, instead of scattering them among many trustees. The power to direct the disposition of small residues in bankruptcy cases is incident to the general power over bankruptcy conferred upon Congress by the Constitution. If the Commonwealth of Massachusetts desires to claim such funds, it should do so in its own name, and in connection with the proceeding to turn them over to the Treasurer of the United States."

Conditional sale.—Although a conditional sale contract is void under the law of Louisiana, yet it is held that the seller under such a contract has a lien for the unpaid purchase price on the proceeds of the sale of the property as a part of the bankrupt's assets where it was separately sold, and the amount is certain and can be separated from the other assets. In re Bentz, (E. Existing rights preserved.—It was the purpose of Congress in enacting a national insolvency law to preserve, rather than destroy, any of the rights or advantages enjoyed by creditors under the laws of the states, save to the extent that they are repugnant to or inconsistent with the specific provision of the Bankruptcy Law, in view of Bankruptcy Act, 1898, § 67d. Schenck v. Fontenot, (1920) 147 La. 467, 85 So. 207.

Chattel mortgages.—The validity as original creditors of a chattel mortgage given by the bankrupt for a present consideration and in good faith prior to the filing of the petition or the adjudication in bankruptcy depends on the construction to be given by the statutes of the state at the date of the execution and registration of the mortgage. In re Saunders, (E. A chattel mortgage given in good faith for a present consideration and valid under the laws of the state will be held valid against the trustee. In re Mitchell Motor, etc., Co., (W. D. Wash. 1921) 274 Fed. 402.

Where, although a large amount of the bankrupt's property is included in a mortgage to one of its creditors, the transaction is in good faith, with a view of preserving the estate and enabling it to continue as a going concern and to meet its indebtedness, the mortgages are valid under this section. In re Grocers' Baking Co., (N. D. Ala. 1920) 266 Fed. 900.

Designation of property previously pledged.—Where an order to secure a creditor was given to and accepted by a storage company to set aside fifty car loads of lumber but no designation of the cars was made at the time, it has been held that the fact that a designation was not made until more than two years after the date of the order, and also within less than one month before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, would not render the pledge invalid as against the trustees, because, in a transaction untainted with fraud, and where the rights of third parties are not affected, such designation would relate back to the date of the order. Atherton v. Beaman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 878.

Restraining sale.—Under this section it has been held that the court has power to enjoin a sale under an execution issued on a judgment rendered within the four months period. Wagner v. Mt. Carmel Iron Works, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 80.

IV. ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT LIENS (p. 1136)

Construction.—The mere adjudication and appointment of a trustee do not of themselves operate to preserve an attachment: there must be affirmative action to effect that result. In re Prentice, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 267 Fed. 1019.

Attachment and garnishment liens.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Wirth, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 266 Fed. 141, holding that an attachment of funds of the bankrupt made within four months prior to the filing of the petition against him, should be preserved for the benefit of the bankrupt estate.

Lien obtained prior to four months period.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Griffin v. Lenhart, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 671, wherein the court said:

"In brief, the case is this: Under attachment liens acquired in the state court on the land more than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the state court, in equitable proceedings instituted by creditors to enforce the attachments more than four months before the filing of the petition, had adjudged the amounts due and was proceeding to enforce the attachment liens by sale of the land. The question is whether the court of bankruptcy should by the order appealed from take the control of the attached property from the state court.

"Doubtless it might have been held with strong reason that the court of bankruptcy upon adjudication drew to itself for the purpose of administration all the assets and liabilities of the bankrupt of every form, giving, however, full effect to all liens lawfully acquired more than four months before the filing of the petition. But the Supreme Court, considering the reasons stronger for a different view, laid down the general rule that, where a state court has obtained complete jurisdiction by proceedings, either legal or equitable, instituted by creditors for the enforcement of their demands, and under which they have acquired liens upon the property more than four months before the filing of the petition, the state courts should proceed with the enforcement of the liens and a final disposition of the property and of the cause without interference from the bankruptcy court. Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. ed. 403; Pickens v. Dent, 106 Fed. 653, 45 C. C. A. 522 (4th Circuit); Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. ed. 122; Pickens v. Roy, 187 U. S. 177, 23 Sup. Ct. 78, 47 L. ed. 128."

Discharge of bond given for release of property.—Where a statutory bond given for the release of attached property is construed by the decisions of a state as being a substitute for the property, the bankruptcy of the principal within four months after the attachment destroys the obligation of the bond and relieves a surety thereto from all liability under it. Republic Rubber Co. v. Foster, (1920) 95 Conn. 551, 111 Atl. 839.

Claims not due at institution of proceedings.—"At any time before the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings mutual dealers may adjust their obligations and consider the unmatured as well as the matured." Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120.

Set-off between bank and depositor.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120, wherein it was held that whether notes were charged against the maker's deposit in the bank or paid by his checks drawn on that deposit, this was only "a book entry equivalent to the voluntary exercise by the parties of the right of set-off."

"The cases are in accord in holding that where a bank receives deposits in the regular course of business, which are subject to withdrawals by check, and there is no collusion or fraud, and where notes have been discounted by the depositor at the bank, it has the right, when notes are due, to set off the amount due to the bank on the notes against the amount due from it on the deposit account. This right exists, even though the depositor is insolvent when the notes become due, and such insolvency is known to the bank. . . . And where the set-off exists, and the parties themselves have not voluntarily made such set-off or adjustment before bankruptcy, the trustee must do so." In re Cross, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 39.

Set-off of deposit not preference.—Although a depositor may be proved to have been insolvent at the time a set-off was made by the bank against his account, such set-off is not preferential in the absence of proof that the bank had reasonable cause to believe that it would effect a preference. Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, (Conn. 1921) 114 Atl. 120.

I. WHAT CONSTITUTES PROPERTY (p. 1150)

Only vested interests are considered property within the meaning of the act. Clearly if property which the bankrupt actually acquires after the filing of his petition is not subject to his debts property which he only hopes or expects to acquire cannot be reached by creditors. Elberton Bank v. Swift, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 305.

II. NATURE OF TRUSTEE'S TITLE (p. 1151)

Section 70 is to be construed with section 47a (2).—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 33.

Trustee takes bankrupt's title.—To same effect as original annotation, see Boise v. Talcott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 61.

Title subject to existing equities.—To same effect as original annotation, see Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 391; Boise v. Talcott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 61; In re Barnhardt Coal, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1919) 265 Fed. 385. The case last cited held that the trustee in bankruptcy of a lessee could accept the lease and keep the property only by making the payments which the bankrupt was required to make to prevent a forfeiture, but held further that a forfeiture not being favored by a court of equity the trustee would be relieved from any forfeiture arising from default in payment of rent, on making the overdue payments with interest.

Valid lien and incumbrances.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Plantations Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 273; Petition of National Discount Co. (C. C. C. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 570; Lewin v. Tellwide Iron Works Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 590.

"The courts have uniformly held that the title to the property of the bankrupt vested, by operation of law, in the trustee, subject to all liens which had, prior to the date of filing the petition, attached thereto. The right of the creditors to attack such liens for fraud or other invalidating element vested in the trustee." In re Saunders, (E. D. N. C. 1921) 272 Fed. 1003.

It has been held in a case in Oregon that a chattel mortgage given on lumber to be sawed is valid as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor where it is duly recorded and the lumber thereafter sawed is placed in the lumber yards of the mortgagor, each pile being marked with the name of the mortgagee, although the lumber so sawed and piled was never in the actual manual possession of the mortgagee. In re Pine Tree Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 515.

Proceeds of sale.—On a sale by the trustee of property which is subject to a valid lien, the lien is transferred to the funds in the hands of the trustee. In re Plantations Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 273. The court further said:

"The trustee knew of the facts upon which the Centrosa Company's equitable lien was based, and therefore is chargeable with knowledge of the lien. The general assets of the estate against which the costs of administration are primarily chargeable cannot be relieved of those charges by the fact that the trustee, knowing the facts, used first the funds chargeable with the lien for their payment in ease of general creditors. Knowing the facts, he should not have used the funds chargeable with the lien in relief of liabilities chargeable against the general funds of the estate, and, following the maxim that equity will look upon that as done which ought to have been done, a court of equity will follow the proceeds into the mass of the estate.

"Confusion does not destroy the equity entirely, but converts it into a charge upon the entire mass, giving to the party injured by the unlawful diversion a priority of right over the other creditors of the possessor."

Right under contracts of bankrupt.—When the trustee in bankruptcy, by order of the referee or of the court, elects to ratify, confirm, and adopt the executory contract of the bankrupt, he thereby assumes the liabilities of the bankrupt thereunder, and takes the contract in the same plight in which the bankrupt held it. Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 391.

Equitable lien of purchaser.—Where a manufacturer agrees to make and deliver to a purchaser staves or other articles for specified prices and on fixed terms, one of which is that the purchaser will make specific advances in payment of the purchase price to enable the manufacturer to pay for necessary materials and labor, and at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy of the latter there is a quantity of the manufactured product which the purchaser's advances have paid for, in the possession of the bankrupt, the equitable right of the purchaser thereto is superior to that of the trustee in bankruptcy or of the unsecured creditors he represents. Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 391.

Mining lease.—Where a mining lease held by a bankrupt purports to sell, transfer, and convey to him all the coal and limestone in, under, or upon the premises therein described, and provides for forfeiture only in the event that the lessee fails to enter upon the premises and make exploration thereon for coal and limestone within ninety days after the execution of the lease, which condition was fulfilled by the bankrupt, the lease is an asset of the estate and may be sold by the bankrupt's trustee. In re Barnhardt Coal, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1919) 265 Fed. 385, wherein the court said:

"The referee finds that there is no proof of a failure to enter on the premises and make explorations within 90 days, but that, on the contrary, such entry and exploration was made, and the existence of coal and limestone was thereby determined, and that the bankrupt and its several assignors had no intention at any time of abandoning the premises and terminating the lease because the mining of coal or limestone was or had become unprofitable. No coal or limestone was in point of fact mined, and the $500 minimum royalty, which should have been paid not later than October 1, 1918, was not paid, nor have any payments been made since, either by the receiver or trustee in bankruptcy. The provisions of this lease are similar to those considered by the Supreme Court of Ohio in the following cases: Harris v. Ohio Oil Co., 57 Ohio St. 118, 48 N. E. 502; Gas Co. v. Eckhart, 70 Ohio St. 127, 71 N. E. 281; Oil Co. v. Robinson, 71 Ohio St. 302, 73 N. E. 222, 104 Am. St. Rep. 773, 2 Ann. Cas. 444. The interest granted by this lease is not merely a license, but an estate in the premises. The right to enjoy that estate is not dependent on any condition precedent, except the requirement that entry and explorations should be made within 90 days, which was done. No forfeiture or termination is provided for, except in the event of a failure to make such entry and exploration. No right to forfeit or terminate is given for failure to pay the minimum royalty of $500 a year. Any implied covenant or obligation to exercise reasonable diligence in mining limestone and coal is merged in the covenant to pay $500 a year in the event of failure to operate. The lease becomes, as was said in Gas Co. v. Eckhart, supra, a lease from year to year upon an annual rental of $500. The cases cited by counsel for petitioner, in which mining leases have been canceled by courts of equity for failure to keep an implied obligation to exercise reasonable diligence, are not in point.

"The only question then is: What is the effect under these conditions of a failure to pay the $500? The referee, in my opinion, reached the correct conclusion, namely, that no forfeiture or right to terminate has resulted therefrom, and that the lease may be sold as an asset of the bankrupt's estate. The payments which have accrued during bankruptcy may be treated and provided for as an expense of administration, or an expenditure necessary for the preservation of the estate; but the failure of the referee to make provision therefor in the order of sale does not require a reversal of his finding and judgment. No request was made of him so to do. One may still be made, with the right to have his rulings reviewed here, in the event parties are dissatisfied with his action."

III. TIME WHEN TITLE PASSES (p. 1154)

Effect of commencement of proceedings.—Generally.—The trustee takes title as the debtor had it at the time of the petition. Boise v. Talcott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 61.

In In re Garden City Parlor Furniture Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 318, the court said:

"Upon the filing of the petition and the appointment of the receiver, all property rights of the bankrupt passed under the jurisdiction of the court; and when the trustee was appointed the title and right to possession vested in him, and it was at all times after the appointment of the receiver in the possession of the court. This extended to book accounts and receivables."

Property in custodia legis.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Lombardy Inn Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 266 Fed. 394.

IV. CONDITION OF TITLE AFTER PETITION FILED BUT BEFORE APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE (p. 1158)

Defeasible title in bankrupt.—Until adjudication in bankruptcy, the title of the bankrupt's property remains in the bankrupt. In re Perpall, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 466.

VI. EXEMPT PROPERTY (p. 1162)

Title remains in bankrupt.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Stratton v. Ermis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 533.

Homesteads—Generally.—A trustee takes title to land claimed as a homestead as of the date of the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy where there has been a failure to claim the homestead as required by the laws of the state. Edgington v. Taylor, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 48, holding that negligence of counsel in this respect would be imputed to the client.

VII. RECLAMATION PROCEEDINGS (p. 1165)

Right to reclaim.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re John H. Parker Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 868; In re Solomon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 108.

Proceeds of check.—Where a check which was given by mistake in a stock transaction and was without consideration was collected by the receiver in bankruptcy of the payee, it was held that the maker of the check was entitled to reclaim the proceeds in the hands of the trustee. In re Toole, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 195.

Stock in possession of stock broker.—Where a person purchased stock through a stock broker who became bankrupt before making an actual delivery, and stock of the same kind is found by the receiver when he takes possession of the bankrupt's property, the purchaser may reclaim such stock where no one else is claiming it, although it is not certain that it is the identical stock which was purchased for the claimant. In re Solomon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 108.

Securities pledged with broker.—Where the evidence shows that a customer who had pledged securities with a broker as collateral to secure margin transactions was indebted to the broker for a balance due on his account, though to an amount less than the value of the securities, a right to reclaim the securities has been denied, there having been no tender, before bankruptcy, of the indebtedness. In re Toole, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 337.

Securities repledged by broker.—Where securities pledged on marginal transactions by a customer with his brokers have been lawfully repledged by them with a third party together with securities of other customers, part of which securities are, after the bankruptcy of the broker, sold by such third party to satisfy his debt, the others being returned to the bankrupt's estate, there has been held to be a right of contribution in favor of those whose securities were sold from those whose securities were returned, and the right of the latter owners to reclaim such securities has been denied. In re Toole, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 337. The court said:

"We think that, when customers authorize their broker to pledge their securities for the payment of the broker's debts, each becomes to the extent of his pledge a surety for the payment of such indebtedness. As between themselves they become co-sureties. All the collateral lawfully so pledged is subject to the same obligation and lien. The owners of the collateral, being in effect co-sureties, must be entitled to contribution from each other for any loss sustained if the stock of one is sold to pay the debt for which the stock of the other was equally liable. This right of contribution does not arise from the contract, as already said, but rests upon principles of equity and natural justice. The principle is that where all are equally liable for the payment of a debt all are bound equally to contribute to that purpose. So that if the stock of A, B, and C is lawfully pledged for the payment of the debt of X, the stock of each is under the common burden, and if X sells the stock of A and B, and leaves unsold the stock of C, the latter must contribute to A and B the excess they have paid above their share. But if, on the other hand, the stock of A is lawfully pledged, while that of B and C is unlawfully pledged, there is no obligation on the part of B and C to contribute, for there is no common burden as between A on the one side, and B and C on the other. The principle applies only in cases where the situations of the parties are equal, as equality among persons whose situations are not equal is not equitable. The situations are equal when the parties are under a common burden."

Delivery of goods on consignment.—Goods which were delivered on consignment to the bankrupt in pursuance of an agreement made in good faith to the effect that all future deliveries should be of that character and not a sale, may be retaken by the consignor. Healey v. Boston Batavia Rubber Co., (D. C. Mass. 1920) 268 Fed. 75.

Unrecorded chattel mortgage.—A mortgage given by a bankrupt to the seller but which is not recorded as required by the state law is void as to creditors and the seller cannot reclaim. In re Robinson Mach. Co., (E. D. Mich. 1920) 268 Fed. 165.

Stoppage in transitu.—Goods purchased by a bankrupt company and in the possession of its forwarding agent while en route to their final destination, may be stopped in transit and reclaimed by the seller from the bankrupt's trustee. In re Stork, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 864.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 1171)

Generally—Life interest.—A life estate of substantial value can be mortgaged and will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy of the life tenant. City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 11.

Property retained in possession of seller.—Under the law in Pennsylvania that delivery of possession is indispensable to transfer a title by the act of the owner which shall be valid against creditors, it has been held that a sale by a resident of Pennsylvania of an automobile to a resident of New York to whom the seller gives a bill of sale and storage receipt, but makes no delivery of the car, which he retains in his possession, is invalid as against the trustee. In re Irwin, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 162.

Transfers and incumbrances ineffective as to creditors.—Where there was neither an "immediate delivery" followed by "actual and continued change of possession" nor a filing of the mortgage as required by statute, the mortgage will be held void as to creditors. In re Bonk, (E. D. Mich. 1920) 270 Fed. 657.

II. INTERESTS IN REAL PROPERTY (p. 1174)

Tenant's interest in leasehold—Forfeiture enforced.—Where a lease provides that it shall terminate on the bankruptcy or insolvency of the lessee, and on his insolvency it is assigned to a third person with the consent of the lessor, the condition binds the assignee and on his subsequent insolvency the bankruptcy court will enforce the forfeiture and deliver possession of the premises to the lessor as against the assignee's trustee in bankruptcy. Empress Theatre Co. v. Horton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 657. The court said:

"A court of equity may enjoin the performance of and set aside contracts, conditions, and covenants obtained by the fraud, deceit, or wrong of the respondent, but neither the Empress Theatre Company nor its predecessor in interest was guilty of fraud, wrong, or deceit. It may sometimes avoid conditions and covenants for mistake or accident, but there was neither in this case. The condition and covenants of the lease were natural, reasonable, and just. It clearly shows that when it was made the lessor and the lessee contemplated the possible, perhaps the probable, insolvency and bankruptcy of the lessee and of some of its successors in interest during the long 15 years then to come, discussed, carefully considered, and finally contracted and wrote into their lease their agreement what the effect of such insolvency and bankruptcy should be, to wit, the end of the term of the lease, its forfeiture, and the return to the lessor of the leased premises at its election. The basement leased was a valuable property. The purpose the lessor had in making the lease, to secure the operation in this basement of a high-class café with special amusement features, made the solvency of the lessee and hence its continuous operation of the café essential to the accomplishment of this purpose. Its insolvency or bankruptcy, placing the basement in the hands of a trustee for a long time during bankruptcy proceedings, and then sending it to an unknown purchaser, would undoubtedly to a large extent defeat the object of the lessor in making the lease, produce the vacancy or inadequate operation of the proposed café, and result in immeasurable damage to the leased premises and to the value of their use. It was to prevent this contemplated possibility that these parties wrote into their lease the condition and covenant that in case of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the lessee, at the election of the lessor, the term of the lease should end and the leased premises should be returned to the lessor free from the lease.

"Nor was this an unconscionable or inequitable agreement. The lessor received and the lessee gave for this lease $42,000 of the corporate stock of the latter. The lessee received and the lessor gave the use of the basement for the term of 15 years on condition that the lessee or its successor in interest, approved by the lessor, remained solvent for 15 years, but that it should be terminable at the option of the lessor at any time within the 15 years when the lessee became insolvent or bankrupt. When the lease was made, the effect of the condition and covenants which the parties undoubtedly then contemplated was that, in case the lessee became insolvent or bankrupt, its $42,000 of stock which the lessor received would be worthless, and it would actually receive nothing for the lessee's use of the premises, the lessee's operation of the café would be so financially disastrous that it would, at its insolvency, have exhausted the lessee's means and rendered it incapable of operating or using the premises as a café, and the lessor would have the right then to end the term of the lease and take back the leased premises. And such was the actual effect of the condition and covenants of the lease in about a year from the commencement of the lessee's operation under it, when it became insolvent and bankrupt. So it was that each party at the making of the lease foresaw the possibility, perhaps the probability, of the insolvency and bankruptcy of the lessee, agreed that the effect of such insolvency and bankruptcy should be to vest in the lessor the right at its election then to end the term of the lease and take back the premises, and then took its chance of such insolvency and bankruptcy and signed the lease. And, as the condition and covenants under consideration were in the lease, every one who has succeeded to any interest in or lien upon any interest in the lease has taken that interest or lien under and subject to that condition and those covenants, and has taken its or his chance of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the original or successor lessee thereunder.

"Nor was there anything in the condition and covenants of this lease evil in itself, or prohibited by law, or contrary to the public policy of state or nation. The condition and covenants were not novel, but common provisions in leases. Conditions and covenants in leases of the same character have been repeatedly considered, and generally, nay almost universally, sustained and enforced, both by courts of equity and courts of law."

Effect of provision against assignment.—A provision in a lease prohibiting assignment and subletting by the lessee, does not prevent its transfer by operation of law, on his bankruptcy, to his trustee, and the latter may sell it as an asset of the estate. In re Prudential Lithograph Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 869.

III. PLEDGES (p. 1178)

Money deposited as security.—Where the bankrupt deposited money with his landlord as security for the payment of the rent such money was not forfeited to the landlord on the bankruptcy of the tenant but remained the property of the bankrupt subject to proper deductions under the terms of the agreement between the parties, and the receiver or trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to a return of the amount deposited less such deductions. In re Tamory, (N. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 872.

IV. CONDITIONAL SALES (p. 1181)

Contract invalid as to lien creditors.—See to the same effect as the original annotation, Groner v. Babcock Printing Press Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 822.

Where by the law of the state conditional sales, though valid between the parties, are not valid as against those creditors of the conditional vendee who have issued execution and seized the property, the receiver of a bankrupt conditional vendee is entitled to property thus sold to the bankrupt and it cannot be reclaimed by the vendor. In re Mina, (W. D. Pa. 1914) 270 Fed. 969.

Contract invalid as to general creditors.—A contract of conditional sale is held to be invalid as to general creditors whose rights accrued between the giving of the conditional sale and the date of recordation. In re Bennett, (W. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 533.

If the sale is valid and binding.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see In re Robinson Mach. Co., (E. D. Mich. 1920) 268 Fed. 165.

V. TRUST FUNDS AND DEPOSITS (p. 1185)

Where bankrupt is trustee—Dividends declared and set aside.—"Where a dividend has been declared, and following such declaration, in order to carry the declaration into effect, the corporation deposits a fund out of which the dividends are to be paid, that fund becomes a trust fund, and the corporation becomes the trustee of the fund. In other words, the debtor and creditor relation is transformed into a trust relation." In re Interborough Consol. Corp. (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 914.

Property devised in trust.—One to whom property is devised "in trust for the heirs of his body" acquires no title to the property which he can mortgage or convey to any one or which will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 11.

IX. CONTRACTUAL INTERESTS AND OBLIGATIONS (p. 1191)

Fire insurance policy.—Where the buyers of a sawmill plant were obligated under their contract to take out fire insurance on the plant and the sellers agreed to accept a certain sum as settlement under the policies in case of loss, it has been held that on the destruction of the property the buyer was entitled to any excess over the sum agreed on and that on the subsequent bankruptcy of the buyers the trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to such excess. Walton Land, etc., Co. v. Runyan, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 130.

Right to exchange stock for stock of consolidated corporation.—Where on the consolidation of corporations stockholders in the old corporations are entitled to exchange their shares for stock in the new corporation it has been held that the right to do so is not affected by the bankruptcy of the newly created corporation, it being said that the trustee stands, in respect to such rights, in exactly the same position as the bankrupt corporation stood prior to the bankruptcy. In re Interborough Consol. Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 267 Fed. 914.

Vol. I, p. 1196, sec. 70a (5).
[Policy of insurance.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 835.]

Effect of right to change beneficiary.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see In re Jens, (S. D. Ia. 1921) 273 Fed. 606.

Where the right to change the beneficiary is reserved to the insured it is said that whether, under the terms of the policies, the consent of the present beneficiary is necessary to the surrender of the policies for their present value, it is unnecessary to decide. If such consent is required, it is merely for the protection of the company against possible controversy or dispute, because, so far as present value is concerned as a property right, it belongs absolutely to the insured, and not to the beneficiary. In re Jens, (S. D. Ia. 1921) 273 Fed. 606.

Refusal of company to change beneficiary.—Where an insurance policy contains a provision empowering the insured to change the beneficiary, a trustee in bankruptcy may exercise the power conferred on the bankrupt, and in such case if the insurance company refuses to make the change and pay the cash surrender value to the trustee the court will compel it to do so. In re Greenberg, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 258, wherein it was said:

"There is a flat refusal to perform on the part of the insurer, for reasons having no relation to its own security, or indeed to its own business. It is avowed at bar that the company prefers to pay the bankrupt's wife the whole of the policy rather than pay the trustee the surrender value thereof.

"Bankruptcy is equity, and just as it will presume on occasion that that has been done which ought to be done, so on other occasions it will compel that to be done which ought to be done."

Exempt policies do not pass.—In In re Jens, (S. D. Ia. 1921) 273 Fed. 606, where the insured reserved the right to change the beneficiary the court, reversing a decision by the referee that the policy was exempt under the state law, said:

"It is quite apparent that the trustee is entitled to the surrender value of the policy, unless such surrender value is expressly exempted by section 1805, Code of Iowa 1897, which is as follows:

"Sec. 1805. Policy Exempt from Execution. A policy of insurance on the life of an individual, in the absence of an agreement or assignment to the contrary, shall inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children of said individual, independently of his creditors. The proceeds of an endowment policy payable to the assured on attaining a certain age shall be exempt from liability for any of his debts. Any benefit or indemnity paid under an accident policy shall be exempt to the assured, or in case of his death to the husband or wife and children of the assured, from his debts. The avails of all policies of life or accident insurance payable to the surviving widow shall be exempt from liability for all debts of such beneficiary contracted prior to the death of the assured, but the amount thus exempted shall not exceed five thousand dollars."

"In construing such a statute, the whole of the enactment must be considered together. Carefully reading the language of the Legislature it is quite apparent that we can find no words which cover the contention in the case at bar. The first sentence does not use the word 'exemption.' It states that 'a policy of insurance . . . shall inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children of said individual, independently of his creditors.' How can a policy of insurance 'inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children' under the circumstances of this case? The wife and children are making no claim and could make none. The person making the claim is not the 'husband'; he is the insured. He is demanding that a property interest belonging absolutely to him shall be held exempt, not to his wife or children, but to himself. The section cannot bear such construction. It is quite apparent that, when the Legislature used the words 'policy of insurance,' it meant 'proceeds' of a policy of insurance. This follows clearly from the latter words, 'inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children.' It means that upon the death of the husband the proceeds shall inure to the benefit of the wife, and in case the policy be upon the wife it shall upon her death inure to the benefit of the husband, and in each case that the children shall become vested with an interest therein.

"This conclusion is required by further language of the section, which exempts specifically the proceeds of an endowment policy, which, if the previous language meant the policy itself, would be entirely unnecessary, because the language 'policy of insurance' includes all forms of policies.

"From the foregoing it follows that the ruling by the referee must be reversed. The conclusion reached herein is not inconsistent with the opinion of Justice White in Holden v. Stratton, 198 U. S. 202, 25 Sup. Ct. 656, 49 L. ed. 1018, when due consideration is given to differences in the terms of the policies, and to the distinction between the statutes involved."

Payment of proceeds of policy to beneficiary on death of bankrupt without notice of bankruptcy.—After the death of the insured pending bankruptcy, and payment of the stipulated amount to the beneficiary named in the policy, in strict conformity to its terms, without notice of the bankruptcy or claim made by the trustee, there is no liability on the part of the insurance company to pay to the trustee the surrender value that, on complying with the terms of the policy as to change of beneficiary, he might have demanded. Frederick v. Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (1920) 75 Pa. Super. Ct. 77) wherein the court said:

"It is not enough to sustain the trustee's claim to say that the filing of the petition in bankruptcy was a caveat to all the world, and in effect an attachment and injunction, and that, on adjudication, title to the bankrupt's property became vested in the trustee. Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 14, 46 L. ed. 405, 411, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269. The asserted right of property arose out of a contract under which the insurance company had rights as well as the insured. The company's contract was to pay the stipulated amount to the beneficiary first named on receiving proof of death of the insured, unless the latter should have surrendered the policy, and, with the written approval of the head officer of the company, have changed the beneficiary. The requirement of such surrender and approval was for the protection of the company, so purposed that at least it should have notice before its liability under the policy was modified. Section 70a of the Bankruptcy Act cannot be construed to give to the trustee in bankruptcy a right as against the company to demand that the surrender value be made assets of the estate, as by a change in beneficiary, without timely notice to the company of a demand for such a change; for the section in its very words contemplates that the cash surrender value shall have been 'ascertained and stated to the trustee by the company issuing the policy.'

"In the present case, the company, having in good faith performed the contract according to its terms, without the notice that the contract called for as a condition of changing the terms, cannot be called upon to make the further payment demanded by the trustee. Frederick v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 152 C. C. A. 167, 239 Fed. 125."

Sales of assets free from incumbrances—Discretion of court.—An order directing that the property of a bankrupt be sold free of the lien of a mortgage is within the discretion of the court. In re Leslie-Judge Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 886.

Setting aside sales—Discretion of court to reopen estate.—A district court has power in its discretion to reopen an estate on a petition by a creditor to seek the cancellation of a judicial sale on the ground that the bankrupt had fraudulently concealed property from the trustee and in consequence of this and other material facts the price obtained at the sale was shockingly inadequate. In re Leigh, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 678.

Pleading and proof.—In an action to set aside a sale by the trustee as fraudulent where all the charges of fraud, collusion, concealment, misappropriation, and the like, are met with sworn denials which are positive, unqualified, and responsive to the allegations of the petitions in that regard and no evidence is offered to support the allegations of fraud and the like, the charges fall for want of supporting proof unless they are supported by admissions in the answer. Bray v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 533.

Tender of sum paid.—Where a deed is void because given to secure a usurious debt it will not be set aside under the Georgia law in a suit by the trustee unless there has been a tender of the debt secured with lawful interest thereon. Lanham v. State Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 458.

In a suit to set aside a trustee's sale it has been held that the failure of the plaintiff to offer to pay the sums bid at such sale is a sufficient ground for dismissing the bill. Lanham v. State Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 458.

Confirmation of sale—Discretion of court.—The court is warranted in refusing to confirm a sale for only 41½ per cent of the appraised value of the property under the discretion given it in such matters as well as because the property did not bring 75 per centum of the appraised value. Bryant v. Charles L. Stockhausen, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 921, wherein it was said:

"The court below was merely exercising a proper discretion in such matters, and this court will not disturb the exercise of that discretion, because it seems to have been wisely and properly exercised in this case. The petitioner cannot complain because he was not confirmed as the purchaser. He did not buy the land at the auction sale. He only offered to buy it, and that offer was only an unaccepted offer until it should be confirmed by the court, and this confirmation was refused by the court below."

Vol. I, p. 1212, sec. 70e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 846.]

Power conferred on trustee.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Osley v. Adams, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 114; Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 33; Minott v. Johnson, (Me. 1921) 113 Atl. 464.

The right of creditors to attack, on the ground of fraud, liens filed prior to the date of filing in bankruptcy is by this section vested in the trustee. In re Saunders, (E. D. N. C. 1921) 272 Fed. 1003.

Trustee vested with rights of creditor—Limitation of actions.—An action under this section brought by a trustee to recover property alleged to have been fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt is governed by the state statute of limitation. Davis v. Willey, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 397.

Void assignment of book accounts.—In the case of an assignment of book accounts as collateral for a loan, which transactions was ultra vires the assignee and void, the assignee cannot as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the borrower retain money collected on such accounts. In re Garden City Parlor Furniture Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 318.

Receivership for dummy corporation.—Where it appears that a corporation is and has always been a mere dummy or substitute corporation and nothing more than an agent of the bankrupt; that its property and assets are and always have been legally, or at least equitably, the property of the bankrupt; and that such property is in danger of being dissipated and fraudulently made away with, to the injury and depletion of the bankrupt's estate and to the detriment of its creditors, the trustee has power to maintain a bill to appoint a receiver for that corporation. Hardy v. Oregon Eilers Music House, (1921) 99 Ore. 340, 195 Pac. 563.

Creditor estopped.—Where the creditor by dealing with the grantee has estopped himself to assail a transfer as fraudulent the trustee who stands in his shoes cannot avoid it. Durrett v. Harris, (1921) 148 Ark. 4, 228 S. W. 386.

Question for jury.—The question whether a mortgage was made with intent to delay or defraud creditors has been held under the state law to be one for the jury. Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 33.

Vol. I, p. 1216, sec. 70e. [Jurisdiction.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 846.]

by the trustee under this section, see In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 330.

Effect of prior suit in state court.—An objection that a prior suit is pending in the state court is waived where the pendency of the former suit was not presented by plea or answer in the federal court, nor was objection at any time made in that court that a prior suit in a state court involved the same matters in controversy. In re Eilers Music House, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 330.

Vol. I, p. 1220, sec. 72.

Bar to extra allowance.—In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 267 Fed. 588. In a case where no objection was made by the attorneys representing nearly all the creditors to an allowance to the receiver in excess of the statutory commissions, because of the fact that the receiver was in constant attendance at the hearings before the commissioner, the court nevertheless declared that in view of the express limitation in this section it was unable to allow more to the receiver even by way of special compensation.

Vol. I, p. 1222, sec. 72b.

Corporation in hands of state court receiver.—Where a corporation has been placed in the hands of a receiver in proceedings in a state court the federal court will not deprive the state court of its jurisdiction by allowing the corporation to file a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. In re Associated Oil Co., (E. D. La. 1921) 271 Fed. 788.

BILLS OF LADING

1918 Supp., p. 73, sec. 1.

Purpose and effect of Act.—"The primary purpose of this law is to enlarge and enhance the negotiability features of 'order' bills of lading and by definitely fixing the law with respect to negotiability, and the imposition of greater responsibility upon carriers, to afford greater protection to those who in the course of commercial transaction handle and deal in such bills." Matter of Bills of Lading, (1919) 52 I. C. C. 671.

But in Commercial Nat. Bank v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., (1918) 175 N. C. 415, 95 S. E. 777, the court said:

"There is doubt if the law does or was intended to make bills of lading negotiable in the full sense of the term, that is, to the extent that ordinary commercial paper is so."

This act was said in Pioneer Trust Co. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., (1920) 204 Mo. App. 328, 224 S. W. 109, to alleviate to a great extent the hardship of the rule that a bill of lading which involved any violation of the interstate commerce law was void as to a bona fide purchaser. The act was, however, held to be inapplicable to a bill issued before its enactment.

Liability of carrier as warehouseman.—"The bills of lading act contains no provision respecting transition from liability of a common carrier to that of a warehouseman. Questions of this nature arising in connection with interstate shipments moving under bills of lading issued pursuant to the act to regulate commerce are necessarily federal questions and the question as to responsibility under the bill of lading is none the less a federal one because it must be resolved by the application of general principles of the common law." Matter of Bills of Lading, (1919) 52 I. C. C. 671.

Form or bill.—See generally Matter of Bills of Lading, (1919) 52 I. C. C. 671.

The four months' limitation formerly contained in a domestic bill of lading, with respect of the time within which claim for loss, damage, or damages could be filed, was held not unreasonable as applied to shipments involved in the case of Blackburn & Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (1920) 56 I. C. C. 439, wherein Wooley, Commissioner, said:

"On June 1, 1916, the defendants extended the time for filing claims from four to six months. The complainants argue that this is a recognition of the unreasonableness of the limitation attacked, and that the extension should be made retroactive. Such alteration in a tariff of course is not proof that the original provision was unreasonable; nor is the six months' limitation provided in the uniform bill of lading as prescribed by us in Bills of Lading, 52 I. C. C. 671, of itself proof of that fact. This provision was not specifically prescribed by us, but was arrived at by agreement, during the pendency of that case."

Turning car over to another carrier for further transportation as delivery by carrier.—The terminal carrier, by surrendering a car at destination to another carrier for further transportation, at the request of an employee of the latter, makes a disposal of such car in assumed termination and discharge of its obligations which, whether justified or not, is, in legal contemplation, a delivery, although in forwarding the car it used the original waybill, striking out the original destination and substituting a new one on the line of the new carrier's road. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. French, (1921) 254 U. S. 538, 41 S. Ct. 195, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1919) 204 Mich. 578, 171 N. W. 491.

Requiring surrender of bill of lading.—A delivery by a carrier in good faith to a person in possession of an order bill of lading properly indorsed, thus satisfying the provision of sec. 9 does not exonerate the carrier from liability to the shipper as for a conversion where it failed to require the surrender of the bill of lading, as provided in that instrument, if loss to the shipper or a subsequent purchaser of the bill results from such failure, but where the loss suffered is not the result of the failure to take up the bill, the mere failure to take it up does not defeat the exoneration. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. French, (1921) 254 U. S. 538, 41 S. Ct. 195, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (reversing (1919) 204 Mich. 578, 171 N. W. 491), wherein the court said: "There is nothing in the act which imposes upon the carrier a specific duty to the shipper to take up the bill of lading. Under § 8 the carrier is not obliged to make delivery except upon production and surrender of the bill of lading; but it is not prohibited from doing so. If, instead of insisting upon the production and surrender of the bill, it chooses to deliver in reliance upon the assurance that the deliverer has it, so far as the duty to the shipper is concerned, the only risk it runs is that the person who says that he has the bill may not have it. If such proves to be the case, the carrier is liable for conversion, and must, of course, indemnify the shipper for any loss which results. Such liability arises not from the statute, but from the obligation which the carrier assumes under the bill of lading."

1918 Supp., p. 74, sec. 9.

Physical "possession" of order bill.—It is the physical possession of the bill of lading which is made a justification for delivery by the provision of this section that a carrier is justified in delivering goods to one who is in possession of an order bill of lading indorsed in blank. It does not matter in what capacity the person holds possession of the bill of lading, whether as agent or on his own account, nor whether he holds it lawfully or unlawfully, so long as the carrier has no notice of any infirmity of title.

If the physical possession of a bill of lading were deemed legally the principals' possession, the physical delivery of the shipment to such agent at his request, later ratified by his principals, would likewise be deemed legally a delivery to them. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. French, (1921) 254 U. S. 538, 41 S. Ct. 195, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (reversing (1919) 204 Mich. 578, 171 N. W. 491), wherein the court said: "Was the delivery at Bindner's order one which the carrier was justified in making under the provisions of § 9 of the Federal Uniform Bills of Lading Act? Prior to the enactment of the Federal Uniform Bills of Lading Act, or of other applicable legislation, a carrier was not ordinarily relieved from liability to the consignor or owner for delivery of goods to a person not legally entitled to receive them, although such person was in possession of an order bill of lading, duly indorsed in blank, and surrendered it to the carrier at the time of delivery. Delivery was held not to be a justification, because the bill of lading, despite insertion therein of words of negotiability, did not become a negotiable instrument. Independently of statute (and, indeed, also under earlier state statutes) the insertion of words of negotiability had merely the effect of enabling title to the goods to be transferred by transfer of the document. See Berkley v. Watling, 7 Ad. & El. 29, 112 Eng. Reprint, 382, 2 Nev. & P. 178, 6 L. J. K. B. N. S. 195. But one who did not have a valid title to the goods could not, by transfer of the bill of lading, give a good title to a bona fide holder. Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. ed. 892. When, in the interests of commerce, the Federal Uniform

Bills of Lading Act extended to bills of lading certain characteristics of negotiable paper in order to protect a bona fide purchaser of such bills, it was deemed proper to afford also certain protection to the carrier. This was done, in part, by providing in § 9 that the carrier would be justified in making delivery to any person in possession of an order bill of lading, duly indorsed, with certain exceptions to be noted below. . . .

"The only exception to the rule justifying the carrier in making delivery to one in possession of an order bill of lading indorsed in blank, which is urged as applicable here, is where the carrier has information that the person in possession of the bill is not lawfully entitled to the goods."

Right to deliver to true owner without bill.

—Reading together sections 9, 18 and 19 "it becomes quite clear that Congress intended to confer upon carriers transporting goods in interstate commerce the right to deliver the goods to the true owner and to make such delivery a complete defense to an action by a shipper who holds an order bill of lading and who sues to recover damages for a failure to deliver the goods to him." Banik v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1920) 147 Minn. 175, 179 N. W. 899.

1918 Supp., p. 75, sec. 11.

Shipper a bona fide purchaser.—Shippers who took back a draft and attached bill of lading, with full knowledge that the terminal carrier had made delivery to another carrier without requiring a surrender of the bill of lading, as provided in that instrument, and that the drawee had refused to accept the shipment or honor the draft, cannot claim the protection of this section. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. French, (1921) 254 U. S. 538, 41 S. Ct. 195, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1919) 204 Mich. 578, 171 N. W. 491.

1918 Supp., p. 75, sec. 13.

Waiver of terms of bill.—In Decker & Sons v. Director General, (1919) 55 I. C. C. 453, it was contended that section 10 of the uniform bill of lading providing that "any alteration, addition, or erasure in this bill of lading, which shall be made without an indorsement thereof hereon, signed by the agent of the carrier issuing this bill of lading, shall be without effect, and this bill of lading shall be enforceable according to its original tenor," permitted a waiver of any of the terms or conditions of the bill of lading. In overruling this contention, the Interstate Commerce Commission said: "It obviously refers only to those provisions which are peculiar to a given bill of lading and which are subject to alteration, addition, or erasure, such as the description of the property, routing, etc., and does not authorize a waiver of those uniform provisions which are incorporated in the carrier's published tariffs and are presumed to be a part of the transportation contract, and, as such, binding upon both carrier and shipper."

Right to deliver to true owner without bill.—See annotation under sec. 9.

1918 Supp., p. 76, sec. 20.

Unnecessary enlargement of description in bill.—This section makes it the duty of the carrier in loading package freight to count the packages, but lays no duty on him to ascertain the kind, quantity, or weight. In loading bulk freight he must ascertain the kind and quantity. The fair implication is that he must state in the bill the number of packages so counted, and the kind and quantity of bulk freight so ascertained. If the description in the bill be enlarged by stating the nature of the contents of the packages, or the weight of them, it is voluntary and gratuitous, and the statement may be guarded and qualified as the carrier sees fit. Ellis v. Payne, (N. D. Ga. 1921) 274 Fed. 443, so holding in the case of cotton in permanent bales which is declared to be package freight.

1918 Supp., p. 77, sec. 21.

Discrepancies in elevator weights.—In Matter of Bills of Lading, (1919) 52 I. C. C. 671, certain shippers proposed the elimination from the uniform bill of lading of a provision that carriers should not be liable for "differences in the weights of grain seed or other commodities caused by . . . discrepancies in elevator weights." Regarding the advisability of such an elimination, the Interstate Commerce Commission said: "Under section 21 of the bills of lading act above referred to, where a shipper of bulk freight has installed and maintains adequate weighing facilities, the carrier must, upon written request, and after reasonable opportunity so to do, ascertain the kind and quantity of grain. This gives the carrier the opportunity of weighing the grain when it is shipped. The arrangement, however, does not provide a like opportunity at destination where, for instance, grain is delivered into an elevator and weighed by the elevator of consignee. The carrier is liable, both at common law and under the federal statute, for any actual loss of goods caused by it while in transit. If a difference in weights results from actual loss of the goods so caused by it, the carrier must pay the claim for such loss. Under the law it is the carrier's duty to collect, and the shipper's duty to pay, freight charges based upon correct, not estimated, weights. The claimed loss presents a question of fact. Whether or not a 'discrepancy' in elevator weights results from actual loss of the commodity or an error, human or mechanical, in the weighing operations, is a question of fact to be determined from all the evidence. The burden of proof to show what is the correct weight should depend, in a measure at least, upon which of the parties, carrier or shipper, is responsible for the accuracy of the weights. It would appear, therefore, that the disputed provision relative to 'discrepancies in elevator weights' is of no real effect in limiting the liability of the carrier and is mere surplusage."

1918 Supp., p. 77, sec. 22.

Fraud by agent in giving straight bill instead of order bill.—A carrier is liable for the fraudulent act of his agent in giving to a shipper a straight bill of lading when the shipper in effect requested an order bill. That the fraud was not willful is not important. Duholm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1920) 146 Minn. 1, 177 N. W. 772.

1918 Supp., p. 81, sec. 41.

Intent and presumption as to intent.—On a trial for forging and negotiating bills of lading an instruction has been held proper which defined the offense charged as always including the element of intent to defraud as an essential ingredient, and laid down the proposition that, if the accused received the bills of lading without the signature of the railway agent, and negotiated them to secure money, then the presumption would be he intended to cheat and defraud, and that unless he rebutted the presumption, or there was a reasonable doubt of his intent, he should be convicted. Jackson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 770.

CENSUS

Vol. II, p. 35, sec. 11. [First ed., vol. I, p. 738.]

This section was not repealed by the act of 1919. (Fed. St. Ann. 1919 Supp. p. 15) Holcomb v. Spikes, (Tex. 1921) 232 S. W. 891.

Bulletin as evidence.—A bulletin issued under this act will be judicially noticed and considered in evidence, despite a certificate of the director of census that the count was subject to correction. Holcomb v. Spikes, (Tex. 1921) 232 S. W. 891, wherein the court said:

"It is insisted that the Director of Census gave a certificate to the effect that the count for the census was subject to correction. If this certificate was authorized by the act, we do not believe it should be held that this evidenced that the census was not complete under the terms of the law when the Director had officially published and distributed bulletins that the population was over 10,000. It is not a certificate that the official count was incomplete or was not correct. In fact, his subsequent certificate shows it was correct, and that his bulletin had been properly issued. The bulletin, we believe, officially announced the population as shown by the list forwarded by the enumerators of Lubbock county and supervisors of the district, and that as filed in the archives of the census office it was open to the public. The statute authorized, if there was an incomplete or erroneous enumeration, that it could be amended or taken anew. The bulletin does not indicate that it was incomplete or negligently done, but rather indicates it may be subject to correction. It does not carry the idea that it was incomplete, but that it was complete. We think, when the bulletin was given to the public, officials who were required to act with reference thereto may take official notice that the enumeration had been made and was then in the archives of that office, subject to the inspection of the public in which the population of Lubbock county had been determined. The fact that it may be corrected does not indicate that the census was not complete and then a public document under the law."

1919 Supp., p. 27, sec. 34.

Prior act not repealed.—The act authorizing the public printer to print bulletins, etc. (2 Fed. St. Ann. p. 36, § 11) was not repealed by this act. (Holcomb v. Spikes, (Tex. 1921) 232 S. W. 891.

CHINESE EXCLUSION

Vol. II, p. 67, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. I, p. 774.]

Chinese person born in the United States — Estoppel.—There is said to be no principle of estoppel in favor of an applicant from the fact that his father and his two brothers were admitted to the United States as citizens thereof. White v. Chan Wy Sheung, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 764.

Burden of proof.—A son of a Chinese person who seeks admission as the son of a native born citizen of the United States has the burden to show that his father was born in the United States. White v. Chan Wy Sheung, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 764.

Hearing.—A denial of a fair hearing cannot be established by showing that the decision of the immigration officials was against the weight of testimony. White v. Chan Wy Sheung, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 764.

Vol. II, p. 71, sec. 6. [First ed., vol. I, p. 778.]

Wives and minor children of Chinese laborers.—A Chinese person, first permitted to enter the United States in 1901 as a resident merchant's minor son, but who subsequently acquired the status of laborer, and as such is entitled to remain in the United States, may not properly demand that his wife and minor children, who were born in China, and have never resided elsewhere, be permitted to come into this country and reside with him. The Federal statutes exclude all Chinese persons belonging to the class defined as laborers except those specifically and definitely exempted, and there is no such exemption of a resident laborer's wife and minor children. Yee Won v. White, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 504, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 792, 170 C. C. A. 86.

Vol. II, p. 76, sec. 11. [First ed., vol. I, p. 782.]

Prosecution under Immigration Act.—A person bringing Chinese laborers into the United States, who, because of failure actually to land the aliens in the United States, did not proceed far enough to violate this section, may be prosecuted under the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, § 8, (see 1918 Supp. p. 220) the latter section being broader and more comprehensive in its terms. U. S. v. Butt, (1920) 254 U. S. 38, 41 S. Ct. 37, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Indictment.—In Kaphan v. U. S., (C. C.

A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 323, there were two indictments against the defendant. In one it was charged that he and others conspired to bring into the United States, and to cause to be brought into and to aid and abet the bringing into and landing in the United States, through the port of San Francisco, Chinese persons who were not lawfully entitled to enter or remain in the United States; in the other he, with others, was charged with having conspired to willfully and unlawfully conceal, remove, mutilate, obliterate, and destroy records, papers, and other documents filed and deposited in a public office, to wit, the immigration office at Angel Island, Cal. In determining the sufficiency of the latter indictment, the court said:

"It is said that the indictment is defective, in that there is no allegation as to what Kaphan did with the records which he would use in bringing and causing to be brought into the United States Chinese persons not entitled to enter or remain in the United States. The point is not well taken. The indictment, after alleging that Kaphan with others conspired to do the things charged as heretofore stated, averred that in furtherance of the conspiracy and to effect the object thereof one of the defendants, Yow, delivered to another defendant, Akers, certain letters addressed to Chinese applicants for admission to the United States awaiting examination to enter the United States at the immigration station at Angel Island, Cal., and that the letters contained questions and answers to be used by the applicants as a means of gaining admission to the United States. The indictment was drawn under section 37 of the Penal Code, and section 11 of the Chinese Immigration Act (section 11, Act May 6, 1882, as amended by Act July 5, 1884). Section 11 provides that any person who shall knowingly bring into or cause to be brought into the United States, or aid or abet the landing in the United States, from any vessel, of any Chinese person not lawfully entitled to enter the United States, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. Inasmuch as the charge was for conspiring to violate the section just referred to, it was unnecessary to allege in detail what Kaphan did with the records which were delivered, and which contained questions to be used by the applicants as a means of gaining admission to the United States."

Vol. II, p. 77, sec. 12. [First ed., vol. I, p. 782.]

Temporary admission under bond.—Where a Chinaman has been permitted to come into this country temporarily on giving a bond to appear for any hearing or hearings to finally determine the question of his right to enter or remain, his rights must be determined as of the date of his application for entry. He cannot by engaging in a mercantile enterprise acquire a residential status. Ex p. Wu Kao, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 351.

Vol. II, p. 82, sec. 7. [First ed., vol. I, p. 770.]

The purpose of readmission certificates is to avoid detention and to facilitate the readmission of Chinese aliens who are entitled to return to the United States under the Chinese Exclusion Laws. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Status acquired by domicile.—A Chinese merchant once lawfully domiciled in the United States does not thereby acquire a status which entitles him to readmission. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Return certificate as determining right of re-entry.—Such certificates have no binding effect as adjudications of the right to return. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Vol. II, p. 86, sec. 13. [First ed., vol. I, p. 772.]

Repeal of section.—The right to a judicial hearing given by this section is taken away by the Immigration Act of Feb. 5, 1917 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 211 et seq.) in the case of deportation proceeding against a Chinese woman for prostitution, though her entry into the United States was prior to the passage of that act. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801.

Vol. II, p. 94, sec. 3. [First ed., vol. I, p. 762.]

Sufficiency.—Evidence held insufficient to entitle defendant to remain in the United States, see Doo Fook v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 860.

Burden and measure of proof.—“The burden of the attack is upon the government; but that does not mean that the government must in any event introduce proof to show that the defendant is not a citizen of the United States. The attack may be made upon the evidence produced on behalf of the defendant upon the hearing, and if that evidence is contradictory, or insufficient to show that the defendant was born in the United States, the court would be justified in so holding, notwithstanding the previous action of the Executive Department of the government in giving him a landing. In other words, the burden of proof placed on the defendant by the statute in a deportation case is not shifted until that proof establishes to the satisfaction of the court his lawful right to be and remain in the United States.” Doo Fook v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 860.

Vol. II, p. 104, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. I, p. 760.]

Chinese merchants.—In general.—A merchant is a person engaged in buying and selling merchandise, who during the time does not engage in the performance of any manual labor, except such as is necessary in the conduct of his business as such merchant. The words “laborer or laborers” include both skilled and unskilled manual laborers; the statute instancing certain lines of work which may be considered as illustrative. A merchant may therefore do certain labor without losing his status as a merchant, but that labor must be done in and about the conduct of his business, and be necessary thereto. If he goes beyond this, and engages in manual labor not connected with his business as a merchant, he is to be classed as a laborer; his status being manifested by the kind of work he does. Chan Gai Jan v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 869.

Conclusiveness of finding.—The determination of the Department of Labor as to whether a Chinaman is a merchant or a laborer within the intentment of the Chinese exclusion legislation is final and conclusive where there is competent evidence of a persuasive character to sustain it. Chan Gai Jan v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 869.

CITIZENSHIP

Vol. II, p. 119, sec. 1996. [First ed., vol. I, p. 788.]

A person will be denied admission to citizenship where the evidence discloses that he enlisted in the United States army; that he later deserted therefrom; that he was subsequently taken into custody, tried by a general court-martial upon the charge of desertion, in violation of the forty-seventh Article of War, found guilty of such charge, and sentenced, among other punishments, to be dishonorably discharged from the service and to be confined at hard labor for one year. In re Gnadt, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 269 Fed. 189.

Vol. II, p. 123, sec. 3. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 69.]

American woman married to resident foreigner.—To same effect as original annotation, see Techt v. Hughes, (1920) 229 N. Y. 222, 128 N. E. 185, 11 A. L. R. 166.

Alien wife of alien husband.—The alien wife of an alien husband cannot become a naturalized citizen of the United States. In re Guary, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 968.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Vol. II, p. 143, sec. 4. [First ed., vol. IV, p. 740.]

Exclusion as reversible error.—A conviction of a negro will be reversed where negroes were excluded from the jury solely on account of their color, the violation of this act rendering void the action of the jury commissioners in selecting the panel. Ware v. State, (1920) 146 Ark. 321, 225 S. W. 626.

CLAIMS

Vol. II, p. 179, sec. 3477. [First ed., vol. II, p. 7.]

Railway company succeeding to claims of another by consolidation.—The prohibition of this section, against the transfer or assignment of claims against the United States, does not preclude a recovery by a railway company against the United States for charges for transportation services originally payable to another railway company to whose rights the former company has succeeded through merger or consolidation sanctioned by state laws. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 611, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 107.

Vol. II, p. 216, sec. 3466. [First ed., vol. II, p. 45.]

Rights of sureties paying claims.—See annotation under R. S. sec. 3468, infra, this page.

R. S. sec. 3468 contrasted.—“Section 3468, applying an established rule of the law of subrogation (Lidderdale v. Robinson, 12 Wheat. 594, 596, 6 L. ed. 740, 741), declares that when a surety pays to the United States the money due upon . . . [a] bond, such surety . . . shall have the like priority for the recovery . . . of the moneys . . . as is secured to the United States. Section 3466, embodying the common-law rule by which the sovereign has priority over other creditors of an insolvent (United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 35, 8 L. ed. 308, 310), declares that the debts due to the United States shall first be satisfied. There is no conflict between the two sections, which are substantially a re-enactment and extension of the provisions of § 65 of the Act of March 2, 1799, chap. 22, 1 Stat. at L. 627, 676.” U. S. v. National Surety Co., (1920)

254 U. S. 73, 41 S. Ct. 29, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Income tax.—It is said that in a certain sense an income tax is due as soon as there is an income but that the tax is “solvendum in futuro” and becomes payable only when the solution or assessment is accomplished. Pennsylvania Cement Co. v. Bradley Contracting Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 1003.

Receivers.—While receivers are not mentioned by name or title in this and the following section, yet they are within the purview of the act. Pennsylvania Cement Co. v. Bradley Contracting Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 1003.

Vol. II, p. 222, sec. 3467. [First ed., vol. II, p. 49.]

Receiver.—It seems that a receiver of a corporation who hastened distribution of the estate before the due date of an income tax and then declared that he had had nothing to pay it with would be personally responsible. And it is further declared that any court which facilitates such a distribution would be chargeable with judicial wrongdoing. Pennsylvania Cement Co. v. Bradley Contracting Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 1003.

Vol. II, p. 223, sec. 3468. [First ed., vol. II, p. 50.]

Rights of sureties paying claims.—The United States, having been given by R. S. § 3466, (see vol. 2, p. 216) priority over other creditors of an insolvent debtor, is entitled to such priority, as against a surety on the debtor's bond to the government, for the amount of its claim remaining unpaid after the surety has paid the full amount of the liability on the bond, although by this section, when a surety pays to the United States the money due upon a bond, such surety is given like priority for the recovery of the money as is secured to the United States. While the priority given the surety by such statute attaches as soon as the obligation upon the bond is discharged, it cannot ripen into enjoyment unless or until the whole debt due the United States is satisfied. U. S. v. National Surety Co., (1920) 254 U. S. 73, 41 S. Ct. 29, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 62.

COLLISIONS

Vol. II, p. 389, art. 16. [First ed., vol. II, p. 160.]

Application of article to sailing vessels.—The rule regarding moderate speed in a fog applies to sailing vessels as well as to steamers, although different considerations enter into the determination of what is moderate speed for a sailing vessel. Adams v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 780.

Vol. II, p. 393, art. 20. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Presumption as to fault.—Where a steamer and schooner are approaching each other. it is the duty of the schooner to hold her course and of the steamer to keep out of her way, and the fact that the steamer failed to do so raises a presumption of fault on her part. Crowell v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 227.

Vol. II, p. 394, art. 21. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Privileged vessel to keep course.—"It is the duty of the privileged vessel to keep 'on her course until a departure is necessary to avoid immediate danger,' and the rule as to speed is the same as that regarding the course. The fact that subsequent events show that stopping and backing on the part of the privileged vessel would have avoided collision does not prove negligence." The Binghamton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 69.

Rule applied.—Where a privileged steamer maintained her course and speed up to one minute of the time of the collision prior to which time it was possible for the other to avoid her by porting, she will not be held in fault, at least in the absence of some distinct indication that the burdened vessel was about to fail in her duty. The Binghamton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 69.

Vol. II, p. 395, art. 23. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Liability for failure to lessen speed.—It has been held that it is a fault for a vessel to approach at full speed a light the color and significance of which is not clear. Crowell v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 227, holding a steamer to be at fault in thus approaching a sailing vessel.

Vol. II, p. 396, art. 24. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Overtaking vessel.—In The Stortind; (E. D. Va. 1920) 264 Fed. 1013, the evidence was held to show that a vessel was overtaking another.

Vol. II, p. 398, art. 29. [First ed., vol. II, p. 163.]

Failure to maintain lookout.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see The Brandon, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 176.

Position of lookout.—In case of a fog a lookout should be posted on the forward deck. Adams v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 780.

Lookouts during fog.—It is negligence for a schooner to carry full sail and maintain unnecessarily a speed of approximately 6 knots through a fog, and to proceed for a period of time which, though short, was vitally important, without a lookout, and without sharply using her fog horn after she had become aware of the presence of the steamer, and to have no officer on deck in charge of her movements, and authorized to give prompt orders as the vessels approached each other. Adams v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 780. And a steamer proceeding at immoderate speed through a fog without a properly posted lookout is guilty of gross negligence. Adams v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 780, holding a speed of eight or nine knots to be immoderate.

Mutual fault.—In The Brandon, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 176, both vessels were held to have been mutually at fault in violating this article and other rules of navigation.

Vol. II, p. 407, Rule 15. [First ed., vol. II, p. 171.]

Evidence.—It has been held that proof tending to show an established and long-continued custom on the part of a steamer never to check merely for fog, no matter how dense, but to continue at full speed, would be distinctly relevant toward determining an otherwise doubtful issue of fact, whether the boat on a particular occasion, while under the same management and the same master, did depart from that custom and for the first time show caution, instead of utter recklessness. The Choctaw, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 114.

Vol. II, p. 411, Rule 24. [First ed., vol. II, p. 172.]

Collision in St. Clair Flats.—In the Perseus, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 633, which involved the liability for a collision occurring in the St. Clair Flats in consequence of which a tug and scow colliding with a steamer were sunk, the tug was held at fault sufficient to account for the collision, in failing to hear the one-blast response of the Perseus; not hearing it, in continuing to navigate thereafter on the assumption that a port to port passing agreement had been made; and also in giving a cross-signal when the boats were but a few hundred feet apart, and executing it without waiting for response from the Perseus. The court also declared that the contention that the steamer violated the duty of an unencumbered steamer to keep clear of a craft burdened with a tow was in its opinion, properly answered by the trial court in the statement that the collision did not happen because the tug was encumbered with a tow and could not be maneuvered and handled with the same freedom as a tug thus not encumbered, and the weather was calm, and such wind as was blowing would aid rather than hinder the tug in keeping on her proper course.

Vol. II, p. 414, Rule 28. [First ed., vol. II, p. 173.]

Lookouts.—In the case of a tug having a barge in tow failure to have a lookout stationed forward was held to be negligence in Mylroie v. British Columbia Mills Tug, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 449.

In The Choctaw, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 114, a case of a collision in a fog, a vessel was held liable for not maintaining a proper lookout where the lookout was stationed two hundred feet back of the bow.

Vol. II, p. 419, art. 11. [First ed., vol. II, p. 176.]

Duty to avoid collision.—The obligation on the part of free vessels to avoid risk of collision with those incumbered, or at rest, is imperative, and one that the admiralty courts must enforce, having regard to the perils of navigation and the importance of the rule of the road in respect thereto. The Shinsei Maru, (E. D. Va. 1920) 266 Fed. 548.

Duty of anchored vessel.—In the case of an anchored vessel it is its duty to hold its place so long as there is any doubt as to what an approaching vessel may do. And such a ship not otherwise in fault is not to be held blameworthy because those in charge of her do not instantly figure out all the possibilities which upon calm reflection might be suggested by the unexpected movements of a vessel approaching them, and that men are not to be held liable for not possessing unusual quickness of apprehension. All that can be required is the exercise of reasonable care and skill. The Ceylon Maru, (D. C. Md. 1920) 266 Fed. 396.

Collision not to be anticipated.—An anchored vessel is not required to contemplate the probability of a collision happening in broad daylight, as well as at night, or in a thick fog, and at all times, in calm as well as in stormy weather, and to keep officers and men standing by, ready to pay out chain at a moment's notice. Before it can be required, there must be notice of some conditions out of the ordinary, which makes such a precaution one that an ordinarily skillful and prudent mariner would take. The Ceylon Maru, (D. C. Md. 1920) 266 Fed. 396.

Evidence; burden of proof.—In the case of a collision with an anchored vessel it is incumbent on the vessel colliding with it to show, where it claims that its steering gear would not work, what was the cause of the failure of the steering gear to function, or what were all the possible causes, if there were more than one, and then to prove that no precautions reasonably requirable of her would have prevented its or their operation. The Ceylon Maru, (D. C. Md. 1920) 266 Fed. 396.

Vol. II, p. 420, art. 12. [First ed., vol. II, p. 177.]

Use of flare up light.—In The Lafayette, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 917, a sloop yacht was held not to be guilty of negligence in not using a flare up light. Being a privileged vessel it was declared to be her right and duty to keep her course and speed and a steamship which should have seen her but did not, because it did not have a proper lookout, was held liable for the collision.

Vol. II, p. 420, art. 15. [First ed., vol. II, p. 177.]

Vessels at anchor—In general.—A vessel at anchor is not obliged to blow danger whistles unless there is some reason therefor. Ringing a fog bell and keeping a man on deck is sufficient. Central Railroad of New Jersey No. 27, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 297.

Vol. II, p. 421, art. 16. [First ed., vol. II, p. 178.]

Source and purpose of rule.—"The rule was made a part of the international code adopted by Act of Congress of August 19, 1890, 26 Stat. 320. It became effective on July 1, 1897, by the President's proclamation. 29 Stat. 885. It was adopted to prevent collisions at sea. But Congress has also made the rule applicable for harbors, rivers, and inland waters by the Act of June 7, 1897, 30 Stat. 99." The No. 25, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 331.

Rule mandatory, see The New London, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 83.

Moderate speed.—A vessel proceeding in a fog in frequented waters at such speed that she cannot stop within seeing distance of another vessel is going at an immoderate rate of speed and is at fault for collision. The Albatross, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 285.

Mutual fault.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see The New London, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 83.

In the Mexico-Marú, (W. D. Wash. 1921) 270 Fed. 800, a vessel moving from harbor at night and vessel at anchor with which it collided held mutually at fault, the former for proceeding at excessive speed in view of conditions as to fog and the anchored vessel for failure to ring her fog bell.

Navigation in fog.—Regarding the speed of a vessel while navigating in fog, the court, in The City of Richmond, (D. C. Md. 1920) 265 Fed. 722, said:

"The moderate speed to which a vessel under such conditions as those which confronted the City of Richmond must limit herself means 'a speed so slow that the vessel can be stopped within the distance at which another vessel can be seen.' If the fog is so dense as to justify the master in believing that another vessel going at a moderate speed could not be seen at the distance in which he could stop his vessel, and that the two vessels would be in danger of collision, then the master should anchor and give the statutory signals." The City of Richmond was going at such a speed in the direction from which fog bells were sounded that, after she had seen the motionless Texan, she could not stop in time to avoid a crash. Her fault is clear."

Burden of proof.—In a case involving this rule it is declared that when a vessel disregards a rule of navigation, she has the burden of showing that her disobedience did not contribute to the injury which followed. The No. 25, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 331.

Evidence held to show disregard of this rule by steamer colliding with tug in Hudson River. The No. 25, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 331.

Vol. II, p. 424, art. 18, Rule 1. [First ed., vol. II, p. 178.]

Mutual fault.—A tug with a tow coming out of a slip when her master knew that another tug was crossing the slip and would necessarily interfere with his exit, and the second tug crossing the slip without a proper lookout were both held to be at fault in The Progressive, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 207.

In The Orange, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 458, a steamer and a ferry boat collided. Both vessels were held to be at fault, the steamer, which was the burdened vessel, for attempting to cross the bow of a ferry boat instead of under her stern, and the ferry boat in increasing her speed after knowledge that the steamer was disregarding her signals.

A tug passing down the channel of a river with a tow and hawser of unusual length and in violation of the rules and regulations, thereby unduly obstructing the channel, and a steam vessel coming into the channel across anchorage grounds, which were crowded with shipping, at too great a rate of speed to avoid a collision, were both held to be at fault in The Berkley, (E. D. Va. 1921) 271 Fed. 35.

Failure to act on signals.—A vessel has been held liable for a collision with a boat being towed where those in charge of the vessel were depending and acting, not upon what the sailing lights disclosed to them was the course of the tow, but upon their assumption of what the course was, and the collision was brought about by their assumption turning out to be wrong. They failed to observe the sailing lights of the tow. The Senator Penrose, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 785.

Vol. II, p. 426, Rule V. [First ed., vol. II, p. 179.]

Rights of ferryboats operating near ships.—Ferryboats "when operating in or close by the entrances to their own slips, have rights somewhat superior to those of other craft in the immediate vicinity. The Breakwater, 155 U. S. 252, 15 Sup. Ct. 99, 39 L. ed. 139. These rights, however, are no greater than those reasonably required for the proper and efficient navigation of the privileged boats. Carroll v. City of New York, 249 Fed. 453, 161 C. C. A. 411. They must maintain a sharp lookout for craft passing up and down the stream, and, once safely clear of their racks, are bound to navigate with respect to other craft in accordance with the rules of the road." The Hazelton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 815.

Vol. II, p. 427, Rule VIII. [First ed., vol. II, p. 179.]

Rule to be applied.—In the following case a vessel was held at fault for violation of this rule. The Plymouth, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 461.

Vol. II, p. 428, art. 19. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Change by agreement.—As to the duties and obligations which arise where there is a change by agreement, it has been said:

"On the whole, we are disposed to think that any agreement to change the usual rules should be treated as creating thereafter a position of special circumstances. If so, we think that, although the proposal emanates from the privileged vessel, and should be taken as meaning that she will undertake actively to keep out of the way, it need not absolve the burdened vessel from her similar and original duty also to keep out of the way, nor will it impose on her a rigid duty to hold her course and speed. It is true that that duty is imposed by the rules generally as a correlative to the duty to keep out of the way, but only in cases where no agreement has been reached. Some convention is essential when neither knows the other's purposes, but when both have agreed upon a maneuver by an exchange of signals, their accord should be left for execution by movements adapted to the circumstances. For example, if the angle of crossing is wide, it will usually be best for the originally burdened vessel to hold her course and speed; but, if it be narrow, it is safest for both to starboard and pass at a greater distance. No doubt the proposal involves the proposer in a duty to give a wide enough margin for safety, even though the assenting vessel do not starboard." The Newburgh, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 436.

Duty of privileged vessel.—When a burdened vessel decides to "keep out of the way" by crossing the bow of the privileged vessel the duty of the latter is to cooperate and she need not keep her course. The Newburgh, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 436.

Risk assumed by burdened vessel.—"It is good law that, when the burdened vessel decides to 'keep out of the way' by crossing the bows of the privileged vessel, though she gets an assent to such a proposal, she assumes the risks involved in choosing that method." The Newburgh, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 436.

Vol. II, p. 430, art. 20. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Presumption of fault.—In case of a collision between a steamship and a sailing vessel a strong case must be made out if the sailing vessel is to be held at fault. The Lafayette, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 917.

Rule applied.—Schooner held not to be on course involving risk of collision long enough to apprise an overtaking steamship of the risk, so as to impose the duty upon her to keep out of the way as prescribed by this article. The Helen Fairlamb, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 271 Fed. 507.

Vol. II, p. 433, art. 22. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Rule applied.—In the Gowanus, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 269 Fed. 659, a tug having barge in tow was held liable for attempting to cross bow of ferry boat and the ferry boat was held to be at fault for failure to give whistle signal until it was too close to the tow of the tug to maneuver safely at the speed at which it was going with the tide.

Vol. II, p. 434, art. 24. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Collision held fault of overtaking vessel.—In The Hampden, (S. D. Ga. 1920) 267 Fed. 464, a collision was held to be the fault of the overtaking vessel whether attributable to the movement of the engines of that vessel or to the suction of the overtaken vessel.

Vol. II, p. 436, art. 25. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

When safe and practicable.—In The Klatawa, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 266 Fed. 120, the court said regarding the duties of vessels under this article:

"'When safe and practicable' is intended to cover the reasonable necessities of practical navigation. The Three Brothers, 170 Fed. 48, 95 C. C. A. 322. A vessel intending to enter a narrow channel should so maneuver on approaching the entrance as to leave ample room for outcoming vessels to pass port to port, approaching the channel from the side she must keep after entering; and a vessel leaving a narrow channel should pass out, keeping to its starboard side of the channel, until she is well clear of the entrance, and should not change her course to port until she is well clear of vessels passing in." To same effect, see The Admiral Watson, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 266 Fed. 122.

Determination of question whether narrow channel.—It is not the mere physical dimensions of a strait or passage of water that determines whether it shall be called a narrow channel or not. It is the kind or character of navigating use to which that water is put. The Hokendaqua, (D. C. N. Y. 1919) 270 Fed. 270.

Effect of custom.—A custom of vessels leaving a certain point to pursue a certain course through a narrow channel which custom is one devised for their own convenience, not based on any necessity of navigation, distinctly not tending to safety, and by no means universal, does not excuse a violation of the rule provided in this article. The Hokendaqua, (D. C. N. Y. 1919) 270 Fed. 270.

Tug with tow navigating channel.—In The Pembrokehire, (D. C. Md. 1920) 269 Fed. 851, a steamship was held at fault for a collision with one of several barges which were being towed.

Upper New York Harbor.—The channel between Throgg's Neck and Willet's Point has been held to be a narrow channel within the Inland Rules. The Hokendaqua, (D. C. N. Y. 1919) 270 Fed. 270. The court said:

"I am of opinion that it is, not because it is of any definite width, or measures any particular number of yards across, but because it is a body of water so much used and used in such a manner as to render the application of article 25 both proper and necessary."

Buzzard's Bay.—In The North America, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 273 Fed. 263, tugs in charge of tows were held mutually at fault for collision occurring in a narrow ice channel.

Rule applied.—In The Klatawa, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 266 Fed. 120, two power boats which collided in a narrow channel leading from a lake to a bay were held to be mutually at fault, one for not giving a timely signal on approaching the channel and the other for not keeping to that part of the fairway on starboard side of the vessel.

In The Sif, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 166, a tug with barges in tow was held to be partially at fault for a collision because it was navigating on the wrong side of a narrow channel in violation of this article.

In The Admiral Watson, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 266 Fed. 122, a schooner and steamship were held to be mutually at fault for a collision in a narrow channel, the former on the ground that, although she was the privileged vessel, she maintained her course and speed after it became apparent that a collision was imminent, and the latter because she was not in the fairway in accordance with the provisions of this article, failed to answer the schooner's signals and did not maintain a proper lookout.

In The Amolco, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 614, which was a case of a collision between a steam trawler and a steamship in Lower New York Harbor on a clear day, the trawler was held at fault where it was the duty of the steamer to hold her course and speed and the trawler failed to perform her duty to give way.

Vol. II, p. 440, art. 27. [First ed., vol. II, p. 181.]

Holding course when danger imminent.—In The Albatross, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 285, a vessel leaving her pier was held to be negligent in reversing her engines when another vessel suddenly appeared in a fog headed directly at her, it being the duty of the former vessel to keep her course and of the other vessel to pass under her stern.

Special circumstances.—In the case of a collision between a tug going up a river with a tow and a steam vessel manoeuvring so as to slip in broadside between piers, the situation was held to be one which under this article required each vessel to navigate with prudence so as to avoid immediate danger. The Coamo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 686.

In The Helen Fairlamb, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 271 Fed. 507, a schooner in attempting to change her course immediately after crossing an overtaking steamship's bow, and in failing to keep a proper lookout was held guilty of a failure to give due regard to special circumstances as provided by this article and hence to be solely in fault for the resultant collision.

Inevitable accident.—The word "inevitable" must be considered as a relative term, and construed, not absolutely, but reasonably with regard to the circumstances of each particular case. The Anna C. Minch, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 192. The court in applying the rule stated held in this case that a collision due to the breaking away of a vessel properly moored to a dock and her drifting against another, which was caused by the breaking of an ice dam during a spring freshet, was an inevitable accident for which she could not be held liable.

Vessel at anchor.—In The Beaverton, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 273 Fed. 539, a vessel at anchor on anchorage ground where she had a right to be was held not to be chargeable with joint fault for collision with a vessel in charge of four tugs, where the latter vessel was not under control which fact, however, was not discovered until the two vessels were about a length apart.

Burden of proof.—What the law would normally call a tort becomes an accident if its infliction was inevitable in the technical admiralty sense; that is, that it was of such a sort that it would not have been prevented by the use of that degree of reasonable care and attention which the situation demanded. The burden, of course, is heavily upon [the party] asserting such a defense. The Anna C. Minch, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 192.

Vol. II, p. 442, art. 29. [First ed., vol. II, p. 181.]

Duty to have lookout was held to be imperative in the New London, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 83.

A lookout should be given no other work which interferes with that duty and this is particularly true on congested waters in a fog. The Albatross, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 273 Fed. 285.

Vol. II, p. 446, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 30.]

Lights on scows.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Sif, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 166.

Vol. II, p. 453, sec. 4233, Rule seven. [First ed., vol. II, p. 186.]

Colliding vessels without lights held mutually at fault.—See The Cushing, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 570.

Vol. II, p. 457, sec. 4233, Rule eighteen. [First ed., vol. II, p. 190.]

Failure to keep to right held to render vessel liable for collision. The Shinsei Maru, (E. D. Va. 1920) 266 Fed. 548.

Vol. II, p. 471, sec. 4412. [First ed., vol. II, p. 201.]

Pilot rules held not inconsistent with provision.—See The John D. Rockefeller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 67. The pilot rules referred to in this case were as follows:

"Rule 1. When steamers are approaching each other from opposite directions, the signal for passing shall be one short and distinct blast of the whistle to alter course to starboard so as to pass on the port side of the other, and two short and distinct blasts of the whistle to alter course to port so as to pass on the starboard side of the other.

"When two vessels are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, the helms of both shall be put to port, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

"When an ascending steamer is approaching a descending steamer, the pilot of the ascending steamer shall give the first signal for passing, which shall be promptly answered by the same signal by the pilot of the descending steamer, if safe to do so, and both shall be governed accordingly; but if the pilot of the descending steamer deem it dangerous to take the side indicated by the ascending steamer, he shall immediately signify the fact by sounding the alarm or danger signal of four or more short and rapid blasts of the whistle, and it shall be the duty of the pilot of the ascending steamer to answer by a signal of four or more short and rapid blasts of the whistle, and the engines of both steamers shall be immediately stopped, and backed if necessary, until the signals for passing are given and answered. After sounding the alarm signal by both steamers, the pilot of the descending steamer shall indicate by his whistle the side on which he desires to pass, and the pilot of the ascending steamer shall govern himself accordingly, the descending steamer being entitled to the right of way.

"Where possible the signals for passing must be made, answered and understood before the steamers have arrived at a distance of half a mile of each other."

Effect of customs of river.—"The customs of the river are, of course, subordinate to the statutory rules and to the pilot rules; but, when not inconsistent with those rules, they should be observed for promoting both dispatch and safety, and the violation of an established custom of this sort is attributed to a vessel as a fault. On the Mississippi river the recognized applicable customs, established, we think, by the weight of the evidence in this case, and recognized in all the cases we have been able to find on the subject, are these: Where the navigation is not materially affected by bends or other special conditions, the descending vessel should keep in the middle of the stream, and the ascending vessel should keep to her right side of the river. But, where there are bends, the ascending vessel has a right to run the points, and the descending vessel to run the bends; that is, the ascending vessel should take the course from the point on one side of the river to the nearest point on the other, to avoid the resistance of the current by keeping in the eddy water near the bank, while the descending vessel should keep the main channel current, following the bends, thus using the force of the current." The John D. Rockefeller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 67, wherein it was said: "As all vessels navigating the Mississippi river should observe these rules and customs, navigators have a right to expect their observance by each other."

Duty where signals misunderstood.—"Where it is evident to a navigator of a vessel that his signals are misunderstood, he should immediately stop and reverse until his signals are understood, and he will be held at fault for failure to do so." The John D. Rockefeller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 67.

Duty where other vessels disregarding rules.—"A rule of caution laid down by the courts—to be applied, however, with great discrimination—is that, when one vessel sees, or should see, that another is disregarding the required precautions against collision, and fails to take reasonable precaution herself, in view of the remissness of the other vessel, both will be held at fault." The John D. Rockefeller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 67.

COPYRIGHT

Vol. II, p. 546, sec. 1 (a). [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 81.]

Title held as trustee.—Where one of several co-authors obtains a copyright in the joint work in his individual name, the legal title thereby vested in him is held in trust for his co-authors. Maurel v. Smith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 211.

Vol. II, p. 548, sec. 1 (e). [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 81.]

"Manufactured" goods—Disc records.—In Ricordi & Co. v. Columbia Graphophone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 822, it was held that disc records were "manufactured" within the United States within the meaning of this section where eight of the nine steps in the process of "manufacture" of the commercial records were taken by the defendant in the United States, and that the ninth step, or the step which resulted, speaking in the common vernacular, in putting the "finishing touches" upon the disc, was taken by the defendant at its factory in Toronto, Canada, where the various parts, such as wax blanks, wax masters, wax matrices, mother matrices, stamping shells and backed-up stampers, were shipped after they had been manufactured, as above stated, within the United States. The court said:

"In other words, the 'manufacture,' as I see it, commenced when the song was sung by the artist and recorded upon the wax master record, and every step taken thereafter, up to and including the one described in paragraph '8,' was taken within the territorial limits of the United States.

"In reaching a conclusion in respect of the issue presented, I am frank to confess that in view of the fact that there are practically no judicial 'signboards' hung along the pathway that I have been forced to travel to 'point the way,' I have been much vexed in reaching a conclusion."

Vol. II, p. 553, sec. 5. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 83.]

What may be copyrighted—Book previously published abroad in foreign language.—In Italian Book Co. v. Cardilli, (S. D. N. Y.

1918) 273 Fed. 619, it appeared that an Italian wrote a song in Italy, and another Italian furnished music therefor; both words and music were published in Naples in 1913, and forthwith copyrighted in accordance with the law of Italy. Each copy of said words and music sold, stated in Italian who was the proprietor, that said proprietor owned the rights for all countries, and that all rights were reserved. The song was popular, and four years later the Italian proprietor sold to the plaintiff, an American corporation, the privilege of copyrighting and selling the same in the United States, apparently on a royalty basis. Thereupon the plaintiff did copyright words and music; the registration being of December 10, 1917, and the date of original publication stated as September 1, 1913. The defendant copied words and music and sold the same after this registration date. There were no intervening rights, as that phrase is commonly used in patent litigation. It was held that the publication in Italy did not prevent an American copyright four years later.

A trade catalogue.—Cuts used in a catalogue are the subject of copyright. Campbell v. Wireback, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 372. The court said:

"It is contended here, first, that the cuts reproduced in defendant's catalogue are not copyrightable matter, but this contention is refuted by abundant authority. It is sufficient to cite Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Co., 249 U. S. 100, 39 S. Ct. 194, 63 L. Ed. 499, in which the Supreme Court assumes the validity of a copyright of pictorial illustrations of styles in women's apparel, and which therefore seems controlling of the instant case. Among other cases of like import and directly in point are Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co., 188 U. S. 239, 23 S. Ct. 298, 47 L. Ed. 460, which sustains a copyright on circus posters showing groups of performers; Da Prato Statuary Co. v. Guilian Statuary Co. (C. C.) 189 Fed. 90, holding that a catalogue of cuts of pieces of statuary was copyrightable; White Co. v. Shapiro (D. C.) 227 Fed. 957, sustaining the copyright of a catalogue containing cuts of lighting fixtures; and Stecher Lithographic Co. v. Dunston Lithographic Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 601, upholding the copyright of chromos or lithographs of certain vegetable products.

Bearing in mind that plaintiffs' cuts are made from drawings which 'were originally designed and prepared by persons of skill and artistic capacity,' as the court below finds, the case in hand comes clearly within the rule which we believe to be stated correctly in Weil on Copyrights, p. 226, as follows:

"A mere advertisement of a bare list of articles, prices or facts would seem not to be copyrightable. It would lack the minimum of originality necessary for copyright. On the other hand, catalogues or other advertisements having originality, or quasi artistic character, are copyrightable. It requires very little originality indeed to render proposed advertising matter copyrightable."

A trade-mark directory of the jewelry trade with the names and addresses of jewelers classified under different heads and arranged alphabetically with illustrations of the trade-marks used by each is the subject of protection under this act. Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Keystone Pub. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 932.

Vol. II, p. 562, sec. 8. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 83.]

A partnership may obtain a copyright in the firm name even if that name indicates a corporation. Campbell v. Wireback, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 372.

Aliens—Statement of citizenship.—As to the necessity of a statement of citizenship in an application for a copyright, it has been said in a case in which the question of necessity was raised:

"As to the matter of citizenship, it is enough to say that there is no statutory requirement for the inclusion of a statement of citizenship or domicile in the application for copyright; nor, so far as we are advised, was such a statement required by any rule of the register's office in 1911 when plaintiff's first application was filed. And the rule adopted in 1913 and since in force prescribes merely refusal of registration as the penalty for its nonobservance. We are therefore constrained to hold, without arguing the point, that the acceptance of plaintiff's applications operated as a waiver of the administrative regulation, if in fact it was not strictly observed, and that the action of the register in issuing to them the certificates of registration cannot be collaterally attacked in this proceeding. In short, we are of opinion that plaintiffs have substantially complied with the statute and that the copyrights obtained by them are entitled to full protection." Campbell v. Wireback, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 372.

Persons entitled to renewal.—"No assignment of copyright or of right to copyright, can anticipate or assign away the right of renewal which is conferred upon the author, widow, children, next of kin, or executor by the statute. In other words, the property right obtained by the filing of a copyright is the power to prevent copying or use of the material during the period provided for by statute. Neither the author nor his assignee possess any rights or powers which can be transferred in such a way as to run beyond that period. When the renewal of the copyright is sought, a new property right is created and a new power to prevent copying given to the persons entitled, not in any way dependent upon the previous bestowal of a similar authority.

"When there are no widow, children, or next of kin, and the right of renewal vests in an executor, the right must become property which is a part of the estate. Upon the happening of the condition subsequent, the estate thus gains the renewal of the copyright, and the person then entitled to receive the estate or that part of it which includes the renewed copyright will receive the benefit at the hands of the executor. No formal transfer by the executor is necessary, as evidently the executor can hold this property right only subject to accounting for and turning over the estate." Fox Film Corp. v. Knowles, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 731.

Disposition of right by will.—An author who died more than a year previous to the expiration of his copyright has no power to make any disposition by will of the right to renew his copyright. Fox Film Corp. v. Knowles, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 731.

Notice of copyright after renewal by executor held sufficient in Fox Film Corp. v. Knowles, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 731.

Vol. II, p. 581, sec. 24. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 87.]

Purpose and scope of section.—It is said to be regarded as settled that the proprietor of an existing copyright as such has no right to a renewal, that the statute confers no right of renewal upon administrators, and that the purpose of the statutory renewal provisions is to give to the persons enumerated in the order of their enumeration a new right or estate, not growing legally out of the original copyright property, but a new creation for the benefit (if the author be dead) of those naturally dependent upon or properly expectant of the author's bounty. Silverman v. Sunrise Pictures Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 909.

Right of author to devise.—"It is plain from the language of the act, and from the design and purpose thereof as expressed by congressional committee and recognized by courts, that the author cannot take away the rights of widow, children, etc., before the opening of the last year of original copyright. It is not until then that any estate or chose in action arises or exists; and when such right arises it is—as above stated—a new estate, not a true extension of the existing copyright. If it were otherwise, the author could grant to his first publisher the renewal right eo nomine, which is exactly what the statute was designed to prevent.

“But what may be assigned can ordinarily be devised, and it results that before the statutory year the author cannot devise the renewal right.” Silverman v. Sunrise Pictures Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 909.

Next of kin.—Where an author died in 1909 leaving her surviving neither husband, children, nor any descendants of children deceased, and the executors of her will after having administered her estate were fully and finally discharged in 1911 it was held that her two sisters as next of kin were entitled to apply in 1915 for a renewal of a copyright which expired that year they being authorized so to do for themselves and their fellow owners in common, their act being in law the act of all. Silverman v. Sunrise Pictures Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 909.

Seizure of copies.—The writ of seizure authorized by the Supreme Court rules as the proper procedure to enforce this section must, of course, be read upon the statute, and no marshal should seize any copies which have been sold to persons not infringers; since that use does not make one an infringer as in the case of a patent. Where the infringing books were not sold but lent to the defendant's customers, the court said:

“Now, it is true that at first blush it might seem (the bailment being determinable at will by the bailor) that the writ of seizure might interrupt the bailee's possession, precisely as it can the bailor's. Yet it appears to me that this would be improper. The statute, which is highly penal, cannot be supposed to go further than it says, and it is expressly limited to infringers; all rights, including the right of possession by others, must be immune from violent interruption, unless there is express warrant for it. And so the possession of innocent bailees should be respected, because it is legal, and should be disturbed only under the terms of the agreement which created it. They are free to enjoy the piratical copies, subject to the reserved rights of the defendant. If so, the plaintiff must work out its right to forfeit through the defendant's right to recall the books, and will be enjoined from its proposed course of seizing these books in the hands of the defendant's customers.

There is an especial ground in equity for this, because, while such violence would be extremely disastrous to the defendant's business, it could not possibly benefit the plaintiff if the defendant recalls the books within a short time.” Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Keystone Pub. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 932.

Pleading.—Where jurisdiction is undoubted and an objection is made that the plaintiff has failed to allege a cause of action because it has neglected to state specifically that an executor recording a copyright and claiming the copyright as legatee took such action in the absence of any living widow, children, or next of kin of the author, it has been declared that an allegation that action was had by an executor plainly imports a will, thus excluding next of kin under the statute, and that an allegation that the copyright was duly obtained when admitted for the purpose of a motion to dismiss makes it unnecessary to specifically allege the nonexistence of other persons entitled. Fox Film Corp. v. Knowles, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 731.

Damages as discretionary with judge.—In a case where the damages are indirect and not capable of ascertainment, the compensation which the copyright proprietor shall receive for the injuries caused by the infringer is committed to the discretion of the trial judge. Campbell v. Wireback, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 372.

II. INJUNCTIONS AND ACCOUNTING (p. 601)

When a play has obtained such popularity that its name has plainly acquired a secondary signification (i. e., one suggestive of that particular play) equity will, under the rules of unfair competition, prevent the use of the same name, or any colorable imitation thereof, as descriptive of another and competing production. National Picture Theatres v. Foundation Film Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 208.

Where unfair competition is charged “the rights of the parties are to be determined [by principles] similar to those which are well known to govern trade-marks, although the combination of elements is more complex than in devices which commonly go by that name” (per Holmes, J., New England, etc., Co. v. Marlborough, etc., Co., 168 Mass. 154, 46 N. E. 386, 60 Am. St. Rep. 377).

“To expand this thought: The plaintiff must have a right in being, an actual property, to protect . . . there must be a real present or prospective competition, that is, an endeavor to get the same trade from the same people at the same time; and that endeavor must on the defendant's part be unfair, that is with a wrongful intent to ‘gain the advantages of that celebrity’ . . . of which plaintiff is the owner; but such intent, though it must be deemed to exist in fact, may be inferred from the inevitable consequences of the act complained of." National Picture Theatres v. Foundation Film Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 208.

Right of administrator.—In holding that an administrator is not entitled to maintain a suit for an injunction and accounting for infringement of a copyright, it has been said:

"Under the original Copyright Act of 1790 (1 Stat. 124), the right of renewal was given to an author, his executors, administrators, or assigns. But the Act of 1831 (4 Stat. 436) and all subsequent acts have confined the right of renewal to the author if living 'or the widow, widower or children of the author, if the author be not living, or if such author, widow, widower or children be not living, then by the author's executors, or in the absence of a will, his next of kin.' It will be noticed that while an executor is mentioned an administrator is not and therefore has been regarded as excluded. White-Smith Music Publishing Co. v. Goff, (C. C.) 180 Fed. 256, 258. The right of renewal does not follow the author's estate but the renewal right is derived directly from the statute." Danks v. Gordon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 821.

Complaint must show title.—In an action for infringement of copyright the plaintiff's bill must show title in the plaintiff to the relief sought. The complainant must show his title not merely by an allegation that he is the proprietor but by setting forth facts which show how he became proprietor and why he has the right to bring the action. Danks v. Gordon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 821.

Effect of decree in another district.—On an application for an injunction against the production of a play on the ground that it is an infringement of copyright a district court is not bound by a consent decree in another district against other defendants. Hodgson v. Vroom, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 267.

Appellate review.—The power of the Circuit Court of Appeals to review a decree refusing an application for an injunction against the production of a play on the ground that it is an infringement of copyright, is not hampered by a consent decree to an injunction against other defendants in a different district court than that from which the appeal in the present case is taken. Hodgson v. Vroom, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 267.

Vol. II, p. 609, sec. 42. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 91.]

Assignment of motion picture rights.—The owners of a copyright on a book or play own the right to represent on a screen photographs telling the copyrighted story and this right may be assigned. National Picture Theatres v. Foundation Film Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 208.

Mortgage of copyright.—Copyrights can be mortgaged only under the Federal Copyright Law. In re Leslie-Judge Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 886.

COSTS

Vol. II, p. 624, sec. 823. [First ed., vol. II, p. 276.]

Apportionment at law.—At law there is no apportionment of costs and the judgment runs in solido against all the defendants. American Nat. Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, (S. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 688.

Apportionment in equity.—In equity the court has a discretion as to the costs, and may impose them all upon one party, or may divide them in such manner as it sees fit. This power in the court over costs in equity cases is not arbitrary, and must be exercised with sound discretion. The usual practice in equity, where there are several defendants, all of whom are cast in the suit, is to award the complainant costs in solido against all of them, but the rule may be varied when the losing parties can show that equity and good conscience require a different judgment. American Nat. Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, (S. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 688.

Vol. II, p. 628, sec. 824. [First ed., vol. II, p. 278.]

"Final hearing in equity or admiralty"—In general.—"The language of the statute is not 'on the final hearing of the controversy,' but merely 'on the final hearing,' so that the proctor must represent the libellant's claim to a decree on some final hearing which disposes of the case as made in the libel, whether this decree is made on the law, or whether it is made on a disputed state of facts, or whether it is made on an agreed state of facts. If the cause was dismissed by the libellant, or was disposed of in some such manner, there is never such final hearing as entitles the proctor to have his fee taxed; but, on the other hand, there is nothing in the statute which limits the allowance of the fee to cases in which there is a controversy over the law or facts. We should follow the statute, and not try and distort its meaning, but give its words their fair and ordinary meaning." The Bluefields, (S. D. Ala. 1921) 273 Fed. 268.

On payment of money into court.—In The Bluefields, (S. D. Ala. 1921) 273 Fed. 268, in which a libel was filed by a sailor for wages due and the vessel paid the amount of the sailor's demand and accrued costs into court, the court said:

"It is conceded in argument that, if no appearance had been made by the vessel or her owner, the libelant could have taken a decree pro confesso, and then on the submission have obtained a final decree, which would have authorized the taxing of his fee. Contention is made, though, that because the money has been paid in court the libelant must dismiss his libel, so that the fee cannot be taxed. I know of no power on the part of the defendant to control the conduct by the libelant of his cause, and it seems to me that, where the money has been paid into the court by the vessel, the libelant has his option either to dismiss the libel and take the money, in which event no fee could be taxed, or to ask, as he here has done, for a final decree because of the confession made by the payment into court of his wages. It seems to me that a decree so rendered would be such a final hearing as was contemplated by section 824, though there is no controversy or dispute over the facts or law as stated in the libel; the only dispute being whether or not the taxed fee shall be allowed. Again, if the proctor is entitled to his fee on a final decree on a decree pro confesso, or on a plea filed confessing his cause, how can claimant contend that, if he does less than expressly confess the demand by merely paying the money into court, the right to the fee is defeated. It is further contended that this libel was improperly filed, because the libelant was informed before it was filed, and at the time he made his demand for his money, that his wages would be paid on the following day, and that the litigation was vexatious, and no costs should be allowed. In this case I find that the sailor honestly believed that the owner was going to deduct the hospital bill from his wages before payment, and there was no impropriety in his bringing suit when he did.

"The decree will therefore be entered in accordance with this opinion, and the clerk is hereby directed that, when the decree is finally entered, he will tax a fee of $10 for libelant's proctor."

Vol. II, p. 640, sec. 973. [First ed., vol. II, p. 289.]

Where disclaimer unnecessary.—Failure to file disclaimer before suit is begun affects only the costs in the court below, and has no relation to costs in the Circuit Court of Appeals. So far as substantial relief is concerned disclaimer before suit brought is not essential. Excelsior Steel Furnace Co. v. Williamson Heater Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 614.

Vol. II, p. 644, sec. 983. [First ed., vol. II, p. 291.]

The word "law," as used in this section has reference to the law administered in the federal courts; that is, federal law, and also state law, in so far as the latter is not inconsistent with the former. Morris-Turner Livestock Co. v. Director General, (D. C. Mont. 1920) 266 Fed. 600.

CRIMINAL LAW

Vol. II, p. 654, sec. 1014. [First ed., vol. II, p. 321.]

Following state practice generally—Mode of process.—"Proceedings for holding an accused person to answer a criminal charge are assimilated to those under the laws of the state in which the proceedings take place, and all the regulations and steps incident to the proceeding before a United States commissioner, from its commencement to its close, are guided by the state laws, so far as they may be applicable to the federal courts, if no rule upon the same subject has been prescribed by the federal statutes." U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408; U. S. v. Maresca, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 713.

The usual mode of process which the statute requires to be followed clearly applies only to the procedure by which the offender may "be arrested and imprisoned or bailed," and not the procedure in connection with his indictment. U. S. v. Powlowski, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 270 Fed. 285.

Proceeding for arrests, which include seizures under warrants should conform to the practice of the state in which issued. U. S. v. Maresca, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 713.

Applicability to Volstead Act.—Section 2 of the National Prohibition Enforcement Act (1919 Supp. Fed. St. Ann. p. 205) makes this section applicable in the enforcement of that act, and the power of state officers to proceed under that act exists only as this section provides. Lenski v. O'Brien, (Mo. App. 1921) 232 S. W. 235.

Under this section and section 2 of Title II of the National Prohibition Enforcement Act (1919 Supp. Fed. St. Ann. p. 205) a warrant for the arrest of a violator of the Prohibition Enforcement Act may be issued to a mu-municipal police officer. Harris v. Superior Ct., (Cal. App. 1921) 196 Pac. 895.

Preliminary examinations—Confession by defendant.—It is said that, while the authorities are not uniform, "a confession, freely and voluntarily made, with full knowledge that the accused is not required to make it, and, if made, it may be used as evidence against him, is sufficient to constitute probable cause, and warrant the commissioner in holding the accused without further evidence of the corpus delicti." U. S. v. Kallas, (W. D. Wash. 1921) 272 Fed. 742.

Jurisdiction—"Offense against the United States."—"It must always be kept in mind that federal officers and courts have no power or jurisdiction to arrest, try, or punish a citizen, unless the act with which he is charged violates a federal statute. In that respect their power is subject to limitations not imposed upon state officers and courts having jurisdiction to arrest, to try, and to punish for what are known as 'common-law offenses.'"—Ex p. Harvell, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 997.

Bail.—It is said to be evident from a reading of this section that it was not within the mind of Congress to limit the bail solely to the old common law form and "that in those cases where the penalty of the bond is payable in money, and money to the amount thereof is tendered as security, together with a recognizance, they should be accepted, and it is not within the discretion of the court to reject them." Rowan v. Randolph, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 527.

Review by habeas corpus.—In a habeas corpus proceeding the court will assume, in the absence of the evidence taken before the commissioner and approved by the District Judge, that their finding of probable cause was sustained by competent evidence, bearing in mind, also, that on this proceeding the court would not in any event look into the weight of evidence on that question. Rowe v. Boyle, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 809.

Even though the government failed to institute removal proceedings and illegally removed a prisoner to another district by mere direction of the attorney general to the warden of the prison where he was confined, he is not entitled for that reason to his discharge on habeas corpus but he having come within the jurisdiction of the court under the rule in the authoritative decisions of the Supreme Court, the government could, as it did, serve the officer in charge of the person of the prisoner with a writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum to prosecute and place him on trial. Ex p. Lamar, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 160.

Validity of bond or recognizance.—"Where an offender has been bailed agreeably to the usual mode of process of the laws of the state where the offense is charged to have been committed, the laws of that state are to be looked to to determine the sufficiency of the procedure taken." U. S. v. Davenport, (W. D. Tex. 1920) 266 Fed. 425.

In U. S. v. Davenport, (W. D. Tex. 1920) 266 Fed. 425, it was held that the bond and judgment were sufficient where they set out the offense as embezzlement from a national bank without specifically stating that it was from a Federal Reserve Bank.

Action on the forfeited bond or recognizance—Issues.—In an action on a bail bond of one indicted under section 5209 of the Revised Statutes, it has been said:

"The issues are measured by the terms of the bond and the recitations of the judgment nisi. There seems no reason for a strict or highly technical construction of law in favor of defendants. This action does not involve the guilt or innocence, conviction or acquittal, of any one. It is not a criminal case. The bail bond is a contract between the sureties and the government. Upon the failure of the principal to appear the sureties become debtors." U. S. v. Davenport, (W. D. Tex. 1920) 266 Fed. 425.

REMOVAL OF ACCUSED TO TRIAL DISTRICT

Indictment—Sufficiency.—If there is any doubt as to the validity or sufficiency of the indictment, the proper court for the resolution of any such question is that in which the indictment has been returned, and not that where proceedings in removal are instituted. Rowe v. Boyle, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 809.

Indictment prima facie.—Where in a proceeding for removal to another jurisdiction the government introduces an indictment and the prisoner admits that he is the person named therein a prima facie case is established. Rowe v. Boyle, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 809.

Probable cause.—"The Supreme Court has mapped out with clearness the procedure under section 1014 of the Revised Statutes where it is sought to remove a defendant from the district where arrested to that where the offense is triable. It is distinctly ruled that, while the indictment constitutes prima facie evidence of probable cause, it is not conclusive, and evidence may be offered by the defendant tending to show that no offense triable in the district to which removal is sought has been committed; that in such a proceeding the function of the judge is not ministerial, but judicial; that 'he must look into the indictment, to ascertain whether an offense against the United States is charged, and whether there was probable cause, and determine whether the court to which the accused is sought to be removed has jurisdiction of the same. The liberty of the citizen, and his general right to be tried in a tribunal or forum of his domicile, imposes upon the judge the duty of considering and passing upon those questions.' Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 27 Sup. Ct.

430, 51 L. ed. 689; Beavers v. Henkel, 194 U. S. 73, 24 Sup. Ct. 605, 48 L. ed. 882." U. S. v. Yount, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 861.

Order of removal interlocutory.—An order removing defendants to another district is interlocutory and not appealable. Murray v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 522.

Vol. II, p. 674, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. II, p. 334.]

Arrest without warrant.—A federal officer on arresting a person without a warrant must take him before a magistrate for a hearing. Es p. Harvell, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 997.

Vol. II, p. 676, sec. 1024. [First ed., vol. II, p. 337.]

Election of counts.—The denial by the court in the exercise of its discretion of a motion for election is not reviewable error. Corbin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 659.

Offenses held to have been properly joined.—Duplicity in an indictment consists in the joinder of two or more distinct defenses in one count, and hence where two forgeries alleged in an indictment are plainly describable as "two or more acts or transactions connected together" the joinder is not duplicitous and is expressly permitted under this section. Epstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 282.

It has been held that an indictment charging the concealment of smoking opium in violation of section 2 of the Act of Feb. 9, 1909, as amended by the Act of Jan. 17, 1914 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 725) may be properly consolidated and tried with an indictment charging the manufacture of smoking opium in violation of section 1 of the Act of Dec. 17, 1914, (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 173). Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

It is proper to charge in different counts of an indictment a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States where the offenses charged all belong to the same class of crimes. Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 20.

A court may order separate actions for repeated violations of an injunction to be consolidated for trial and to direct the trial of all the charges against the defendant to a single jury. Jennings v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 399.

Offenses against the White Slave Act growing out of the same transaction may be so connected as to permit of their joinder in one indictment in separate counts. Freed v. U. S., (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 266 Fed. 1012.

Counts for misdemeanor and felony may be joined under this section. Phillips v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 657.

Indictments held to have been properly consolidated.—An indictment under the Penal Law, section 13 (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 249, sec. 4898) for providing and preparing a military enterprise against a nation with whom the United States is at peace may be consolidated with an indictment for a conspiracy to commit such offense. Jacobsen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 399.

Separate punishment for each offense.—Where counts really charge separate offenses, though connected together and so capable of joinder under this section, sentence may be imposed for both, for such was the legislative intent in creating them separate offenses. Es p. Farlow, (N. D. Ga. 1921) 272 Fed. 910.

Vol. II, p. 681, sec. 1025. [First ed., vol. II, p. 340.]

Incorrect date.—The date in an indictment does not necessarily limit the prosecution to proof of the commission of the offense upon that identical date, provided the date proven is prior to the date of the filing of the indictment, and is in such reasonable proximity to the actual date named in the indictment that the defendants could not have been prejudiced or misled thereby. Billingsley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 86.

Time of commission of offense.—An indictment which charges that the defendants conspired to violate section 135 of the Penal Code of the United States (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 688) between certain specified dates, is sufficient in view of the provisions of this section. Harrington v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 97.

Immaterial variance.—A variance which does not prejudice should be disregarded. Thus, on a prosecution for introducing liquor into that part of the state of Oklahoma that was formerly Indian Territory the fact that the indictment charged that the liquors were introduced into Washington County while the proof showed that they were introduced in Nowata County was held to be immaterial where the counties were in that part of the state that was formerly Indian Territory. Flack v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 680.

Where an indictment charges a sale of intoxicating liquor to a certain named person, giving his Christian name, and the evidence is silent as to his Christian name the variance has been held to be immaterial. Saucedo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 830.

Indictments held sufficient.—Under this section in the case of a prosecution for using the mails with intent to defraud where the substance of the scheme charged was not the mere use of a corporate name similar to the name of an existing association, but to use it so as to have the credit and reputation of the other company in order to obtain goods not intended for defendant, and for which he would not pay, the failure to allege that the unincorporated partnership or association, then doing business and in actual operation, was duly organized, did not prejudice the defendant, and make the indictment fatally defective. Savage v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 14.

1918 Supp., p. 122, sec. 3.

Constitutionality.—The Act is not invalid as unwarrantably extending the constitutional definition of the crime of treason since Congress may punish, under the ordinary rules of prosecution and without trenching upon the constitutional limitation as to treason, acts which are of a seditious nature and tend toward treason, but which are not of the direct character and superdangerous degree which would meet the constitutional test and make them treason; and even more must this be true of words. Likewise, it does not violate the constitutional provision guaranteeing freedom of speech. Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1; Wimmer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 11; Lockhart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 14.

"It is familiar law that language in a statute which is capable of a very broad or of a narrower construction should receive the latter where the former would or might make it unconstitutional, and where the latter is sufficient to reach the case before the court, and hence it is not very important to point out that 'favor,' 'support,' and 'oppose,' as mere words, may have definition broad enough to cover and include some things which are also within the protection of the First Amendment; the really important question is whether that particular kind and degree of favor, support, or opposition alleged against defendants is within the constitutional immunity." Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

Language not protected by constitution.—Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75.

Construction.—The word "whoever" as used herein has been construed as including corporations and partnership. American Socialist Soc. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 212.

Relation to section 6 of Selective Service Act.—This section and section 6 of the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1159) are in pari materia. Snitkin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 489.

"Military forces" defined.—See Fairchild v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 584.

"Recruiting" and "enlistment" defined.—See Fairchild v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 584.

Wilfully obstructing the recruiting or enlistment service.—Rejection of evidence offered by defendant and charge to the jury as to purpose of act held error in Erhardt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 326.

Presumptive intent.—The mere fact that an intent is presumptive does not make it insufficient. An inference of intent may be strong enough to overbalance an express declaration. Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

Language intended to incite.—A fixed line cannot be drawn between agitation and incitement. There may be incitement in fact which is not so in form. Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 254 Fed. 1.

Offense involves moral turpitude and conviction thereof warrants disbarment of attorney. In re O'Connell, (Col. 1920) 194 Pac. 1010. Compare In re Clifton, (1921) 33 Idaho 614, 196 Pac. 670, refusing to disbar for acts which while disloyal did not amount to a violation of the act.

Indictment—In general.—In Stokes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 18, it was declared that if the text of the letter complained of in the indictment, when considered in the light of the time and circumstances of its publication, was such that it was reasonably calculated to cause the effects charged, if it was such that intelligent and impartial men, in the exercise of a sound judgment, might reasonably deduce from it the conclusion that the publisher thereby intended to attempt to cause insubordination, etc., in the military or naval forces of the United States, or to obstruct its enlistment service, or to make false statements for the purpose of interfering with the operation or success of its military or naval forces, it was sufficient in its terms to sustain the indictment and to require the court below to send the case to a trial by the jury. If, on the other hand, upon its face, in the light of the time and circumstances of its publication, it was not reasonably susceptible to such an inference and judgment the demurrer should have been sustained. In this case it was held that there was no error in overruling the demurrer. See also Grubl v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 44, wherein the court made a similar declaration but reversed the judgment of the court below and ordered the discharge of the defendant.

Following language of section.—An indictment is sufficient which charges the offense in the words of the statute. Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75.

Necessity of averment that United States was at war.—To same effect as annotation in 1920 Supp. p. 471, see Sonnenberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 327.

Criminal intent.—As to the necessity of charging a criminal intent it has been said that "it would seem enough to say that the clauses of the statute charged to have been violated (which were added by the amendment of 1918, for the purpose of broadening the scope of the statute) do not in express terms require a criminal intent, except as the word 'intended' is used in the clause involved in the third count, and which is so charged therein. It is sufficient that the language be disloyal, profane, scurrilous, or abusive, that it be willfully used, and that it relate to the form of government, the Constitution, the military or naval forces, the flag or the uniform of the army and navy of the United States, or that the language is intended to bring any one of them into contempt or disrepute. The words 'willfully and feloniously' prima facie import an unlawful intent." Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75.

Allegation of facts unnecessary.—In Stokes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 18, the three violations, which were charged in three counts in the indictment, were that by causing the publication of this letter on March 20, 1918, while the United States was at war with the Imperial German government, she (1) willfully and knowingly attempted to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, and refusal of duty in the military and naval forces of the United States; (2) willfully and knowingly obstructed the enlistment service of the United States, to the injury of that service, and to the injury of the United States; and (3) willfully and knowingly made and conveyed false reports and statements, with the intent to interfere with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the United States, and with the intent to promote the success of the enemies of the United States. It was held that the indictment was sufficient though it contained no averment of any facts tending to inform the defendant in what way, by what means, or by its effect upon what persons, the publication of the letter either caused, or disclosed an attempt to cause, insubordination, etc., or obstructed the enlistment service, or conveyed false reports, with the intention to interfere with the operation of the military or naval forces, of the United States.

Names of persons to whom language addressed need not be alleged. Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75.

Insufficient description of offense.—Where a defendant was charged with having willfully caused and attempted to cause disloyalty, insubordination, mutiny and refusal of duty in the military forces of the United States to the injury of the United States by the making of certain statements, it was held that a demurrer to the count should have been sustained, it being declared that it did not appear from the indictment that the statements were susceptible to the inference that the defendant made them with the evil intents charged. Grubl v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 44.

Attempting to cause insubordination.—Fairchild v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 584.

Sufficiency.—In the following cases the indictments were held to be sufficient: Matthey v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 924; Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75; Sykes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 945; Martin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 329; Sonnenberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 327; Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 75; Lockhart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 14.

Defenses.—In Mamaux v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 816, an instruction as to the defense that the remarks were made under compulsion or duress of officers of the law was held proper.

Evidence—Other words or acts.—See Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75; Boehner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 562; Hinkhouse v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 977; American Socialist Soc. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 212; Bold v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 581; Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 75; Grubl v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 44; Stokes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 18; Wimmer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 11; Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

Statements made prior to act.—To same effect as annotation in 1920 Supplement, p. 475, see Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

Statements prior to date of offense are inadmissible. Holzmacher v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 979.

Notes and reports of dictagraph operators.—Such notes and reports have been received although they were not complete in that they embodied only the talk with reference to the attitude of the defendants towards the war and did not set forth the entire conversation and statements, where the part not taken down had no reference to the subject of the war or defendants' attitude towards it. And such statements are admissible where although the operators testified generally that at the time of the trial they had no independent recollection in detail of the statements made, they further testified that they knew that their notes were correct, and knew that the fuller report at the end of each day was accurate, it being for the jury to determine the credit to be given to them. Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

Evidence as to impression made by defendant's speech.—In Trelase v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 886, it was held proper to permit a witness to testify as to the impression made on him by the speech of the defendant.

Sufficiency.—In the following cases the evidence was held to be sufficient to sustain a conviction of the defendants for a violation of this section: Hinkhouse v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 977; Trelease v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 886; Fairchild v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 584; Bold v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 581; Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 75; Lockhart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 14; Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1.

In the following cases the evidence was held to be insufficient to sustain a conviction under this section: Becker v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 195; Grubl v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 44.

Variance.—See Bold v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 581.

Instructions.—See Bold v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 581.

In Stokes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 18, the court reversed a conviction on the ground that when the entire charge was considered in the light of the time and circumstances surrounding the trial, of the extended discussion in the charge of the many side issues which crept into the case, and of the other characteristics of the charge to which attention had been called, the court was unable to resist the conclusion that the patriotic zeal of the court below led it to place too heavy a burden upon the defendant in her endeavor to meet the evidence which the government produced against her, and that the cause of the administration of justice would be served by another trial of the case.

In Schoborg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 1, it was said:

"It is objected that the court charged that it was sufficient to make out the statutory offense if the words were intended to and were reasonably calculated to some extent to help the cause of the one and injure the cause of the other, without going further and saying that the jury must find in the circumstances of the particular utterance a condition of things which would make the words spoken tend to create a clear and present danger. If the charge as given should have been modified and limited as now claimed, it was the duty of defendants to bring to the attention of the court the limitations which they desired incorporated. They did nothing except to save an exception to this paragraph of the charge as given. When a charge is correct in its general thought and aspect, and is later criticized only because it did not draw sufficiently refined distinctions, a mere general exception to the proposition as given by the court is not sufficient basis for review—lacking reasonably clear inference that the precise limitation was intended to be relied upon and to be put before the court.

"The same is true as to the complaint against the charge because it told the jury that it was possible for one to be guilty of the offense by a declaration that he is on the side of Germany or wants to see Germany win, or that he is against the United States and wants to see the United States lose. It is said that this is entirely too narrow a construction. So it may be, sometimes; yet undoubtedly there might be cases where it would be a perfectly accurate statement. The defendants should have pointed out to the trial judge their particular theory which made it inapplicable to this case. We cannot say that it was either erroneous or prejudicial."

Questions for jury—Knowledge and intent.—To same effect as annotation in 1920 Supplement, p. 477, see Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 75.

In a prosecution under this act for publishing a letter in terms condemning the "government" it has been declared that the natural, ordinary, rational meaning of the word "government" in the defendant's letter, written and published at such a time and under such circumstances, and expressly mentioning the government in its war aims, was the body of persons then conducting the war and the activities of the nation, and that as there was nothing in the letter itself, and a search of the record disclosed no substantial evidence, to indicate that the writer used or intended to use it in any other sense, the unavoidable conclusion is that it was error to submit to the jury the issue whether or not the defendant used or intended to use the word "government" in this letter in the sense of the constitutional government of the nation of 1787. Stokes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 18.

Tendency of language used.—Whether the language charged to have been used by defendant had a natural tendency to show the commission of the unlawful act charged is ultimately a question for the jury. Dierkes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 75.

Acquittal and conviction under separate counts.—An acquittal under a count charging an offense of which intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military service of the United States was an element, was held not to be inconsistent with conviction under another count charging an offense of which such an intent was not an element. Hinkhouse v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 U. S. 977.

1918 Supp., p. 124, sec. 4.

Section 6 of the Penal Code repealed by this provision. Haywood v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 795; St. John v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 808.

Indictment for conspiracy to violate section 3 held sufficient.—See Anderson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 65.

1918 Supp., p. 129, sec. 3.

Probable cause.—A search warrant may issue only upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation. The question of probable cause must be submitted to the committing magistrate, so that he may exercise his judgment as to the sufficiency of the ground for believing the accused person guilty. U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408.

Affidavit must set forth facts.—The United States commissioner, or other officer with whom an affidavit is filed, may not, simply because such affidavit is presented, issue a warrant. The affidavit must itself be sufficient, must state facts which justify the issuance of a warrant and the commissioner or such other officer is required by law to satisfy himself of the sufficiency of the affidavit and that the circumstances call for the issuance of a warrant. U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408.

The name of the accused should be set forth in the affidavit and search warrant where it is known. U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408.

Description of place.—"In describing the place to be searched, it is sufficient if the officer to whom the warrant is directed is enabled to locate the same definitely and with certainty. This does not necessarily require the exact legal description to be given, such as ordinarily appears in deeds of record in the county recorder's office. The description may be such as is known to the people and used in the locality in question, and by inquiry the officer may be as clearly guided to the place intended as if the legal record description were used." U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408.

1918 Supp., p. 130, sec. 10.

Searches at night.—Authority.—If a search is to be made at night the authority for so doing should appear in the warrant. U. S. v. Borkowski, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 268 Fed. 408.

1918 Supp., p. 132, sec. 1.

Exclusion from mail.—Generally.—Authority to revoke the second-class mail privileges of a newspaper which, contrary to the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 120), systematically contained false reports and false statements, published with intent to interfere with the success of the military operations of the Federal government, to promote the success of its enemies, and to obstruct its recruiting and enlistment service, was conferred upon the Postmaster General, not merely as to a single issue of such paper, but until a proper application and showing shall be made for a renewal of such privilege, by the provision of title 12 of that act that any newspaper published in violation of any of its terms shall be "nonmailable," and shall not be "conveyed in the mails or delivered from any postoffice or by any letter carrier," when read in connection with the declaration of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 396 (8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 20), that it is the duty of the Postmaster General to superintend regularly all the business of the Postoffice Department, and to execute all laws relating to the postal service, and with the Federal legislation classifying the mails, which deals only with "mailable matter." U. S. v. Burleson, (1921) 255 U. S. 407, 41 S. Ct. 352, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) 26, 258 Fed. 282.

Constitutionality.—Federal legislation conferring upon the Postmaster General power to revoke the second-class mail privilege enjoyed by a newspaper which that official finds, after a hearing fairly conducted, systematically to have contained false reports and false statements published with intent to interfere with the success of the military operations of the Federal government, to promote the success of its enemies, and to obstruct its recruiting and enlistment service, in violation of the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917, is not unconstitutional, either as not affording the publisher a trial in a court of competent jurisdiction, or as infringing the constitutional freedom of speech and press, or as taking property without due process of law. U. S. v. Burleson, (1921) 255 U. S. 407, 41 S. Ct. 352, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) 26, 258 Fed. 282.

1918 Supp., p. 136, sec. 1.

Section held operative though war actually at end, there being no formal state of peace, see Ex p. Sichofsky, (S. D. Cal. 1921) 273 Fed. 694.

Effect of joint resolution of Congress.—The joint resolution, enacted in the last days of the Sixty-sixth Congress, repealing certain war-time acts, carried with it a saving clause to the effect that nothing therein contained should be held "to exempt from prosecution or to relieve from punishment" any offense theretofore committed in violation of the acts therein repealed or referred to, etc. In view of the express and positive provisions of section 13 of the Revised Statutes, this saving clause was hardly necessary. U. S. v. Reisinger, 128 U. S. 398, 9 S. Ct. 99, 32 L. Ed. 480. Its insertion, however, makes it clear and indubitable that Congress was intending to make punishment possible for those who had violated the law previous to its repeal. Ex p. Sichofsky, (S. D. Cal. 1921) 273 Fed. 694.

CUSTOMS DUTIES

By-product lignum extract.—See note under par. 624.

Nutgall extract.—Where the evidence establishes that commercial extract of nutgalls is a liquid containing 25 or 30 per cent of tannic acid, and that commercial tannic acid is a powder containing about 70 per cent, or even less, of tannic acid, a powder derived from the extract, containing more than 78 per cent of tannic acid, largely used in weighing silk fibers or fabrics, as a mordant in dyeing silk, and in the manufacture of ink, and not commonly used in tanning leather, is classifiable as tannic acid under this paragraph, and not as an extract or decoction of nutgalls under paragraph 30 or tanning material under paragraph 624. East Asiatic Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 207.

By-product lignum extract.—See note under par. 624.

Nitric acid mixed with sulphuric acid.—See note under par. 387.

"Chemical . . . compounds."—"A chemical compound necessarily implies not a mere mingling of components, but a chemical combination of them, resulting in their destruction as distinct entities and in the development by chemical reaction of a new substance possessing properties radically different from those of its constituent elements." Thus, hydrogenated oil, oil whose hydrogen content has been increased chemically, this process resulting in changing the oil from a liquid to a solid at ordinary room temperatures without altering its essential character and qualities, is not a chemical compound within the meaning of that expression in this paragraph. U. S. v. Rockhill, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

"Chemical . . . compounds" and "chemically compounded" distinguished.—The term "chemical . . . compounds," in this paragraph differs from the term "chemically compounded" in paragraph 498; and a given substance although not a chemical compound within this paragraph, may perhaps be chemically compounded within paragraph 498. U. S. v. Rockhill, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

Vol. II, p. 734, par. 30. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 61.]

Nutgall extract.—See note under par. 1.

Vol. II, p. 734, par. 34. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 62.]

Cleaned and dried fish sounds.—Cleaning and drying, and splitting for the purpose of cleaning or drying, are not processes of manufacture, and do not ordinarily carry merchandise into the category of "prepared," as that term is used in tariff nomenclature generally and in this paragraph. Thus, fish sounds which have been cleaned and dried, after having been split to facilitate the cleaning and drying, imported to make soup, are not dutiable under this paragraph, as "prepared fish sounds," but are admissible free crude, dried, or salted for preservation only of duty under paragraph 419, as "fish sounds, and unmanufactured." U. S. v. Brown, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 47.

Vol. II, p. 734, par. 36. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 62.]

Refined and crude chicle.—Not every slight advance in value is sufficient to constitute such an advance as to render merchandise dutiable at the higher rates provided for it by the import revenue laws when advanced in value; and this paragraph, levying a lower rate of duty upon "chicle, crude," and a higher rate upon it "refined or advanced in value by drying, straining, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing," should be construed accordingly. Thus, where chicle is shipped from Mexico into Canada and from Canada into the United States and in Canada is hammered into smaller particles and in part resacked, these processes being related to packing and transportation rather than to manufacture and increasing the value only from 28 to 30 cents per pound, the crushing enhancing the value only, one-half of a cent per pound, and as imported into the United States is intermixed with dirt, bark, sticks, and other foreign substances, it can not be regarded as "chicle . . . refined or advanced in value by drying, straining, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing," under this paragraph, but should be classified hereunder as "chicle, crude." U. S. v. American Chicle Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 98.

Vol. II, p. 735, par. 44. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 62.]

"Oils."—Fluidity at ordinary room temperatures is not necessary to the meaning of the word "oils," in this paragraph. U. S. v. Rockhill, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

Hydrogenated fish oil.—Fish oil which has been hardened by chemically increasing its hydrogen content, its essential characteristics remaining unchanged, is classifiable under this paragraph, as fish oil, and not under paragraph 5 as a chemical compound, or under paragraph 498 as grease, not chemically compounded, such as is commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing or for stuffing or dressing leather. U. S. v. Rockhill, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

Vol. II, p. 744, par. 81. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 66.]

Crushed limestone.—See note under par. 93.

Vol. II, p. 749, par. 95. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 68.]

"Articles or wares plated with gold or silver."—See note under par. 167.

Vol. II, p. 752, par. 102. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 69.]

Ferrosilicon.—Low grade ferrosilicon, originated as a by-product in the manufacture of aluminous abrasives, known commercially as ferrosilicon and chiefly used in the manufacture of ordinary basic steel, is classifiable as "ferrosilicon" under this paragraph, notwithstanding that there is a much higher grade, made to specifications and better adapted to the making of steel. To exclude the merchandise from this paragraph because its silicon content is as low as from 13 to nearly 17 per cent, whereas that of standard ferrosilicon is much higher, would be to ignore the fact that the parent paragraph (184, act of 1909) provided for ferrosilicon containing not more than 15 per cent of silicon as well as for that containing more. The merchandise is not classifiable as "iron ore," "iron in pigs" or "scrap and scrap steel" under paragraph 518; as crude minerals under paragraph 649; as crude metallic mineral substances or metals unwrought under paragraph 154; as waste under paragraph 384; or as nonenumerated unmanufactured articles under paragraph 385. U. S. v. Tower, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 155.

Vol. II, p. 759, par. 135. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 73.]

Needlecases.—Leather folders and rolls and leather-covered wooden boxes, fitted with needles, thread, scissors, etc., and known variously as "traveling companions," "necessaries," "sewing kits," or "sewing cases," are correctly classified under this paragraph as "needlecases or needlebooks furnished with assortments of needles or combinations of needles and other articles," rather than under paragraph 360 as manufactures of leather permanently fitted and furnished with traveling and similar sets or manufactures of leather, notwithstanding testimony that some of them were designed to be, and were, used by travelers. U. S. v. Cross Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 58.

Vol. II, p. 760, par. 144. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 73.]

Copper matte.—See note under par. 461.

Vol. II, p. 761, par. 152. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 74.]

Copper matte.—See note under par. 461.

Vol. II, p. 762, par. 153. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 74.]

Copper matte.—See note under par. 461.

Solder reclaimed from shells.—See note under par. 154.

Vol. II, p. 762, par. 154. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 74.]

Ferrosilicon.—See note under par. 102.

Solder reclaimed from shells.—Where solder, reclaimed from spoiled brass shells, and consisting substantially of lead and tin in nearly equal parts, with small percentages of other metals, is imported in the shape of ingots, bars, molds, etc., to be rerun and used for various purposes, the tin content is not classifiable under paragraph 631, as scrap tin; nor is the lead content classifiable under paragraph 153 as scrap lead. The merchandise would seem to be classifiable under this paragraph as "metals unwrought;" but, in the absence of any such claim in the protest, the collector's classification of it under paragraph 167 as articles or wares partly or wholly manufactured of the metals named in the paragraph must, though not approved, be undisturbed. U. S. v. Jacobson & Sons Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 191.

Vol. II, p. 765, par. 167. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 76.]

Solder reclaimed from shells.—See note under par. 154.

Boiler parts.—See note under section III, par. J, subsec. 5.

Materials—manufactures distinguished.—See note under section IV, par. J, subsec. 5.
American goods returned.—See note under par. 404.

"Articles or wares plated with gold or silver."—The provision of this paragraph for "Articles or wares plated with gold or silver," embraces only such articles or wares as are wholly or in chief value of metal. Thus, hatpins with large paste heads of a pearly luster and metal gold-plated stems, the paste heads being the chief value, are classifiable under paragraph 95, as manufactures of paste, and not under this paragraph as "Articles or wares plated with gold or silver," or paragraph 356 as "jewelry." Veith v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 201.

Marine surface condensers.—Merchandise known as "marine surface condensers," imported for the purpose of being used in connection with steam engines of American vessels to condense the steam and permit of its reuse, the only thing necessary to their operation being their attachment to one or two pumps and the introduction of the steam, are finished mechanical devices. They are not admissible free of duty under subsection 5, paragraph J, section IV, as materials necessary for the building of the machinery of American vessels, but are dutiable under this paragraph as manufactures of metal. Todd Shipyard Corp. v. U. S., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 273, distinguishing U. S. v. Hannevig, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Vol. II, p. 769, par. 170. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 76.]

Squared timbers.—See notes under par. 647.

Vol. II, p. 769, par. 173. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 77.]

Round reeds in the rough, chiefly used for the making of chairs, are more specifically provided for as chair reeds in this paragraph than as reeds in the rough, in paragraph 648. Peabody v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 220.

Chinese reeds.—In Peabody v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 220, Chinese reeds in the rough, graded as common, selected and extra selected, were classified by the collector as chair reeds under this paragraph, and the importers' protests claiming them to be classifiable as rough reeds under paragraph 648 were overruled by the Board of United States General Appraisers. The evidence established that the common were not chiefly used for making chairs but failed to establish that the other two grades were not so used. The decision of the board was reversed as to the common and affirmed as to the selected and extra selected.

Containers of tea.—See note under par. 627.

Vol. II, p. 770, par. 176. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 77.]

Bamboo pipe stems.—See note under par. 381.

Vol. II, p. 775, par. 192. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 78.]

Ground oat hulls.—Hulls ground from oats as a by-product in the manufacture, from the kernels, of oat meal, rolled oats, and Quaker oats, are dutiable as "oat hulls" under this paragraph, and not as nonenumerated manufactures under paragraph 385. Tower v. U. S., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 259; Tower v. U. S., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 259; Central Vermont R. Co. v. U. S., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 262.

Vol. II, p. 787, par. 244. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 82.]

Allowance for breakage or leakage.—The proviso of this paragraph, that the collector can "make no constructive or other allowance for breakage or leakage or damage on wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits" can not be taken to modify section 300, act of October 3, 1917 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 350), taxing liquor in bond at the time of its enactment, so as to make the quantity dutiable under the tariff act the same as that subject to the additional duty imposed by the war revenue act. Section 300 taxes the actual, not the constructive, quantity. Porges v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 244.

Vol. II, p. 791, par. 252. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 84.]

Invoice as evidence.—See note under par. 253.

Cotton cloth colored and uncolored.—Cotton cloth, to be dutiable under this paragraph, as "cotton cloth . . . colored," must have colored yarns or threads, which form a necessary and substantial part of the article. Unbleached cotton duck or canvas, having a single blue warp thread equally visible on both surfaces and running lengthwise of the fabric about an inch from each edge, the blue thread serving only for a marginal guide in making up the fabric and not affecting the cloth either as to price, strength, or embellishment, is to be classified under this paragraph as not colored. U. S. v. Bryant, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 79.

Vol. II, p. 792, par. 253. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 84.]

Invoice as evidence.—It cannot be said that the invoice has no value whatever as evidence. Not only is it prima facie evidence of what it declares, but it is the evidence which determines the collector's action as to all imported merchandise which has not been examined. Hence, where there is nothing except the invoice to show the yarn count of cotton cloths under this paragraph and paragraph 252, and the invoice is impeached, the Board of United States General Appraisers may correctly presume that the yarn count is shown by the invoice, and their decision sustaining the protest and directing reliquidation in accordance with the yarn count stated in the invoice should be affirmed. U. S. v. Bloomingdale, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 149.

Vol. II, p. 801, par. 284. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 88.]

Hemp chenille.—See note under par. 335.

Vol. II, p. 801, par. 288. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 88.]

Worn-out pulp felts.—See note under par. 651.

Manufactures of wool.—In U. S. v. Field, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 183, the merchandise consisted of woven flax canvases and colored woolen yarns, the canvases having been stitched by hand with the yarns sufficiently to indicate a preconceived ornamental design and color scheme and the nature of the needlework, and enough of the yarns being imported with the canvases to complete the work. When finished, they were to be used on the seats or backs of pieces of furniture, and the canvases substantially, if not entirely, covered by the ornamental designs. It was held that the importations were not finished articles, but materials, the component material of chief value being wool, and should be classified under this paragraph as manufactures of wool, and not under paragraph 358 as embroideries or embroidered articles.

Vol. II, p. 805, par. 293. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 89.]

Chenille carpets and rugs.—A review of the history of rug making shows that originally and now the term "chenille" used in this paragraph was and is commonly and properly used to distinguish that kind of carpet or rug from all other kinds. No contrary commercial designation appears at the time of the enactment of the tariff act of 1913. It is therefore concluded that the act of 1913 differentiates between chenille and Axminster carpets and rugs. And as chenille rugs are made from portions of chenille carpets or carpeting, and are not enumerated in paragraph 300, they are dutiable under this paragraph, by virtue of paragraph 303. U. S. v. Trorlicht, etc., Carpet Co., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 254.

Machine-made chenille wool rugs of the importations, not "woven whole for rooms," are dutiable by virtue of paragraph 303, at the rate imposed on chenille carpets by this paragraph. U. S. v. Trorlicht, etc., Carpet Co., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 254.

Vol. II, p. 805, par. 300. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 89.]

Chenille carpets and rugs.—See note under par. 293.

Handmade rugs.—Certain handmade rugs known as "Idaho," "Kerbela," "Beirut" and "Calcutta" and certain rugs shown to be carpets woven whole for rooms from specifications are dutiable under this paragraph. U. S. v. Trorlicht, etc., Carpet Co., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 254.

Vol. II, p. 805, par. 303. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 89.]

Chenille carpets and rugs.—See note under par. 293.

Rugs for floors.—The expression "rugs for floors . . . and other portions of carpets or carpeting . . ." in this paragraph includes long rolls of carpeting intended to be cut at places indicated in the weave, each piece, after being cut, to be bound and fringed into a finished rug. U. S. v. Trorlicht, etc., Carpet Co., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 254.

Vol. II, p. 808, par. 318. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 90.]

Applied articles.—See note under par. 358.

Vol. II, p. 810, par. 320. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 90.]

Mechanically ground wood pulp, in sheet form, imported in rolls, the sheet being of a width and thickness especially suitable for the manufacture of a particular kind of pulpboard does not, by reason of its form, become "pulpboard" within the meaning of that term in this paragraph, but remains "mechanically ground wood pulp" within the meaning of that expression in paragraph 649. Beaver Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 22.

Vol. II, p. 814, par. 329. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 92.]

Professional journals.—See note under par. 426.

Vol. II, p. 815, par. 332. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 92.]

Fashion plates.—Cards containing pictures of women wearing fashionable clothes, surrounded by samples of actual dress goods fabrics and other similar cards representing the interiors of rooms exhibiting designs of drapery, pictures of wall paper and linoleum designs, bolts of dress or upholstery fabrics, a couch with figured covering, and similar articles are not classifiable as "original drawings" under paragraph 652; neither are they "works of art" under paragraph 376. They should be classified as manufacturers of paper under this paragraph.

MacLoughlin v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 37.

Vol. II, p. 816, par. 333. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 93.]

Jewelry—Imitation pearl necklaces.—See note under par. 356.

Vol. II, p. 818, par. 335. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 93.]

Hemp chenille.—There seems to be little, if any, difference in meaning between the word "braids" and the word "plaits" in this paragraph. Two threads twisted together cannot be regarded as a braid or plait. Thus, merchandise known as hemp chenille, made on a machine by braiding one hemp and two cotton threads and contemporaneously cutting the hemp thread so that the finished product is two tightly twisted cotton threads with pieces of hemp thread sticking through the twists, is not classifiable under this paragraph as "braids" or "plaits," but should be classified as a manufacture of hemp under paragraph 284. Ringk v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 107.

Vol. II, p. 822, par. 347. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 94.]

Artificial and ornamental fruits, etc.—To be classifiable as "artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof," under this paragraph, it is not necessary that articles should truly represent fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, or stems. It is sufficient if they simulate natural fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems in physical characteristics and appearance closely enough to cause them in common understanding to be regarded as leaves, stems, flowers, or fruits, produced, not by nature but by the hand of man, and, at the same time, are appropriate and suitable to be used for those purposes of ornamentation to which the natural products may be temporarily devoted. Cochran Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 62. To same effect, see Johnson & Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 54.

Articles made of straw and chip in natural colors, too fragile and crude to be used as millinery ornaments, but imported as raw material for making them, not resembling fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof, are not to be classified under this paragraph as "artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof." Isler v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 74.

Dyed straw millinery ornaments, crudely resembling "fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof," should be classified as "artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof," under this paragraph, rather than as nonenumerated articles under paragraph 385. Johnson v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 54.

Millinery ornaments consisting of clusters of black straw wound into the form of berries or grapes and set on black straw leaves attached to stems made of black straw and metal; and millinery ornaments consisting of sprays of black straw leaves and black straw roses sewed with black threads to a stiff fabric foundation are properly classified as "artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems" under this paragraph. But millinery ornaments so crudely and grotesquely fashioned as to be scarcely deserving of the description ornamental and not resembling fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems can not be classified under this paragraph. R. C. Cochran Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 62.

Ivory pendants and brooches.—Ivory brooches, pendants, and scarf pins, carved in imitation of various flowers, are not "artificial and ornamental flowers," within this paragraph, but should be classified as manufactures of ivory under paragraph 369. U. S. v. Darling, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 57.

Presumption in favor of collector's finding.—Millinery ornaments consisting of straw spheroids in combination with artificial stems and sprays of artificial leaves, having been classified by the collector under this paragraph, it must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the leaves and stems are chief value; and they are dutiable under the paragraph as articles in chief value of "artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems." Cochran Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 62.

Vol. II, p. 824, par. 351. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 95.]

Unusual coverings.—See note under section III, par. R, infra, p. 434.

Vol. II, p. 825, par. 356. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 95.]

"Articles or wares plated with gold or silver."—See note under par. 167.

Imitation pearls.—Not every importation regardless of size, use, or shape, which remotely resembles a pearl in color, can be regarded as an imitation pearl and assessed as jewelry. Veith v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 201.

Imitation pearl necklaces.—The provision of this paragraph, for such jewelry as is valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces indicates that, in the congressional view, there is cheaper jewelry, and serves to show that whether or not merchandise is to be classified as jewelry is not to be determined by its value. But necklaces made of wax-filled glass imitation pearl beads permanently strung and fitted with metal clasps and imitation pearl pendants are classifiable as "jewelry" under this paragraph and not as articles of beads under paragraph 333. U. S. v. Woolworth Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 194.

Bone watch charms.—Prima facie, an article in chief value of material neither precious stone nor precious metal, nor an imitation of either, is not jewelry commonly so called. Thus, watch charms made of bone are not jewelry. U. S. v. Mandel, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 44.

Manufactures of ivory with brass eyelets are not made of precious metal or precious stone or an imitation of either, and are not jewelry. U. S. v. Darling, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 57.

Vol. II, p. 827, par. 358. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 96.]

Appliquéd articles.—A union of two independent fabrications is essential to and determinative of the definition of the word "appliquéd" as used in this paragraph. Thus, a fabric which is ornamented upon one surface by figures composed of glue covered with flock is not appliquéd, but should be classified under the residuary provisions of paragraph 318 as a woven silk fabric not otherwise specially provided for. U. S. v. Heyliger, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 52; U. S. v. Mills, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 49.

Embroidery.—To constitute an embroidery under this paragraph there must be, by needle-work processes, an ornamental addition superimposed upon a previously completed fabric or article—not a needlework ornamentation placed upon a fabric regarded as a material only, which ornamentation constitutes substantially the completed fabric or article. U. S. v. Field, (1920) 20 U. S. Cust. App. 183.

Presumption of legislative sanction of judicial interpretation.—Congress is presumed to have enacted the provision for embroideries in this paragraph in harmony with the judicial interpretation of the word obtaining at that time. U. S. v. Field, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 183.

"In their natural state."—The expression of this paragraph, "in their natural state, and not the separated fibers thereof," will not be construed so as to make the first phrase simply antithetical of the second. The purpose of Congress was to exclude from the paragraph by this provision grass and straw cloth made of grass and straw fibers, which are provided for elsewhere; and the paragraph comprehends split straw, so long as the splitting has not resulted in a decortication of the fibers. Isler v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 74.

Bone watch charms.—Watch charms made of bone should not be classified as jewelry under paragraph 356, in the absence of evidence that they are commercially known as such, but should be classified as manufactures of bone under this paragraph. U. S. v. Mandel, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 44.

Dyed straw articles.—Dyed straw is not straw in its "natural state" within that expression in this paragraph, and articles made of it are not dutiable hereunder. Johnson v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 54; Cochran v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 62.

Millinery ornaments in chief value of straw, but not in imitation of fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, are not dutiable under paragraph 347. Such of them as are in chief value of undyed straw are dutiable as manufactures in chief value of straw in its natural state, under this paragraph, and such of them as are in chief value of dyed straw are dutiable as manufactures not provided for under paragraph 385. Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 54.

Split straw and chip material for the manufacture of millinery ornaments, too crude for classification under paragraph 347, as artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems, or parts thereof, are dutiable as manufactures of chip and straw, under this paragraph. *Isler v. "All smokers' articles whatsoever."—By using the words "all smokers' articles whatsoever" in this paragraph Congress manifested its intention "to reach out into all branches of trade and commerce and to gather within the dutiable provisions of this paragraph everything used chiefly by smokers, in that pursuit, and for that purpose, wherever else they may occur or within whatever other provisions of the tariff law the merchandise may be included." Thus, finished pipe stems may be regarded as material for manufacturing or assembling pipes, still, being separate and distinct subjects of trade and use, and the language of this paragraph, "all smokers' articles whatsoever" being so comprehensive, they must be regarded as "articles" within this paragraph. Bush v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 161.

Bamboo pipe stems.—Bamboo pipe stems, 5 inches in length, one end cut off square just back of a joint, thus forming a mouthpiece, and the other end tapered to fit into the pipe, are classifiable as "smokers' articles," under this paragraph, and not as "bamboo" under paragraph 648 or "manufactures of wood" under paragraph 176. Bush v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 161.

Pipes and pipe bowls.—It is not the meaning of this paragraph that "pipes and pipe bowls" should be a separate and distinct classification from "smokers' articles," so that parts of pipes other than bowls (e. g. stems) should be excluded from the paragraph. Pipe stems are "smokers' articles" within the paragraph. Bush v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 161.

When article may be classified as non-enumerated.—When there is no specific provision for merchandise, it can be classified under this paragraph, as a nonenumerated article only in case it is not, in material, texture, or use, similar to any article enumerated in the act. Johnson v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 54.

Necessity of pleading paragraph in making protest.—While this paragraph, strictly speaking, is itself, in a sense, an assessing paragraph, still it may fairly be said that in the general language and common understanding of those dealing with the subject, merchandise which becomes dutiable at a given rate by similitude with enumerated articles is regarded as being brought thereby within the enumerating paragraph for assessment. This paragraph is a legislative rule of interpretation of the scope of every duty-assessing provision of the tariff act, and, as such, it should no more be pleaded than any other rule of interpretation, construction, or evidence. Thus, a protest claiming classification under a certain paragraph is sufficient to support such classification by similitude, even though the protest makes no mention of this paragraph. Rice v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 165.

Nitric acid mixed with sulphuric acid.—Nitric acid to which approximately 20 per cent by weight and 5 per cent according to value of sulphuric acid has been added for the sole purpose of preventing corrosion of steel tank cars essential for transportation of the former acid in large quantities comes within this paragraph, rather than paragraph 5 (see 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 726), which imposes a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem upon "alkalies, alkaloids, and all chemical and medicinal compounds, preparations, mixtures and salts, and combinations thereof," not specially provided for in this section. U. S. v. Aetna Explosives Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 513, 66 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. II, p. 850, par. 404. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 100.]

American goods returned.—A claim for free entry of engines, having forced-draft fans attached, as American goods returned without advancement or improvement in value or condition under this paragraph is not supported by a statement in the foreign export entry that the engines were originally of American manufacture, and that they were shipped to Canada "for connection to the fans." With no other evidence, and without compliance with article 333, Customs Regulations of 1915, pursuant to this paragraph, the collector's classification as miscellaneous metal articles under paragraph 167 should be approved. U. S. v. Reid, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 85.

Burden of proof as to identity of returned goods.—Compliance with article 333, Customs Regulations, 1915, promulgated pursuant to this paragraph and prescribing the method of showing the identity of American goods returned, does not relieve an importer from the burden of proving such identity to support a protest against the decision of the collector against it. The preliminary papers required by the article to be filed with the collector in support of a claim for free entry of merchandise under the paragraph are simply intended to assist the collector in deciding upon the entry and possess no conclusive or binding force upon his official action. If, in such case, the collector, for reasons which seem sufficient to him, decides against the claim for free entry and thereupon assesses duty upon the merchandise, his decision in the first instance is presumed, as in other cases, to be correct; and, upon the trial of a protest in such case, the burden is cast upon the protestant, as in other cases, to establish by lawful evidence any and all facts upon which he relies to overcome that presumption. Hull v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 211.

Everyman's library.—See note under par. 329.

Professional journals.—By the language of this paragraph "textbooks used in schools and other educational institutions" Congress did not intend to admit free of duty all the serial journals and reports issued by associations of the different professions, arts, sciences, industries, businesses, etc.; and the "Journal of the Institute of Actuaries," a paper-bound serial issued quarterly by an English organization known as the "Institute of Actuaries," being such a publication, must be denied such classification and held dutiable under the general provision of paragraph 329 for books. U. S. v. Tice, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 198.

The term "textbook" applies only to such books as either set out in their text the facts or principles of some branch of learning which is to be taught to students, or to such as are prepared with especial introductions, notes, glossaries, spacings, or other "editorial apparatus," which particularly adapt them for the use of students or instructors engaged in classroom work as a class apart from more general readers. The fact that a book is used in educational institutions does not make it a textbook within the meaning of that term in this paragraph. Wakem v. U. S. (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 24.

It is not clear that the context of this paragraph does not confine the free entry accorded "textbooks" to "books" in the narrower sense, excluding "pamphlets," particularly serial pamphlets. In view of the fact that serial pamphlets are not of the same contents and not necessarily even of the same subject matter issue by issue, it is doubtful whether free entry could be decreed an entire serial. U. S. v. Tice & Lynch, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 198.

Vol. II, p. 857, par. 461. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 103.]

Construction.—In order to give effect to all the provisions of this paragraph it is necessary to construe it as according free entry to all copper ores and all products of them in whatever shape and whatever form produced short of manufactures of copper. Lang v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 228.

Platinum in sheets.—The provision of this paragraph admitting free of duty iridium and platinum in native combination does not modify that of paragraph 578 admitting free of duty platinum in sheets, so as to deny free entry to platinum in sheets when artificially combined with iridium. American Express Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 275.

Ferrosilicon.—See note under par. 102.

Vol. II, p. 870, par. 578. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 108.]

Commercial designation—platinum in sheets.—The rule that the commercial designation of imported merchandise may be shown to correspond to the tariff designation applies not only to eo nomine designations but also to descriptive terms. To bar the application of this rule the intention of Congress to do so must clearly appear. Thus, under a protest claiming free entry of merchandise 90 per cent platinum and 10 per cent iridium as platinum in sheets, under this paragraph, it is error to exclude evidence of commercial designation, since such merchandise, if shown to be known commercially as "platinum in sheets," is admissible free of duty as such hereunder. American Express Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 275.

Vol. II, p. 875, par. 614. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 110.]

Crushed limestone.—Limestone, unless completely manufactured, is entitled to free entry under this paragraph. Thus, limestone crushed to diameters of from one-sixteenth inch to 4 inches to facilitate transportation, and needing to be subjected to other manufacturing processes before being used, is admissible free of duty under this paragraph as "limestone, unmanufactured," and not dutiable under paragraph 81 as earthy or mineral substances wholly or partially manufactured." Lackawanna Steel Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 93.

Nutgall extract.—See note under par. 1.
By-product lignum extract.—Lignum extract, obtained as a by-product from the manufacture of wood pulp from spruce and balsam, containing no alcohol but a substantial amount of tannin and commonly used for tanning, should be classified as "extracts of other . . . woods . . . such as are commonly used for tanning" under this paragraph rather than as "waste not specially provided for" under paragraph 384, notwithstanding that such merchandise is used for other purposes than tanning and that the instant importation was not intended to be used for tanning. It is not classifiable as tannin or as an acid not especially provided for under paragraph 1, as a chemical compound under paragraph 5, or as a non-enumerated manufactured article under paragraph 385. Meyers v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 216.

Vol. II, p. 876, par. 627. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 110.]

Containers of tea.—Where less than five pounds of tea is imported in a tin can and the can inclosed by a bamboo basket, the can not being an unusual covering designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of the tea, the proviso to this paragraph directs that the can shall be admitted free and duty levied on the basket. It is error to treat the can and the basket as an entirety and assess duty upon their combined values as being in chief value of bamboo under paragraph 175. U. S. v. Brown, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 89.

Squared timbers imported for the purpose of being cut up into railroad ties. but suitable for other uses also, not known as railroad ties in the form in which imported, are admissible free as "timber . . . unmanufactured, hewn, or sawed, sided or squared." under this paragraph and not dutiable as railroad ties under paragraph 170. Mitchell Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 104.

Vol. II, p. 879, par. 648. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 112.]

Chinese reeds.—See note under par. 173.

Round reeds in the rough.—See note under par. 173.

Bamboo pipe stems.—This paragraph excludes bamboo which has been "further advanced than cut into lengths." Thus, bamboo pipe stems cut and pierced behind a joint for the mouth and tapered at the other end for the pipe are "further advanced" and not to be classified under this paragraph. Bush v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 161.

Reeds cut into lengths.—The provision of this paragraph for "Reeds unmanufactured, . . . or not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, fishing rods, or walking canes" extends, not restricts, reeds to such as are cut into such suitable lengths; so that the paragraph includes such reeds whether or not they are suitable for the uses named. And reeds which are produced by subjecting the rattans to no manufacturing processes other than removing their bark or enamel and cutting them into lengths are classifiable under this paragraph, except that such of them as are chiefly used for the manufacture of chairs are classifiable under paragraph 173. Peabody v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 220.

Vol. II, p. 880, par. 651. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 112.]

"Waste."—The word "waste" in this paragraph does not include only refuse or waste material resulting or left over from a process of manufacture, and does not exclude manufactured articles which, by wear and tear of use, have become worn-out, unfit and useless for the purposes for which they were made. Central Vermont R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 31.

Shoddy.—It could not have been the intention of Congress, in the enactment of this paragraph to admit shoddy free of duty, and to exclude material for making shoddy from such exemption. Central Vermont R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 31.

Worn-out pulp felts.—Pieces of wool felt, which had been worn out by use on paper-making machines were shown to be imported for the purpose of making shoddy, and to be commercially fit practically for no other purpose. They are admissible free as "wastes not specially provided for," under this paragraph and should not be classified as a manufacture of wool under paragraph 288. Central Vermont R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 31.

Vol. II, p. 880, par. 652. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 112.]

Fashion plates.—Figures of women wearing fashionable clothes, drawn on cardboard with pen and ink or pencil and colored with water colors, designed to illustrate the clothes, are classifiable as "original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors" under this paragraph rather than as manufactures of paper under paragraph 332. MacLoughlin v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 37.

Vol. II, p. 884, par. J, subsec. 4. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 129.]

Models of women's wearing apparel.—The provision of this subsection, exempting from duty "models of women's wearing apparel imported by manufacturers for use as models in their own establishments, and not for sale" goes to the intention of the importer at the time of entry. This is a question of fact to be decided in each case upon the testimony adduced therein. Hence, where models of women's wearing apparel are imported under bond for exportation within six months as being for use as models in importers' manufacturing establishments and not for sale, according to the provisions of this subsection, and it is shown that importers sold some, rented some, permitted some to be copied for a price and used the residue as models in their own establishments, duty is properly assessed upon them, on the application of the importers for exportation of the residue, as it does not appear that importers at the time of entry, intended them for use as models in their own manufacturing establishments and not for sale. Grab Fashion Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 39.

Vol. II, p. 885, par. J, subsec. 5. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 130.]

Marine surface condensers.—See note under par. 167.

Boiler parts.—An importation of boiler parts lacking such distinctive and important features as furnaces, pipe, stay tubes, boiler plates, and other parts, castings, cannot be regarded as an importation of complete boilers in knockdown condition and are entitled to entry free of duty under this subsection as materials necessary for the building of the machinery of American vessels, and are not dutiable under paragraph 167 as manufactures of metal. Johnson Iron Works v. U. S., (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 268.

"Materials."—The provision of this subsection, admitting free of duty "materials" necessary for the building of the machinery of American vessels does not mean that such materials must be crude, but includes standardized parts of engines. But the importation in one shipment of enough standardized parts to make a complete engine is an importation of an engine under paragraph 167. This is not altered by the fact that the importation contained also other standardized parts of engines. U. S. v. Hannevig, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Manufactures distinguished.—Forced-draft fans, with engines attached, completely finished for the forcing of air through heat-r boxes into the furnaces of vessels, are not materials for American vessels within this subsection. They are finished manufactures, and should be classified under paragraph 167 as miscellaneous metal articles. U. S. v. Reid, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 85; U. S. v. Carlin, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 83.

Spare engine parts as "outfit and equipment."—Spare parts for an engine installed upon an American vessel, no claim being made that the number was greater than was necessary or that they were not placed on board for the purpose of replacing the corresponding parts of the engine as they might be broken or wear out, are "outfit and equipment" for American vessels under this subsection. U. S. v. Hannevig, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Importation in bond under treasury regulations.—This subsection provides that certain articles for American vessels may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. These regulations are articles 406, 407 and 408, Treasury Regulations, 1915. Where the importer is compelled to pay the duties assessed before the goods are delivered to him no bond is necessary; and where the duty has been paid and there is no dispute that the merchandise was spare engine parts for an engine which was placed upon an American vessel, compliance with the regulations is unnecessary. U. S. v. Hannevig, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Vol. II, p. 973, sec. 2766. [First ed., vol. II, p. 636.]

Construction.—This section is exclusive, that is, the permission goes so far and no further. Anything else may not be called "merchandise," so far as the collection of customs revenue is concerned. U. S. v. Reed, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 724.

"Capable of being imported."—This phrase has been construed as applying only to such merchandise as may lawfully be imported into this country. In this connection the court said:

"It must not be overlooked that the statutes with which we are dealing are customs statutes, and are designed for the enforcement of the collection of revenues assessable upon dutiable articles. To this end, no doubt, it is required that all merchandise capable of importation shall be contained in the ship's manifests, so that the customs officers may determine what is subject to duty and what is not. It would not be expected that articles prohibited introduction within the United States would be mentioned in the manifest, because the presumption would be that the master would not bring them in, for if he did he would breach the law, and subject himself to the penalty imposed for importing prohibited articles. Congress, therefore, had no occasion to legislate in these statutes for the protection and the enforcement of the payment of duties on merchandise which it did not intend should be brought in under any conditions." U. S. v. Sischo, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 958.

Opium.—The owner and master of a vessel who does not include in his manifest opium prepared for smoking purposes is not, by this section made liable to the penalty imposed by section 2809 of the Revised Statutes, such opium not being "merchandise" within this meaning of that word as it is there used. U. S. v. Sischo, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 958.

Vol. II, p. 989, sec. 2809. [First ed., vol. II, p. 647.]

Purpose of section.—This statute was obviously designed to enable the government, among other things, to collect the duties upon all dutiable articles coming into this country from foreign ports, and to that end it was desirous that it be advised by the manifests of what merchandise capable of being imported was aboard ship, so that the proper assessment of duties could be made by the collector of customs. U. S. v. Sischo, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 958.

Failure to list prohibited articles.—The owner of a vessel who does not include in his manifest opium prepared for smoking purposes is not liable for the penalty imposed by this section, such opium not being "merchandise" within the meaning of that word as it is here used. U. S. v. Sischo, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 958; U. S. v. Reed, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 724. In the latter case, the court said:

"Under the Constitution no person can be compelled to furnish evidence against himself. To compel a man to list or include in a paper to be filed something which would convict him or render him liable to conviction for a crime, and then to collect a penalty from him for failure to give evidence against himself of his commission of a crime, resembles closely the principles involved in prosecutions under the Volstead Law, where defendants have been accused of violating the internal revenue laws compelling them to register, put up a distillery sign, and pay a tax for the manufacture, etc., of liquor which is prohibited and for which specific penalties and punishments are provided.

"In the case of United States v. Boze Yuginovich and another, 254 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 L. ed. —, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States on June 1, 1921, it was held that Congress must have necessarily intended to repeal the internal revenue laws in so far as they verbally or literally required performance of acts prohibited as crimes. In the same way it would seem that Congress could not have intended to require the captain of a vessel to make a report to the effect that he was committing a crime against the laws of the United States, in order to avoid liability for a penalty not expressly defined, but only forced out of language which, taken literally, is not broad enough to justify such interpretation."

Vol. II, p. 1009, par. B. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 114.]

Meaning of "bill of lading."—An express receipt is not a bill of lading within the meaning of this section. Hence a connecting carrier holding such a receipt duly indorsed will not be deemed the consignee. United States v. Fargo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 180, wherein it was said:

"A distinguishing feature of the bill of lading is that it represents the goods, so that by the delivery of it, under the practice of merchants, there is a symbolical delivery of the goods and thus the obligations of contracts of sale are satisfied. By the indorsement of a bill of lading, the property rights to the goods can pass from hand to hand, without the actual necessity of removing the goods themselves or the delivery thereof. Customs Administrative Act, § 3, defines persons who might make entry of imported merchandise and who must pay the customs duties thereon. It was the evident intent of Congress to impose liability upon the owners of the merchandise and the consignee is presumptively the owner of the goods. The consignee is presumptively the owner of the goods, since it is provided that he might make entry of the goods, with attendant assumption of liability for customs duties. It is recognized that title might pass from the consignee by indorsement of a bill of lading, and it was provided that in such event the indorsee should have the rights and liabilities of the original consignee. So the practice has been that a bill of lading is surrendered only when the goods are delivered. The transfer of title is made by indorsement of the bill of lading, and the indorsee then becomes entitled to the goods from the carrier, and, by the usage of merchants the indorsement of the bill of lading from the consignee to the new title owner becomes a fixed practice. Carriers then become subject to the rule that the goods could not be delivered, except upon surrender of the bill of lading, and the holder or transferee of the bill of lading was expected to present the bill in order to obtain delivery of the goods, and was entitled to delivery of the goods upon such presentations. Ga., Fla. & Ala. Ry. v. Blish Milling Co., 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 L. ed. 948.

"An express receipt has not had the same effect of passing title. Upon presentation of a freight receipt, even though indorsed, the right to delivery of the merchandise does not follow. The carrier express company issued the receipt which authorized delivery to the consignee himself or to his duly authorized representative, and that is all. The obligation of the express company, which gives the express receipt, is to deliver to the person who shows himself to be the consignee or his authorized representative under all the circumstances. The express receipt is not demanded for the delivery of the goods, and it has not been customary, in forwarding goods, to forward the express receipt as a symbol of goods shipped. If the express receipt authorized the defendant in error to make delivery to a person on behalf of the consignee, the company is justified in making this delivery; but the fact that authorization is indorsed on the back of the express receipt does not pass title. It created a right to demand delivery of the goods, which may be revoked by a subsequent order of the consignee to the express company to disregard the indorsement. If such an order be given, the express company would be unauthorized to deliver to any one except the original consignee.

"Thus it will be observed that a bill of lading is both the receipt and a contract by the carrier to deliver to the consignee or the holder of a duly indorsed document, and an express receipt serves one purpose, to wit, a receipt limiting the carrier's liability in case of loss and damage upon contingencies named in it."

Vol. II, p. 1018, par. H. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 116.]

Evidence.—In an action by the United States to recover the value of merchandise which it was claimed was entered and introduced into the commerce of the United States by means of fraudulent written entries and invoices, while it is permissible for the government to prove the foreign market value where the goods were purchased, it is said that this is not essential to the establishment of the government's prima facie case, and that it is sufficient for the government to establish that the false statement in the invoice tended to deprive the United States of revenue by evidence that the price paid was greater than the value given in the invoice. And if the jury is satisfied that the purchase price of the importations in question is greater than the sums made as entries when the importation took place, the jury can find fraud in making such written entries and invoices. U. S. v. Santini, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 303.

Vol. II, p. 1019, par. I. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 117.]

"Manifest clerical error."—The term "manifest clerical error" in this paragraph is one that is apparent and obvious on the face of the papers. It does not include an error which may, by extrinsic evidence, be shown to have been committed. Thus, an entry which sets out the extension in yen and the unit of value without stating what currency, obviously states upon its face that the unit of value is in yen; and extraneous proof that the extension should have been stated in dollars instead of yen does not establish a claim of "manifest clerical error" under this paragraph. The additional duty provided for by this paragraph for undervaluation should be imposed, since the yen is worth less than the dollar, and the action of the appraiser in returning the invoice to the importer for correction after it has come under his observation is forbidden by this paragraph. Consmitter v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 109.

Under this paragraph manifest clerical error cannot be shown by proof dehors the record. When an entry is made as the entrant intends to make it and carries the intended signification to the mind of the collector, there is no manifest clerical error. Thus, where merchandise is shipped from Montreal, Canada, to be entered at Rouses Point, N. Y., for transportation to New York, and the agent of the carrier makes, from the invoice, a consumption entry at Rouses Point, very greatly understating the value, the underestimation arising from a misapprehension as to whether the invoice stated the price in francs or dollars, and no disavowal of the entry was made, but an attempt is made to correct it, the collector may properly refuse to permit the correction for the reason that the application was received after the invoice and merchandise had come under the observation of the appraiser. In such case there is no manifest clerical error under this paragraph, as its showing depends upon evidence outside the record. U. S. v. Rivers, (1921) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 262.

In U. S. v. Tiffany & Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 247, the invoice of goods imported from Italy stated the value as 6,488 francs. The back of the invoice bore the indorsement "Amount of invoice, lire 6,488." The value of the gold franc and the gold lira was the same but the paper lira was depreciated. The consular certificate, erroneously assuming that the lira intended was the paper lira, stated the percentage of depreciation and the value of the merchandise accordingly. Importer entered the merchandise at such depreciated value. It was held that this was not "manifest clerical error," under this paragraph, and that the additional duty provided for herein for undervaluation was justly imposed.

Additional duties — Necessity of compliance with statutes and regulations in making assessment.—While the additional duties prescribed for undervaluation of merchandise by this paragraph, are not to be construed as penal in character, nevertheless they provide for the assessment of duties in excess of the ordinary or regular rate of duty upon similar merchandise, and they should not accrue against an importer unless the statutes and regulations upon which they depend have been substantially followed in the assessment. Thus, Article 582, Customs Regulations of 1915, requires that when the appraiser advances invoice prices to make market value an appropriate red ink notation shall be made on the invoice. A red ink notation "D" opposite an item deducted by the importer as nondutiable, the notation being intended by the appraiser and understood by the collector to mean that the item should be added again to make market value, is not a sufficient compliance with this regulation, and the collector may not assess upon such a foundation the additional duty provided for by this paragraph. U. S. v. Cone, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 120.

Contraband articles or goods.—The penalty provided for in this section cannot be inflicted on the master of a vessel who fails to obtain a permit to unload smoking opium the importation of which is prohibited. U. S. v. Reed, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 724, the court said:

"If the smoking opium cannot be considered 'merchandise,' then of course no permit to unload 'merchandise' could be obtained for the opium, and inferentially the passage of the law making smoking opium contraband has rendered futile (and therefore invalid or inferentially repealed) the provisions as to permits. Again, the criminal statutes cover the act, and the penalty under the customs law is not needed. . . . If he unloaded articles or chattels which were not 'merchandise' within the sense in which that term is used with respect to permits, he committed a crime and should be punished under other sections rather than that regulating the handling and unloading of articles capable of importation."

Vol. II, p. 1043, sec. 5. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 53.]

Reasonableness of rules.—A rule promulgated by the Treasury Department under this section exacting extra pay for the inspection of baggage brought by trolley car passengers over an international toll bridge on Sundays or holidays is a reasonable one and within the power of the department to make. International R. Co. v. Davidson, (W. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 313, wherein it was said:

"The rules suggested or promulgated by the collector relating to the surrender and examination of baggage carried by trolley passengers or by other vehicular passengers on Sundays or holidays on the next secular day, and the requirements that plaintiff use reasonable means to advise persons using the toll bridges that no examination of passengers' baggage and vehicles would be made by the inspectors until the day succeeding a Sunday or holiday, were not in my opinion unreasonable or unconstitutional. The collector, I think, acted within his jurisdiction, and the rights of the plaintiff are not in any way impaired, since it has the right to a special license or permit and to the service of an inspector for immediate examination of the baggage of its arriving passengers and conveyances using the bridge. It is true that there is no specific authority for licensing a toll bridge (obviously not a conveyance) for lading or unlading, yet since plaintiff concededly is owner of the bridges and trolley cars carrying the baggage of its passengers for hire and using the bridges for transportation, and collecting tolls, the provisions of the statute apply to it."

Advance notice of arrival.—The fact that it is impossible to give advance notice of the arrival of passenger's baggage does not prohibit the collector from demanding of a trolley company bringing passengers and baggage over an international bridge the extra compensation provided for by this section. International R. Co. v. Davidson, (W. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 313.

Conclusiveness of consular certificate.—The consular certificate as to depreciated currency provided for by paragraph 692, Consular Regulations 1896, amended 1916, and this section, and Articles 205 and 621, Customs Regulations 1915, is conclusive as to the extent of the depreciation but not as to whether the goods were purchased with such depreciated currency or as to whether they were purchased at the price named in the invoice or certificate. U. S. v. Tiffany, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 247.

Vol. II, p. 1064, par. L. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 118.]

Appraisal — cost of production.—In Stirn v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 17, it appeared that silk in the gray was purchased in the United States and shipped to France, there treated by certain preliminary manufacturing processes and returned to the United States to be used in the manufacture of fabrics. It was shown that there was no market for such processed silk in either France or the United States. Accompanying the merchandise were invoices showing the various items of charge made for the processing and preparing of the silk. Upon these invoices were items of general expenses and profits, which were, however, less than 10 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively, of the outlay of every nature incident to production, which are the minimum additions permitted by this paragraph to be made for such items. It was held that the claim that the Board of United States General Appraisers proceeded upon a wrong principle of law in making additions, since these additions had already been made in the invoices, could not be sustained; and that their decision adding 10 per cent and 8 per cent of the invoice values for general expenses and profits, respectively, should be affirmed.

Vol. II, p. 1065, par. M. [First ed., vol. II, p. 119.]

Elements of dutiable value.—To make dutiable value the collector is authorized by virtue of this paragraph and paragraph N, to add to the appraised value of the merchandise per se, not the market value, but the cost of the containers thereof; that is to say, the price actually paid for them, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States. Tuska v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 65.

Decisions by Court of Customs Appeals—Necessity of paying appraisement appeal fee within statutory period.—The provision of this paragraph that an appeal to reappraisement "shall be deemed to be finally abandoned and waived unless within two days from the date of filing thereof the person who filed such notice shall deposit with the collector of customs a fee of $1 for each entry." is mandatory, and the action of the Board of General Appraisers in dismissing such appeals for the reason that the fees were paid later than the prescribed two days should be approved. Sugar Products Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 179.

Vol. II, p. 1071, par. N. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 120.]

Protests—By whom made.—When it is shown that the importations were purchased by the protestant abroad, that he owned them at the time they were brought to the United States, and that he paid the duty on them, the protest was filed by a proper party under the provision of this paragraph that it may be filed by the "owner, importer, consignee or agent of such merchandise," notwithstanding that his name does not appear in any of the papers connected with the entry. U. S. v. Hannevig, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Vol. II, p. 1086, par. R. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 122.]

Unusual coverings.—The manifest purpose of that portion of this paragraph which levies additional duty upon unusual coverings or containers of imported merchandise is to penalize, not merchandise used as coverings or containers and imported as merchandise, but merchandise which is imported and sought to be introduced into the country, not as merchandise, but as coverings or containers. Thus, upon an importation of leather trunks containing manufactures of human hair, invoiced as leather trunks and human hair, the additional duty levied upon unusual coverings or containers by this paragraph should not be levied, since the trunks were imported as merchandise, no attempt being made to introduce them as coverings. The trunks are dutiable under paragraph 360 as manufactures of leather, and the hair goods under paragraph 351 as manufactures of human hair. U. S. v. Yamamoto, (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 70.

The "value" of the containers of imported merchandise mentioned in this paragraph is their cost. Tuska v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 65.

Authority of collectors to appraise.—This paragraph confers no authority upon collectors of customs to appraise. Tuska v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 65.

Vol. II, p. 1115, par. M. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 130.]

Validity of oral application.—An oral application to the deputy collector of customs in charge of bonded manufacturing warehouses for the establishment of such a warehouse is not a compliance with this paragraph and articles 709, 710, 747, 749, and 749, Customs Regulations 1915, promulgated pursuant thereto. Under such circumstances it cannot be said that any application was made. Agency Canadian Car, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 172.

Vol. II, p. 1136, sec. 21. [First ed., vol. II, p. 760.]

"Fraud."—The words "in the absence of fraud and in the absence of protest by the owner, importer, agent, or consignee" in this section, do not restrict the fraud to the owner, importer, agent, or consignee. Zuoca v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 133.

Nature of reliquidation for fraud.—A reliquidation more than a year after entry on the ground of fraud is not a criminal or quasi criminal proceeding, nor does it seek to enforce a penalty or work a forfeiture. It is only an assessment of duties properly due and, as such, purely civil in its nature. Zucca v. U. S., (1920) U. S. Cust. App. 133.

Burden of proof on reliquidation.—When reliquidation is made under this section the United States must show fraud. Zucca v. U. S., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 133.

Vol. II, p. 1161, sec. 3061. [First ed., vol. II, p. 742.]

Application.—This and the following sections have application only where the article is merchandise and can be entered at the custom house. The Goodhope, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 268 Fed. 694.

Vol. II, p. 1161, sec. 3062. [First ed., vol. II, p. 743.]

This section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act in so far as it relates to the importation of intoxicating liquors into this country for beverage purposes. U. S. v. One Hudson Touring Car, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 473.

Good faith of owner of vehicle.—"It is now settled that the good faith or even the entire innocence of an owner of an automobile seized for violation of the revenue laws furnishes no reason why such automobile should not be forfeited to the United States and sold in accordance with the applicable statutes, and the question as to such good faith is immaterial in libel proceedings to enforce such forfeiture and sale." U. S. v. One Hudson Touring Car, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 473.

Vol. II, p. 1168, sec. 3082. [First ed., vol. II, p. 748.]

"Import or bring."—Where goods forbidden of importation are physically brought into the country, they are in fact imported within the meaning of the act just as truly as there may be an importation of lawful goods which may be imported contrary to law by failure to comply with the customs statute. Feathers of Wild Birds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 964.

Where bullion was brought from Mexico into the United States contrary to law by one to whom an agent of the owner had entrusted it, if such agent was acting within the scope of his authority as the owner's agent, the bullion is subject to be forfeited although the owner did not give any instructions to his agent as to the manner or means to be employed or not to comply with the law in bringing it in. Shaar v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 26.

Presumption and burden of proof.—The presumption which is raised by this section "is simply that, where possession of goods which have been proved to have been imported contrary to law is shown, the burden of explaining such possession is placed upon the defendant. But the statute does not raise any presumption that the goods were imported contrary to law. The burden of proving this fact beyond a reasonable doubt rests upon the Government." Sherman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 516.

Circumstantial evidence.—Where the case is purely one of circumstantial evidence the rule applies that the proof shall exclude every other reasonable hypothesis except the guilt of the accused. Sherman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 516, wherein it was held that where the only evidence of criminality in the case of liquors alleged to have been unlawfully imported was the fact of their being found in the defendant's possession, and there was nothing to show that they were imported at a time when it was unlawful to import them, such proof was not sufficient to support a verdict of guilty.

Vol. II, p. 1186, sec. 3, par. T. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 122.]

"Probable cause."—"Whether probable cause was shown for the prosecution under this section is to be judged by the court. Probable cause as used means less than evidence which would justify a conviction, and in the case of seizure, circumstances which warrant suspicion." U. S. v. Santini, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 303.

Probable cause as the term is used in this paragraph means no more than present circumstances creating suspicion. Thus, where in the case of feathers in the possession of a person it was admitted that they were not from birds found in the United States, and the claimant's explanation as to how they came into his possession was composed of wholly inconsistent statements there was held to be sufficient to make out a case of probable cause. Feathers of Wild Birds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 964.

1918 Supp., p. 141, sec. 501.

Synthetic alizarin.—A synthetic compound which contains alizarin is not "synthetic alizarin" and not embraced by that language in this section. U. S. v. Lawrence & Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 177.

"Tuscan red," a pigment for making paint, is not brought within the exception of this section by reason of the fact that it contains alizarin and the decision of the collector subjecting it to the additional duty provided for by the section should be sustained by the Board of General Appraisers. U. S. v. Lawrence & Co., (1920) 10 U. S. Cust. App. 177.

Application to passengers' baggage.—This section is not limited in its application to vessels or other conveyances carrying cargo or freight, but is also applicable to passengers' baggage. International R. Co. v. Davidson, (W. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 313, wherein it was said:

"No doubt the earlier statute was intended to apply to vessels and their cargoes, but inclusion by the amendatory act of 1911 of the words 'other conveyances,' and the later inclusion by the act of 1920, section 5, of the words 'receiving or examination of passengers' baggage,' would seem to imply extra compensation for immediate examination of passengers' baggage. A reasonable construction of the act requires, I think, that the plaintiff apply for a permit for immediate examination of baggage and unloading on the specified days, if it desires a continuance of such service."

Baggage brought in vehicle and by foot passengers on Sundays.—Under this section the collector may impound for inspection until the next day baggage brought over an international bridge on Sundays or holidays in vehicles or by foot passengers unless the bridge company pays for the extra services of inspectors on such days. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co. v. Davidson, (W. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 316, wherein it was said:

"All merchandise, including vehicles and baggage carried in conveyances or by persons entering the United States, is concededly subject to inspection and examination by inspectors who perform their duties during the hours fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury. There is no provision of law requiring the inspection and examination of the conveyances or merchandise or baggage after the inspectors cease working for the day. The Act of February, 1911, amended the existing law relating to unloading of vessels arriving from a foreign port at night so as to include other conveyances. The term 'other conveyances' was no doubt used in a restricted sense to conveyances such as freight trains importing merchandise into the United States, and a special permit was granted to transporting companies upon their paying the customs inspectors for overtime to work and giving the bond required by law. No provision was made for examining the baggage of persons coming into the United States from contiguous territory over a bridge on Sundays or holidays and nights, and the collector could, I think, have refused to perform such service. He nevertheless required the inspectors to give such extra services on Sundays and holidays. In February, 1920, however, Congress again amended the statute, and by section 5 provided that extra compensation should be paid the inspectors for working overtime and on Sundays and holidays, the rate of compensation to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury for services rendered 'in connection with the unloading, receiving, or examination of passengers' baggage,' and the act required payment for such services to be made by the master, owner, agent or consignee of 'such vessel or other conveyance whenever such special license or permit for immediate lading or unloading, or for lading, or unloading at night, shall be granted to the collector of customs.'

"The collector is not required to provide inspectors at the bridges to examine baggage or merchandise arriving on holidays and Sundays; and in my estimation it would not be an unreasonable rule to refuse such examination on those days, and require the impounding of baggage and merchandise until the next day. True, as contended, there is no provision for licensing the plaintiff, and thus compelling the collector to have baggage, pedestrians, and merchandise examined on Sundays and holidays; but it must not be overlooked that the Secretary of the Treasury has the right under the statute to prescribe reasonable regulations for such inspection, examination, and collection of duties."

Regulation by Secretary of Treasury relating to importations.—Regulations by the Secretary of the Treasury as to the detention and inspection of baggage and conveyances passing over bridges crossing the Niagara river between the United States and Canada, and maintained by the complainant, which provide that unless the complainant pays two days' pay for each Sunday or holiday for each customs officer performing service in connection with the said company, importation of all merchandise on Sundays and holidays will be stopped, are within the authority of the Secretary. International R. Co. v. Davidson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 153; Niagara Falls International Bridge Co. v. Davidson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 156.

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICERS

Vol. III, p. 26, sec. 1698. [First ed., vol. II, p. 794.]

Action on official bond—Action by injured party in his own name—Construction.—The provision in this section that in case of the breach of an official bond "any person thereby injured may institute, in his own name and for his sole use, a suit on such bond"; merely obviates the necessity of bringing suit in the name of the United States for the use of the person injured. Cunningham v. Rodgers, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 609.

Action by next of kin.—An action on the official bond of a consul for failure to perform the duties imposed on him by the fifth paragraph of section 1709, infra this title, cannot be maintained by the next of kin as owner of a distributive share in an estate. Cunningham v. Rodgers, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 609.

Vol. III, p. 30, sec. 1709. [First ed., vol. II, p. 797.]

Action on bond of consul for failure to perform duties.—An action on the bond of a consul for a failure to perform the duties imposed by the fifth paragraph of this section cannot be maintained by the next of kin as owner of a distributive share in an estate. The administrator is the legal claimant and he alone is entitled to receive the fund. Cunningham v. Rodgers, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 609.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

1918 Supp., p. 151. [Control and regulation of rentals, etc.]

This resolution is unconstitutional because it results in the taking of private property without compensation, and is not uniform in its operation. Willson v. McDonnell, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 265 Fed. 432; Groot v. Reilly, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 266 Fed. 1008.

1919 Supp., p. 42, sec. 101.

Application of Act.—This Act has no application to a landlord and tenant proceeding begun and carried to judgment before its passage. Thompson v. Williams, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 265 Fed. 459.

1919 Supp., p. 44, sec. 108.

Constitutionality.—The provision in this section making the determination of the commission "final and conclusive" unless an appeal is taken within ten days after the filing of the determination is constitutional. Killgore v. Zinkhan, (App. Cas. D. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 140.

Effect of failure to appeal.—The failure to appeal from the finding of the rent commission, as provided by the terms of the Ball Act, render the finding final and conclusive in the courts. Davis v. Cooksey, (App. Cas. D. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 143.

ELECTIONS

Vol. III, p. 120, sec. 1. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 69.]

Mandamus.—There is no remedy given by mandamus to enforce the provisions of this Act. In re Higdon, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 269 Fed. 150. The court said: "Enforcement is by indictment and trial in the customary way. No remedy by original action in mandamus is given those injured. The proceeding here is neither an inquiry by a grand jury nor the trial of a criminal case under those acts. Though Congress might provide for federal supervision of all elections, primary, general, and special, relating to nomination and election to office under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and provide for enforcement thereof by mandamus, or any other suitable remedy, it has not done so."

Vol. III, p. 122, sec. 8. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 72.]

Primary election or convention.—This section applies not only to final elections for choosing Senators, but also to primaries and conventions of political parties for selection of candidates. As to such primaries and conventions it is invalid because at the time it was enacted the only source of power which Congress possessed over elections for Senators and Representatives was U. S. Const., Art. I, § 4 (see vol. X, p. 352), which regulates the manner of holding such elections, and the language of that constitutional provision is not broad enough to include primaries. The 17th Amendment dealing with the election of Senators antedates the statute under consideration and so cannot be considered in connection with it. Newberry v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 469, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said:

"If it be practically true that, under present conditions, a designated party candidate is necessary for an election,—a preliminary thereto,—nevertheless his selection is in no real sense part of the manner of holding the election. This does not depend upon the scheme by which candidates are put forward. Whether the candidate be offered through primary, or convention, or petition, or request of a few, or as the result of his own unsupported ambition, does not directly affect the manner of holding the election. Birth must precede, but it is no part of either funeral or apotheosis.

"Many things are prerequisites to elections or may affect their outcome,—voters, education, means of transportation, health, public discussion, immigration, private animosities, even the face and figure of the candidate; but authority to regulate the manner of holding them gives no right to control any of these. It is settled, e. g., that the power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce does not reach whatever is essential thereto. Without agriculture, manufacturing, mining, etc., commerce could not exist; but this fact does not suffice to subject them to the control of Congress. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 S. Ct. Rep. 6.

"Elections of Senators by state legislatures presupposed selection of their members by the people; but it would hardly be argued that therefore Congress could regulate such selection. In the Constitutional Convention of 1787, when replying to the suggestion that state legislatures should have uncontrolled power over elections of members of Congress, Mr. Madison said: 'It seems as improper in principle, though it might be less inconvenient in practice, to give to the state legislatures this great authority over the election of the representatives of the people in the general legislature, as it would be to give to the latter a like power over the election of their representatives in the state legislatures.' Supplement to Elliott's Debates, vol. 5, p. 402.

"We cannot conclude that authority to control party primaries or conventions for designating candidates was bestowed on Congress by the grant of power to regulate the manner of holding elections. The fair intendment of the words does not extend so far; the framers of the Constitution did not ascribe to them any such meaning. Nor is this control necessary in order to effectuate the power expressly granted. On the other hand, its exercise would interfere with purely domestic affairs of the state, and infringe upon liberties reserved to the people.

"It should not be forgotten that, exercising inherent police power, the state may suppress whatever evils may be incident to primary or convention. As 'each House shall be the judge of the elections, qualifications and returns of its own members,' and as Congress may by law regulate the times, places, and manner of holding elections, the national government is not without power to protect itself against corruption, fraud, or other malign influences."

EMINENT DOMAIN

1918 Supp., p. 166. [Lands for military purposes, etc.]

Construction.—"The provision of the act that the proceedings provided for are 'to be prosecuted in accordance with the laws relating to suits for the condemnation of property of the states wherein the proceedings may be instituted' is not to be so construed as to defeat the purpose of the act to vest in the Districts Court of the United States jurisdiction of the condemnation proceedings provided for, and is not to be given the effect of requiring a compliance with a state practice which is inapplicable to such a proceeding authorized to be brought, and brought, in one of those courts." Forbes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 273.

EVIDENCE

Vol. III, p. 160, sec. 724. [First ed., vol. III, p. 2.]

Application.—This section relates to actions at law only. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Jurisdiction to grant bill of discovery.—A federal court has no jurisdiction in equity to grant a bill for discovery where it appears that the discovery is desired for no other purpose than the liquidation of damages caused by the nonpayment of royalties on the assignment of a patent. Loose v. Bellows Falls Pulp Plaster Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 81.

Vol. III, p. 171, sec. 862. [First ed., vol. III, p. 8.]

Power of admiralty courts as to procedure.—“While ample powers are given to courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction as to forms and modes of procedure, it is a power ‘held in trust for the benefit of litigants,’ and to be applied to the practical needs of justice. The Alert, 40 Fed. 838; The Hudson, (D. C.) 15 Fed. 175; Dealions v. La Compagnie, etc., 210 U. S. 95, 28 Sup. Ct. 664, 52 L. ed. 973. This power, however, must not be arbitrarily applied, but must have relation to rules of evidence, or promulgated rules of court, or statutes duly enacted.” The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Scope and effect of rules.—The rules promulgated under the act of 1842, comprehend a complete procedure in admiralty and are independent of any other rules promulgated by the Supreme Court relating to equity procedure, and provide a procedure for discovery of facts as appears in rules 27 and 32. While admiralty courts proceed upon equitable principles, and the provisions of the equity rules should obtain, since admiralty courts are not restricted by the technical rules of the common law, the admiralty court has laid down its rules of procedure and, as is stated in The Fred E. Richards, (D. C.) 248 Fed. 956, it would result in confusion to borrow equity rules in an admiralty procedure. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Exhibition of documents—In general.—While in admiralty proceedings the distinctions of form are disregarded, exhibitions of documents should have regard to the substantial rights, and as the basis for right to the discovery special right must appear upon the face of the pleadings. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Specification of particular documents required.—Where a shipowner brings a petition in admiralty to limit liability of claim for damages and the claimant seeks by motion to require the petitioner to produce certain documents the motion will be denied where the claimant does not specify the particular documents required. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Where communications are privileged a production for inspection may not be required in admiralty under any law or rule. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651.

Interrogatories serve to amplify the pleadings of the party interrogated and to procure evidence in support of the libel or defense of the party interrogated but they should not be used merely to fish into the evidence which the party interrogated may produce in support of his own allegations. The Princess Sophia, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 269 Fed. 651, wherein it was held that since under rule 32 claimants have a right to interrogate petitioner upon any matter charged in the libel, all documents forming the subject-matter of the litigation may be the subject of interrogatories.

Vol. III, p. 189, sec. 866. [First ed., vol. III, p. 20.]

A commission on interrogatories “is in accordance with ‘common usage’ under section 866 of the Revised Statutes, as established by rules 31 to 40 of the Admiralty Rules of this court, adopted April 1, 1901, and is in accordance with rule 46 of the new Admiralty Rules promulgated by the Supreme Court, to take effect March 7, 1921, which provide for the taking of testimony orally in open court, except as otherwise provided by statute or agreement of parties.” The Sun, (E. Regulations by Secretary of Treasury relating to importations.—The Secretary of the Treasury has authority under this section to adopt regulations as to the detention and inspection of baggage and conveyances passing over bridges, crossing the Niagara river between the United States and Canada and maintained by the complainant, and to provide that unless the complainant pays two days' pay for each Sunday or holiday for each customs officer performing service in connection with the said company, importation of all merchandise on Sundays and holidays will be stopped. International R. Co. v. Davidson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 153; Niagara Falls International Bridge Co. v. Davidson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 156.

III. JURISDICTION OF COURTS (p. 286)

State and federal courts.—Where habeas corpus proceedings have been instituted in the state court and the question whether the petitioner's rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States have been disregarded can be raised in that court the petitioner should prosecute a writ of error to the highest court of that state before instituting proceedings in the federal court. Ex p. Graves, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 461.

VI. FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE (p. 288)

Who is "fugitive from justice."—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Hogan v. O'Neill, (1921) 255 U. S. 62, 41 S. Ct. 222, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein it was also held that whether in fact a person whose interstate extradition is demanded is a fugitive from justice is for the governor of the surrendering state to determine, and his conclusion that he is such a fugitive must stand on habeas corpus unless clearly overthrown.

VII. INDICTMENT, INFORMATION OR AFFIDAVIT

1. Indictment (p. 290)

Technical sufficiency.—An objection to the formal sufficiency of an indictment that it does not inform the defendant whether he is indicted under a statute, and, if so, what statute, or under the common law, cannot be raised on habeas corpus proceedings. And where the indictment sufficiently charges that the petitioner and others entered into a criminal conspiracy to destroy buildings by the felonious and unlawful use of explosives and in extradition proceedings in another state there is evidence that the accused was present at the scene of the crime when the explosion took place, the petitioner is not entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus unless he shows that he was not in the demanding state at any time when it was possible for him to have committed the crime charged in the indictment. He must establish an alibi to possibility, as well as to actual presence. Ex p. Graves, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 461.

The sufficiency of the indictment as a pleading is not open to inquiry on habeas corpus to review the issuance of a warrant of arrest in interstate extradition proceedings. Hogan v. O'Neill, (1921) 255 U. S. 52, 41 S. Ct. 222, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

3. Affidavit (p. 291)

Necessity.—Under the act of Congress (1 Stat. 302) on the subject of extradition, it is absolutely necessary and is an essential prerequisite that the requisition paper be accompanied by a certified copy of the affidavit or indictment. Ex p. Gradington, (Tex. 1921) 231 S. W. 781.

Presumption from recital of warrant.—Where the extradition warrant issued by the governor recites that the demand is accompanied by a certified copy of the affidavit on which the charge is based, the recital will on habeas corpus be presumed to be true though no affidavit appears in the record and the burden is on the relator to show that no affidavit was in fact produced. Ex p. Gradington, (Tex. 1921) 231 S. W. 781.

XI. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE GOVERNOR (p. 298)

Notice of foreign law.—The governor of the surrendering state in interstate extradition proceedings may take notice of the laws of the demanding state. Hogan v. O'Neill, (1921) 255 U. S. 52, 41 S. Ct. 222, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Sufficiency of application.—When an application for extradition stated the name of the person as that of a woman the subsequent use of the word "he" instead of "she" was held to be an inadvertence which was immaterial. John v. Splain, (App. Cas. 1921) 269 Fed. 717.

Fugitive under conviction in asylum state.—"Where a demand is properly made by the governor of one state upon the governor of another, for the surrender of a fugitive, the duty so to do is not absolute and unqualified, but depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. If the law of the state in which asylum has been sought has been violated by the fugitive, and he has been convicted there, and is undergoing sentence, the demands of the law thus violated may be first satisfied before obedience to the constitutional provision to surrender him arises." State v. Saunders, (Mo. 1921) 232 S. W. 973, holding, however, that the asylum state may waive its prior right and surrender the fugitive. See this case for a discussion as to the effect of the waiver as a pardon of the offense in the asylum state.

Sufficiency of evidence.—There is adequate ground for the return as a fugitive from justice under this section, of a person charged by authentic indictment with the commission of a criminal conspiracy in the demanding state on or about a specified date, who, by his own admission, had been personally present there and in communication with the alleged co-conspirator at or about that time, and was afterwards found in the surrendering state. Hogan v. O'Neill, (1921) 255 U. S. 52, 41 S. Ct. 222, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

XII. WARRANT OF ARREST (p. 301)

Provision in warrant as to expenses.—The objection that the warrant for extradition explicitly provides that the demanding state shall not be responsible for the expenses of extradition has been held to be a matter for the consideration of the governor of the asylum state when he received the official demand for the arrest and delivery of the appellant as a fugitive from justice, and not to be a matter that could legally affect the inquiry before the federal court on habeas corpus, whether the requisition of the demanding state and the action thereon by the governor of the asylum state were in substantial conformity with the Constitution and the laws of the United States. Ex p. Graves, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 461; Ex p. Layne, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 463.

XIV. REVIEW

1. By Federal Court (p. 304)

Right to review.—Where all questions of law involved have been settled by decisions of the United States Supreme Court and of the highest court in the state, and there is no doubtful question of fact, the execution of the extradition warrant ought not to be further interfered with or delayed by judicial proceedings, and the court will refuse to allow an appeal which, it is said, would be frivolous. Ex p. Graves, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 461; Ex p. Layne, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 269 Fed. 463.

Judicial notice.—Federal courts on habeas corpus to review interstate extradition proceedings will take notice of the laws of the demanding state. Hogan v. O'Neill, (1921) 255 U. S. 52, 41 S. Ct. 222, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

2. By State Courts (p. 305)

Warrant prima facie only.—In extradition proceedings under the Constitution and laws above set forth, if the governor of the state upon whom the demand is made issues a warrant for the apprehension and delivery of such a person, the warrant is but prima facie sufficient to hold the accused, and it is open to him, on habeas corpus proceedings, to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed; the presumption being that the governor has complied with the law. Where a person for whose delivery a demand was made by the executive authority of the state of Virginia upon the executive authority of the state of Georgia, under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States and the act of Congress passed in pursuance thereof, was charged in an indictment found in February, 1919, in the state of Virginia, with the commission of a crime in that state, and alleged to have been committed "within the last 12 months, and on or about the 1st day of June in the year 1918," and the uncontradicted evidence upon the trial of a habeas corpus proceeding sued out by him showed affirmatively that, if any crime was committed, it was on or about June 1, 1918, and that he was not in Virginia between March 3, 1918, and December, 1918, on which latter date he was only temporarily in that state, his residence being in Georgia, it was error for the judge to remand the prisoner to the custody of the officer. Dawson v. Smith, (1920) 150 Ga. 350, 103 S. E. 846.

3. Scope of Review (p. 305)

Prospect of lynching or unfair trial.—The court will not on habeas corpus review the issuance of a warrant for the rendition of a fugitive on the contention that by reason of local or race prejudice he may be lynched in the demanding state or may not receive a fair trial therein. Ex p. Ray, (Mich. 1921) 183 N. W. 774.

"The petitioners say they have incurred the enmity of a large percentage of the people of Madison county, Ill., by their participation in the industrial controversies of that county, and will be in danger of death or bodily injury if taken there, and to surrender them to the authority of Illinois will be in violation of the federal Constitution, by depriving them of the equal protection of the law. Evidence was not adduced to prove the existence of the danger alleged, and if it were proved it would not justify this court in ordering the outright release of these prisoners, charged, as they are, with the crime of murder. The duty to protect them from violence and secure to them a fair trial rests upon the officials of the state of Illinois, and we presume it will be performed." Ople v. Weinbrenner, (Mo. 1920) 226 S. W. 256.

Questions of fact.—The extent to which a court on habeas corpus may review the question of fact whether the accused actually was a fugitive, was stated in Ople v. Weinbrenner, (Mo. 1920) 226 S. W. 256, as follows: "The point of difficulty is not regarding the right of the accused to a hearing in a habeas corpus proceeding on the issue of whether he has fled from the justice of the requisitioning state. The doubt is regarding what degree of proof that the accused is not a fugitive as alleged suffices to overcome the prima facie case made by regular extradition documents and to require the court to order him to be discharged from custody, thereby defeating the demand for the extradition. In the present case it is contended for the petitioners that we should weigh the evidence, and if, in our opinion, it preponderates in any degree in favor of the finding that the petitioners were in Missouri and not in Illinois at the time Turner was killed, they should be discharged—a proposition said to be supported by the case of People ex rel. v. McLaughlin 145 App. Div. 513, 130 N. Y. Supp. 458. The question has been before the Supreme Court of the United States several times, and so presented that a rule of general application could have been prescribed had the court thought proper to do so, but none has been prescribed in a precise form. In interpreting the section of the Revised Statutes of the United States (1014) which provides for the removal of an alleged offender who has been committed for trial in a federal district other than where the charge against him is to be tried to the latter venue, the said Supreme Court has adopted the criterion of 'probable cause' as the one by which to determine in a habeas corpus proceeding whether the prisoner shall be released or removed. Tinsley v. Treat, 205 U. S. 20, 27 Sup. Ct. 430, 51 L. Ed. 689. But the same measure of proof has not been adopted, at least not explicitly, in cases of interstate extradition. In all the opinions on the subject rendered by that court which we have read, except one, the prisoners were remanded into custody, and in the one where the prisoner was discharged he was admitted to have been out of the state of the crime when it was perpetrated. Hyatt v. Corkran, 188 U. S. 691, 23 Sup. Ct. 456, 47 L. Ed. 657. . . . We have before us the testimony of two or more witnesses that the plaintiffs were present at the scene of the crime and participated in the shooting. This is substantial evidence, and though we might consider the testimony preponderated which tended to show they were in St. Louis, Mo., at the time, we cannot affirm that the evidence meets the standard of the Supreme Court of the United States in being clear and satisfactory or so convincing as to admit of no question. We think said court did not mean to decide that a tribunal must be governed in proceedings like these by what it may deem the weight of the evidence, when the testimony is so conflicting that fair and honest men may differ as to where the preponderance falls. The opposite doctrine would diminish the efficacy of the extradition clause of the Constitution and of the statutes enacted to enforce it—a result to be avoided."

XV. SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS IN DEMANDING STATE (p. 307)

Questions raised on habeas corpus—Scope of inquiry.—On habeas corpus proceedings instituted by one arrested on requisition, where there is no claim of irregularity on the face of the extradition papers, there is but one question open for investigation, namely, whether the accused was present in the demanding state at the time of the crime. The extradition papers prove prima facie that he was, and the burden is on him to establish the contrary. Levy v. Splain, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 332.

FINES, PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES

Vol. III, p. 324, sec. 923. [First ed., vol. III, p. 96.]

This section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act in so far as it relates to the intoxicating liquor imported into the United States for beverage purposes. U. S. v. One Hudson Touring Car, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 473.

Vol. III, p. 327, sec. 1041. [First ed., vol. III, p. 98.]

Mode of recovery—In general.—All judgments for penalties, whether recovered by civil or criminal proceedings, are within the provision of this section, that judgments for penalties may be enforced by execution against the property of the defendant in like manner as judgments in civil cases are enforced. Pierce v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 398, 41 S. Ct. 365, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—, modifying and affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 514, 171 C. C. A. 1.

Creditors' bill.—A judgment imposing a fine upon a corporation for accepting rebates, contrary to the Elkins Act of February 19, 1903, § 2, (see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 564), is a debt which will support a creditors' bill by the United States to obtain satisfaction of the judgment out of the assets in the hands of the stockholders, among whom all the corporate property has been distributed, this section having provided that judgments for penalties may be enforced by execution against the property of the defendant in like manner as judgments in civil cases are enforced. Pierce v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 398, 41 S. Ct. 365, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—, modifying and affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 514, 171 C. C. A. 1, wherein the court said: "A judgment creditors' bill is in essence an equitable execution comparable to proceedings supplementary to execution. See Ex parte Boyd, 105 U. S. 647, 26 L. ed. 1200. The law which sends a corporation into the world with the capacity to act imposes upon its assets liability for its acts. The corporation cannot disable itself from responding by distributing its property among its stockholders, and leaving remediless those having valid claims. In such a case the claims, after being reduced to judgments, may be satisfied out of the assets in the hands of the stockholders. There is no good reason why the rule should be limited to judgments arising out of civil proceedings. To the contention that the statute has not made this process available for the government in enforcing a penalty, it may be answered, as was done by the King's Bench a hundred years ago, in King v. Woolf, 2 Barn. & Ald. 609, 611, 106 Eng. Reprint, 488, when it was insisted that a fine due to the Crown was not a judgment debt for which execution could be levied:

"... Mischievous consequences would ensue to the Crown and the regular administration of justice, from a delinquent withdrawing all his property from the effect of a judgment; and that the preventing that will not be a mischievous consequence to anyone but himself. Here there is a judgment that the defendant do pay to the King a fine of a certain sum. By that judgment the debt becomes a debt to the King, of record; and it is payable to the King instant. . . . If we were to say that the Crown shall not be at liberty to issue an immediate execution for its own debt, we should place the Crown in a worse situation than any subject."

Vol. III, p. 332, sec. 5292. [First ed., vol. III, p. 101.]

As to remission of fine under Lever Act, see U. S. v. Mossew, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 383.

FISH AND FISHERIES

1918 Supp., p. 179. [Columbia River, etc.]

Effect of agreement on subsequent legislation.—Under the agreement entered into between the states of Oregon and Washington and ratified by this act it has been held that either state may pass a law which prescribes the right of a licensee to take fish from the Columbia river. Olin v. Kutzmiller, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 348. The facts and conclusions of the court are made clear by the following extract from the opinion: "At the time when the compact was entered into, the laws of both states authorized the issuance of licenses to take salmon in the Columbia river to resident aliens who had declared their intention to become citizens of the United States. In the year 1919 the Legislature of Oregon amended its law, and provided that no license for taking or catching salmon or other food or shell fish, required by the laws of the state 'shall be issued to any person who is not a citizen of the United States.' The Legislature of the state of Washington has enacted no similar provision. The appellant, who is an alien, but who in 1892 declared his intention to become a citizen, contends that the Oregon law of 1919 is void, in that it violates the provisions of the compact between the two states.

"We pass by the question whether by entering into the compact either state has divested itself of power to withdraw therefrom or to enact laws in derogation thereof without the assent of the other—a question which is not reached by the authorities cited by the appellant—and confine our inquiry to the question whether the amendment of 1919 is prohibited by the terms of the compact. From the language used it is clear that the contracting parties did not intend to divest either state of all power to enact without the other's consent legislation over the subject which was embraced therein. They left the Legislature of each state free to enact any law on the subject of the regulation and protection of fishing which would not affect the jurisdiction of the other state in the waters over which their jurisdiction was concurrent. A law which prescribes the qualification of a licensee by either state is clearly not a law which affects the concurrent jurisdiction. A law of Oregon which declares that such a license shall issue in that state only to residents and citizens thereof cannot come in conflict with a law or regulation of Washington, under which a license may there be issued to a resident alien who has declared his intention to become a citizen, nor can it, in any conceivable way, affect the rights of citizens or residents of the latter state. Each state has the power to deal with the question of the right of its own subjects to take fish in the waters which are subject to the concurrent jurisdiction. It is only as to its common right with the adjoining state to take fish from those waters that its right is limited by the compact. Many conceivable regulations would be within the prohibition of the compact. Thus one state, without the consent of the other, may not change the open and closed seasons, may not prescribe the manner of taking fish, the number permitted to be taken, or the permissible fishing gear and appliances. All such matters affect the concurrent jurisdiction. It is not so with the designation of the qualifications of the licensees of either state to fish in the waters to which the concurrent jurisdiction extends."

FOOD AND DRUGS

Vol. III, p. 358, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 137.]

State statutes.—"Where the state law is not in conflict with the national act, a broad latitude is allowed states in protecting their citizens from adulterated or misbranded articles." Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Emerson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 429.

This Act does not prohibit the passage of a similar act by a state in respect to intrastate transactions. Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Donohue, (D. C. Mont. 1920) 265 Fed. 406.

Article need not be dangerous to health.—It is not necessary under this Act that an article in order to be unlawfully adulterated or misbranded must be dangerous to the health of the people. U. S. v. Krumm, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 269 Fed. 848.

Vol. III, p. 360, sec. 2. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 137.]

Shipment induced by government agent.—Where a government agent writes a letter to a shipper requesting the shipment to him of misbranded articles, not for the purpose of discovering violations of the law, but with the intention and purpose of inducing the shipper to violate the statute, it is contrary to public policy to hold him guilty. U. S. v. Eman Mfg. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1920) 271 Fed. 353. In this case it was held that the facts that there was no evidence of any shipments, other than the one in question, ever having been made, or of evidence from which the agent could reasonably believe or suspect that the defendant had on other occasions violated the statute, were persuasive of the agent's intention to induce the shipper to violate the law.

Indictment—Averment as to packages.—An indictment need not allege that the packages were original unbroken packages. "While the Food and Drugs Act prohibits shipping or delivering for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any article of food which is adulterated or misbranded, it does not restrict the offense of shipping or delivering for shipment to articles in original unbroken packages; the restriction to original unbroken packages applying only to those who receive in interstate commerce and, having received, deliver in original unbroken packages any adulterated or misbranded articles." U. S. v. Krumm, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 269 Fed. 848.

Substance contained in packages.—In U. S. v. Krumm, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 269 Fed. 848, an indictment charged that the article of food was adulterated, "in that a substance, to wit, a product prepared from flour, had been substituted in whole or in part for macaroni, to wit, a product prepared from semolina, which the article purported to be." The second count charged that the article of food was misbranded, in that the word "macaroni" "was false and misleading, in this: That it represented that said article was macaroni, to wit, a product made from semolina, whereas, in truth and in fact, said article was not macaroni, to wit, a product made from semolina, but was a product made from flour." The court said: "As to the averments in relation to the substance contained in the packages, I think they are lacking in that particularity in both counts which should be observed to inform the defendant with certainty of the charge he is to meet at the trial. The offense under the first count, adulteration, arises, in the case of food, 'if any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article,' and the offense of misbranding arises, 'if the packages containing it or its label shall bear any statement, design, or device, regarding the ingredients or substances contained therein, which statement, design, or device shall be false or misleading in any particular.' According to the Century Dictionary, macaroni is a paste or dough prepared originally and chiefly in Italy from the glutinous granular flour of a hard variety of wheat. According to the Standard Dictionary, it is an Italian paste made into slender tubes from the flour of hard glutinous wheat mixed with water. Semolina is defined to be the hard grains retained in the bolting machine after the fine flour has passed through.

"If the article in question, as averred in the first count, was prepared from flour, or, as averred in the second count, was made from flour, it was apparently macaroni. But if it is intended to charge that macaroni is not made from the whole of the flour which comes from the mill, but in order to be macaroni must be made from the large, hard grains retained in the bolting machine after the fine flour had passed through, the counts are lacking in averments that semolina is not a part of the substance known as flour. Flour may be fine or coarse, it may be made from the whole grains of the wheat, as 'whole wheat flour,' or it may be the fine bolted flour. If it is meant by the indictment to charge that, in order for a substance to be macaroni, it must be made wholly from semolina, and not contain any of the fine flour which, upon passing through the bolting machine, leaves a residuum of semolina, the information should plainly so state."

Vol. III, p. 371, sec. 7. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 138.]

Application.—A sale of food to be delivered within the state is not brought under the Federal Food Act by the fact that the purchaser may intend to deal with the food in interstate commerce. Lewiston Milling Co. v. Cardiff, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 753.

Vol. III, p. 379, sec. 8. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 139.]

Words given ordinary meaning.—The language used in a label is to be given the meaning ordinarily conveyed by it to those to whom it is addressed. Hall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 705.

Misleading statements as to curative properties of drugs — Evidence.—On a prosecution for thus misbranding drugs it has been held proper to permit a doctor to testify that the preparations which have been analyzed by a chemist and shown to the witness are absolutely worthless and have no food, curative or medical value. Kar-Ru Chemical Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 921.

Questions for jury.—In Kar-Ru Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 921, it was held that under the evidence it was a question of fact for the jury whether the preparations offered to the public by the defendant were in fact misbranded in the statements regarding their therapeutic or curative effect and whether such statements were false and fraudulent.

Water as drug.—Water which is recommended by the labels used as possessing alleviative or curative properties for certain ailments is regarded as a drug within the meaning of this act. Bradley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 79.

Illustrations of misbranding — Medicine.—Where language used on a label amounted to an assertion that the article referred to might be expected to have a curative or alleviating effect on the classes of ailments mentioned there was held to be a misbranding where the evidence showed what the ingredients were and that such ingredients could not, singly or in combination, have any remedial or beneficial effect on any ailment of the kinds mentioned in the label, of which fact the manufacturer and distributor of the article was aware. Hall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 795.

Vol. III, p. 392, sec. 10. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 141.]

Delivery to owner.—The release of articles seized under this section is discretionary with the court, the provision therefor being permissive and not mandatory. Thus, where the misbranding is fraudulent and injurious to competitors in the trade and the claimant has been previously convicted and had numerous other proceedings pending against him the court may refuse to exercise its discretion in favor of the claimant. U. S. v. Two Cans of Oil of Sweet Birch, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 866.

FOOD AND FUEL

1918 Supp., p. 181, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—The war powers of Congress must be held to be equal to whatever is necessary to successfully prosecute a war and maintain the public safety. In modern wars, not only armies and peoples, but industries, must be mobilized. Every citizen and every dollar must fight. Economic control is as important as military. Disaster and discontent at home are as fundamental and vital as in the field. The powers of Congress, in time of war, are comparable to the police powers of the states in time of peace, and equally incapable of fixed limits. No doubt is entertained of the original power to make this legislation. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 691. To same effect, see Weed & Co. v. Lockwood, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 785; U. S. v. Suedlow, (D. C. Colo. 1920) 264 Fed. 1016.

Duration of war power.—The war power of Congress did not expire with the cessation of the war and the signing of the armistice, there having been no proclamation of the President to that effect. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 691.

Act as authorizing President to fix prices for all necessities.—See Standard Chemicals, etc., Corp. v. Waugh Chemical Corp., (1921) 231 N. Y. 51, 131 N. E. 566.

Act as affecting right of state to tax coal.—See Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Saddle River Tp., (N. J. 1921) 114 Atl. 157.

Effect on State Anti-Trust Act.—This act does not supersede or annul a state anti-trust act, at least with respect to insurance companies which are not within the purview of the federal act. Nugent v. Robertson, (Miss. 1921) 88 So. 895.

Judicial notice is taken of administrative rules and regulations adopted under this act. Lawrenceburg Roller Mills Co. v. Jones, (1920) 204 Ala. 59, 85 So. 719.

1918 Supp., p. 182, sec. 2.

Corporation organized as government agency—liability to suit.—In Federal Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. Sugar Equalization Board, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 575, it was held that a corporation organized under state laws to be used as an agency of the government could be sued.

1918 Supp., p. 183, sec. 4.

For decisions under this section as re-enacted, see annotations to 1919 Supp. p. 60, sec. 2, infra, this volume, p. 418.

Constitutionality.—See Detroit Creamery Co. v. Kinnane, (E. D. Mich. 1920) 264 Fed. 845.

Sufficiency as a criminal statute.—This section "is insufficient to found a criminal charge upon, because there is no penalty provided for the violation of it. It does not of itself create an offense, as that word is used in the criminal law, and there is no general penalty clause in the statute to cover it." U. S. v. Armstrong, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 265 Fed. 683. To same effect, see Mossew v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 18, 11 A. L. R. 1261; U. S. v. People's Fuel, etc., Co., (D. C. Ariz. 1920) 271 Fed. 790.

But the provisions of this section were held not to be too indefinite for enforcement in U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., (N. D. Ga. 1920) 264 Fed. 691.

The term "any necessities" as used in this section does not include all necessities but only such articles as are stated in section 1 to be called "necessaries" in the later sections. In such case the rule of ejusdem generis may not be applied to broaden the scope of the term, in the absence of any more general phrase, such as "other supplies" or "other articles," in section 1. U. S. v. American Woolen Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 404.

1918 Supp., p. 183, sec. 5.

Power to revoke license implied.—Kuenter v. Meredith, (N. D. Ill. 1920) 264 Fed. 243.

1918 Supp., p. 184, sec. 6.

Section as indefinite.—The language of this section as to when necessities should be deemed to be hoarded was held not to be factually indefinite and uncertain in Merritt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 870.

Sugar was held to be a necessary under the provisions of this act in Merritt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 870.

Contract violative of act.—If a contract for the purchase of flour calls for the delivery of a quantity which with that on hand is greater than the reasonable business requirements of the buyer, the seller is discharged from performance, and it is immaterial that the contract was made before the passage of the act, since its performance would constitute a violation thereof. Lawrenceburg Roller Mills Co. v. Jones, (1920) 204 Ala. 59, 85 So. 719.

Judicial notice was taken of a proclamation made by the President under this act in Merritt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 870.

The burden of proof is on defendant to show facts bringing him within the exceptions of the provisions of the statute. Merritt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 870.

Evidence.—In Merritt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 870, the evidence was held to sufficiently show the reasonable requirements of the defendant for the consumption and use of sugar by himself and his dependents.

1918 Supp., p. 185, sec. 9.

Section held constitutional, see Hillsboro Coal Co. v. Knotts, (S. D. Ill. 1920) 273 Fed. 221; U. S. v. Armstrong, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 265 Fed. 683.

1918 Supp., p. 185, sec. 10.

Section not repealed.—This section was not repealed by the Act of March 2, 1919. U. S. v. McGrane, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 761; Benedict v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 714.

Right to jury trial.—In U. S. v. Pfitsch, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 569, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, it was held that the exclusive jurisdiction granted to the federal district courts by this section was to be exercised in accordance with the law governing the usual procedure of the district court in actions at law for money compensation in which the right to a jury trial was an incident, and not in accordance with the provisions of the law governing the exceptional jurisdiction concurrent with the court of claims where it sat without a jury.

As to the right to a jury trial in an action under this section it is said: "In such a suit, how was the court to hear and determine the controversy? Issues in the District Court are determined in certain causes, equity, admiralty, and bankruptcy, by a judge, and in others by the combined work of judge and jury. Which method did Congress have in view when it enacted 'jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the United States District Courts to hear and determine all such controversies'? Certain it is the jurisdiction was not committed to a judge, or to the court sitting as a judge. It was committed to the District Courts without limitation, and common practice and common sense alike suggest that Congress had nothing else in view than a jury trial." U. S. v. McGrane, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 761.

The owner of property requisitioned by the President under this section, is entitled to have the question as to what amount will constitute a just compensation determined by a jury. Filbin Corp. v. U. S., (E. D. S. C. 1920) 265 Fed. 354.

Amount involved.—Jurisdiction was conferred on the District Court in cases arising under this section regardless of the amount involved, and in no way affected or restricted by the $10,000 limitation contained in section 24, paragraph 20 of the Judicial Code. U. S. v. McGrane, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 761.

A direct writ of error from the Supreme Court to a district court does not lie in a writ brought conformably to this section by a person dissatisfied with the President's award of compensation for war supplies requisitioned by him. U. S. v. Pfitsch, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 569, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 186, sec. 12.

Effect on prior contracts.—This act did not invalidate prior contracts, and accordingly nonperformance of a contract for the sale of flour made before its enactment, was not excused by the act and the regulations made thereunder whereby a price in excess of that stipulated in the contract was fixed. Rock v. Deason, (1920) 146 Ark. 124, 225 S. W. 317.

State control of commission merchants excluded.—By the Food Control Act, Congress acting under the war power of the Constitution, authorized the taking control and regulation of the business of public stockyards, including the business of commission men buying and selling live stock there. Under such authority the government assumed control of the public stockyards at South St. Paul and of the business of commission men doing business there; and during such control the state could not interfere by fixing and enforcing commission charges through the delegated authority of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission pursuant to Laws Ex. Sess. 1919, c. 39. State v. Rogers, (Minn. 1921) 182 N. W. 1006.

1918 Supp., p. 188, sec. 15.

Effect to render performance of contract impossible.—The act did not terminate a contract whereby a distillery agreed to pay for the removal of offal. Eminence Distillery Co. v. Fremd, (1921) 191 Ky. 191, 229 S. W. 369.

1918 Supp., p. 191, sec. 24.

Duration of Act.—In U. S. v. Armstrong, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 265 Fed. 683, the defendants in a prosecution under this act, while conceding that Congress, under the war power, could validly enact it at the time of its passage, contended that it did not follow that the act continued in force, regardless of an actual condition of peace, until Congress saw fit to terminate its operation. This contention was overruled.

1918 Supp., p. 191, sec. 25.

Price fixing under war legislation.—See annotation under Vol. XI, p. 447, amend. 5, infra, this volume.

Constitutionality.—This section is constitutional as a war measure. U. S. v. Ford, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 265 Fed. 424.

1918 Supp., p. 194, sec. 26.

Constitutionality.—This section is unconstitutional and void as making an arbitrary and unreasonable classification in violation of the "due process clause" of the Fifth Amendment. U. S. v. Armstrong, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 265 Fed. 683.

1919 Supp., p. 60, sec. 1.

Power of Congress to enact amendments.—Congress had power to enact these amendments, since at the date of their passage a state of war still technically existed. U. S. v. Russel, (E. D. La. 1920) 265 Fed. 414; U. S. v. Bernstein, (D. C. Neb. 1920) 267 Fed. 295, the latter case holding, however, that such a war measure must be constitutional.

"Wearing apparel."—Bolts of cloth are not included in the term "wearing apparel," as used in this section. U. S. v. American Woolen Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 265 Fed. 404. Regarding the scope of the term "wearing apparel" as used in this section, the court said: "We come then to the meaning of the term 'wearing apparel.' Concededly bolts of cloth are not, in and of themselves, wearing apparel. It is contended, however, that, interpreted in the light of reason, 'wearing apparel' must be held to include the material used to make up a garment; in other words, that the legislative intent to secure reasonable prices in the distribution of wearing apparel cannot possibly, or perhaps reasonably, be carried out, unless the limitations imposed upon the distribution of the made-up garments are extended to the materials out of which they are made.

"While Congress had as much power to regulate the distribution by the producer or manufacturer of the wool, cotton, or silk, the dyestuffs, the cloth, the buttons, the thread, or any other ingredients, as of the finished or partly finished garment, properly designated as 'wearing apparel,' and while such regulation would doubtless secure a more effectual control of the distribution by the garment manufacturer or the retailer of the finished product, I can find in the act no intent thus to control the distribution of all, or indeed any, of the ingredients that enter into wearing apparel. Apt words to indicate such an intent were readily available. Indeed, in section 1 Congress expressly included 'fertilizer ingredients,' and did not limit the control to 'fertilizers.' When, therefore, Congress used an expression having a clear and definite meaning, I am unable to find any ground thus to broaden the ordinary and trade signification of the word, or by implication to bring other articles within the statutory prohibitions."

1919 Supp., p. 60, sec. 2.

Constitutionality.—Congress, in attempting, as it did in the Lever Act of August 10, 1917, § 4, as re-enacted in the Act of October 22, 1919, § 2, to punish criminally any person who wilfully makes "any unjust or unreasonable rate or charge in handling or dealing in or with any necessities," violated U. S. Const., 5th and 6th Amendments, which require an ascertainable standard of guilt, fixed by Congress rather than by courts and juries, and secure to accused persons the right to be informed of the nature and cause of accusations against them. U. S. v. Cohen Grocery Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 81, 41 S. Ct. 298, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, 14 A. L. R. 1045, affirming (E. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 218. See to the same effect Tedrow v. A. T. Lewis, etc., Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 98, 41 S. Ct. 303, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Kinnane v. Detroit Creamery Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 102, 41 S. Ct. 304, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Weed v. Lockwood, (1921) 255 U. S. 104, 41 S. Ct. 305, 66 U. S. (L. ed.) —; G. S. Willard Co. v. Palmer, (1921) 255 U. S. 106, 41 S. Ct. 305, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Oglesby Grocery Co. v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 108, 41 S. Ct. 306, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —. See also Kennington v. Palmer, (1921) 255 U. S. 100, 41 S. Ct. 303, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Weeds v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 109, 41 S. Ct. 306, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; U. S. v. Yount, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 861; U. S. v. Bernstein, (D. C. Neb. 1920) 267 Fed. 295; Lamborn v. McAvoy, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 265 Fed. 944; U. S. v. Armstrong, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 265 Fed. 683; U. S. v. Russel, (E. D. La. 1920) 265 Fed. 414; U. S. v. Rosenblum, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 264 Fed. 578; Weed v. Lockwood, (W. D. N. Y. 1920) 264 Fed. 453; U. S. v. Spokane Dry Goods Co., (E. D. Wash. 1920) 264 Fed. 209.

A conspiracy "to exact excessive prices for any necessities" could not be made punishable criminally, as was attempted by Congress in the Lever Act of August 10, 1917, § 4, as re-enacted in the Act of October 22, 1919, § 2, without violating U. S. Const., 5th and 6th Amendments, since such provision is not sufficiently specific to create a standard of guilt, and to inform the accused of the nature and cause of the accusation against him. Weeds v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 109, 41 S. Ct. 306, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein it was said: "As the only difference between the charges in the L. Cohen Grocery Co. Case, supra, and those in this is the fact that here, in one of the counts, there was a charge of conspiracy to exact excessive prices, it follows that the ruling in the Cohen Case is decisive here unless the provision as to conspiracy to exact excessive prices is sufficiently specific to create a standard, and to inform the accused of the accusation against him, and thus make it not amenable to the ruling in the Cohen Case. But, as we are of the opinion that there is no ground for such distinction, but, on the contrary, that the charge as to conspiracy to exact excessive prices is equally as wanting in standard, and equally as vague as the provision as to unjust and unreasonable rates and charges dealt with in the Cohen Case, it follows, for reasons stated in that case, that the judgment in this must be reversed and the case remanded, with directions to set aside the sentence and quash the indictment."

Statute as embracing individual price fixing.—The price at which a commodity is sold is comprehended by the provision of the Lever Act of August 10, 1917, § 4, as re-enacted by the Act of October 22, 1919, § 2, making it unlawful for any person wilfully to make any unjust or unreasonable rate or charge in handling or dealing in or with any necessities, or to conspire to exact excessive prices for any necessities. U. S. v. Cohen Grocery Co., (1921) 255 U. S. 81, 41 S. Ct. 298, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming) (E. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 218) wherein the court said: "The basis upon which the contention rests is that the words of the section do not embrace the price at which a commodity is sold, and, at any rate, the receipt of such price is not thereby intended to be penalized. We are of opinion, however, that these propositions are without merit, first, because the words of the section, as re-enacted, are broad enough to embrace the price for which a commodity is sold, and second, because, as the amended section plainly imposes a penalty for the acts which it includes when committed after its passage, the fact that the section, before its re-enactment, contained no penalty, is of no moment. This must be the case unless it can be said that the failure at one time to impose a penalty for a forbidden act furnishes an adequate ground for preventing the subsequent enforcement of a penalty which is specifically and unmistakably provided."

Sufficiency of indictment.—See U. S. v. Robinson, (W. D. Okla. 1920) 266 Fed. 240; U. S. v. Myatt, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 264 Fed. 442; U. S. v. L. Cohen Grocer Co., (E. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 218; U. S. v. Spokane Dry Goods Co., (E. D. Wash. 1920) 264 Fed. 209.

1919 Supp., p. 61. [United States Sugar Equalization Board, etc.]

Fixing price of sugar.—In Pharr v. C. D. Kenny Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 37, it was held that the Food Administration could not arbitrarily fix the price at which future sales of sugar should be made.

I. INTRODUCTORY

1. Definition and Nature (p. 428)

Purpose of writ.—The writ of habeas corpus is a legal process, used to obtain summary relief from unlawful restraint of personal liberty. Its purpose is simply to free the person from the unlawful restraint. Bens v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 152.

"A writ of habeas corpus can never be used for the purpose of correcting erroneous conclusions of fact drawn by those charged by the law with the duty of ascertaining the facts." U. S. v. Wong Lai, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 57.

III. SCOPE OF WRIT

1. Generally (p. 430)

Inquiry as confined to jurisdiction.—"If the court which renders a judgment has not jurisdiction to render it, either because the proceedings or the law under which they are taken are unconstitutional, or for any other reason, the judgment is void and may be questioned collaterally. The defendant, who is imprisoned under and by virtue of such a judgment, may be discharged from custody on habeas corpus." Ex p. Craig, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 177.

IV. AS SUBSTITUTE FOR WRIT OF ERROR

1. Rule Stated (p. 431)

Rule against use as substitute.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Bens v. U. S. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 152; Ex p. Shears, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 265 Fed. 959.

"A writ of habeas corpus cannot be made to perform the office of a writ of error. Nor can it be invoked to review an erroneous judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. It challenges the jurisdiction of the court." Ex p. Craig, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 177.

Errors and irregularities.—Questions of mere error and irregularities are generally reviewable only by writ of error or certiorari, for which a writ of habeas corpus is not a substitute. Ormsby v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 977.

10. Sufficiency of Evidence (p. 436)

Review of evidence.—Upon habeas corpus, the court may review the evidence, to ascertain what it really shows, and, if it finds that all of the evidence, taken together, does not support the commissioner's finding of probable cause, his ruling may be disregarded and the defendant discharged. U. S. v. Kallas, (W. D. Wash. 1921) 272 Fed. 742.

Right to discharge.—A prisoner held by the commissioner will not be discharged on habeas corpus for mistakes by the commissioner in the admission of testimony, part of which is irrelevant or immaterial; but the holding of the accused is not authorized if there is no competent evidence against him. U. S. v. Kallas, (W. D. Wash. 1921) 272 Fed. 742.

12. Sentence (p. 436)

Void sentence.—Where a district court has imposed a void sentence and habeas corpus is brought in another district court, the proper practice is to remit the prisoner to the court wherein he was sentenced for further action by that court. Davis v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 767; Price v. Zerst, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 268 Fed. 72; Rogers v. Desportes, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 308.

Review of judgment and sentence of another district court.—In a habeas corpus proceeding in a district court that court cannot exercise appellate power to compel another district court to correct its judgment so as to conform to the views of the judge before whom the habeas corpus is held. Rogers v. Desportes, (D. S. C. 1920) 268 Fed. 86. It was said in this connection: "The District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Georgia is a court of primary jurisdiction, in exactly the same class as the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of South Carolina. It has no greater powers or jurisdiction. Certainly it is entirely devoid of any appellate or supervising power over the latter court. Under the judicial system of the United States, the only courts possessing these powers over the District Court for the Eastern District of South Carolina are the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and the Supreme Court of the United States. The District Court for the Northern District of Georgia is in a different judicial circuit, and possesses no judicial connection with the District Court for the Eastern District of South Carolina. Yet the exercise of the jurisdiction to overrule the judgment and correct the assumed errors of the District Court for the Eastern District of South Carolina is precisely what the judge of the District Court for the Northern District of Georgia has attempted to do by his order in this matter. He has held that the well-considered judgment and sentence of the District Court for the Eastern District of South Carolina is erroneous, and has ordered the prisoners back to that court, that it may correct its judgment, so as to conform the sentence to the views of the judge of the District Court for the Northern District of Georgia.

"Such action is wholly unwarranted by any provision of law and would be destructive of the method of the orderly correction of the errors of courts of primary jurisdiction through the courts of appropriate and authorized appellate jurisdiction. If the District Court for the Northern District of Georgia can arrogate to itself the power to supervise the action of the District Court of the Eastern District of South Carolina, all the other 90 (or more) districts in the United States may do the same." This decision was affirmed by Rogers v. Desportes, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 308, wherein the court further remarked as to this phase of the case: "Judge Sibley, District Judge for the Northern District of Georgia, in which the Atlanta penitentiary is situated, had jurisdiction to entertain the writ of habeas corpus and to order the release of the petitioners if he found the sentence was absolutely void. The correctness of his judgment was reviewable by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and by certiorari by the Supreme Court of the United States. His order remanding the petitioners to the Eastern district of South Carolina for resentencing was not binding on the judge of the Eastern district of South Carolina, for Judge Smith of that district is of equal authority with Judge Sibley. Nevertheless, in the present unsatisfactory state of the law we incline to think that Judge Sibley adopted the most convenient practice. Upon the arrival of the petitioners in the Eastern district of South Carolina, Judge Smith was at perfect liberty to hold that his original sentence was correct, refuse to alter it, and order the petitioners remanded to the Atlanta penitentiary. This order gave them the opportunity to apply for a writ of habeas corpus before him, and, upon his refusal to discharge them, to bring the matter by appeal to this court. The result is that the sentence of Judge Smith, alleged to be erroneous, is reviewed by this court having jurisdiction to correct his errors, rather than by the Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit whose office is to correct errors in that circuit. This is unfortunate circuitry, but it seems to be unavoidable until a more expeditious method is prescribed by statute by which District Courts of this circuit will have jurisdiction in habeas corpus, as to persons confined in the Atlanta penitentiary from the District Courts in this circuit, alleging their confinement to be illegal. It seems hardly necessary to say that Judge Sibley's holding that the sentence was illegal is not binding on this court as res adjudicata. He did not undertake to make it so. The only judgment made by him was that the petitioners should be returned to the Eastern district of South Carolina for resentencing. He expressly refused to make any judgment discharging them."

VI. FEDERAL INTERFERENCE WITH CUSTODY OF STATE COURT (p. 438)

1. Rule Stated (p. 438)

See annotation under Vol. III, p. 449, sec. 753, VI, infra, p. 453.

Where a person is in custody, under process from a state court.—To same effect as original annotation, see Ex p. Shears, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 265 Fed. 959.

Sufficiency of indictment.—In Teregno v. Shattuck, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 797, the petitioner contended that the language of the indictment was not sufficient to support the judgment against him. Answering this contention, the court said:

"It has been repeatedly held that upon such a question the judgment of the state courts having jurisdiction is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus in the federal courts.

"It is within the jurisdiction of the trial judge to pass upon the sufficiency of the verdict and to construe its legal meaning; and if in so doing he erred, and held the verdict to be sufficiently certain to authorize the imposition of punishment for the highest grade of the offense charged, it was an error committed in the exercise of jurisdiction, and one which does not present a jurisdictional defect, remediable by the writ of habeas corpus. The case is analogous in principle to that of a trial and conviction upon an indictment, the facts averred in which are asserted to be insufficient to constitute an offense against the statute claimed to have been violated. In this class of cases it has been held that a trial court, possessing general jurisdiction of the class of offenses within which is embraced the crime sought to be set forth in the indictment, is possessed of authority to determine the sufficiency of an indictment, and that in adjudging it to be valid and sufficient acts within its jurisdiction, and a conviction and judgment thereunder cannot be questioned on habeas corpus, because of a lack of certainty or other defect in the statement in the indictment of the facts averred to constitute a crime." White, J., In re Eckart, 166 U. S. 481, at pages 482, 483, 17 Sup. Ct. 638 (41 L. ed. 1085).

"As to the 'due process of law' that is required by the Fourteenth Amendment, it is perfectly well settled that a criminal prosecution in the courts of a state, based upon a law not in itself repugnant to the federal Constitution, and conducted according to the settled course of judicial proceedings as established by the law of the state, so long as it includes notice, and a hearing, or an opportunity to be heard, before a court of competent jurisdiction, according to established modes of procedure, is 'due process' in the constitutional sense"—citing authorities. Pitney, J., Frank v. Mangum, 237 U. S. 309, 326, 35 Sup. Ct. 582, 586 (59 L. ed. 969).

VIII. REVIEW OF PROCEEDINGS OF SPECIAL TRIBUNALS

2. Courts-martial (p. 443)

Application of rule.—Where a defendant was discharged on writ of habeas corpus from confinement in the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, to which he had been sentenced by general court-martial on conviction of offenses against the 95th and 96th articles of war, it was declared that if there was jurisdiction in that court over the offenses and the person, and it did not exceed its power, the confinement should have been held to be lawful and the prisoner's discharge denied. McRae v. Henkes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 108.

3. Immigration (p. 443)

Rule stated.—To same effect as original annotation, see White v. Fong Gin Gee, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 600.

If the present detention of aliens ordered to be deported is legal, irregularities or even illegalities in their original arrest and commitment can not be redressed in habeas corpus proceedings. In re Kosopud, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 330.

IX. CONTEMPT PROCEEDINGS (p. 444)

Commitment for contempt.—To the same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Ex p. Craig, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 177.

X. EXTRADITION PROCEEDINGS

2. Interstate

Generally.—Where on a habeas corpus proceeding in a federal court it appears that the petitioner is held by color of law by a state court after having been extradited from another state, the manner of any irregularity of the extradition may not be inquired into by the federal court. Ex p. Shears, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 265 Fed. 959.

Presence in demanding state at time of crime.—To same effect as original annotation, see Levy v. Splain, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 267 Fed. 333, wherein it was said:

"The evidence shows without doubt that Levy was not in Massachusetts on the 1st day of January, 1918, and the court below so found. He was there in September, 1917, and again about the middle of January, 1918. On the 8th day of June, 1918, the indictment was returned. The trial court, in disposing of the case, said:

"Under the law here, as in Massachusetts by statute, . . . the fact that this conspiracy was laid on the 1st day of January, 1918, is not binding upon the prosecution there, and it would not be here. You can show that the crime was committed any time within three years from the finding of the indictment. Nothing more is required in extradition than is required on the trial of an indictment.'

"A similar view was urged by counsel for the state in Hyatt v. People ex rel. Corkran, 188 U. S. 691, 711, 23 Sup. Ct. 456, 459 (47 L. ed. 657); but the court refused to adopt it, saying:

"In the case before us it is conceded that the relator was not in the state at the various times when it is alleged in the indictments the crimes were committed, nor until eight days after the time when the last one is alleged to have been committed. That the prosecution on the trial of such an indictment need not prove with exactness the commission of the crime at the very time alleged in the indictment is immaterial. The indictments in this case named certain dates as the times when the crimes were committed, and where in a proceeding like this there is no proof or offer of proof to show that the crimes were in truth committed on some other day than those named in the indictments, and that the dates therein named were erroneously stated, it is sufficient for the party charged to show that he was not in the state at the times named in the indictments, and when those facts are proved, so that there is no dispute in regard to them, and there is no claim of any error in the dates named in the indictments, the facts so proved are sufficient to show that the person was not in the state when the crimes were, if ever, committed.'

"In the case at bar, as in that case, there is no proof or offer of proof that the crime was in truth committed on some other day than that named in the indictment, and that the day therein named was erroneously stated. Consequently, to paraphrase the language of the Supreme Court of the United States, it was sufficient for Levy to show that he was not in the state at the time named in the indictment, and when that fact was proved, so that there was no dispute in regard to it, and there being no claim of any error in the dates named in the indictment, the fact so proved is sufficient to show that Levy was not in the state when the crime was, if ever, committed.

"This court ruled, in Hayes v. Palmer, 21 App. D. C. 450, 461, that if the person sought offered proof showing with precision that he had left the demanding state before the date of the alleged crime, it would then devolve upon the person detaining him 'to show that he was a fugitive from justice by producing evidence that he was in the state at the time charged in the indictment, or to prove that said date had been erroneously charged and could be carried back to the necessary time.' This is in line with the doctrine of the Hyatt case. In view of these holdings, which, so far as we can ascertain, have not been modified in any wise by subsequent decisions, we are constrained to say that Levy cannot be held.

"It is true that in Ex parte Montgomery (D. C.) 244 Fed. 967, 970, an extradition case, the court decided it was not necessary to prove that the person charged with the crime was in the demanding state on the date on which the crime was laid in the indictment. But that was a conspiracy case with a continuando. 'While the indictment here mentions specially but a single day,' said the court, 'it also alleges a conspiracy claimed to have been hatched during two years preceding the indictment. Conspiracy is a continuando crime, and the rule is now well settled that the demanding state is not bound, either upon the trial or in the extradition proceedings, by the specific date laid.' In United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 605, 31 Sup. Ct. 124, 54 L. ed. 1168, it was also said that a conspiracy was a continuing crime. But this language must be read in the light of the facts. In that case the indictment charged the defendants with having committed the crime upon a certain date 'and from that day until the day of presenting the indictment.'

"If the indictment in the case before us had charged Levy with having conspired on the 1st of January, and from that date until the date of presenting the indictment, June 8, 1918, or until the last of January, 1918, the testimony that he was in Massachusetts about the middle of January of that year would have been sufficient to warrant his surrender to Massachusetts; but the indictment does not read that way. There is nothing, therefore, in either of those cases, which authorizes us to disregard the rule announced in unmistakable terms in the Hyatt and Hayes Cases."

Vol. III, p. 449, sec. 753. [First ed., vol. III, p. 167.]

I. Introductory.

VI. Constitution, laws or treaties.

I. INTRODUCTORY (p. 449).

Scope of jurisdiction.—Where a person is held in custody by state officials it has been held that in order to entitle him to relief in the federal court under the writ of habeas corpus, it must appear that he is held in custody in violation of the Constitution of the United States; that he cannot have relief on habeas corpus, if he is held in custody by reason of conviction upon a criminal charge before a court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the offense, the place where it was committed, and the person of the prisoner; that, if the proceedings in the courts of a state are based on a law not repugnant to the federal Constitution, and conducted according to the settled course of procedure under the law of the state, so long as it includes notice and a hearing, or an opportunity to be heard, before a court of competent jurisdiction, according to established modes of procedure, this is "due process of law" in the constitutional sense; and, finally, that habeas corpus will lie only where the judgment under which the party is detained is shown to be absolutely void for want of jurisdiction in the court, either because such jurisdiction was absent in the beginning, or was lost in the course of the proceedings. U. S. v. Briggs, (W. D. Pa. 1920) 266 Fed. 434.

Application to state courts.—"The statute does not purport to apply to the courts of the states and Congress had no authority, had it attempted so to do, to prescribe the powers of the state courts and the practice to be followed in matters within their jurisdictions." State v. Martineau, (Ark. 1921) 232 S. W. 609.

VI. CONSTITUTION, LAWS OR TREATIES (p. 454)

In general.—Where there is a denial or invasion of a constitutional right the prisoner may be discharged on habeas corpus. Ex p. Craig, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 177.

Prisoner held under state process.—A federal court has jurisdiction on habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of detention of a prisoner held under state process. Ex p. Ramsey, (S. D. Fla. 1920) 265 Fed. 950.

Vol. III, p. 462, sec. 754. [First ed., vol. III, p. 172.]

Verification—Next friend.—"The practice of a next friend applying for a writ is ancient and fully accepted. There are many instances and circumstances under which it may not be possible nor feasible that the detained person shall sign and verify the complaint. Inability to understand the English language or the situation, particularly in the case of aliens, impossibility of access to the person, or mental incapacity are all illustrations of a proper use of the 'next friend' application. . . . But the complaint must set forth some reason or explanation satisfactory to the court showing why the detained person does not sign and verify the complaint and who 'the next friend' is. It was not intended that the writ of habeas corpus should be availed of, as matter of course, by intruders or uninvited meddlers, styling themselves next friends." U. S. v. Houston, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 915.

Vol. III, p. 464, sec. 755. [First ed., vol. III, p. 173.]

Power of circuit judge.—"While a circuit judge may not issue a writ of habeas corpus as one of the members constituting the Circuit Court of Appeals, there is still the authority vested in him as a circuit judge to do so, and there is a mandatory provision of the statute requiring him to issue a writ of habeas corpus if the petition be sufficient."

Ex p. Lamar, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 160. To same effect, see Ex p. Craig, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 177. In the former case the court said:

"The right to grant this important writ is given to every judge of the District Court. It has been held that the power vests in a Justice of the Supreme Court. Ex p. Bollman, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 95, 2 L. ed. 554. When the Circuit Courts were abolished, the statute providing for the right of a judge to grant the writ of habeas corpus was not repealed or amended, thus taking away the power from a circuit judge. Circuit judges have become appellate judges, and while they have no original jurisdiction as a court, they have reserved to them the right thus vested by the statute and by the ancient law. I therefore conclude that I have the power to grant the writ of habeas corpus."

When writ need not be awarded.—Even though the real grounds for the release prayed for by the petitioner were his unlawful induction into, and retention in, the military service, in the total absence of any showing, or, in fact, allegation, of an attempt to avail himself of the proper legal remedy for obtaining appropriate relief, he is not entitled to the extraordinary writ of habeas corpus. Ex p. Kerekes, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 870.

Allegations of petition assumed to be true.—In a habeas corpus proceeding the court is bound to assume the truth of the allegations in the petition. Ex p. Kerekes, (E. D. Mich. 1921) 274 Fed. 870.

Vol. III, p. 469, sec. 761. [First ed., vol. III, p. 174.]

Scope of hearing.—"On a writ of habeas corpus the inquiry is addressed, not to errors, but to the question of whether the proceedings and judgment rendered therein are for any reason void, and, unless it is affirmatively shown that the conviction under which the petitioner is found is void, he is not entitled to his discharge." Ex p. Lamar, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 160.

Vol. III, p. 475, sec. 763. [First ed., vol. III, p. 175.]

Review of decision of habeas corpus proceeding.—In the federal courts in cases where there has been no trial by jury, ordinarily the remedy for a review of a decision in a habeas corpus proceeding is by appeal and not by writ of error. U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 646.

Vol. III, p. 481. [Appeals to Supreme Court.] [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 293.]

Effect of provision.—The sole effect of the act of 1908 upon appellate jurisdiction in habeas corpus cases is to further restrict appeals direct to the Supreme Court by requiring a certificate of probable merit by the trial court in cases where custody under state judicial process was challenged. It will not be construed as allowing appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals in habeas corpus cases where the confinement is by virtue of process out of a state court and the trial judge will not certify the existence of probable cause for appeal. Grammer v. Fenton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 943.

HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

Vol. III, p. 518, sec. 81. [First ed., vol. III, p. 205.]

Decision of Supreme Court as binding on federal court.—A decision of the Supreme Court construing prior decisions of the Supreme Court relating to the common law doctrine of the presumption of a grant has been held to be binding on the Circuit Court of Appeals. Hawaii v. Hutchinson Sugar Plantation Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 856.

1918 Supp., p. 202, sec. 1.

Revenue Law and Volstead Act distinguished.—"The theory of the old revenue laws made the manufacture of liquors lawful and recognized it as a lawful way of producing government revenue. The Volstead Act no longer recognizes it as a producer of revenue, but outlaws both the making of and the traffic in liquor, except for stated and limited uses, for which uses, and pursuant only to a permit, it may now only be made at all." U. S. v. Stafoff, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 268 Fed. 417.

IMMIGRATION

Vol. III, p. 630, sec. 22. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 171.]

Rules and regulations.—To same effect as original annotation, see Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17.

Vol. III, p. 633, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. III, p. 298.]

Pleading.—Where an employer when sued by an employee for wages, wishes to avoid liability on the ground that the alleged contract of employment is in violation of the contract labor laws of the United States, he must allege such defense in his answer. Whittingslow v. Thomas, (Mass. 1921) 129 N. E. 386. The court said:

"If the defendant, after availing himself of the plaintiff's services for seventeen months, desired to avoid paying for them on the ground that they were performed under a contract that was illegal by force of the federal Contract Labor Law, it was necessary for him to set up that defense in his answer. R. L. c. 173, § 27; Cassidy v. Farrell, 109 Mass. 397; Suit v. Woodhall, 116 Mass. 547; O'Brien v. Shea, 208 Mass. 528, and cases cited at page 535, 95 N. E. 99, at page 101, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1030. Failing so to plead, he could not as of right offer evidence of such illegality, or avail himself of it when disclosed in the plaintiff's testimony.

See Cardoze v. Smith, 113 Mass. 250, 252. It was said in O'Brien v. Shea, supra:

"The court will recognize no absolute duty to interfere and of its own mere motion to sustain a defense not set up by the party, and generally will not so interfere, unless, first, the plaintiff's declaration shows that he relies upon an illegal agreement or violation of law, or, secondly, unless he has been obliged to show his own guilt in fully proving his case."

"Neither alternative is present here. The plaintiff did not declare on an express contract, much less an illegal one. And as all the evidence is not before us, we cannot say that the work, plainly lawful in itself, was not performed under an implied contract, rather than under an express one, the making of which was denied by the defendant. See Day v. Caton, 119 Mass. 513, 20 Am. Rep. 347; Goddard v. Rawson, 130 Mass. 97; Spencer v. Spencer, 181 Mass. 471, 63 N. E. 947; Dickey v. Trustees of Putnam Free School, 197 Mass. 468, 84 N. E. 140.

"Assuming then that a contract such as the plaintiff testified to would be in violation of said Contract Labor Law of 1885 (see Holy Trinity Church v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 12 Sup. Ct. 511, 36 L. ed. 226; United States v. Laws, 163 U. S. 258, 16 Sup. Ct. 998, 41 L. ed. 151; In re Ellis [D. C.] 124 Fed. 637; Ellis v. Williams, 200 U. S. 623, 26 Sup. Ct. 753, 50 L. ed. 625) under the pleadings it is not now open to the defendant to avail himself thereof."

Vol. III, p. 637, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 161.]

Exclusion pursuant to presidential proclamation.—In view of the proclamations of Presidents Roosevelt and Taft pursuant to the provisions of the section directing the exclusion of Japanese laborers from this country, such a laborer may be excluded even if he arrives at a port of this country with a passport. A fortiori if he surreptitiously enters the United States without a passport, he may be deported. Akira Ono v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 359.

I. Authority of Congress over immigration.

VIII. Persons solicited to migrate.

I. AUTHORITY OF CONGRESS OVER IMMIGRATION (p. 641)

Authority as plenary.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Lauria v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 261; Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17. In the latter case, the court said: "It has been repeatedly held that 'the right to exclude or to expel all aliens, or any class of aliens, absolutely or upon certain conditions, in war or in peace,' is 'an inherent and inalienable right of every sovereign and independent nation, essential to its safety, its independence, and its welfare;' that this 'power to exclude and to expel aliens, being a power affecting international relations, is vested in the political departments of the government, and is to be regulated by treaty or by act of Congress, and to be executed by the executive authority according to the regulations so established, except so far as the judicial department has been authorized by treaty or by statute, or is required by the paramount law of the Constitution, to intervene.'"

VIII. PERSONS SOLICITED TO MIGRATE
(p. 646)

Contract laborers.—Statements in letters to aliens that the writer was in need of laborers both skilled and unskilled, stating wages paid and asking when the aliens could report for duty, amounted to an implied offer of employment and a solicitation to migrate to this country to perform labor here, so that they were contract laborers within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. International Silver Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 925.

Vol. III, p. 654, sec. 4. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 164.]

Construction.—"This section is not limited to encouragement by prepaying transportation of contract laborers but extends to encouragement 'in any way.' Asking contract laborers, who said they were ready to start at once if assured of employment by the defendant, when they will report for duty is a manifest encouragement." U. S. v. International Silver Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 925, wherein it was further held that the replies of the defendant to the letters of the aliens were not mere courtesies and as such not a violation of the Act.

III. Proceedings for deportation.

VIII. Habeas corpus.

III. PROCEEDINGS FOR DEPORTATION
(p. 675)

Bail.—The court ordinarily has no power to interfere with the discretion of the immigration authorities as to granting or refusing bail or as to the amount of bail. Some abuse of the power vested in them by statute must be shown in order to warrant an interference by the court. Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17.

VIII. HABEAS CORPUS (p. 679)

When granted.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see Akira Ono v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 359; Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17, the latter case also holding that if the proceedings in the Department of Labor are shown to be unfair, or otherwise lacking in the essential elements of due process of law, or if the Secretary of Labor is proceeding on an erroneous view of the law, the courts must review.

Vol. III, p. 681, sec. 21. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 170.]

Review by court.—Deportation proceedings are administrative in their nature and such power as the district court has is by habeas corpus, which reviews only the legality of the final restraint, and then only to see whether the discretionary powers granted have been honestly used, or exceeded. In re Weinstein, (D. C. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 5.

Review of deportation proceedings extends only to the inquiry whether the discretionary powers of the executive have been exceeded. There is no judicial power to review or reverse a finding of fact based on evidence. U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 676.

The construction of the statute, the applicability of the statute to the particular case, and the question whether or not the reasons given by the Secretary of Labor for the deportation agree with the requirements of the act are questions of law which are reviewable by the courts. Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17.

1918 Supp., p. 212, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—"It has been settled by repeated decisions that Congress has power to exclude any and all aliens from the United States; to prescribe the terms and conditions on which they may come in or on which they may remain after having been admitted; to establish the regulations for deporting such aliens as have entered in violation of law, or who are here in violation of law; and to commit the enforcing of such laws and regulations to executive officers. The deportation of an alien who is thus found here in violation of law, or of the conditions prescribed by Congress either as to his right to be admitted or his right to remain, is not a deprivation of liberty without due process of law." In re Kosopud, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 330.

Chinese aliens.—This act has been held to be applicable to Chinese aliens seeking readmission to the United States. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Seamen.—An alien employed as a seaman on a vessel of American registry and therefore entitled to be returned to the United States when discharged in a foreign port on account of injury or illness, and who at the instance of the American consul was brought back to this country by the master of another vessel who signed him on as a member of the ship's company, formally and for the unusual wage of twenty-five cents per month, was an American seaman within the meaning of this section. The Santa Elena, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 347.

1918 Supp., p. 214, sec. 3.

Construction.—This section does not operate as a repeal of R. S. sec. 2169 (6 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 944), in so far as it embraces the words "white persons." In re Bhagat Singh Thind, (D. C. Ore. 1920) 268 Fed. 663, wherein the court said:

"Repeals by implication are not favored, and, unless there is manifest repugnancy between the later and the former act, the former must remain operative. The argument is that, as Congress eliminated the words 'white persons' from the Immigration Act, the act in question, it must be inferred that it intended to eliminate these words also from section 2169, and thus to amend that section accordingly. This does not necessarily follow. Congress was dealing with the subject of immigration, and not of naturalization, and it may well be that Congress designed thenceforth to exclude Hindus from entry into the United States, and still permit such as were domiciled here the privilege of being naturalized. In this light, I see no repugnancy between the act and section 2169 and other naturalization regulations."

"Contagious disease."—The decision of the board of special inquiry whether an alien shall be excluded because afflicted with a contagious disease is final where based on the classification by the Surgeon General of the disease with which the alien is afflicted as contagious. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

"A person likely to become a public charge" is one whom it may be necessary to support at public expense by reason of poverty, insanity and poverty, disease and poverty, idiocy and poverty." Wallis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 509.

Temporary absence.—A rule of the department which provides that an absence not exceeding six months shall be deemed a "temporary absence" within the meaning of the seventh proviso of this section is not unreasonable and its application to a Chinese merchant seeking readmission has been held not to be unfair. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Questions arising on deportation.—Where an alien is sought to be deported under the provisions of this Act, the real question is whether the case shows that the alien was found illegally here, and, if so, whether there exists any legal authority for his deportation. Akira Ono v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 359.

Power of court to order release on bond.—Where the immigration authorities have refused admission to an alien and issued an order of deportation the district court has no power to order his release on the giving of a bond conditioned that he will not "become a public charge." Wallis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 509.

Scope of review of decision by immigration authorities.—"The court's jurisdiction, when the remedy of a writ of habeas corpus is invoked in immigration cases, is to inquire whether the ground of exclusion given by the administrative authorities is without any evidence to support it. Unless there is no evidence at all proving or tending to prove that an alien is within one of the excluded classes, the decision of the immigration authorities is conclusive upon the court, even though the evidence to the contrary be very strong." Wallis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 509.

Re-entry after deportation.—Where it was contended that by implication it followed from the language of this section that a deported alien has the right to re-enter the United States after the expiration of the one-year period the court declared that there was no merit in the proposition. It was said that this section "provides in plain terms that any alien who shall, after he has been excluded and deported, or arrested and deported, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, which relate to prostitutes, procurers, or other like immoral persons, attempt thereafter to return to or enter the United States, shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor." Mills v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 625.

Attempt to re-enter as offense.—In reply to a contention that no offense against the United States is defined by this statute and that an indictment which alleges an attempt to return to and enter the United States, an act which is not in itself a crime, cannot be made a crime, it has been said: "In the present case the statute expressly makes the attempt a punishable offense. The attempt is in itself a substantive offense. It is the act of crossing the boundary line into the United States. It is not an attempt to commit an independently described offense, in the sense in which the word 'attempt' is ordinarily used in criminal law. It is the actual re-entry into the United States." Mills v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 625.

Presumption.—Where Canadian citizenship was shown to have existed at a certain date a presumption arises that it continued until a showing to the contrary has been made. Mills v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 625.

Indictment.—In Mills v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 625, the plaintiff in error was convicted and sentenced under an indictment which charged that on January 18, 1920, she knowingly, willfully, and unlawfully attempted to return and enter the United States from foreign territory contiguous thereto, to wit, the Dominion of Canada; the Secretary of Labor not theretofore having consented to any reapplication by her for admission into the United States, she having been theretofore, on July 29, 1917, arrested and deported from the United States of America to the Dominion of Canada, on the charge that she had been found in the United States, connected with the management of a house of prostitution in the United States, and the arrest and deportation having been made by virtue of a warrant issued March 13, 1917, by the Department of Labor. The warrant was set forth in full, and it recited among other things, that the plaintiff in error was found in the United States in violation of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (39 Stat. 874).

Error was assigned to the order overruling the demurrer to the indictment, and it was contended that the indictment failed to charge an offense, in that the warrant of deportation therein set forth, which was dated March 13, 1917, was expressly based upon the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, an act which went into effect on May 1, 1917, and was not in force at the date of the warrant. The court said: "The previous Act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. 898), as amended in 1910 (36 Stat. 264), was in force, however, and the provisions of that law as amended are identical with the provisions of the Act of February 5, 1917, so far as they concern the charge against the plaintiff in error.

A similar contention was presented to this court in Akira Ono v. United States (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 359, where the order of the Secretary of Labor, directing the arrest of a Japanese person and ordering that he be granted a hearing to show cause why he should not be deported, recited that he had entered the United States in violation of the Act of February 5, 1917, although the entry occurred before the passage of the act, this court held that the erroneous mention of the statute of February 5, 1917, was unimportant for the reason that the real question was whether the case showed that the appellant was found illegally here, and, if so, whether there existed legal authority for his deportation. In Guiney v. Bonham, (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 582, 8 A. L. R. 1282, we held that, although a warrant of arrest for deportation is in terms based on a particular statute, the alien may be deported under a later statute, which under the facts charged is applicable."

Evidence.—The admission of a Canadian naturalization certificate to show that the husband of a woman who had been deported was an alien has been held not to be error though no proof was offered that the court by which the certificate was issued had power to issue it, no objection having been interposed to the admission of the certificate in evidence. Mills v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 625.

1918 Supp., p. 220, sec. 8.

Chinese laborers.—A person bringing Chinese laborers into the United States, who, because of failure actually to land the aliens in the United States, did not proceed far enough to violate the Chinese Exclusion Act of July 5, 1884, § 11, 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 76, may be prosecuted under this section, it being broader and more comprehensive in its terms. U. S. v. Butt, (1920) 254 U. S. 38, 41 Sup. Ct. 37, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 225, sec. 15.

Seaman detained at hospital.—Under this section a master and his ship are relieved from responsibility for the safe keeping of an alien seaman while he is detained at a marine hospital. The Santa Elena, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 347.

1918 Supp., p. 226, sec. 16.

Examination by one medical officer.—An examination by one medical officer instead of two has been held not to render the hearing unfair where there is no showing that the rights of the alien were in any way prejudiced thereby and the finding of the medical officer as to the alien being afflicted with a disease which would bar his admission is not disputed. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Discrimination in examination.—In Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10, it was alleged in the petitions that by the action of the immigration officials at San Francisco the appellants have been denied their rights under article 2 of the Treaty with China of November 17, 1880 (22 Stat. 826), which guarantees to Chinese subjects the rights, privileges, immunities and exemptions which are accorded to the citizens and subjects of the most favored nation. They alleged that on their return to the United States by steamer discrimination was made between the petitioners and the first cabin passengers, in that the former were compelled to go to the Angel Island Immigration Station and to the Immigration Hospital for the purpose of having particular examination made of their physical condition, and that this test was imposed upon them simply and solely because they were Chinese aliens, whereas first cabin passengers were submitted to no such test. The court said: "To this it is to be said that, if special examination was made of second-class Oriental passengers only, it should be assumed that it was done for the reason that the disease of clonorchiasis was most likely to be found among such passengers, the source of the disease being supposed to be a diet of raw fish, and it should be assumed that in failing to subject first-class passengers to like test there was no discrimination against Chinese persons, or withholding of their rights. The officers presumably did their duty in subjecting the petitioners to the test. If they failed to do their duty as to other passengers, it is not a ground for disturbing the conclusions of the board of special inquiry as to the appellants."

Rights of alien after admission.—Where an alien has been admitted the fact that in ignorance of his right he voluntarily returns does not render his subsequent detention legal. Ex p. Chin Shue Wee, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 480.

Power of bureau after admission.—After an alien has been admitted, the case is regarded as closed before the immigration tribunal. If thereafter it develops that the admission was procured by fraud, the alien cannot be retaken and deported, except upon warrant proceedings under section 19 of the Immigration Act and rule 22, which provide fully for such cases. The original jurisdiction to hold and exclude is apparently based on the custody of the alien's person acquired at the time of his landing and continued by his detention. Once the alien has been formally discharged, and the discharge has become practically effective, jurisdiction under the original proceeding is regarded as having expired. Ex p. Chin Shue Wee, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 480.

Time to appeal.—"The Immigration Rules do not explicitly provide as to the time when an appeal shall be taken by a dissenting member of the board. They say, 'An appeal may also be taken by a board member who dissents from a majority vote to admit' (Rule 17, subd. 2), and that 'Appeals must be filed promptly' (Rule 17, subd. 3). An alien loses his right of appeal, except in the discretion of the immigration officer, unless it is taken within forty-eight hours after the decision. By the practice of the department, an appeal by a dissenting member of the board from an order of admission is taken at the time when the decision of the board to admit is made, and it stays the admission pending the appeal. Without such an appeal the vote becomes effective at once." Ex p. Chin Shue Wee, (D. C. Mass. 1921) 272 Fed. 480.

1918 Supp., p. 228, sec. 17.

Hearing and determination.—A hearing on proceedings for deporting aliens by the executive officers to whom is committed the administration of the immigration laws may be made conclusive when fairly conducted. "Any alien complaining of such proceedings or a deportation order in court must show that the officers conducting them were guilty of manifest unfairness or abused the discretion committed to them, otherwise the order of such executive officers, within the authority conferred by statute, is final and conclusive. It is further settled that the courts will not weigh the evidence upon which executive officers acted, so that if there is any evidence substantially tending to support the ground upon which the order of deportation is based, the finding of such executive officers upon the evidence must be accepted as conclusive and binding upon the courts." In re Kosopud, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 330.

Right to counsel.—In a case where the question as to the right of counsel arose it was said: "The only legal inquiry upon the foregoing facts is whether or not the petitioners were denied counsel in such a way as to deprive them of a fair hearing. Manifestly the absence of counsel when they were being interrogated by the arresting officers is immaterial. The situation in that respect is no different from that which exists in most cases of arrest on a criminal charge. The aid and assistance of counsel at or during the hearing before the immigration inspector, and before the order of deportation is made, is the privilege which the law accords to aliens charged with being unlawfully within the United States. Nor does it make a hearing before an immigration inspector unfair and subject to review because the alien may not have had the benefit of counsel at the beginning of those proceedings. It is sufficient if, during the hearing, he is advised of his rights or is accorded counsel, and no part of the evidence previously taken or used against him is concealed or withheld from his counsel and he is not thereby deprived of the privilege of bringing forward any explanatory or rebutting evidence." In re Kosopud, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 330.

Conclusiveness of decision.—In the case of a Chinaman it has been said that the final decision of the executive department when the proceedings before it are fairly conducted is conclusive upon the courts. U. S. v. Wong Lai, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 57.

1918 Supp., p. 230, sec. 19.

Power of Congress in general.—Congress has the right to exclude or deport aliens in its discretion as an inherent right of sovereignty. Ex p. Gin Kato, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 343.

Statute and treaty in conflict.—Should an act of Congress and a treaty stipulation be in irreconcilable conflict, the duty of the court is to follow the last expression of the legislative branch, and leave the question of breach of treaty stipulation to the executive branch of the government. Ex p. Gin Kato, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 343, holding that there was no conflict between the statute and treaty stipulations between the United States and Japan.

This section repeals any provisions of the Chinese exclusion acts not in harmony with it. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801.

Retrospective operation.—"Section 19 of the Alien Immigration Act provides that the provisions of this section, with the exceptions heretofore noted, shall be applicable irrespective of the time of entry into the United States. The Department of Labor in immigration, prescribing rules on May 1, 1917, provided as follows:

"'Subdivision 1. Classes of Warrant Cases.—All cases in which aliens may be arrested and deported are either stated in detail or mentioned in section 19. They fall into the following divisions. With respect to each of these divisions the law is retrospective or not and the time within which deportation proceedings may be instituted is limited or not, as indicated below.'

"(S) —'Any alien who was convicted or who admits the commission prior to entry of a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude; no limitation; retrospective.'

"We find this rule to be warranted by the statute. We think that the intention of Congress was plain to make an alien of the class to which the appellant belongs, subject to apprehension and deportation whenever found, even though his entry into the country was prior to the effective date of the Alien Immigration Act of 1917." Lauris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 261.

The five year limitation does not apply to one who "has been found employed by, in, or in connection with a house of prostitution." Ex p. Gin Kato, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 343. Nor is it applicable to members of a class excluded from the United States by section 3, as, for instance, one convicted of crime or who admits the commission of crime before entry. Lauris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 261, wherein it was said: "Since it is provided by section 3 that certain classes, 'idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, * * * persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude,' shall be excluded from the United States, it is apparent that Congress intended, when it legislated as to this, in section 19 of the act, to extend the time for deportation to the specific cases mentioned beyond the five-year period. It is only by this construction of the statute, that due regard can be given to each provision of section 19. To so construe the act as to require the apprehension and taking into custody and deporting the emigrant prior to the five-year limitation, would be to disregard some of the provisions of section 19 and would lead to conclusions which would be dangerous to the public. We think Congress intended to pronounce classes of aliens who are undesirable and, by general provision of law, exclude all within five years, but provided specifically that certain classes, including the class to which the appellant belongs, might be taken into custody and deported at any time."

Time of entry as controlling.—The provisions of this section are applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned therein without regard to the time of the entry into the United States. Ng Fung Ho v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 765.

The right under this section to deport an alien whose entry was prior to the passage of this act is not barred by section 38 of the act. Mon Singh v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 513.

Advocating unlawful destruction of property—Sufficiency of evidence.—In U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 34, the evidence was held sufficient to justify the deportation of an alien on the ground that he advocated the unlawful destruction of property.

Advocating overthrow of government by force—In general.—The question is not one of degrees of imminence of overthrow by force and violence but rather whether that is the ultimate purpose of the organization. U. S. v. Wallis, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 413.

The manifesto and programme of the Communist party being of such character as to easily lead a reasonable man to conclude that the purpose of the Communist party is to accomplish its end, namely, the capture and destruction of the state, as now constituted, by force and violence, it has been held that membership in such party is ground for deportation. U. S. v. Wallis, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 413.

Chinese—In general.—Under this section the Secretary of the Interior within the limitations stated therein, has authority to arrest and deport on departmental warrant, alien Chinese persons found within the United States in violation of the Chinese Exclusion Law, where entry was made prior to the date the above referred to act went into effect; i. e., May 1, 1917. Ng Fung Ho v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 765.

Chinese merchant.—The status of one as a former domiciled Chinese merchant is not a bar to deportation under this act. Hee Fuk Yuen v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 10.

Chinese woman.—A Chinese woman may, under this section, be deported for prostitution without being given a judicial hearing as provided in section 13 of the Chinese Exclusion Act (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 86). And this is true though her entry into the United States took place prior to the passage of this section. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801. The court said: "Nor can the appellant complain that the law was enacted after her entry into this country and after her status as to her right to remain here had become fixed. It has long since been settled that every sovereign and independent nation has the right and inherent power to exclude or expel aliens, or any class of aliens, absolutely or upon certain conditions, whether in war or in peace. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 13 Sup. Ct. 1016, 37 L. Ed. 905; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 16 Sup. Ct. 977, 41 L. Ed. 140. The applicant, therefore, cannot complain that she was not given a judicial hearing within the intentment of section 13 of the Act of September 13, 1888."

A Japanese laborer who enters the United States surreptitiously without a passport, after deserting a ship on which he is working, may be deported at any time within five years after his entry. Akira Ono v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 359.

Deportation for fraud in obtaining admission.—The fact that aliens are admitted into the United States, and that certificates of identity are issued to them, does not foreclose the right of the immigration authorities to institute new proceedings, provided they have sufficient reason to believe that the original findings are founded upon evidence which was false and perjured, and that the aliens are not lawfully within the United States. If certificates have been issued, the burden of attack is upon the government; but if evidence sufficient to show that the original certificates are invalid is introduced, deportation may follow. Ng Fung Ho v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 765.

Effect of marriage to American citizen.—Where a woman has illegally returned to the United States after having been deported as an alien prostitute, her status is not changed by her marriage to an American citizen. Ex p. Flores, (D. C. Ariz. 1921) 272 Fed. 783.

Decision of Secretary of Labor as conclusive.—Where a Chinese boy applies for admission to this country on the alleged ground that his father is a Chinese merchant engaged in business in the United States, the decision of the Secretary of Labor that the father is not a merchant is conclusive under this section even if wrong. White v. Fong Gin Gee, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 600. See also Ex p. Ah Sue, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 356.

The determination of the Secretary of Labor in deportation proceedings as to the identification of an alien as the person who entered without inspection has been held conclusive. Mon Singh v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 513.

The credibility of witnesses is for the Secretary of Labor to pass upon and his judgment cannot be questioned so long as the evidence is sufficient to support his conclusion. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801.

Privilege of counsel.—Relief on habeas corpus will not be given on the ground that privilege of counsel was not granted where on the conclusion of the preliminary examination the petitioner was advised of her right and employed counsel and all of the testimony was thereafter taken including her own re-examination. Ex p. Ah Sue, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 270 Fed. 356.

The examination of an alien where preliminary in character is permissible under the statute without the presence of counsel and if at subsequent stages he is represented by counsel his constitutional right is fully protected. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801.

Procedure.—The statute expressly provides for a summary hearing, and it is not required that the secretary should, in a hearing for deportation, observe the technical rules of law and procedure that are accorded to parties in a criminal proceeding. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801.

Evidence.—The ordinary rules of evidence do not apply to proceedings before immigration officers for deportation of aliens under this act. U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 34.

Irrelevant matter in record.—The fact that irrelevant matter is injected into the record is not material it being very improbable that the judgment of the Secretary of Labor was controlled in any degree thereby. Thus, bad faith or improper conduct will not be imputed to executive officers because they examined the records or acquainted themselves with former official action as shown by the inclusion in the record, correspondence and memoranda from officials of the department. Chin Shee v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 801. The court said: "The second specification of error here presented is to the effect that the petitioner was not given a fair trial, in that letters, memoranda, statements, etc., from officials and inspectors of the department and witnesses were considered by the Commissioner of Immigration and the Assistant Secretary of Labor, without appraising petitioner of the same, or giving her the right to be heard concerning them.

"The letters and memoranda referred to consist of certain correspondence had between the Commissioner of Immigration at Seattle, Wash., and the immigrant inspector at Walla Walla, and between the Commissioner of Immigration and the Commissioner General at Washington, and certain statements and testimony of witnesses, accompanying the correspondence, which were taken before petitioner's arrest. These matters have been included in the record from Washington, and certified here, but they are really not a part of the record made upon the hearing before the inspector upon the charge preferred against applicant looking to her deportation if found amenable to the charge.

"While it is true that the Secretary of Labor might with propriety take cognizance of such correspondence and matter accompanying it, it would be extraordinary to impute bad faith or improper conduct to the executive officers because they examined the records or acquainted themselves with former official action."

1918 Supp., p. 232, sec. 20.

Hearings.—Hearings before administrative bodies, like the immigration authorities, are not subject to the rules governing judicial proceedings. The alien must be given a fair hearing, but the hearing may be summary. Hearsay evidence is admissible, and the findings of fact by the commissioners conclusive, if there is any evidence to support them. Morrell v. Baker, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 577.

The word "hearing" in the provision that the bond shall be conditioned that the alien shall be produced when required for a hearing or hearings includes any hearing whether preliminary or otherwise. U. S. v. Uhl, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 929.

Confinement of persons ordered deported as not illegal restraint.—Persons ordered deported are not illegally restrained of their liberty where because of their inability to give bail they are kept in confinement, though the Department of Labor is unable to promptly enforce its order of deportation. In re Kocopud, (N. D. Ohio 1920) 272 Fed. 330.

Duty to admit to bail—habeas corpus.—Where bail has been fixed the alien is entitled to bail on the presentation of a good and sufficient bond properly conditioned and for the sum required and where this right is denied habeas corpus will be granted. U. S. v. Uhl, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 929.

Review by Secretary of Labor.—Where the record of deportation proceedings was forwarded to the Secretary of Labor, before whom counsel for the alien filed a brief in his behalf resulting in an adverse decision by the Secretary and an order by him for the deportation of the alien, it was held that he secured every substantial right that he could have secured by a purely formal appeal. Shigezumi v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 258.

1918 Supp., p. 238, sec. 32.

Medical treatment of alien seamen—In general.—An alien seaman on an American vessel on arrival at the port of New York is entitled to medical treatment at the Marine Hospital if sick, and if it is not accorded him by the immigration officials the master is justified in sending him to the hospital, and while he is detained there the master and the ship are relieved from responsibility and cannot be charged with negligence under this section because of his release by the hospital authorities. The Santa Elena, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 271 Fed. 347.

Expense of medical treatment.—There is nothing in this section which indicates an intention to make a vessel liable for the medical treatment of an alien employed on board who is excluded from admission into the United States. From the fact that a temporary landing for medical treatment is excepted from the prohibition of the landing of an excluded alien, it is not to be implied that such landing and treatment are subject to be made compulsory and at the expense of the vessel on board which such alien was employed. But payment by an American registered vessel of the expense of a seaman's medical treatment in a hospital, the payment not being made under legal compulsion or involuntarily, cannot be set up as a counterclaim against the seaman's demand for wages. The Coniscliff, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 206, reversing (D. C. Ala. 1920) 266 Fed. 959.

1918 Supp., p. 239, sec. 35.

Medical treatment of seaman at expense of vessel.—Under this provision "a finding that the vessel, or one acting in its behalf, was at fault in the respect stated when the excluded alien was shipped or engaged and taken on board is made a prerequisite to the enforced treatment in a hospital of such alien at the expense of the vessel. It is not thought that a statute which makes provision, in stated circumstances, for the medical treatment of an excluded alien at the expense of the vessel which brought such alien to this country, properly can be given the effect of authorizing immigration officials to subject a vessel to such an expense in a case not provided for by statute. The circumstance that the right to exercise the power granted was made subject to specified conditions indicates the absence of intention to confer the power unconditionally and without qualification, or in respect of a vessel not shown to be within the terms of section 35, to wit: 'Any vessel carrying passengers between a port of the United States and a port of a foreign country.'" The Coniscliff, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 206.

1918 Supp., p. 240, sec. 38.

Effect on right to deport.—The right to deport under section 19 of this act an alien who entered prior to its passage is not barred by this section. Mon Singh v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 513.

1919 Supp., p. 71, sec. 1. [Alien members, etc.]

Construction.—Statutory restrictions on immigration should, if possible, be construed in accordance with the spirit as well as within the letter of the Constitution, including the First Amendment and its declaration for freedom of speech, press, and assemblage. Nor should it be overlooked that the words "overthrow the government of the United States by force or violence" are found in a context which indicates that Congress had in mind military insurrections of the ordinary kind, and bombing and assassination attacks on the government. Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17.

Advocating overthrow of government.—In U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 676, it was said: "Mere personal abstention from violence, or even from violent language, does not secure immunity, if the result of the gentlest and most guarded speech is to advocate or teach that which the statute condemns. The 'philosophic' anarchist is an anarchist nevertheless. Lopez v. Howe, 259 Fed. 401, 170 C. C. A. 377. Since in this or in any similar case we cannot be concerned with the weight of the evidence, but only with the existence thereof, it is not useful to state or comment upon what Georgian was proved to have done, what he admitted having done, or what he himself said of his own teachings, advocacy, or opinions.

"We express no opinion as to the result upon our minds of the evidence adduced at the deportation hearing, beyond this, viz., there was evidence, indeed it was admitted, that though he did not and does not believe in the immediate overthrow of the government of the United States that position is not the result of any affection for the same or approval of this republic, nor of any objection to force and violence per se, but only results from an opinion that the time is not ripe. Ripeness is to be attained by teaching, and by the dissemination of the style of literature which it is his business to circulate; when the time is ripe, it is to be hoped that force and violence will not be necessary, but they will be appropriate as soon as they are likely to prevail.

"However fantastic the above-outlined social program may seem, it is impossible to say that a professed and avowed effort to hasten its consummation is not evidence of that which the statute forbids."

"Force" as including general strikes.—Congress did not intend by the use of the word "force" in this section to condemn the general strike when advocated as a political weapon by aliens. Colyer v. Skeffington, (D. C. Mass. 1920) 265 Fed. 17.

1919 Supp., p. 72, sec. 2.

Procedure under act.—This act "contemplates a summary investigation, and not a judicial trial. The formalities of procedure and the rules which govern the admissibility of evidence in a judicial trial are not controlling in such proceedings. A series of decisions in the Supreme Court has settled it that hearings, like the one in question here, and tried before executive officers, are conclusive when fairly conducted. To successfully attack them before the courts, it must appear that the proceedings were manifestly unfair, that the executive officers acted in such manner as prevented a fair investigation, or it must be shown that there was a manifest abuse of discretion. In other cases the order of the executive officer within the authority of the statute is final." U. S. v. Uhl, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 646.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Vol. III, p. 712, sec. 27. [First ed., vol. X, p. 115.]

Purpose of section.—This "section was in the nature of a customs regulation, to prevent the American public from being deceived by simulated name. In other words, simulated trade-marks were to be excluded from importation, so as to safeguard the American public; but there is nothing in that section which was intended to or purported to pass upon the question as to whether any given trade-mark was valid as matter of law as between contending parties." Bourjois v. Katzel, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 856.

What may be excluded.—Under this section, the customs authorities may only exclude an article "of imported merchandise which shall copy or simulate the name of any domestic manufacture. * * *" Thus, if an article is genuine, in the sense of defendant's box, it may be imported into this country, and cannot be stopped at the door of the custom house; but whether or not the article may be marketed here under a particular trade-mark is a question to be determined in ascertaining the rights of parties, quite irrespective of this section. Bourjois v. Katzel, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 856.

Vol. III, p. 725, sec. 2. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 62.]

"The statute raises a presumption of fact. It is the presumption of one fact based upon another proven fact; that is, the presumption of importation arising from the proven fact of possession. The majority of the court are of the opinion that the jurisdiction of the court over the subject matter may be established by such proof and presumption thus created. We think that Congress had power to create the presumption under the power accorded to it by the Constitution to regulate foreign commerce." Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

Indictments.—An indictment charging the concealment of smoking opium in violation of this section may be properly consolidated and tried with an indictment charging the manufacture of smoking opium in violation of section 1 of the Act of Dec. 17, 1914 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 173). Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

INDIANSVol. III, p. 760, sec. 2078. [First ed., vol. III, p. 356.]

Extent of prohibition of interest.—The prohibition of this section against any interest or concern in any trade with Indians, except for and on account of the United States, on the part of any person employed in Indian affairs, is not confined to transactions involving lands or other property in respect to which the government has an interest or control. U. S. v. Hutto, (1921) 236 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 541, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

An attorney at law appointed as a special assistant to the Attorney General to assist in the institution and prosecution of suits to set aside deeds made to certain allotments in an Indian agency, comes within the purview of this section and may not purchase land from the heirs of a deceased Indian allottee. Bluejacket v. Ewert, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 823, wherein it was said: "The facts in the present case do not disclose the direct exertion of any influence over the Indians. It is not shown that the defendant ever saw or communicated with any of the plaintiffs or that the Indians were conscious that defendant was employed in Indian affairs. The presumption is that the rules established by the Secretary of the Interior governing sales of inherited Indian lands were followed by the officials in charge of that sale; that defendant's bid for these lands was delivered to the Indian agent and by him transmitted to the Secretary, together with all the proceedings and the report of the agent, and with a showing that there was no agreement or understanding between defendant and plaintiffs. So far as appears the defendant was but a passive recipient of a conveyance from the Indians. Exercising its undoubted authority, the government offered the property for sale, advertised it, made the appraisal, received the bids, decided upon approval of its acceptance by the Indians, approved the deed, and controlled the receipt and disposition of the purchase price.

"The defendant therefore claims that he was not engaged in any trade with the Indians, but that his dealing was with the United States. This view ignores the fact that the plaintiffs in deciding whether to refuse or accept defendant's bid, and in executing the deed to defendant as grantee may have signed it because of confidence in his official position and his relation to the Indians. One purpose of the statute is to prevent the possible play of official influence over the mind of the Indian in his consideration of any proposed trade with him. Another purpose is to preserve loyalty, or at least disinterestedness toward the Indian's interests by those employed in Indian affairs. If it were held that the statute did not apply to a trade between an official of the Indian department and the Indian except where the Indian was conscious that he was dealing with such an employé the way would be open for employes and officers of the Indian department to take advantage of their knowledge of the Indians' affairs and of their needs, to make purchases or sales for their own benefit through third persons, agents and corporations. Similarly, officers and employes of the Indian department at Washington or at any agency could trade with Indians living at a distance if they were not acquainted with their official positions. The statute is not confined in terms to trade with the Indians, when the Indian is conscious of the position of the official, nor when an effect upon the trade by the use of his official position is demonstrated, and such a construction would be contrary to the practical interpretation that has been placed upon the statute by the Indian department ever since its enactment. The conclusion is that the statute applied to the taking of the deed by the defendant."

Vol. III, p. 794, sec. 2116. [First ed., vol. III, p. 373.]

Alienation by individual Indians.—To same effect is original annotation, see U. S. v. Boylan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 165, affirming (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 256 Fed. 468.

Vol. III, p. 795, sec. 2117. [First ed., vol. III, p. 374.]

Where a grazing lease of tribal lands expressly limits the number of cattle which may be grazed on the leased premises, an agreement to pay for any excess of cattle grazing thereon is not invalid as being an agreement to pay for violating the statute by placing cattle on the reservation without the consent of the tribe. Kirby v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 391.

Vol. III, p. 819, sec. 15. [First ed., vol. III, p. 490.]

The finding of the Land Department is conclusive that an Indian admitted to the benefits of the Homestead Law under this section has abandoned his tribal relations. In re Wo-gin-up's Estate, (Utah 1920) 192 Pac. 267.

Vol. III, p. 830, sec. 6. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 204.]

Right to vote.—Trust patent Indians holding allotted lands under the federal act of May 8, 1906 (Burke Act), amending Dawes Act, who have become civilized persons of Indian descent, and who have severed their tribal relations for two years next preceding an election, may be qualified electors at such election, under article 2, § 121, Const. N. D. as amended. Swift v. Leach (N. D. 1920) 178 N. W. 437.

Conclusiveness of determination of commission.—The adjudication of the commission as to who should be enrolled as citizens and as to what land should be allotted to them, has been held conclusive and impervious to collateral attack. U. S. v. Atkins, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 923.

Finding of secretary conclusive.—By authority of the provisions of this section, as amended by act of May 8, 1906 (34 Stat. 182, 183), and the act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 855), which was made applicable to Oklahoma by the act of the Congress of February 14, 1913, the Secretary of the Interior was vested with authority to ascertain the legal heirs of deceased Indians and caused to be issued to said heirs, in their name, a patent in fee simple for the lands being held in trust by the United States for the original allottee, and the action of the Secretary of the Interior in determining the legal heirs of such deceased Indians in accordance with the authority granted is conclusive and final. Maz-He v. Jefferson Trust Co., (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 319.

Certiorari will not lie for the purpose of reviewing an administrative order made by the Secretary of the Interior under this section. Mickadiet v. Payne, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 266 Fed. 194.

Grazing lease construed and rights thereunder determined, see Kirby v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 391.

Vol. III, p. 846, sec. 7. [First ed., vol. III, p. 505.]

Necessity of confirmation of sale of minor heirs' interests.—A confirmation by the county court of the report of a guardians' sale of the interests of minor heirs in land, is not necessary under this section. Blue-jacket v. Ewert, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 823.

Vol. III, p. 850. [Noncompetent Indians, etc.] [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 228.]

Meaning of "noncompetent."—As to the meaning of the word "noncompetent" as used in this section, the court, in U. S. v. Nez Perce County, (D. C. Idaho 1917) 267 Fed. 495, said: "In passing upon the original motion, the meaning of the term 'noncompetent,' as here used, was not discussed, and I accepted it as being the equivalent of 'incompetent,' and as implying legal incapacity, due to nonage, imbecility, or insanity. But upon further consideration I am persuaded that such restriction is too narrow. While undoubtedly the 'competency' of an Indian is generally understood to imply a mental capacity, it is to be inferred, from expressions in both the acts of Congress and in reported judicial decisions, that there is in the legislative and judicial mind a close connection between the mental status of the Indian and his power or right to alienate his land, and that therefore in practice the legal power to alienate implies mental competency, and, upon the other hand, the absence of such power or right implies incompetency."

* * * The view seems to be unavoidable that Congress intended to use the term 'noncompetent' as descriptive of an Indian holding only a trust patent or other patent containing restrictions against alienation, or, what is perhaps the equivalent, an Indian to whom, even though he may be actually competent, a certificate of competency has not been issued by the Secretary of the Interior, and that therefore the description 'noncompetent Indian' is inclusive of all Indians who are without full power to alienate their property."

Presumption as continuance of incompetency.—There is a presumption, conclusive upon the courts, that until the restriction against alienation is removed in the manner provided by law, either through the lapse of time or the positive action of the Secretary of the Interior, the allottee continues to be an "incompetent" Indian, at least in so far as concerns the land to which the restriction relates. U. S. v. Nez Perce County, (D. C. Idaho 1917) 267 Fed. 495.

Vol. III, p. 851, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 237.]

Exemption from taxation.—Where the allottees died before the expiration of the trust period and the proceeds received from a sale of the lands as authorized by this section were invested in other lands it has been held that the lands so acquired are exempt from taxation during the trust period by the state and its municipal subdivisions. U. S. v. Yakima County, (E. D. Wash. 1921) 274 Fed. 115.

Vol. III, p. 853, sec. 1. [Indian trust allotments, etc.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 96.]

Constitutionality.—"The question of the validity and effect of that act, and of the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior to hear, ascertain and decide who were the parties entitled by descent to the allotments of deceased Indians described therein, has been repeatedly considered and conclusively determined by the Supreme Court and by other federal courts, and they have uniformly sustained the act, the power of the Congress to enact it, the jurisdiction of the Secretary to decide the questions of heirship, and the finality of his decisions." Dixon v. Cox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 285.

Power and jurisdiction of Secretary of the Interior.—The fact that the Secretary of the Interior has decided that a certain person is not the sole heir of a certain deceased Indian does not exhaust his power so as to preclude him from subsequently determining who are the heirs. Dixon v. Cox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 285.

Restricted allotments covered by section.—Restricted as well as trust allotments must be held to be comprehended by the provisions of this section, that "when any Indian to whom an allotment of land has been made, or may hereafter be made, dies before the expiration of the trust period and before the issuance of a fee-simple patent, without having made a will disposing of said allotment as hereinafter provided, the Secretary of the Interior, upon notice and hearing, under such rules as he may prescribe, shall ascertain the legal heirs of such decedent, and his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive," in view of the legislative and departmental construction of that section as authorizing a determination of the heirs of both classes of deceased allottees. U. S. v. Bowling, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 561, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—

The certification of the competency of the grantee under a restricted patent inso facto operates to revise the patent. U. S. v. Nez Perce County, (D. C. Idaho 1917) 267 Fed. 495.

Deposit of Indian moneys in bank.—The provision in this section as to the deposit of Indian moneys in bank is said to be permissive and not mandatory. U. S. v. Nez Perce County, (D. C. Idaho 1917) 267 Fed. 495.

Conclusiveness of decision of Secretary of the Interior.—The Secretary of the Interior has jurisdiction to determine the question of heirship and his finding is final and conclusive. Chase v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 684. To same effect, see Maz-He v. Jefferson Trust Co., (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 319.

But the Secretary's decision on the question of heirship like the decision of the Land Department, of the Dawes Commission, and of other quasi judicial tribunals, may undoubtedly be avoided by a suit in a court of equity on account of fraud which induced it, on account of error of law upon facts found, conceded, or established beyond dispute at the hearing before him, or on the ground that at the close of such hearing there was no evidence to support his finding on a material issue of fact which controlled the result. Dixon v. Cox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 285.

Remedies of United States.—"For the protection of the United States in the execution of its trust powers, the performance of its duties to its Indian wards, and the exercise of the exclusive jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior in respect of the approval of leases during the restricted period against obstruction and trespass, the United States is not remitted to the ordinary legal remedies of ejectment and wrongful detainer," but may invoke the equity power of the court to grant injunctive relief. Chase v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 684.

Pleading and proof in attack on decision.—"If one would attack the finding of facts of a quasi judicial tribunal like the Secretary or the Land Department, upon the ground that there was no substantial evidence to support it, he must allege and prove, not only that there was a mistake in the finding or findings, but the evidence before that tribunal or Secretary from which the alleged mistake resulted, before any court can enter upon the consideration or decision of any issue of fact determined at the hearing by such tribunal or Secretary." Dixon v. Cox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 285.

Effect of state laws of descent on wills executed under this section.—The prohibition of Oklahoma Code, § 8341, against the bequest by a married man or woman of more than two thirds of his or her property away from the other spouse, cannot be invoked to defeat the will of an Indian married woman, the allottee of restricted lands, who died before the expiration of the trust or restrictive period, by which she devised to her children and grandchildren such lands and all trust funds held by the United States to her use and benefit, in view of the provisions of this section, that one having an interest in any allotment held under trust, or other patent containing restrictions on alienation, shall have the right, prior to the expiration of the trust or restrictive period, and before the issuance of a fee-simple patent, or the removal of restrictions, to dispose of such property by will, in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, who may approve or disapprove the will, either before or after the death of the testator, and that neither circumstance shall operate to terminate the trust or restrictive period, but the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, cause a patent in fee to be issued to the devisee or devisees. Blanset v. Cardin, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 519, 65 U. S. (L. ed.), affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 309

Constitutionality.—Congress acted clearly within its authority in constituting the governor of the Choctaw Nation the representative of the defendants, upon whom notice of the suit, contemplated by this act, and the Act of May 28, 1908, § 27, for the recovery for services rendered and expenses incurred in securing Mississippi Choctaw Indians rights of citizenship in the Choctaw Nation, was to be served in their behalf, and in designating the Attorney General of the United States as their attorney to appear and defend the suit, the government's trusteeship of the funds of these Indians, and its guardianship over their interests in the allotted lands, not making it necessary that the United States be a party to the proceeding. Indians were not deprived of their property without due process of law by the provisions of this act, and the Act of May 29, 1908, § 27, authorizing the court of claims to hear, consider, and adjudicate the claims against the Mississippi Choctaws of certain persons for services rendered and expenses incurred in the matter of the claims of the Mississippi Choctaws to citizenship in the Choctaw Nation, and to render judgment thereon on the principle of quantum meruit in such amounts as may appear equitable or justly due therefor, which judgment, if any, shall be paid from any funds now or hereafter due such Choctaws by the United States, and declaring that the lands allotted to the Mississippi Choctaws are subject to a lien to the extent of any judgment so rendered, and constituting the governor of the Choctaw Nation the representative of the defendants, upon whom notice of the suit was to be served in their behalf, and designating the Attorney General of the United States as their attorney to appear and defend the suit. Winton v. Amos, (1921) 255 U. S. 373, 41 S. Ct. 342, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—. See 51 Ct. Cl. 284; 52 Ct. Cl. 90.

Equitable suit against class.—The jurisdictional Acts of April 26, 1906, § 9, and May 29, 1908, § 27, authorizing the court of claims to hear, consider, and adjudicate the claims against the Mississippi Choctaws of certain persons for services rendered and expenses incurred in the matter of the claims of the Mississippi Choctaws to citizenship in the Choctaw Nation, and to render judgment thereon on the principle of quantum meruit in such amounts as may appear equitable or justly due therefor, which judgment, if any, shall be paid from any funds now or hereafter due such Choctaws by the United States, and declaring that the lands allotted to the Mississippi Choctaws are subject to a lien to the extent of any judgment so rendered, contemplate, not an action in personam to establish a personal liability against individual Indians or a group of Indians, but a suit of an equitable nature against that class of Mississippi Choctaws who, through successful assertion of the right of citizenship in the Choctaw Nation, acquired allotments of lands in what formerly was the tribal domain, and a participation in funds held in trust by the United States; a suit having the object of imposing an equitable charge upon their funds and lands for a reasonable and proportionate contribution toward the value of services rendered and expenses incurred by the claimants in securing for said class of Indians a beneficial participation in the trust estate. Winton v. Amos, (1921) 255 U. S. 373, 41 S. Ct. 342, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—. See 51 Ct. Cl. 284; 52 Ct. Cl. 90.

Recovery for professional services to Indians before congressional committees.—Professional services before Congress and its committees, individual representatives and Senators, the Dawes Commission, etc., intended to establish the right of the Mississippi Choctaws to participation in the material benefits of citizenship in the Choctaw Nation, and to secure such legislation by Congress as might be needed for the practical attainment of the object sought, though rendered under particular contracts of employment by many individual Mississippi Choctaws, but with the object, incidentally, of benefiting the Mississippi Choctaws as a class, will, whether such contracts be valid or not, support the suit authorized by this Act of April 26, 1906, § 9, and the Act of May 29, 1908, § 27, to be brought in the court of claims to impose an equitable charge for reimbursement and compensation on the basis of quantum meruit upon the interest of those beneficiaries who received the benefit, provided that the services rendered were substantially instrumental in producing a result beneficial to the class of cestuis que trustent upon whose interests the charge is to be imposed. Winton v. Amos, (1921) 255 U. S. 373, 41 S. Ct. 342, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—. See 51 Ct. Cl. 284; 52 Ct. Cl. 90.

Vol. III, p. 872, sec. 19. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 199.]

Act of alienation as within prohibition of section.—"An act of alienation might be clearly within the prohibition of the language of the statute contemplating the reimposing of restrictions removed by legislative act, and yet not be within the prohibition when it relates to the removal of restrictions as to the alienation of surplus allotment of a full-blood member of the Five Civilized Tribes by an act of the Secretary of the Interior, which was preceded by a quasi judicial investigation." U. S. v. Smith, (E. D. Okla. 1920) 266 Fed. 740.

Deed in execution of contract made before act.—This section is not retroactive, but it does render invalid any deed made by a Choctaw Indian after the passage of such act if said deed was made in carrying out a contract for the sale of his restricted lands, entered into before the passage of such act. Johnston v. Burnett, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 489.

Alienation by will.—A will of a Cherokee citizen of the half blood, before his allotment had been selected, was ineffectual to convey said allotment. A member of the Cherokee Tribe of Indians had power to make a will prior to the enactment of this section, but prior to said time he had no right to alienate his allotment by will. Reece v. Bengé, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 493.

Lands purchased with the proceeds of restricted lands are not exempted from taxation by this section nor the provisions of section 4 of the Act of May 27, 1908 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 887), U. S. v. McIntosh County, (E. D. Okla. 1921) 271 Fed. 747.

Taxation.—This act together with section 4 of the Act of May 27, 1908 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 887) providing that all lands from which restrictions have been removed shall be subject to taxation, except that allotted lands shall not be subjected or held liable to any form of personal claim against the allottees arising before the restrictions were removed, did not have the effect of extending the exemption from taxation to inherited allotted tribal lands. U. S. v. McIntosh County, (E. D. Okla. 1921) 271 Fed. 747.

Vol. III, p. 874, sec. 22. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 200.]

Approval by Secretary of Interior.—The power of the Secretary of the Interior under this section, to examine and approve or disapprove conveyances by heirs of a Creek allottee who are full-blood Indians, was not taken away as to conveyances already made by the provisions of the Act of May 27, 1908, § 9, [3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 890] that no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the deceased allottee; and the lapse of two and one-half years between the execution of the conveyance and its approval is not material, there being no lawful intervening disposal. Harris v. Bell, (1920) 254 U. S. 163, 41 S. Ct. 49, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Lands allotted in the right of a deceased enrolled member of the Creek Nation, conformably to the Acts of March 1, 1901, June 30, 1902, and the act of which this section is a part were received by his heirs as an inheritance, and not as a direct allotment to them, and such heirs are therefore not governed by restrictions on alienation applicable to living allottees. Harris v. Bell, (1920) 254 U. S. 163, 41 S. Ct. 49, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Sale by guardian of homestead allotment.—In an action for the recovery of land commenced by W. and S. against B. and B., the evidence disclosed substantially the following facts: The land in controversy consisted of both the homestead and surplus allotments of S., a duly enrolled Chickasaw Indian of less than full blood, who died on or about the 28th day of September, 1905, after receiving her allotment, leaving surviving her H. S., her husband, and W. and S., her infant son and daughter, respectively. After the death of the allottee and the passage of this act, H. S. made a separate conveyance of his curtesy right to H. and thereafter died before the commencement of the action. Some time after the execution of the conveyance by H. S., a guardian was appointed for W. and S. in the United States Court for the Southern District of Indian Territory sitting at Purcell, and thereafter a petition was filed, praying for permission to sell at guardian's sale the interest of S. and W. in said inherited land. Thereafter an order was made, directing the guardian to sell said land at guardian's sale, which was done. Whereupon a guardian's deed was duly executed, conveying the land to H. It was through this guardian's sale to H. that B. and B. deeded their title, and it is conceded that if the interest of the minors in the land passed to H. by virtue of this sale the cause should be reversed; otherwise it should be affirmed. The trial court held that this section provided the only means whereby a minor of any degree of Indian blood might be divested of the title to his inherited lands, and that, inasmuch as the minor heirs did not join in the sale by H. S., the separate sale of the minor heirs was invalid as to both the homestead and surplus allotments.

The appellate court held that this ruling was erroneous in so far as it affected the sale of the homestead allotment. Burtschi v. Wolfe, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 306.

Vol. III, p. 881, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 232.]

Previous acts repealed.—This act is a revising act, and was intended as a substitute for all former acts relating to the subject of such restrictions, and operated to repeal the provisions of Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 137 [3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 861], and previous congressional enactments in conflict therewith on the same subject. Stewart v. Burrows, (1920) 80 Okla. 23, 193 Pac. 881.

Control of Indian lands vested in Congress.—The Enabling Act under which the state of Oklahoma was admitted into the Union provides: "That nothing contained in said Constitution shall be construed to limit or impair the rights of persons or property pertaining to the Indians of said territories (so long as such right shall remain unextinguished) or to limit or affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any law or regulation respecting such Indians, their lands, property or other rights by treaties, agreement, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to make if this act had never been passed."

The constitutional convention by resolution accepting the Enabling Act provided: "That said constitutional convention do, by this ordinance irrevocable, accept the terms and conditions of an act of the Congress of the United States entitled 'An act to enable the people of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory to form a Constitution and state government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original states.'" Under these provisions of the Enabling Act and of the said resolution accepting the terms of same, the right and power to regulate and control the sale of Indian lands in the state of Oklahoma remain vested exclusively with the Congress. Molone v. Wamsley, (1921) 80 Okla. 181, 195 Pac. 484.

Vol. III, p. 883, sec. 2. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 233.]

Death of allottee.—See annotation under sec. 9 of this act, infra, p. 469.

Execution of conveyance.—A conveyance of the family homestead must first comply with the requirements of the state or local law as a matter preliminary to the approval by the federal agency. Chisholm v. Creek, etc., Development Co., (E. D. Okla. 1921) 273 Fed. 589, so holding in the case of the modification, extension or renewal of a lease.

Vol. III, p. 887, sec. 4. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 233.]

Constitutionality.—This section should not be construed so as to bring about a conflict with section 6 of article 10 of the Oklahoma constitution exempting only lands then exempt under existing laws, if as reasonable construction can otherwise be reached. U. S. v. McIntosh County, (E. D. Okla. 1921) 271 Fed. 747.

Inherited lands.—Lands inherited by a half-blood Choctaw Indian minor from a half-blood Choctaw allottee are not "restricted lands" within the purview of the proviso of section 6 of this act and are subject to taxation under and by virtue of this section. Stewart v. Burrows, (1920) 80 Okla. 23, 193 Pac. 881.

On the death of a half-blood allottee and descent of lands to heirs of less than half Indian blood, the lands became subject to taxation prior to their sale through the Oklahoma probate court; the provisions as to minority not changing the matter. Grady County v. Lenochen, (1921) 80 Okla. 169, 195 Pac. 116.

Vol. III, p. 887, sec. 5. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 234.]

Validity of lease made by guardian of Indian minors.—A lease made by a guardian of Creek minors of their inherited lands in July, 1917, for agricultural purposes for the year 1918, and approved by the county court, is not void as an overlapping lease, when it is not disclosed that the land had been leased for 1917, and nothing in the record to disclose that the lease executed in July, 1917, was not executed at the usual and customary time for leasing lands for agricultural purposes in that vicinity for the year 1918. Armstrong v. Phillips, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 499.

Vol. III, p. 887, sec. 6. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 234.]

Conveyance by minor heirs.—Lands inherited from a deceased Indian allottee were not included in or affected by the provision in this section, that no restricted lands of living minors shall be sold or encumbered except by leases authorized by law, by order of the court, or otherwise. Harris v. Bell, (1920) 254 U. S. 103, 41 S. Ct. 49, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Authority of guardian to lease.—This section conferred upon the county courts of this state jurisdiction over the person and property of minor allottees of the five civilized tribes, and the guardian of said minors appointed by the county court, have authority to lease for agricultural purposes the homestead allotment of the mother inherited by said minors, said minors being born since March 4, 1906, and the county court had authority to approve the agricultural lease for one year executed by the guardian. Taylor v. Callahan, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 487.

Liability to taxation.—Lands inherited by a half-blood Choctaw Indian minor from a half-blood Choctaw allottee are not "restricted lands" within the purview of the proviso of this section, and are subject to taxation under and by virtue of section 4 of this act. Stewart v. Burrows, (1920) 80 Okla. 23, 193 Pac. 881.

Vol. III, p. 890, sec. 9. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 235.]

Necessity for approval by Secretary of the Interior.—The authority of the Secretary of the Interior to approve and thereby confirm oil and gas mining leases made by full-blood Creek allottees upon their allotments, derived from section 2 [3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 883], did not cease at the death of the allottee by reason of the provision of this section that "the death of any allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes shall operate to remove all restrictions upon the alienation of said allottee's land: Provided, that no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir in such land shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of said deceased allottee." Such approval might be given at any time, either before or after the death of the allottee, so far as the rights of her heirs and those claiming under them with notice were concerned, and the approval, when given, related back and took effect as of the execution of the lease by the parties named therein. Anchor Oil Co. v. Gray, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 544, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 277, 168 C. C. A. 361.

Approval by the court.—Adult heirs only must be regarded as comprehended by the proviso in this section, that no conveyance of any interest of any full-blood Indian heir shall be valid unless approved by the court having jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of a deceased allottee, in view of the provision of section 6, subjecting the persons and property of minor Indians to the jurisdiction of the Oklahoma probate courts, and hence a guardian's conveyance for minor heirs of a deceased allottee, directed and approved by the court having control of the guardianship, need not also be approved by the court having jurisdiction of the deceased allottee's estate. Harris v. Bell, (1920) 254 U. S. 103, 41 S. Ct. 49, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 209, 162 C. C. A. 345.

Following Supreme Court rules.—The failure of the county court to follow the procedure provided for in former rule 10 of the Supreme Court, in approving conveyance of full-blood Indian heirs, as provided for in this section, does not render said conveyance void for that reason. Haddock v. Johnson, (1920) 80 Okla. 250, 194 Pac. 1077.

Appeal.—The action of a county court of Oklahoma in approving a conveyance of a full-blood Indian heir to lands inherited by such Indian from a member of the tribe, which conveyance was required by this section, to be approved by the county court, is not judicial in its nature, nor the exercise of any judicial function, and an appeal will not lie from an action of the county court in approving or disapproving a conveyance. Haddock v. Johnson, (1920) 80 Okla. 250, 194 Pac. 1077, holding further that certiorari will not lie to review the action of the county court.

State law as governing descent of unrestricted lands.—"Congress, in section 9 of the act of May 27, 1908, supra, recognized that the law of Oklahoma of descent and distribution unqualifiedly governed the devolution of estates of unrestricted Indians, and in plain and unambiguous language expressly says that the lands of allottees of one-half or more Indian blood shall descend under the laws of descent and distribution of the state of Oklahoma. There is no escape from the language of the proviso of section 9 of said act putting in force the laws of Oklahoma and specifically applying the same to the descent and distribution of the estates of allottees of the half-blood, or more; and in said case, supra, the court based its decision upon the proposition that the lands in controversy were restricted lands, and that was the very class of lands that the proviso of section 9 of the act of May 27, 1908, supra, in plain and unmistakable language, provided that the laws of Oklahoma of descent and distribution shall govern the devolution of the same. It is very obvious that the Congress recognized that Indian lands located within the state of Oklahoma from which restrictions had been removed were subject to the operation of the state laws, and by section 4 of said act provided that said lands should be subject to the laws of the state.

"Upon the admission of the state of Oklahoma into the Union the same came into the Union with all the powers and sovereignty of any other state, and upon the removal of restrictions against alienation and the granting of full citizenship to Indians the federal government ceased to have any further power or control over the tribal citizens with respect to unrestricted lands, and all laws passed by Congress prior to statehood, either general or special, ceased with the admission of Oklahoma as a state to have force or effect in so far as unrestricted lands of tribal citizens are concerned, and the Supreme Court of the United States has forever settled the question that Indian lands within a state or territory that has a local form of government are subject to the laws of the state or territory." In re Pigeon, (Okla. 1921) 198 Pac. 309.

Power of state to regulate procedure.—A state legislature has no power to enact a statute that affects the validity of conveyances by full-blood Indian heirs. This right and power being vested exclusively in the Congress, an act of a legislature providing that "all petitions for the approval of deeds to lands inherited by full-blood Indian heirs shall be verified by one or more of the grantors, and shall contain the following information," etc., is directory and not mandatory, and the failure of the approving federal agency to comply with the terms of same, or to require the vendor or vendee in such conveyance to comply with same, does not invalidate such conveyance. Molone v. Wamsley, (1921) 80 Okla. 181, 195 Pac. 484.

County judge federal agent.—This provision constitutes the county court, having jurisdiction of the estate of a deceased Indian allottee, a federal agent, vested with the power to approve conveyances of the interest of full-blood heirs in such inherited lands, and the act of the county court in approving the conveyance of such full-blood Indian is a ministerial and not a judicial act. Molone v. Wamsley, (1921) 80 Okla. 181, 195 Pac. 484.

Cancellation of conveyance by heirs of Creek Indian in suit of United States.—The United States, suing in its own interest to cancel conveyances made by heirs of a Creek Indian, of land allotted to him as a homestead out of the Creek tribal lands, is in no wise concluded by any matter, whether of fact or law, that may have been adjudged in a former suit (to which it was not a party) between the heirs and one claiming under such conveyances. Privett v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 455, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 351.

Vol. III, p. 913, sec. 2139. [First ed., vol. III, p. 382.]

Variance between allegation and proof.—On a prosecution for introducing liquor into that part of the state of Oklahoma that was formerly Indian Territory the fact that the indictment charged that the liquors were introduced into Washington county while the proof showed that they were introduced into Nowata county was held to be immaterial where both counties were in that part of the state that was formerly Indian Territory. Flack v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 680.

Vol. III, p. 919, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. III, p. 384.]

"Indian country."—The term "Indian country," as used in this section, includes any Indian allotment while the title thereto is held in trust by the government. Thus, a public highway is Indian country where the Indians owning allotments adjacent thereto, are also the owners of the land on which the road runs, subject only to the public easement. Townsend v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 519.

1918 Supp., p. 260, sec. 1.

Application of section.—This section applies to an introduction or to an attempt to introduce intoxicants into the part of Oklahoma which was formerly the Indian Territory, and is not limited to an introduction or attempted introduction into the Indian country. Prosser v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 252.

Evidence held insufficient to support a forfeiture under this section. see Townsend v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 519.

1918 Supp., p. 264, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—This section is valid as an exercise of the power of Congress to prescribe and enforce prohibition in Indian country. Brown v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 623.

1918 Supp., p. 267, sec. 1.

Construction.—See McDougal v. Black Panther Oil & Gas Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 276 Fed. 113.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

Vol. III, p. 947, sec. 441. [First ed., vol. III, p. 537.]

Power of secretary final and conclusive.—Where the Secretary of the Interior acts within his jurisdiction the question whether there is error in his ruling is immaterial unless he acted arbitrarily. U. S. v. Lane, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 269 Fed. 202. So where there is more than one reasonable construction open to the Secretary he is free to take the one that appeals most strongly to him, and his action in that regard is not subject to the review of the courts until the matter has passed beyond his administrative sphere. Shanks v. Lane, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 269 Fed. 206. Likewise, a decision that the land is not vacant is within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior and not subject to review by the courts. Payne v. U. S., (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 269 Fed. 198. And certiorari will not lie for the purpose of reviewing an administrative order made by the Secretary of the Interior. Mickadiet v. Payne, (App. Cas. D. C. 1920) 269 Fed. 194.

INTERNAL REVENUE

Vol. III, p. 979, sec. 3142. [First ed., vol. III, p. 558.]

The duties of the Collector of Internal Revenue are purely ministerial and he is vested with no discretion once an assessment is placed in his hand. Accardo v. Fontenot, (E. D. La. 1920) 269 Fed. 447.

Vol. III, p. 993, sec. 12. [First ed., vol. III, p. 562.]

Right to recover taxes paid to deputy.—A collector is not responsible for taxes illegally collected by a deputy who was not authorized to collect them. Hurst v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 174.

Vol. III, p. 1002, sec. 3172. [First ed., vol. III, p. 576.]

The taxes and penalties prescribed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. § 35, p. 216) are not subject to the application of this and the following sections of this chapter. Accardo v. Fontenot, (E. D. La. 1920) 269 Fed. 447.

Vol. III, p. 1006, sec. 3176. [First ed., vol. III, p. 580.]

The 25 per cent. or 50 per cent. added under this section, is a penalty, rather than a tax, and this has been so held even when the principal amount to which the 25 per cent. or 50 per cent. was added was itself clearly a tax. Thome v. Lynch, (D. C. Minn. 1921) 269 Fed. 995.

Vol. III, p. 1028, sec. 3220. [First ed., vol. III, p. 597.]

Interest.—Where the penalty, when repaid, was accepted without any agreement or reservation that its acceptance should not affect the question of the payment of interest or the right to demand the same, the recovery of interest on the penalty repaid must be denied. Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872.

Vol. III, p. 1032, sec. 3224. [First ed., vol. III, p. 600.]

Suits in state courts.—See annotation under Vol. III, p. 1034, sec. 3226, infra, p. 472.

Purpose and application in general.—“This is a statute having in view the orderly and uninterrupted collection of the revenues of the government, which are necessary to meet its current expenses and public obligations. But in order to make this statute applicable, a tax which is to be collected must be lawful; it must be founded upon some proper subject of taxation, must be assessed in a proper way, and collected in a legal manner.” Ledbetter v. Bailey, (W. D. N. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 375.

The reason underlying this section is that the government shall not be delayed or interfered with in the collection of its revenues. Thome v. Lynch, (D. C. Minn. 1921) 269 Fed. 995.

Inhibition of section as including collection of tax.—Unless it appears clear beyond doubt that the property seized or about to be seized is not liable for such assessment, the court will not interfere, since the statute includes the collection of the tax as well as the assessment in its inhibitive mandate. Markle v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 498.

Ownership of property.—Whatever may be the ultimate conclusion as to whether, in proceedings to collect an income and excess profits tax by distraint and sale of real and personal property, the property is owned and the business conducted by a corporation or copartnership, the court will not interfere by injunction where it is evident that the collector is proceeding against a person within his jurisdiction and that the property is held by such person either as a corporation or an individual. Markle v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 498.

Illegal tax.—This section does not prevent the granting of an injunction against the collection of a tax imposed by an unconstitutional act. George v. Bailey, (W. D. N. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 639.

Income and excess profits tax.—This section applies in the case of a suit to restrain the collection of income and excess profits taxes. Markle v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 498.

Taxes and penalties under National Prohibition Act.—The collection of taxes and penalties assessed under section 35 of the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 216), will not be enjoined. Kelly v. Lewellyn, (W. S. Pa. 1921) 274 Fed. 108; Regal Drug Corp. v. Wardell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 182; Kausch v. Moore, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 268 Fed. 668. See also Accardo v. Fontenot, (E. D. La. 1920) 269 Fed. 447, wherein it was held that the taxes and penalties prescribed by the National Prohibition Act were not taxes within the meaning of this section.

But in Connelly v. Gardner, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 272 Fed. 911, it was held that this section did not preclude the granting of an injunction to restrain officers from using the process of distraint to collect the penalties imposed by section 35 of the National Prohibition Act. Connelly v. Gardner, (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 272 Fed. 911.

Tax on manufacturer of distilled spirits.—This section prevents the granting of an injunction to restrain the collection of the tax imposed by R. S. section 3251 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 19) on the manufacturer of distilled spirits, even though such section has been repealed by the National Prohibition Act. Violette v. Walsh, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 272 Fed. 1014.

Vol. III, p. 1034, sec. 3226. [First ed., vol. III, p. 601.]

This section was not repealed by section 14a of the act of September 8, 1916 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 335). Public Service Corp. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 282.

Purpose.—The object of the statute requiring a party to exhaust his remedies in the Internal Revenue Department before he shall bring suit is to give the department an opportunity to decide whether in its judgment the tax is legal or illegal, and thus save the delay and expense of litigation. Loomis v. Wattles, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 876.

Suits in state courts.—To same effect as original annotation, see Application of Willman, (1921) 112 Atl. 806, wherein it was held that a state court had no jurisdiction to pass upon the legality of the assessment of internal revenue taxes or to issue a restraining order relating thereto, because of this section and R. S. sec. 3224 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1932). See also Shirk v. Oak St. Permanent Bldg., etc., Assoc., (1920) 137 Md. 314, 112 Atl. 808.

When suit may be brought.—To same effect as original annotation, see Kahn v. U. S., (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 271.

Appeal as condition precedent.—The appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the repayment of a tax illegally assessed, which is made by this section a condition precedent to a suit for the recovery back of such tax, may not be neglected as being an idle formality, merely because the Commissioner had, before payment of the tax, rejected a claim for its abatement. Rock Island, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 254 U. S. 141, 41 S. Ct. 55, 65 U. S. (L. ed.)—, (affirming (1918) 54 Ct. Cl. 22), wherein the court said: "By Rev. Stat. § 3220, 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. p. 1028, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized 'on appeal to him made, to remit, refund, and pay back' taxes illegally assessed. It is urged that the 'appeal' to him to remit made a second appeal to him to refund an idle act, and satisfied the requirement of § 3226. Decisions to that effect in suits against a collector are cited, the latest being Loomis v. Wattles, — C. C. A. —, 266 Fed. 876. But the words 'on appeal to him made' mean, of course, on appeal in respect of the relief sought on appeal, to refund if refunding is what he is asked to do. The words of § 3226 also must be taken to mean an appeal after payment, especially in view of § 3228, requiring claims of this sort to be presented to the Commissioner within two years after the cause of action accrued. So that the question is of reading an implied exception into the rule as expressed, when substantially the same objection to the assessment has been urged at an earlier stage.

"Men must turn square corners when they deal with the government. If it attaches even purely formal conditions to its consent to be sued, those conditions must be complied with. Lex non præcipit inutilia (Co. Litt. 127b) expresses rather an ideal than an accomplished fact. But in this case we cannot pronounce the second appeal a mere form. On appeal a judge sometimes concurs in a reversal of his decision below. It is possible, as suggested by the Court of Claims, that the second appeal may be heard by a different person. At all events, the words are there in the statute and the regulations, and the court is of opinion that they mark the conditions of the claimant's right. See Kings County Sav. Inst. v. Blair, 116 U. S. 200, 29 L. ed. 657, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353. It is unnecessary to consider other objections that the claimant would have to meet before it could recover upon this claim."

A second appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue after payment of the tax is unnecessary where an appeal was taken before the tax was paid and after the ruling of the Commissioner it was paid under protest. Loomis v. Wattles, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 876.

Liability of collector.—A collector is not responsible for taxes illegally collected by a deputy who had no authority to collect them. Hurst v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 174.

Parties.—Where claims for the refund of inheritance taxes have been filed by the trustees under a will, the executors under the will cannot maintain an action for their recovery. Kahn v. U. S., (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 271.

Presumptions and burden of proof.—In an action to recover taxes paid under protest it has been declared that the assessment made by the commissioner is presumed prima facie to be accurate and proper but that this presumption is not conclusive and is open to being overcome by adequate testimony. In such a situation the burden is held to be on the plaintiff. Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Mayes, (W. D. Ky. 1920) 268 Fed. 629.

In a suit to recover taxes illegally collected the burden of showing payment rests on the plaintiff. Hurst v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 174.

Objections on appeal.—An objection that a demand for a refund of the tax after its payment was not made as required by this section cannot be made for the first time on appeal in a suit for recovery of taxes.

Walker v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 885.

Vol. III, p. 1037, sec. 3227. [First ed., vol. III, p. 602.]

This section was not repealed by section 14a of the Act of September 8, 1916 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 835). Public Service Corp. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 282.

Vol. III, p. 1038, sec. 3229. [First ed., vol. III, p. 604.]

Effect of compromise.—Under this section a compromise once effected, whether before or after prosecution, is as complete a discharge of the defendant as a verdict of acquittal by a jury. Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

Mode of obtaining consent or approval.—“The statute does not expressly state how the consent or approval of these officers is to be obtained. It is evidently contemplated, however, that the advice and consent of the Secretary of the Treasury and the recommendation of the Attorney-General should be sought and obtained by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who himself finally passes upon the matter, and who is the party charged with direct dealing with the defendant, and it is to be presumed that, when he finally accepts an offer of compromise of a defendant, he has previously discharged his duty of communicating with the other officers. To hold otherwise would bring the acts of the officers of the government under inquiry and frequently under a suspicion which ought not to be allowed to arise. It is of the highest importance that citizens, who deal with an officer of the government charged with an official duty, shall have the right to presume, in every instance, in the absence of positive proof to the contrary, that such officer did his duty.” Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

Evidence to show compromise.—Evidence showing that money offered in compromise to the proper officer of the government was accepted and retained by him is competent as tending to show that a compromise was effected. Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

Vol. III, p. 1044, sec. 3242. [First ed., vol. III, p. 608.]

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act [1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 202] as to an offense committed before the act went into effect. Tisch v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 208. It has been held, however, that the provisions of this section relating to carrying on the business of a retail liquor dealer without payment of a special tax were repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. p. 216, sec. 35). Ketchum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 416.

Vol. III, p. 1045, sec. 3244. [First ed., vol. III, p. 613.]

This section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act. Ravitz v. Hamilton, (W. D. Ky. 1921) 272 Fed. 721.

What constitutes rectification — Filtration.—The filtration, preparatory to bottling, of whiskey removed from a bonded warehouse by a wholesale liquor dealer, does not constitute rectification within the meaning of this section. Jones v. Mayes, (W. D. Ky. 1920) 265 Fed. 365.

Vol. III, p. 1053, sec. 16. [First ed., vol. III, p. 609.]

Section repealed.—It has been held that this section is repealed by implication by the provisions of the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 202 et seq.). Farley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 721.

Intent.—Criminal intent is not necessary to constitute a violation of this section. Thus, one who furnishes liquor to another with knowledge that the latter is engaged in retailing liquor without having paid the special tax, becomes an associate and participant with him in the retail business in violation of this section, even though his purpose in furnishing him with the liquor is to entrap for a violation of a state prohibition law. Clendennin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 412. The court said: “The defendant testified that his sole purpose in turning over the six-gallon lot to Nutter was to entrap him and convict him of violating the prohibition law of West Virginia; that to this end he had an understanding with Nutter that he should come to his room at about two o'clock in the morning and get the whisky; that Nutter paid nothing for it; that he did this with the full understanding that Nutter was an illicit retail liquor dealer, and would sell or offer the liquor for sale in violation of the state and federal laws. He testified, further, that he had an arrangement with the owners of certain places where he expected Nutter to sell the whisky that he would be informed when Nutter appeared to sell it, so that he could have him arrested under a warrant charging violation of the West Virginia statute. It does not appear from his testimony that he made any explanation to Nutter of his reasons for giving him the whisky. It is evident that, if the jury believed Nutter's testimony that he had not only bought six gallons of whisky on this occasion from the defendant, but on other occasions in the same summer had bought as small quantities as a case or two, they would necessarily infer that defendant was guilty of retailing. On the other hand, if the jury rejected the entire testimony offered on the part of the government, and accepted the testimony on the part of the defendant, they would necessarily infer that the defendant was guilty of participating in the business of a retail liquor dealer without a license. If he delivered to Nutter six gallons of whisky, knowing, as he says he did, that Nutter was engaged in retailing liquor without having paid the special tax, with the expectation and design, which he said he had, that Nutter was to use it in the prosecution of that business, he became an associate and participant with Nutter in the retail business, in violation of the federal law. Criminal intent was not necessary. United States v. Barnhardt, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,526; United States v. Rectifying Establishment, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,131; State v. Downs, 116 N. C. 1064, 21 S. E. 689. Co-operation with Nutter made the defendant equally guilty with him. Wortham v. State, 80 Miss. 205, 32 So. 50. He could not escape the penalty of the federal law on the ground that his intention in the transaction was to promote the enforcement of the state laws. Even if he had acted under express official authority from the state of West Virginia, he could not deal in liquor, directly or indirectly, either alone or in conjunction with Nutter, without paying the special tax required by the federal statute. So it was expressly decided in South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. 110, 50 L. ed. 281, 4 Ann. Cas. 737. We know of no principle of the law of entrapment, and we can find no authority, which sustains the position that the judicial power extends to granting immunity to a state police officer who, without the sanction of federal authority, sells liquor to a dealer or participates in the dealer's business, for the purpose of convicting him of violating a state law. Such an unlawful practice would be productive of great abuse, and add to the difficulties of enforcing the federal revenue law."

Who are "dealers."—One or two sales of liquor are not sufficient to convict of carrying on the business of a retail liquor dealer without having paid the special tax when made by one having none of the appliances or surroundings of retail liquor dealers, to an intimate acquaintance or friend out of the seller's private stock not held for or offered to purchasers who should apply for it. McNutt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 670. And one who carries on the business of selling other liquors than distilled spirits, wines or malt liquors, is not a retail liquor dealer within the terms of the statute. McNutt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 670.

Vol. III, p. 1068. [Brokers.] [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 86.]

Sufficiency of affidavit of defense.—In Self v. Pennsylvania Steel Export Co., (Pa.

1921) 113 Atl. 412, the plaintiffs sued to recover brokerage commissions alleged to be due them for selling certain goods for the defendants. The affidavit of defense denied liability on the ground, among others, that the plaintiffs had failed to pay the tax imposed upon brokers by subdivision 4 of this section, and was held sufficient on a rule for judgment for insufficiency.

Vol. IV, p. 19, sec. 3251. [First ed., vol. III, p. 631.]

Section not repealed by National Prohibition Act.—This section "imposes a tax on the manufacturer of distilled spirits, regardless of their purpose. To manufacture such spirits is yet lawful. The tax, not being inconsistent with the act (the National Prohibition Act) is law today, which by virtue of section 35 (of the National Prohibition Act) it is the duty of defendant (collector of internal revenue) to execute. The tax is on the mere manufacture, which the law does not forbid. That the manufacture is in violation of regulations and for beverage purposes, which the law does forbid, does not avoid the tax.

"The tax is on a lawful occupation, and is none the less legal because the occupation is pursued by unlawful means to unlawful ends. A defendant will not be heard to say he was manufacturing for beverage purposes. It is no defense to one crime that defendant intended or committed another. As well might an auto owner resist his license tax because he devoted his car exclusively to unlawful whisky running. A defendant cannot plead his own wrong to excuse another charged. That plaintiff is indicted for illicit manufacture and may be acquitted is not material. The indictment does not absolve defendant of his duty to collect (see Harding v. Woodcock, 137 U. S. 47, 11 Sup. Ct. 6, 34 L. ed. 580), and an acquittal would not relieve plaintiff of his obligation to pay; for the taxes are not penalties, fines, or forfeitures, in the sense understood in criminal law." Violette v. Walsh, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 272 Fed. 1014.

Vol. IV, p. 23, sec. 3257. [First ed., vol. III, p. 634.]

Section repealed.—This section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act of October 28, 1919, (Fed. Stat. Ann. 1919 Supp. 197). U. S. v. Yuginovich, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 561, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Ketchum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 416.

Vol. IV, p. 24, sec. 3258. [First ed., vol. III, p. 635.]

Section repealed.—The decisions are in conflict as to whether this section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Fed. Stat. Ann. 202). Some of the courts hold that it was repealed. Sanford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 369; Ketchum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 416; U. S. v. Stafoff, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 268 Fed. 417. Others that it was not repealed. U. S. v. Phillips, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 281; U. S. v. De Large, (D. C. Neb. 1921) 269 Fed. 820; U. S. v. Sacein Rouhana Farhat, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 269 Fed. 33. See also Ex p. Lawrence, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 273 Fed. 876, distinguishing the Yuginovich Case, 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 U. S. (L. ed.), wherein it was held that this section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act in so far as the offense did not involve distillation for beverage purposes.

Forfeiture of money or checks.—Where money or a check is found in such relation to contraband articles and apparatus that a clear inference can be made to justify the conclusion that it is the proceeds of the illegal enterprise and used in the operation and carrying on of such business, the right to forfeit such property is clearly contemplated. U. S. v. One Machine, etc., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 267 Fed. 501.

Vol. IV, p. 26, sec. 3260. [First ed., vol. III, p. 638.]

Section repealed.—This section is not inconsistent with the provisions of the National Prohibition Act and is therefore not repealed by that Act. U. S. v. Sacein Rouhana Farhat, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 269 Fed. 33. But it has been held that this section is repealed by the National Prohibition Act. (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. p. 216, sec. 35.) Ketchum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 416.

Vol. IV, p. 40, sec. 3279.

Section repealed.—This section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 202). U. S. v. Yuginovich, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Sanford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 369. And it has been held that the provision in this section relating to persons working in or carrying distilled spirits from, and raw materials to, a distillery are repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 216, sec. 35). Ketchum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 416.

Vol. IV, p. 41, sec. 3281. [First ed., vol. III, p. 651.]

Section repealed.—There is conflict as to whether this section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 202). Some of the courts express the opinion that it was repealed. U. S. v. Yuginovich, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Sanford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 369. Others hold that it was not repealed. U. S. v. Phillips, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 281; Ex p. Lawrence, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 273 Fed. 876, distinguishing the Yuginovich case, 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the latter case holding that this section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act in so far as the offense did not involve distillation for beverage purposes.

Possession of illicit still as creating presumption of guilt.—In a prosecution for a violation of R. S. secs. 3258, 3279 and this section, the possession of an illicit still by the defendants creates a prima facie presumption of their guilt. Such presumption, however, may be rebutted, either by circumstances, or by the direct testimony of the parties charged, or of others. Whether such presumption is, on consideration of all the testimony, sufficient to convict the defendants beyond a reasonable doubt, is a question for the jury. Barton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 174.

Forfeiture of money or checks.—Where money or a check is found in such relation to contraband articles and apparatus that a clear inference can be made to justify the conclusion that it is the proceeds of the illegal enterprise and used in the operation and carrying on of such business, the right to forfeit such property is clearly contemplated. U. S. v. One Machine, etc., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 267 Fed. 501.

Enforcing forfeiture after conviction.—It is held that a proceeding to enforce a forfeiture of the property seized may be maintained although the person against whom it is sought to enforce it has been convicted under an indictment involving the same acts. U. S. v. One Machine, etc., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 267 Fed. 501, wherein the court said:

"It is now contended in the argument presented that the defendant, having been convicted under an indictment involving the very same acts and evidence involved herein, that the court is without authority to condemn or forfeit the property involved, and that it would be invoking a double penalty, or punishing the defendant twice for the same offense, and that the property sought to be condemned is not included within the scope of the statute. As to the double penalty, suffice it to say that this is a proceeding in rem, and is comprehended within the penalty fixed by statute."

Vol. IV, p. 44, sec. 3282. [First ed., vol. III, p. 654.]

Section repealed.—The courts differ as to whether this section was repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 202, 1919 Supp. 197). Thus, in U. S. v. Yuginovich, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 551, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; U. S. v. Stafoff, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 268 Fed. 417, it was held that it was repealed, while in U. S. v. De Large, (D. C. Neb. 1921) 269 Fed. 820; U. S. v. Phillips, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 270 Fed. 281, and Ex p. Lawrence, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 273 Fed. 876 (distinguishing U. S. v. Yuginovich, supra), it was held that it was not repealed.

An acquittal on counts charging a violation of sections 3281 and 3259 of the Revised Statutes, relating to the business of a distiller, is not in effect an acquittal under a count charging a violation of the provision of this section that "no mash, wort, or wash, fit for distillation or for the production of spirits or alcohol, shall be made or fermented in any building or on any premises other than a distillery duly authorized according to law." Doan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 982.

Vol. IV, p. 51, sec. 3293. [First ed., vol. III, p. 659.]

Stolen whisky.—Where whisky, which was in a bonded warehouse at the time the Eighteenth Amendment took effect and in the exclusive control, custody and care of the United States, is stolen the owner is not subject to the payment of the tax thereon. Kentucky Distilleries, etc., Co. v. Hamilton, (W. D. Ky. 1921) 274 Fed. 209. The court said:

"The Eighteenth Amendment was of course a radical change in respect to distilled spirits, which had been previously made lawfully and properly. No compensation was offered by the people for the property, the value of which was thus probably largely destroyed, unless in course of time the spirits could be sold under the law. Meantime, however, as we have seen, the United States altogether controlled the custody thereof.

"This situation presents in bald form the question whether the plaintiff shall be held responsible for the acts of the criminals who took the spirits from the custody of the government officials, when the owner could not control the situation, nor prevent the criminal acts, and in fact had no opportunity to do so. To exact taxes under such circumstances would seem to be unjust and oppressive, and until the question is settled by final authority we are not willing to say that the government can exact taxation under such conditions, especially as the property can never be restored to the owner—a situation in which the plaintiff without fault on its part would lose both property and the taxes paid.

"In our opinion the government is not under present conditions entitled to the taxes on spirits in warehouses until, in some way, they are removed therefrom by the owner. The taxation would then be due whether the owner removed them lawfully or unlawfully. The rights of the owner cannot justly be interfered with by the wrongful acts of others, of which he knew nothing, which he could not control, and which the government ought to have prevented, if it claims taxation."

Repeal of section by National Prohibition Act.—This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 202 et seq.). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188; U. S. v. Turner, (W. D. Va. 1920) 266 Fed. 248. But in Reed v. Thurmond, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 252, the court said regarding the effect of the National Prohibition Act on this section:

"It goes without saying that this amendment and the act passed by its authority effected a radical change in the legislative policy and attitude of the country respecting alcoholic beverages. Instead of encouraging, or at least recognizing as legitimate, the production and use of such beverages, and deriving a very large revenue therefrom, the manufacture and sale of any sort of beverage containing one-half of 1 per centum of alcohol or more is now wholly and strictly forbidden. This being so, it would seem necessarily to follow, under the most familiar rules of statutory construction, that if the Volstead Act is inconsistent with the provisions of section 3296 and also covers the same subject-matter, it supercedes and by implication repeals that section. And to our minds the Volstead Act, in its entire scope and purpose, is plainly inconsistent with the scheme of revenue protection embodied in the Revised Statutes and in the section under review." Reed v. Thurmond, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 252.

Application.—This section and section 6 of the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 207) may in some cases apply both to the same transaction. "There is no constitutional objection to making one act or one transaction a violation of two statutes, although both emanate from the same sovereignty, if each offense embraces an element not embraced in the other." U. S. v. Turner, (W. D. Va. 1920) 266 Fed. 248.

No permit authorized to be given under the National Prohibition Act justifies the removal of distilled spirits from a government warehouse without paying the tax imposed on such liquor—the crime denounced by this section. U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

Evidence.—In a prosecution under this section an element of the offense is that the liquor was untaxed which must be proved by the government. U. S. v. Turner, (W. D. Va. 1920) 266 Fed. 248.

Vol. IV, p. 71, sec. 3318. [First ed., vol. III, p. 685.]

Seizure of books and papers.—It has been held that when the books required under this section are not kept or are kept insufficiently, all documents showing transactions which should be so recorded may be seized on search warrant under the pertinent provisions of the Espionage Act. U. S. v. Kraus, (S. D. N. Y.) 1921) 270 Fed. 578.

Vol. IV, p. 107, sec. 51. [First ed., vol. III, p. 663.]

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 202). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

Vol. IV, p. 110, sec. 59. [First ed., vol. III, p. 666.]

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 202). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

No permit under the National Prohibition Act would justify the removal of liquors from a warehouse in the absence of the storekeeper. U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

Removal from warehouse and transportation distinguished.—"Failure to pay the tax on the liquor before removing it from the bonded warehouse, or to remove it during the absence of the storekeeper or without his knowledge, which are denounced by the earlier act, are a different class of offenses from those of transporting liquor without a permit, or without complying with the other requirements of the Enforcement Act, relative to transportation. And a conviction or acquittal on any or all of one class would not exempt the defendant from prosecution or conviction on any or all of the other class." U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

Vol. IV, p. 173, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 71.]

Consolidation of indictments.—An indictment charging the manufacture of smoking opium in violation of this section may be properly consolidated and tried with an indictment charging the concealment of smoking opium in violation of section 2 of the Act of Feb. 9, 1909, as amended by the Act of Jan. 17, 1914 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 725). Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

Evidence held to show manufacture of smoking opium, see Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

Vol. IV, p. 176, sec. 5. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 72.]

Fines.—There cannot be an imposition of two fines for violating the same section in two different ways. Toy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 326.

Vol. IV, p. 177, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 101.]

Constitutionality.—This act is constitutional. Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 U. S. 544.

Validity of state law on same subject.—There is no such conflict between this act and Minn. Laws 1915, chap. 260, regulating traffic in habit-forming narcotic drugs, as invalidates the state statute, although the prohibitory measures of the Federal statute do not apply to the disposition and dispensation of drugs by physicians registered under the act, in the regular course of professional practice, provided records are kept for official inspection, while, under the state law, physicians can only furnish prescriptions to addicts, and may not dispense the drugs to such persons at pleasure from stocks of their own. Minnesota v. Martinson, (1921) 256 U. S. 41, 41 S. Ct. 425, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 144 Minn. 206, 174 N. W. 823.

Purpose of section.—It has been held no error to instruct the jury regarding this section: "Now, the purposes of the act of Congress are, first, to obtain a license tax for the government as a part of its revenue; incidentally, its purpose is to prevent sales being made to those who are opium addicts, or administering to opium addicts." Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

U. S. Supreme Court decisions as controlling.—Where the United States Supreme Court has determined the meaning of this act conflicting rulings by the Treasury Department are to be disregarded. Rothman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 31.

Vol. IV, p. 178, sec. 2. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 102.]

What constitutes violation.—An offense against the United States by violation of this section arises where it appears that for a consideration the defendant issued an order or "prescription" for opium, not in the regular course of his professional practice, but to an "addict," for a prohibited use, and that thereupon, as was intended, the addict presented the prescription to and had it filled by a dealer, who had no reason to believe that it had been wrongfully issued. U. S. v. Keidanz, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 586, the court said:

"The act makes it unlawful for any one to 'sell, barter, exchange or give away' opium, except in a case, among others, where it is dispensed or prescribed by a physician 'in the course of his professional practice only,' and admittedly, under the construction recently placed upon these provisions by the Supreme Court in Jin Fuey Moy, (No. 44, December 6, 1920) 254 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 98, 65 L. Ed. —, the physician as well as the dealer may be convicted, where both have the requisite criminal intent."

Necessity of proof that United States was defrauded.—In order to sustain a conviction under this section it is not necessary to show that the government has been defrauded. Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Issuance of prescription by physicians—

In general.—A physician may be found guilty of participating as a principal in the prohibited sale of an opium derivative belonging to another person, where he unlawfully issued a prescription therefor to the would-be purchaser, in view of the provision of this section, making it unlawful for any person to sell, barter, exchange, or give away any such drug except in pursuance of a written order, on a form to be issued in blank for that purpose, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with exceptions in favor of registered physicians dispensing or distributing any such drug to patients in the course of their professional practice only, and of the sale, dispensing, or distribution of the drugs by a dealer upon prescriptions issued by registered physicians. Jim Fuey Moy v. U. S., (1920) 254 U. S. 189, 41 S. Ct. 98, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (W. D. Pa. 1918) 253 Fed. 213) wherein the court said: "It is objected that the act of selling or giving away a drug and the act of issuing a prescription are so essentially different that to allege that defendant sold the drug by issuing a prescription for it amounts to a contradiction of terms, and the repugnance renders the indictment fatally defective. The government suggests that the clause as to issuing the prescription may be rejected as surplusage; but we are inclined to think it enters so intimately into the description of the offense intended to be charged that it cannot be eliminated, and that unless defendant could 'sell' in a criminal sense, by issuing a prescription, the indictment is bad. If 'selling' must be confined to a parting with one's own property, there might be difficulty. But by § 332 of the Criminal Code, 7 Fed. Stat. Anno. 2d ed. p. 984, 'whoever directly commits any act constituting an offense defined in any law of the United States, or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures its commission, is a principal.' Taking this together with the clauses quoted from § 2 of the Anti-narcotic Act, it is easy to see, and the evidence in this case demonstrates, that one may take a principal part in a prohibited sale of an opium derivative belonging to another person by unlawfully issuing a prescription to the would-be purchaser. Hence there is no necessary repugnance between prescribing and selling, and the indictment must be sustained. . . . In each case where defendant was found guilty the evidence fully warranted the jury in finding that he aided, abetted, and procured a sale of morphine sulphate without written order upon a blank form issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and that he did this by means of prescription issued not to a patient, and not in the course of his professional practice, contrary to the prohibition of § 2 of the act. Manifestly, the phrases 'to a patient' and 'in the course of his professional practice only' are intended to confine the immunity of a registered physician, in dispensing the narcotic drugs mentioned in the act, strictly within the appropriate bounds of a physician's professional practice, and not to extend it to include a sale to a dealer, or a distribution intended to cater to the appetite or satisfy the craving of one addicted to the use of the drug. A 'prescription' issued for either of the latter purposes protects neither the physician who issues it, nor the dealer who knowingly accepts and fills it. Webb v. United States, 249 U. S. 96, 63 L. ed. 497, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217."

Good faith of physician in prescribing.—

When a physician is charged with unlawfully selling or prescribing drugs under the Harrison Act, the case turns largely upon his good faith in prescribing drugs to his regular patients, for maladies requiring the administration of the drug, or whether he prescribed for persons seeking his professional aid merely to procure the drug. Barbot v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 919.

Necessity of taking written order.—Under this act a registered physician is not required to take a written order, or to keep a record of morphine administered by him to a patient as an element of a good-faith medical treatment; but, although registered and taxed as a physician, and only as a physician, he cannot lawfully sell, bargain, or give away morphine without at least taking a written order therefor. Loewenthal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 563.

Aiding and abetting by physician.—A physician who issues a prescription which is illegal under the act because not issued in the attempted cure of the habit, knowing it is to be filled by a druggist who knows of its illegality, aids and abets the druggist in violating the act and in so doing commits the substantive crime. Harris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 785.

Entrapment of defendant.—In Butts v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 35, the court in reversing a judgment of conviction for selling morphine on the ground that defendant was entrapped into committing the offense, said:

"When the entire evidence in this record is considered, it conclusively proved (1) that the defendant was not and never had been engaged in dealing in morphine, and that he never sold any of it to any one before the transaction here in issue; and (2) that the conception of and the intention to do the acts which the defendant did in this matter did not originate in his mind or with him, but were the products of the fertile brains of the officers of the government, which they instilled into the mind of the defendant, and by deceitful representations and importunities lured him to put into effect.

"It is not denied that in cases where the criminal intent originates in the mind of the defendant, the fact that the officers of the government used decoys or truthful statements to furnish opportunity for or to aid the accused in the commission of a crime, in order successfully to prosecute him therefor, constitutes no defense to such a prosecution. Price v. United States, 165 U. S. 311, 315, 17 Sup. Ct. 366, 41 L. ed. 727; Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 610, 15 Sup. Ct. 470, 39 L. ed. 550; Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 669, 16 Sup. Ct. 136, 40 L. Ed. 297; Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 423, 16 Sup. Ct. 798, 40 L. Ed. 1023; Fiunkin v. United States, (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 1. But when the accused has never committed such an offense as that charged against him prior to the time when he is charged with the offense prosecuted, and never conceived any intention of committing the offense prosecuted, or any such offense, and had not the means to do so, the fact that the officers of the government incited and by persuasion and representation lured him to commit the offense charged, in order to entrap, arrest, and prosecute him therefor, is and ought to be fatal to the prosecution, and to entitle the accused to a verdict of not guilty. Peterson v. United States, 256 Fed. 433, 166 C. C. A. 509; United States v. Echols, (D. C.) 253 Fed. 862; Sam Yick v. United States, 240 Fed. 60, 65, 67, 153 C. C. A. 96; Voves v. United States, 249 Fed. 191, 192, 161 C. C. A. 227; People v. McCord, 76 Mich. 200, 42 N. W. 1106, 1108; Woo Wai et al. v. United States, 223 Fed. 412, 414, 137 C. C. A. 604. There was ample, if not conclusive, evidence in this case to sustain a finding of the jury that this case fell under the latter rule. The defendant had never committed any such offense as the officers of the government arrested and prosecuted him for prior to the time when they induced him to do the acts disclosed by this testimony. There is no evidence that he had ever contemplated, much less intended to sell any morphine. He had never done so—he had none to sell. The officers, through their agent, Rudolph, incited, lured, and persuaded him by false representations to go to a third person and get the morphine for his acquaintance, the officer's agent, and to consent either to sell it or to act as the agent of the party from whom he received it in the sale the officers betrayed him into.

"The first duties of the officers of the law are to prevent, not to punish crime. It is not their duty to incite to and create crime for the sole purpose of prosecuting and punishing it. Here the evidence strongly tends to prove, if it does not conclusively do so, that their first and chief endeavor was to cause, to create, crime in order to punish it, and it is unconscionable, contrary to public policy, and to the established law of the land to punish a man for the commission of an offense of the like of which he had never been guilty, either in thought or in deed, and evidently never would have been guilty of if the officers of the law had not inspired, incited, persuaded, and lured him to attempt to commit it. It was fatal error to refuse to instruct the jury as requested, and it is unnecessary to discuss the other alleged errors at the trial, because, if they existed, they will probably not be committed again."

In Fiunkin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 1, it was contended that government officers had caused the defendant to violate the provisions of this Act by sending a drug addict to his store to purchase morphine and cocaine. Answering this contention, the court said: "It is argued that the defendant was induced, through the machinations and instigation of the government officers, to commit the offense, or, in other words, that he was entrapped by such contrivance of the officers to do the thing which the law condemns. The evidence fails to show, however, that such was the case. The officers had nothing to do with the defendant's having the drugs in his possession. They had nothing to do with his willingness to sell the same for a consideration. They had nothing whatever to do with the conditions that prevailed prior to the time they sent the addict to the store to make the purchase, nor with the defendant's state of mind or purpose of action, should opportunity present itself, of dealing with the drug as a commodity for sale to those who were willing to buy. Nor did they offer any inducement to the defendant to sell, except that they did, through Collins, offer to buy, and proffered the amount of money that defendant fixed as the price he was willing to take. Nothing beyond this appears in the testimony. It is true that the defendant was entrapped by what was done to sell the drug to the government officers, and to put himself in a position of yielding up evidence of his commission of the offense. But this does not signify that the government officers lured him, or incited or induced him, to do what he would otherwise have done, if any other addict had applied to him to purchase the drug."

Indictment—Sufficiency.—An indictment charging the offense substantially in the language of the statute is sufficient. Di Preta v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 73. The indictment need not negative the exception of the statute in favor of physicians. Di Preta v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 73.

An indictment for the unlawful sale of morphine which, in addition to the other usual allegations, charges that the accused at various times between certain specified dates, sold, bartered, and gave away morphine to divers persons, both the exact quantities and the names of the recipients being, as the indictment alleged, to the grand jurors unknown, is sufficient as against demurrer and a motion to quash, on the ground that it failed to state the times and places at which or the persons to whom the drug was furnished. Gregory v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 119.

Charging accessory with acts of principal.—The acts of the principal become the acts of the accessory or aider, and such accessory may be charged as having done the act himself, and be indicted and punished accordingly. Di Preta v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 73.

Duplicity.—Counts in an indictment under this section are not duplicitous because they leave it uncertain whether defendant, a physician, is being charged with being a dealer generally or with making a single sale only without registering, as in either case the offense is the same. Loewenthal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 563.

Examination of talesmen.—In a prosecution under this section the refusal of the court to permit defendant's counsel to ascertain whether or not any of the jurors had preconceived ideas as to the treatment of drug addicts, is not error. Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Evidence—Other offenses.—On a prosecution under this act for making unlawful sales evidence is not confined to proof of the particular sales alleged, the principle applying that if intent or motive be one of the elements of the crime charged evidence of other like conduct by the defendant at as near the time charged is admissible. Harris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 785.

Evidence showing the issuance of prescriptions to numerous other persons than those named in the indictment is admissible. Dysart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 77. The court said:

"Over objection, evidence was admitted to the effect that plaintiff in error had issued prescriptions to a large number of persons other than those described in the indictment. In his charge to the jury, the court limited the effect of such evidence to the intent with which the prescriptions for persons named in the indictment were issued, and distinctly charged the jury that conviction could not be based upon prescriptions for persons not so named. As so limited and explained, the evidence was admissible. It threw light upon the intent of plaintiff in error in respect to the vital question in the case of whether he was lawfully dispensing drugs in the course of his practice, or was using his profession of physician as a cloak to cover up a violation of the law."

Amount of drugs purchased by defendant.—Evidence as to the amount of drugs purchased by the defendant, a physician, is admissible where the question is involved whether the defendant was practicing his profession in good faith in an attempt to cure the addicts to whom defendant dispensed the drugs, or whether he was engaged in handling the prohibited drugs as merchandise. In determining that question the jury is entitled to have before it information as to the quantity of the drugs purchased. Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Compliance with state law as to registration of addicts.—In a case where it was argued that the court committed an error in not permitting counsel for defendant to bring out facts and the law in relation to the registration under the New York state law of certain of the addicts named in the indictment, and as to the possession by those addicts of state registration cards permitting them to obtain certain quantities of narcotics, and it was contended that the defendant should have been permitted to show that he dispensed the drugs only to persons holding such cards it was said: "We do not see that it was at all material whether the addicts had or had not complied with the state law, or whether the defendant had refused to treat any addicts who had not obtained such cards. The defendant was not being tried for any offense against the New York state law, but for the violation of a federal act." Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Requiring production of record of sales.—Where a defendant who is accused of selling drugs in violation of this act sets up in defense that the sale was made in connection with a treatment for the cure of persons addicted to the drug habit it is proper to require him on cross-examination to exhibit the record of his disposition of narcotics. The court said: "This was the record required by law to be kept. Whatever the weight of this testimony, its competency is clear on the issues both of good faith and of the character of business conducted by Sims." Sims v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 234.

Sufficiency.—Evidence was held sufficient to sustain conviction of a physician in Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Variance.—There is not a fatal variance where the indictment charges a physician with making unlawful sales of morphine sulphate and the evidence shows the issuance of prescriptions and not the sale. Dysart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 77.

Question for jury.—"It may be true that a physician's method of treatment of drug addiction is a question to be determined by the physician himself, and not by a jury; but it can only be true so long as the physician is pursuing his method in his honest endeavor to effect a cure. If that is not his purpose, and he is dispensing the drug to keep the addict comfortable, he is violating the law, and whether he is doing the one thing or the other is a question the jury must decide." Hoyt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 792.

Effect of acquittal—On one count.—An acquittal of a physician on a charge of purchasing drugs for the purposes of sale as a dealer is not an acquittal on a charge of later selling some of the drugs without the use of the order form or without registering. Loewenthal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 563.

On conspiracy charge.—An acquittal on the charge of a conspiracy to violate this act does not prevent a conviction for committing the substantive offense. Harris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 785.

Judgment on conviction on several counts.—Where a judgment on conviction is unitary, and covers conviction under each and all of the several counts, and the punishment imposed was less than might have been imposed under any one of the counts, the judgment is not subject to reversal, if any of the counts on which conviction was had is good and sufficient to support the judgment. Loewenthal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 563.

Objections on appeal.—Where officers were permitted to testify as to what drugs were found on the defendant's premises, in a prosecution under this act, an objection on appeal to the admission of such testimony on the ground that the search was unlawful comes too late to affect the admissibility of the testimony when not made at the trial. Sims v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 234.

Vol. IV, p. 183, sec. 6. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 106.]

Basis of exception.—The exception provided for in this section was based on humanitarian grounds. Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

Vol. IV, p. 187, sec. 8. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 106.]

The second proviso in this section applies to all the exceptions in the act and not merely to those found in this section. Rothman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 31.

Possession of prohibited drugs as violation.—This section makes the possession or control of the prohibited drugs not only presumptive evidence of a violation of its provisions, but also a violation of section 1 of the Act. Fiunkin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 1.

Indictment—Averments negating exceptions.—To the same effect as the annotation in 1919 Supplement, see Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

The words "any of the aforesaid drugs" do not permit a count to be based on each drug found in the possession of the defendant at the same time and place and a separate conviction cannot be had on each count. Braden v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 441.

Burden of proof.—Where, in a prosecution under this Act, the evidence discloses possession by the defendant of the prohibited drugs, the burden is cast upon him to show that he has paid the tax. Fiunkin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 1.

The burden of proving an exemption contained in section 6 of this Act (4 Fed. Stat. 1269) is upon the defendant. Oliver v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 544.

Evidence—Sale or dealing in prohibited drugs.—It being necessary to show that defendant was one of the classes of persons required to register under section one of this act, evidence is admissible to show that he sold or dealt in the prohibited drugs although he is charged with having them in his possession. Braden v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 441.

Proof of overt acts in case of conspiracy.—If a conspiracy is proved to have existed between the defendants, it is not necessary to prove that all of the defendants did the overt acts which they are alleged to have done. All that is necessary is that one or more of such parties did an act to effect the object of the conspiracy. Rothman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 270 Fed. 31, holding that an acquittal as to one of the substantive offenses will not prevent a conviction for conspiracy.

Vol. IV, p. 228, sec. 8. [First ed., vol. III, p. 784.]

Under the Act of June 13, 1898, ch. 448, sec. 29—Recovery back of tax.—"Taxes paid upon certain legacies conformably to a return made by executors in accordance with the War Revenue Act of June 13, 1898, and the regulations of the Internal Revenue Department, may not be recovered back for want of a formal assessment made before the repeal of such act by the Act of April 12, 1902, since such tax must be deemed to have been "imposed" within the meaning of the saving clause in the repealing act, preserving all taxes imposed prior to the taking effect of such act, there being no basis for the claim that the amount of the tax was uncertain, except the possibility that, the estate not having been settled, the legacies might be called upon to pay debts. Cochran v. U. S., (1921) 264 U. S. 387, 41 Sup. Ct. 166, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 54 Ct. Cl. 219.

Laches.—Where suit is brought on December 31, 1919, under this section for the refund of inheritance taxes assessed and collected on June 18, 1902, under the Act of June 13, 1898, ch. 448, sec. 29 [4 Fed. Stat.

Ann. (2d ed.) 230], and application has been made to the Treasury Department February 18, 1916, and rejected April 19, 1916, the plaintiff is barred by laches and cannot recover. Clowes v. U. S., (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 446, wherein it was said: "If the plaintiff's theory be correct, there would be absolutely no limit to the time within which claims for the refunding of taxes under the Act of June 27, 1902, might be presented. In this particular case it appears that the claim was not presented for about fourteen years after the passage of that Act. If no specific statute is to be invoked as limiting the time within which such claim must be presented, if the Act of July 27, 1912, has no application thereto and the right rests solely upon the Act of June 27, 1902, it seems to us that under that act it must be held that claims must be presented within a reasonable time, and the period of two years provided by section 3228, Revised Statutes, might even, by analogy, be regarded as reasonable, and that one who allows a claim of that sort to rest for a period of fourteen years has been guilty of laches such as should bar a recovery. If a claim of this nature may lie dormant fourteen years, it may lie dormant an indefinite time, and we cannot conceive that such a rule may properly be invoked."

Vol. IV, p. 236, sec. 1.

Laches.—Where a banking company files its application for refund on October 6, 1913, under this section and the application is rejected by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on April 13, 1917, and suit is brought July 25, 1918, the plaintiff is barred by laches and cannot recover. Union Trust Co. v. U. S., (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 424.

Vol. IV, p. 239, par. B. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 186.]

Dividends.—To same effect as first paragraph in 1918 Supplement annotation, see Stoffregen v. Moore, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 232.

Losses "incurred in trade" have been construed as meaning in the actual business of the taxpayer as distinguished from isolated transactions. Thus, losses incurred in isolated transactions on an exchange and in no way connected with the regular business of the taxpayer are not to be deducted from his gross income as "losses incurred in trade." Mente v. Eisner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 161, 11 A. L. R. 496. The court further said in this connection: "There is an inconsistency in making profits derived from such transactions a part of the taxpayer's gross income and, on the other hand, allowing him no deduction for losses; but tax laws are not required to be perfect, or even consistent. It must be determined from the facts in each case whether or not the losses claimed to be deducted have been incurred in a business."

State transfer tax.—In determining the amount of net income under the provisions of this paragraph, no deduction should be made for transfer taxes paid to a state upon an inheritance vesting within the year. Prentiss v. Eisner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 16, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 589.

Vol. IV, p. 246, par. G. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 161.]

"Net income."—The term "net income" as used in this paragraph means what has actually been received, and not that which, although due, has not been received, but is payment for some reason deferred or postponed. Such income cannot be enlarged by regulations of the Treasury Department. U. S. v. Christine Oil, etc., Co., (W. D. La. 1920) 269 Fed. 458, wherein it was said: "The authority of the Treasury Department to make reasonable regulations for the execution of the law would not confer on that department the power to add to the income, subject to the tax, as defined by the law."

Deferred payments.—Where property has been sold although it appears that there was a profit on the transaction, deferred payments under the contract of sale which are not represented by notes or secured in any way are not income which is subject to taxation. U. S. v. Christine Oil, etc., Co., (W. D. La. 1920) 269 Fed. 458.

Dividends.—The fact that the stock of a bankrupt corporation was owned by several manufacturers of moving picture films each of whom was under contract to lease its films to the bankrupt at a certain sum per foot plus an extra charge which was to come out of the net profits of the bankrupt after deducting a dividend on the preferred and common stock, does not render such payment a dividend instead of a payment of rent for the films leased. In re General Film Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 903. The court said:

"The common stock of the bankrupt was $100,000 in 10,000 shares of $10 each, and each of the ten manufacturers originally owned 1,000 shares. The government contends that this fact, together with the fact that the extra footage charge was to come out of the net profits after deducting 7 per cent dividend on the preferred and 12 per cent on the common stock, shows that the payment is really a declaration of a dividend to the manufacturers and not a payment of rent for the films leased from them. There is undoubtedly great force in this argument. On the other hand, the charge of nine cents a foot for the films was shown to be much below what they seem to have been worth, and the additional payment was not to be made to the manufacturers in proportion to the stock they held, but in proportion to the amount of film footage each had furnished the bankrupt during the year."

They furnished different amounts and were entitled to their proportion of the surplus without any reference to the amount of their stockholding or even if they held no stock at all. The question is one of intention, and we are not disposed to disturb the construction which the referee and the court below put upon the contract."

II. Subdivision second.

I. SUBDIVISION FIRST

3. Nature of Tax (p. 261)

Basis of taxation.—A fair interpretation of the statute is that income forms a basis for taxation only for the year in which it was received. Fink v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 968.

4. Corporations Subject to Tax (p. 261)

In General—Jewelers' Safety Fund Society.—In Jewelers' Safe & Fund Soc. v. Lowe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 93, it appeared that the plaintiff was incorporated by special statute of the state of New York. It was not an insurance company under the laws of that state. The members were not liable to assessment until after each loss occurred, and were not liable to pay until after sixty days' notice of the assessment. For their own convenience, however, they deposited with the company an amount estimated by it to cover expenses and losses incurred during the year, which deposits it invested or carried in bank, and so earned interest. This interest belonged, not to the company, but to the depositors. The company had no right in the fund at all until a loss was ascertained, and the amount of its gross income was the sum which it collected from these deposits of the members for the purpose of paying operating expenses and losses. It was held that the plaintiff was an insurance company not falling within the classes exempted in each act, and therefore subject to taxation on its net income.

5. "Carrying on," "Engaged in" or "Doing" Business (p. 263)

What constitutes "carrying on," "engaged in" or "doing" business—Generally.—Where the owner of a mining lease subleased the land to a mining company and employed an engineer to superintend or inspect the mining operations carried on by its lessee in order to see that it was carrying out the terms of the lease it was held that the owner of the lease was "doing business" and subject to a tax on the royalties received by it under its contract with the sublessee. Chemung Iron Co. v. Lynch, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 368.

6. Income (p. 267)

Rule stated—Dividends.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original annotation, see Fink v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 968.

Interest which has accrued but has not actually been collected does not constitute taxable income under this act. Walker v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 885.

Insurance premiums and interest.—Premiums due and deferred, and interest due and accrued, but not actually collected in cash are not income within the meaning of the act. Thus, interest on policy loans which by the terms of the contract was added to the principal of the loan when it became due and remained unpaid by the policy holders, is not income within the meaning of the act. Fink v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 968.

II. SUBDIVISION SECOND (p. 270)

Deductions.—The term "paid-up capital stock" of a corporation, as used in subdivision 2 of this section, means such an amount received by the corporation as does not exceed the par value of the outstanding shares, plus the amount received for any part-paid stock. It does not mean the aggregate amount received by the corporation for the shares, the full-paid stock receipts, and part-paid stock receipts issued by it, even though said sum be in excess of the par value. U. S. v. New York, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 265 Fed. 331.

As to what constitutes "paid-up capital stock" it is said in a case where this question was involved:

"The question presented is: What did Congress intend by the phrase 'paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year'? The plaintiff in error contends Congress intended to include as part of the paid-up capital stock all the moneys paid by the stockholders for their stock, including the sums paid in excess of $100 per share. The defendant in error claims the term 'paid-up capital stock' refers to the total par value; that is, $100 for each share. The plaintiff in error treated the surplus above $100 as a premium paid for; before 1909, in its books, it was accounted for in its 'profit and loss account.' After that, it was treated as in its 'premium account.' The excess paid in price is, in fact, a premium paid for the stock; for when such shares of stock are at face value, they are at par, and when more is paid, they are above par or at a premium. The total of the par value has always been considered capital stock. The term 'capital stock' has thus been used, not only in banking and commerce, but in the corporation acts in the several states. Full force and effect must be given to the term 'paid-up' as used in the statute, and its use in connection with 'not exceeding.' We think the employment of these words made the intention of Congress clear as obviously meaning paid up to par value, and not exceeding that." New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 907.

Depreciation.—In Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 351, the judge's charge as to allowance for a depreciation of property which is substantially given in the following extract from the opinion was held to be correct:

"The substance of the charge otherwise was that the question of fact to be determined was merely whether the deductions made by defendant in its excise tax reports for the years 1909 and 1910, viz. $249,024.54 for the former year, and $239,229.70 for the latter year, were in whole or in part reasonable allowances for depreciation of roadway during those respective years; that if such allowances were reasonable the government is not entitled to recover; that if they were not reasonable the government was entitled to verdict for 1 per cent of the amounts improperly deducted. The jury was specifically instructed to consider, first, 'the depreciation, either physical or functional, in the value of those parts of the roadway which have not been repaired or renewed or replaced'; and, second, 'what has been the effect of the repairs, renewals, and replacements that have been made to other parts, and determine whether, after you strike a final balance at the end of the year, the roadway is of greater or less value, or of equal value, than or to that which it was at the beginning of the year,' and that if it should be found 'that the value of the roadway, its actual value, is as great at the end of the year, after these repairs and replacements have been made for which credit has been given as an expense deduction, then there is no depreciation in value of . . . the roadway, within the meaning of the statute,' but that 'if, after making such repairs, replacements, and renewals in the different units of the roadway, it should be found that some parts have been made more valuable by the putting in of new parts in place of wornout parts, yet the depreciation in the rest of the roadway, in the deterioration, obsolescence, etc., of other units which have not been changed, and so little done in repairing and replacing that at the end of the year, taking it as a whole, the depreciation in value has exceeded the repairs, replacements, and renewals, so that it is worth less than it was, . . . to that extent the railway is entitled to a deduction of 1 per cent.'"

Decrease in value of assets because of premiums on bonds is said not to come within any definition of "depreciation" under this or similar acts and is therefore not deductible. Fink v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 27 Fed. 968.

An addition to the reserve funds of a life insurance company because of liability on supplementary contracts not involving life contingencies and canceled policies on which a cash surrender value may be demanded is not deductible from gross income under this act. Fink v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 968.

Money advanced to subsidiary company.—It has been held that amounts advanced by a railway company to a terminal company organized by it but which is a separate and distinct entity cannot be properly charged by the railway company as a part of the ordinary and necessary expenses of maintenance and operation of its business and property. Walker v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1921) 269 Fed. 886.

Salaries.—"The basis on which a salary may be allowed as a valid deduction is that it was in fact an 'ordinary and necessary expense (of the corporation) actually paid . . . in the maintenance and operation of its business.' To be a necessary expense it must have been paid for services actually rendered. Jacobs & Davies, Inc. v. Anderson, 228 Fed. 505, 506, 143 C. C. A. 87. Whether services were rendered and whether also they were commensurate with the salary paid are matters of judgment and discretion reposed by general law in the board of directors of the corporation. As the board of directors is charged with the duty and clothed with the discretion of fixing the salaries of the corporation's officers, the government has no right (until expressly granted by statute) to inquire into and determine whether the amounts thereof are proper, that is, whether they are too much or too little. But, while the amount of salary fixed by a board of directors is presumptively valid, it is not conclusively so, because the government may inquire whether the amount paid is salary or something else. Admittedly the government has a right to collect taxes on net income of a corporation based on profits after all ordinary and necessary expenses, including salaries, are paid. It has a right, therefore, to attack the action of a board of directors and show by evidence, not that a given salary is too much, but that, in the circumstances, the whole or some part of it is not salary at all but is profits diverted to a stockholding officer under the guise of salary and as such is subject to taxation." U. S. v. Phila- delphia Knitting Mills Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 657.

Adding premiums from sale of stock to par value.—In Boston, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 578, the railroad, in its tax return under this section for the year 1909, treated premiums (a sum considerably over $5,000,000) received from the sale of stock, when the stock was selling above par, as part of its paid-up capital stock, and as something to be added to the par value, for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of deduction upon the ground of interest upon indebtedness, and by including the interest paid upon the sum representing the premiums thus received from the sale of stock it increased the deduction from the gross earnings considerably more than a million dollars, with the result of decreasing the tax in a very considerable measure below what would have accrued to the government if the return had been computed and the deduction made upon the basis of interest paid upon its outstanding capital stock at its par value. In holding that such deduction was invalid, the court said: "Judge Bingham, in the District Court, in passing upon this statutory provision, said:

'There is nothing in the language of the clause in question (section 38) that justifies one in concluding that Congress intended that premiums on stock sold by a corporation should be added to its outstanding paid-up capital stock in determining deductions to be made in assessing the tax under this law.'

"We think the logic of the case is even stronger than that, against the corporation. By this we mean that, beyond the view that there is nothing in the language of the act to justify such a conclusion, there is an express and unmistakable negative against it.

"The situation here is one in which the intention of Congress is not only plain, but imperatively plain. The language is:

"The amount of interest actually paid within the year on * * * indebtedness to an amount * * * not exceeding the paid-up capital stock.'

"Thus the language is not only unmistakably clear, but mandatory. This is so because the words 'not exceeding' are express words of limitation—words which control the term 'paid-up,' and fix the line beyond which the deduction cannot go.

"As commonly known, certificates of stock represent the shares. When the shares are at face value they are at par, and when worth more they are above par, or at a premium (Cent. Dict. vol. 4, p. 4271), but by such fluctuations the shares of stock do not lose their identity or character as such, but remain shares of stock; and the sum total of the shares, at par, constitute the capital stock in the sense in which the term is ordinarily used in banking and commerce.

"It is quite manifest that Congress used the term 'paid-up capital stock' in the par value sense. This would be the common and ordinary understanding of the term; and it is perfectly plain that Congress did not intend a deduction, in this respect, beyond interest paid on indebtedness to the amount of outstanding capital stock, in the sense in which that expression is ordinarily accepted. And the term 'paid-up,' in the sense in which it was used in connection with the limitation of 'not exceeding,' obviously means paid up to par value, but not exceeding that.

"Premiums received from the sale of stock are not outstanding capital stock; and they are no more the capital stock of a railroad than is undivided surplus in a bank the capital stock of a bank.

"The provisions describing the deductions to be made, in order to ascertain the taxable net income, are addressed to the business public, and to corporations generally, and define the manner in which tax returns shall be made; and, in such circumstances, the rule would be that Congress used the term in the sense of its generally accepted meaning."

Names and addresses of seller and buyer.

—Bought and sold slips are admissible in evidence where although none of them give the addresses of both buyer and seller yet each of them with so few exceptions as to be immaterial gives the address of the party to be charged. This is especially true where there is testimony that at the same time that each bought slip was signed, a corresponding sold slip mutatis mutandis was signed by the party to be charged thereby, and that at the time that each sold slip was signed a corresponding bought slip mutatis mutandis was signed by the party to be charged, it being held that thus the presumption arose that the two corresponding slips which evidenced each contract set forth the addresses as well as the names of the seller and the buyer in each contract. Gettys v. Newburger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 209.

Quantity and price.—In Gettys v. Newburger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 209, an objection was made that none of the broker's slips stated the quantity or price of the cotton bought or sold. The court held that the contract was sufficiently clear when the telegram, broker's slip, rule of the stock exchange and other evidence were read together, and further said: "When one sends an order to a broker doing business in an established trade on one of the great public exchanges of the country to buy, sell, or make contracts on such an exchange, he confers upon such broker authority to deal in the terms and language understood and used there, and in accordance with the settled usage and the by-laws and rules of the exchange, even though he may not know their terms or effect."

Goods "removed for sale."—Chewing gum transported by the manufacturer from the place of preparation to one of its other factories or warehouses, as the state of the stock therein or the condition of the trade may demand, must be deemed subject to the stamp tax imposed by this section, upon gum and other specified articles "sold or removed for sale," although the amount of the tax is determined by the retail price or value of the article; especially in view of section 20 of this act, under which manufacturers of such articles are required to file monthly declarations that no such article has been removed from the premises of such manufacturer other than such as has been duly taken account of and charged with the stamp tax. U. S. v. American Chiclé Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 548, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Act of 1898 preserved.—The qualified repeal of the Stamp Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 1903, sec. 1400) left this provision so far in effect that unstamped proxies are invalid. State v. Miller, (Wis. 1920) 179 N. W. 815.

Construction of similar section of Act of June 13, 1898—In general.—In Oviatt v. Wojcicky, (1920) 95 Conn. 562, 111 Atl. 837, which was action to recover on a promissory note, it was informally disclosed upon the trial that the note in question was not duly stamped upon its execution and delivery as required by this section. The defendant thereupon asked the court to charge the jury in effect that its acceptance by the plaintiff in that condition not only subjected him to the penalty provided by the Federal law for its violation, but left the note worthless as the basis for any action by the plaintiff upon the debt which it evidences. In refusing to give this instruction, the court said: "No such issue was in the case, raised either by the pleadings or otherwise, and the defendant was in no position to take advantage of any claimed dereliction of the plaintiff as suggested. We have, moreover, in an earlier case involving a similar question under the federal Revenue Act of 1898, pointed out the somewhat limited effect of a mere failure to affix a stamp at the right time and place. Garland v. Gaines, 73 Conn. 662, 665, 49 Atl. 19, 84 Am. St. Rep. 182."

Section as repealed by National Prohibition Act.—This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2021). U. S. v. One Cole Aero Eight Automobile, (D. C. Mont. 1921) 273 Fed. 934; U. S. v. One Essex Touring Automobile, R. S. secs. 3460 and 3461 as modifying forfeiture provisions of this section.—The forfeiture provisions of this section, in case of the removal or deposit and concealment of goods or commodities upon which a tax has been imposed by the United States and has not been paid, are not modified by R. S. secs. 3460 and 3461 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) pp. 321, 322), so as to prevent the forfeiture of interests for which those sections offer protection. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.—Grant Co. v. U. S., (1921) 254 U. S. 505, 41 S. Ct. 189, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Constitutionality.—Construing this section as authorizing the forfeiture of an automobile used in the removal or the deposit and concealment of distilled spirits upon which a tax was imposed by the United States and had not been paid, notwithstanding the fact that the seller of such automobile, who had reserved title to it as security for unpaid purchase money, did not participate in or have knowledge of the illicit use by the purchaser, does not render such section invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as taking property without due process of law. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.—Grant Co. v. U. S., (1921) 254 U. S. 505, 41 S. Ct. 189, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, wherein the court said: "If the case were the first of its kind, it and its apparent paradoxes might compel a lengthy discussion to harmonize the section with the accepted tests of human conduct. Its words, taken literally, forfeit property illicitly used, though the owner of it did not participate in or have knowledge of the illicit use. There is strength, therefore, in the contention that, if such be the inevitable meaning of the section, it seems to violate that justice which should be the foundation of the due process of law required by the Constitution. It is, hence plausibly urged that such could not have been the intention of Congress; that Congress necessarily had in mind the facts and practices of the world, and that, in the conveniences of business and of life, property is often and sometimes necessarily put into the possession of another than its owner. And it follows, is the contention, that Congress only intended to condemn the interest the possessor of the property might have to punish his guilt, and not to forfeit the title of the owner, who was without guilt."

"Regarded in this abstraction the argument is formidable; but there are other and militating considerations. Congress must have taken into account the necessities of the government, its revenues and policies, and was faced with the necessity of making provision against their violation or evasion, and the ways and means of violation or evasion. In breaches of revenue provisions some forms of property are facilities, and therefore it may be said that Congress interposes the care and responsibility of their owners in aid of the prohibitions of the law and its punitive provisions by ascribing to the property a certain personality, a power of complicity and guilt in the wrong. In such case there is some analogy to a deodand, by which a personal chattel that was the immediate cause of the death of any reasonable creature was forfeited. To the superstitious reason to which the rule was ascribed, Blackstone adds that 'that such misfortunes are in part owing to the negligence of the owner, and therefore he is properly punishable by such forfeiture.' And he observed: 'A like punishment is in like cases inflicted by the Mosical law: "If an ox gore a man that he die, the ox shall be stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten." And, among the Athenians, whatever was the cause of a man's death, by falling upon him, was exterminated or cast out of the dominions of the republic.' See also The Blackheath (United States v. Evans), 195 U. S. 361, 366, 367, 49 L. ed. 236-238, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46; Liverpool, B. & R. P. Steam Nav. Co. v. Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal, 251 U. S. 48, 53, 64 L. ed. 130, 132, 40 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

"But whether the reason for § 3450 be artificial or real, it is too firmly fixed in the punitive and remedial jurisprudence of the country to be now displaced. Dobbins Distillery v. United States, 96 U. S. 395, 24 L. ed. 637, is an example of the rulings we have before made. It cites and reviews prior cases applying their doctrine and sustaining the constitutionality of such laws. It militates therefore against the view that § 3450 is not applicable to a property whose owner is without guilt. In other words, it is the ruling of that case, based on prior cases, that the thing is primarily considered the offender. And the principle and practice have examples in admiralty. The Palmyra 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531."

Purpose and scope of section.—"In the present case we have a long and involved single sentence to construe. The general purpose to suppress an intended fraud on the revenue by forfeiture on removal, deposit, or concealment, both of the articles taxed and certain things connected with them, is evident. The forfeitures described may be referred to as primary and secondary. The things primarily forfeited on the conditions named are those in the first clause and are (1) the taxed goods and commodities, and (2) materials, utensils, and vessels proper and intended for use in the making of the goods and commodities. As to the last named it is not necessary that any goods or commodities should have actually been produced from or with them. The next clause, being that specially for construction, provides the secondary forfeitures, that is, those consequent on the forfeitures previously declared. It begins 'and in every such case.' These words plainly mean that, whenever either goods and commodities or materials and utensils are forfeited under the preceding clause the matter is not to end, but as consequences thereof (1) the vessels, casks, or packages containing the goods and commodities and (2) the vessels, boats, carts, carriages, etc., used in the removal, deposit, or concealment of the things previously forfeited are also to be forfeited." U. S. v. One Bay Horse, (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 590.

Forfeiture—In general.—In U. S. v. One Bay Horse, (N. D. Ga. 1921) 270 Fed. 590, a horse, a wagon and a set of harness were declared forfeited because used for the removal and deposit of a still and other distilling apparatus, proper and intended to be used for the making of distilled liquors on which a tax was imposed, with intent to defraud the United States of the tax. It was held, however, that a rifle was not subject to forfeiture. The court said: "Now the stilling apparatus, which was with fraudulent intent removed and deposited in the wagon, was forfeited under the first clause, and is not in question here. It is therefore one of the instances covered by the words 'in every such case,' and these words must be satisfied by something that follows them in the statute. They cannot be satisfied by the forfeiture of casks, vessels, and cases, for stills involve no such, and indeed these things are limited to such as contained the goods and commodities. The secondary forfeiture, following the forfeiture of utensils, must therefore relate only to the boats, carts, carriages, etc., used in deposit and removal, and the word 'thereof' following them must be held to refer to all the articles mentioned in the first clause as forfeited by fraudulent removal, deposit, or concealment. As to the wagon, horse, and harness, therefore, a cause of forfeiture is set forth."

"The rifle is not a thing that could naturally and ordinarily be used in the way alleged and no special use thereof is shown. The allegations as to it are insufficient."

Innocence of automobile owner.—The fact that the seller of an automobile, who had reserved title to it as security for unpaid purchase money, did not participate in or have knowledge of its illicit use by the purchaser in the removal or deposit and concealment of distilled spirits upon which a tax was imposed by the United States and had not been paid, will not prevent the forfeiture of his title to such automobile, under this section, which provides for the forfeiture of the contraband goods, and of every vessel, boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance whatsoever, and all things used in the removal or for the deposit and concealment of such goods. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.—Grant Co. v. U. S., (1921) 254 U. S. 505, 41 S. Ct. 189, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Likewise, a vehicle used in furtherance of a fraud on the revenue laws is subject to condemnation and forfeiture under this section despite the innocence or want of knowledge of the owner. U. S. v. One W. W. Shaw

Automobile Taxi, etc., (N. D. Ohio 1921) 272 Fed. 491.

Vol. IV, p. 313, sec. 3453. [First ed., vol. III, p. 797.]

Scope of statute — Money or checks.—Where money or a check is found in such relation to contraband articles and apparatus, that a clear inference can be made to justify the conclusion that it is the proceeds of the illegal enterprise and used in the operation and carrying on of such business, the right to forfeit such property is clearly contemplated. U. S. v. One Machine, etc., (W. D. Wash. 1920) 267 Fed. 501.

Vol. IV, p. 323, sec. 3462. [First ed., vol. III, p. 804.]

Conformity to state practice.—Proceedings for arrest which include search warrants should conform to state practice. Thus, the ascertainment of probable cause is a judicial function which must be exercised in conformity with the statutes of the state in which the warrant is issued. U. S. v. Maresca, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 713.

Requirements for search warrants — In general.—“The requirements of section 3462 relating to the showing to be made as a basis for issuing the warrant do not meet the mandatory provisions of the Constitution. In the language of Attorney General Knox, the section ‘does not state all of that which must be stated in the application’ for the search warrant. 24 Op. Attys. Gen. 685, 688. In other words, the constitutional provision is paramount. The showing under oath essential upon which to predicate the issuance of the warrant should state pertinent facts from which the magistrate may determine the existence of probable cause, or there should be a hearing by him with that purpose in view. Probable cause is a legal conclusion, which is for the magistrate to deduce from the facts stated, and the mere assertion under oath that the affiant believed and does believe that a fraud upon the revenue has been or is being committed is entirely insufficient upon which to predicate the finding of probable cause.” U. S. v. Pitotto, (D. C. Ore. 1920) 267 Fed. 603.

Probable cause.—Since the Constitution plainly requires warrants, whether for arrest, or search and seizure, or both, to issue only upon probable cause supported by oath—the words “probable cause,” though used in a statute, are to be interpreted in harmony with the meaning assignable to them in the Fourth Amendment. Therefore there must be actual probable cause, not merely a bald, though verified, assertion of suspicion, and to that end the magistrate may inquire into the truth of the affidavit offered as a basis for warrant. On the question whether there was probable cause for search and seizure, much latitude as to evidence should be permitted; and if, at time of hearing, the magistrate is then of opinion that there existed probable cause when warrant issued, he should sustain the seizure. U. S. v. Maresca, (S. L. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 713.

Powers and duties of commissioners.—The commissioner must obey the statutes in so far as they are constitutional. If any statute enlarges the power to arrest or search and seize, and it is alleged that such statute infringes constitutional guaranties, he is bound by repeated decisions to refer that matter to the higher courts, unless the constitutional question be extraordinarily plain. Yet if one construction of an act is plainly harmonious with the Constitution, and another with difficulty reconcilable thereto, he must incline to the former. U. S. v. Maresca, (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 266 Fed. 713.

1918 Supp., p. 298, sec. 304.

Construction of section by government officers as conclusive.—Where government officers for a long period of time have construed the term “rectifier,” as used in this section and R. S. section 3244 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1045) in a certain manner, the government will be regarded as bound by such construction. Hence, where a wholesale liquor dealer filters whisky, which act did not constitute “rectifying” within the previous construction of this section by government officers, he cannot be held liable to pay the tax as a rectifier because of a new ruling thereafter by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue whereby filtration is regarded as rectifying. Jones v. Mayes, (W. D. Ky. 1920) 265 Fed. 365, wherein the court said: “The point which seems of great importance is that the contemporary and practical construction made by the officers of the government who executed the laws should be given great weight, especially in cases like this, where the question is a very doubtful one.”

“It would seem necessarily to follow that all persons directly interested may accept that construction and confidently act upon it. Furthermore, it would seem that this course has been made binding upon the government by the action of its own executive officers. In this case the practice was well known and long continued to construe it as the plaintiff contends, and Congress did not in the act of 1917 change that construction, but expressly provided in section 304 of the act then passed that it referred to section 3244, and left that section in full force as it had been previously construed by the executive officers. We think this ought to be regarded as binding in this instance as a contemporary interpretation by the executive officers, and we more than doubt the power of the executive officers to change the law as thus stated. Especially should we emphasize this where taxation was imposed under the statute. It may fairly be assumed that Congress intended under these circumstances that the previous construction should be binding upon the officers of the United States. The only attempt to change that, as we have seen, was the ex post facto attempt made in 1919, after the plaintiff had acquired rights under the old construction."

In Mayes v. Jones & Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 121, the court said regarding this question: "It has been repeatedly held by the Supreme Court of the United States that, where the meaning of a statute is doubtful, the construction given by the department charged with its execution should be given great weight. Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. 328, 32 L. Ed. 269; U. S. v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136, 16 Sup. Ct. 247, 40 L. Ed. 369. It has also been held by the Supreme Court that—

"The re-enactment by Congress, without change, of a statute which had previously received long-continued executive construction, is an adoption by Congress of such construction." U. S. v. Hermanos, 209 U. S. 337-339, 28 Sup. Ct. 532, 533 (52 L. ed. 821); U. S. v. Falk, 204 U. S. 143-152, 27 Sup. Ct. 191, 51 L. ed. 411.

"This rule of interpretation applies with full force to this case, for the reason that section 304 of the Revenue Act of October 3, 1917, provides that the tax shall be levied only upon distilled spirits and mixtures produced in such manner that the person so rectifying, purifying, refining, or mixing the same is a rectifier within the meaning of section 3244, R. S.

"Congress is presumed to have known the long-continued executive construction given to paragraph 3 of section 3244, R. S., when it enacted this Revenue Act of October 3, 1917. It is also presumed to have known the rule of construction announced by the Supreme Court in U. S. v. Hermanos and U. S. v. Falk, supra. Buckley v. Stephens, 29 Ohio St. 620-622. The conclusion follows that it intended to adopt this construction as fully and completely as if it had written it into the act itself."

"Purifying" or "refining," as used in this section, undoubtedly means the removal, chemical change, or modification of objectionable soluble matter, held in solution in the distilled spirits, united therewith and forming a constituent and integral part thereof, so that its removal, chemical change, or modification will change or alter, in some degree, at least, the character or quality of the entire volume of the distilled spirits. Mayes v. Jones, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1921) 270 Fed. 121.

1918 Supp., p. 305, sec. 200.

Constitutionality.—The rights of the several states to regulate descent and distribution are not unconstitutionally interfered with by the tax imposed by this Act upon the transfer of the net estates of decedents. New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 506, 65 U.

S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 263 Fed. 620) wherein the court said:

"The statement of the constitutional objections urged imports on its face a distinction that, if correct, evidently hitherto has escaped this court. See United States v. Field, Feb. 28, 1921 [255 U. S. 257, 41 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256]. It is admitted, as since Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, it has to be, that the United States has power to tax legacies, but it is said that this tax is cast upon a transfer while it is being effectuated by the state itself, and therefore is in intrusion upon its processes; whereas a legacy tax is not imposed until the process is complete. An analogy is sought in the difference between the attempt of a state to tax commerce among the states and its right after the goods have become mingled with the general stock in the state. A consideration of the parallel is enough to detect the fallacy. A tax that was directed solely against goods imported into the state, and that was determined by the fact of importation, would be no better after the goods were at rest in the state than before. It would be as much an interference with commerce in one case as in the other. I. M. Darnell & Son Co. v. Memphis, 208 U. S. 113, 52 L. ed. 413, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347. Conversely, if a tax on the property distributed by the laws of a state, determined by the fact that distribution has been accomplished, is valid, a tax determined by the fact that distribution is about to begin is no greater interference and is equally good.

"Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, supra, dealt, it is true, with a legacy tax. But the tax was met with the same objection: that it usurped or interfered with the exercise of state powers, and the answer to the objection was based upon general considerations and treated the 'power to transmit or the transmission or receipt of property by death' as all standing on the same footing. 178 U. S. 57, 59. After the elaborate discussion that the subject received in that case, we think it unnecessary to dwell upon matters that in principle were disposed of there. The same may be said of the argument that the tax is direct, and therefore is void for want of apportionment. It is argued that when the tax is on the privilege of receiving the tax is indirect because it may be avoided; whereas here the tax is inevitable, and therefore direct. But that matter also is disposed of by Knowlton v. Moore, not by an attempt to make some scientific distinction, which would be at least difficult, but on an interpretation of language by its traditional use, — on the practical and historical ground that this kind of tax always has been regarded as the antithesis of a direct tax, — 'has ever been treated as a duty or excise, because of the particular occasion which gives rise to its levy.' 178 U. S. 81-83.

Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic.

"The inequalities charged upon the statute, if there is an intestacy, are all inequalities in the amounts that beneficiaries might receive in case of estates of different values, of different proportions between real and personal estate, and of different numbers of recipients; or, if there is a will, affect legatees. As to the inequalities in case of a will, they must be taken to be contemplated by the testator. He knows the law and the consequences of the disposition that he makes. As to intestate successors, the tax is not imposed upon them, but precedes them; and the fact that they may receive less or different sums because of the statute does not concern the United States."

As to the constitutionality of this act in construing it as applicable to a transfer made before the passage of the act where the transferor's death occurred after the act took effect, it has been said:

"In our opinion the act, if so construed, is not void as denying due process of law, or as violating the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. Billings v. United States, 232 U. S. 261, 282, 283, 34 Sup. Ct. 421, 58 L. ed. 596; Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 240 U. S. 1, 23 24, 36 Sup. Ct. 236, 60 L. ed. 493, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 713, L. R. A. 1917D, 414. Nor do we think the tax is to be classified as a direct tax, and thus void as within the constitutional requirement of apportionment. It is clearly an excise or duty tax." Nor is the provision unconstitutional merely because it is retroactive. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

An executor cannot raise the question of the constitutionality of this provision on the ground that it interferes with vested rights of the transferees, as the rule applies in such a case that one attacking a statute as unconstitutional, must show that the alleged unconstitutional feature injures him. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

Nature of tax.—To same effect as 1920 Supplement annotation, see Randolph v. Craig, (M. D. Tenn. 1920) 267 Fed. 993; Hazard v. Bliss, (R. I. 1921) 113 Atl. 469.

"It is true that the tax purports to be assessed against the estate, but in truth and in fact it is not, but upon the transfer thereof to those whom the law or the decedent has given it. If it were upon the estate itself, the same would be a direct tax and the statute would be in conflict with the federal Constitution, requiring all direct taxes to be levied according to population." Gheen's Succession, (1921) 148 La. 1017, 88 So. 253.

"The federal tax under the act of 1916, on the other hand, is not a succession tax, but an estate tax, not a tax on what comes to the beneficiaries or heirs, but upon what is left by the decedent. In this respect it differs from the legacy tax imposed by the United States War Revenue Act of 1898 (30 Stat.

448). The act of 1916 entitles the tax an 'estate tax,' and in terms imposes it upon the net estate of the decedent as a unit. It is not apportioned among the various transferees, and bears no relation to the separate amounts which they are to receive. The distinction between a succession tax and an estate tax is a recognized distinction, and, so far as we are aware, it has been held without exception that the federal tax under the act of 1916 is of the latter character. It is not possible, in our judgment, to take any other reasonable view of it." In re Miller, (Cal. 1921) 195 Pac. 413.

Construction.—In construing this Act the rule has been applied that as all persons and property within the jurisdiction of a sovereignty are subject to taxation, and since the property cannot speak and the persons have no direct voice in wording the tax laws, it is a fundamental duty of the law-givers to make the scope of a tax law definite and its meaning clear; and therefore all doubts respecting scope and meaning are to be resolved in favor of the taxpayer. First Trust, etc., Bank v. Smietanka, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 230.

State laws as rules of decision.—The question as to what extent a widow's interest in her husband's estate is taxable, if at all, is to be determined by the statutes and rules of decision in the state where the decedent's property is located. Randolph v. Craig, (M. D. Tenn. 1920) 267 Fed. 993.

Deduction in computing state tax.—"Whatever amount has been paid to the tax collector of the United States is a matter between it and the heirs or succession representative, and cannot be considered in fixing the amount of inheritance tax due the state." Gheen's Succession, (1921) 148 La. 1017, 88 So. 253.

1918 Supp., p. 306, sec. 202.

Scope of section.—This section evidences an intent on the part of Congress that the tax should apply to all transfers in contemplation of death, whether made before or after the passage of the act, provided the transferor's death occur after the act took effect. The evident theory of this section is that transfers intended to take effect after the death of the grantor, as well as those made in contemplation of death, are equally testamentary in character. Such classification is within the power of Congress. The theory of taxation on account of transfers testamentary in character is that death is the generating source of the tax. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

Retroactive operation.—This section has been construed as having a retroactive operation and as including transfers made prior to the passage of the act by one dying after its enactment. Union Trust Co. v. Wardell, (N. D. Cal. 1921) 273 Fed. 733.

State laws as rules of construction.—"From the form of the Federal Estate Tax Act, it is evident the Congress intended that the act should operate not in opposition to but in harmony with the many different state acts with which, because of its very terms, it would come into contact. Lederer v. Northern Trust Co., (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 52. Therefore in creating an estate tax, the Congress very wisely leveled the tax at that property of decedents which is subject to distribution as part of their estates according to the laws of different states (section 202), after deducting therefrom such expenses, claims and charges against estates as are allowed by the laws of the states under which they are administered (section 203). Thus it appears that the Federal Estate Tax may reach property in one state when it would fail to reach like property in another, according as the laws of distribution and administration vary in different states." Lederer v. Pearce, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 497.

Under the Internal Revenue Act of October 3, 1913, if a decedent's estate produced an increment which was payable only at times and to persons not determinable at the time, such increment during a tax year was not an income of that tax year which was assessable. First Trust, etc., Bank v. Smietanka, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 230.

"In contemplation of death."—In Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321, in the case of an absolute gift inter vivos claimed by the government to have been testamentary in character, the court said regarding the meaning of the phrase "in contemplation of death": "On principle, and without present reference to authority, the ultimate question concerns the motive which actuated the grantor; that is to say, whether or not a specific anticipation or expectation of her own death, immediate or near at hand (as distinguished from the general and universal expectation of death some time), was the immediately moving cause of the transfer."

Presumption as to transfers.—In holding that an instruction was not erroneous which stated that the presumption afforded by subdivision b of this section could be taken into account in determining the fact of "contemplation of death," the court said:

"The provision in question raises a presumption of fact, not a presumption of law, and under well-settled rules a presumption of fact may be taken into account in determining the ultimate fact. The presumption is merely a rule of evidence whose enactment is within the legislative competency." Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

Property passing under power of appointment.—Property passing by the execution of a power of appointment given in a will is not subject to taxation under this section. Field v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 257, 41

St. Ct. 256, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 430; Lederer v. Pearce, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 497.

Community property.—In the case of community property the federal tax is imposed on the transfer of the net estate, and whether there is a transfer upon the death of the husband depends upon the statutes and rule of decision in the state where the parties reside and the property is situate. Blum v. Wardell, (N. D. Cal. 1920) 270 Fed. 309.

Life insurance policies.—A life insurance policy in which the insured reserved to himself the right to change the beneficiary remains a part of his estate and the proceeds thereof are subject to tax. And where the insured provided in making a transfer of an endowment policy that if he were living at its maturity the amount then becoming due under it should be paid to him, the proceeds of the policy are part of his estate and subject to tax. Gaither v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1920) 268 Fed. 692.

Where life insurance policies which amounted to less than four per cent of the insured's estate were transferred two years before his death, it was held that they did not form such a material part of his estate as to throw on his executor the burden of proving that they were not parted with in contemplation of death. Gaither v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1920) 268 Fed. 692.

Deductibility of state inheritance and succession taxes in determining net value.—State inheritance and succession taxes on the rights of individual beneficiaries are not deductible from the value of the gross estate of a decedent when determining the net value of such estate for the purpose of the tax imposed by the Act of September 8, 1916, upon the transfer of the net estates of decedents, as charges against the estate that are allowed by the laws of the jurisdiction under which the estate is being administered. Such charges are those only which affect the estate as a whole. New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 506, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 620.

A state transfer tax imposed on the estate of a decedent has been held to be a charge which may properly be deducted. In this connection it was said in a case involving the question whether such a tax imposed by the state of New York should be deducted: "The state of New York had the right to impose the tax it did impose on this estate, acting through its Surrogate's Court, which was and is the court of competent jurisdiction. When that tax was imposed, it became a charge upon and against the estate, and this fact is clearly recognized by the act of Congress above referred to. It was not the policy or purpose of Congress to impose a tax upon the amount of a tax already paid from the estate of a decedent or to the state in which such estate is being administered. I think the tax paid the state of New York and imposed by the laws of that state, and approved and allowed by the Surrogate's Court, was and is one of 'such other charges against the estate as are allowed by the laws of the jurisdiction whether within or without the United States under which the estate is being administered,' and that it follows that the Commissioner and Collector of Internal Revenue in imposing the tax due the United States should have made the proper deduction for and on account of such payment to the state." Sayre v. Brewster, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 553.

Widow's homestead and dower rights under state statutes.—Where under the laws of the state the widow does not receive either her homestead, dower or year's support in succession to her husband or by transfer from him, but takes them under the statutory provisions vesting these rights in her independently of her husband and adversely to his estate, the property assigned to her as dower, homestead and year's support, not being transferred to her from her husband, is not part of his estate on which the tax is imposed by the Federal Estate Tax. Randolph v. Craig, (M. D. Tenn. 1920) 267 Fed. 993.

Widow's right to support.—Where under the laws of the state a widow's right to support is not limited to a case of actual dependency on the decedent a charge therefor should be deducted as a "charge against the estate" under the Federal Estate Tax Law. Randolph v. Craig, (M. D. Tenn. 1920) 267 Fed. 993. The court said:

"While it would apparently be true that in so far as the Federal Estate Tax itself is concerned, she would not be entitled to support during the administration of the estate—whatever the period—unless dependent upon the decedent, under the terms of clause a (1) of section 203, nevertheless her claim for a year's support should in any event be deducted as a charge against the estate allowed by the laws of Tennessee; there being nothing in the Tennessee statutes or decisions in reference to a year's support which limits the widow's right to a year's support to cases of actual dependency upon the decedent."

Deduction before determining state succession tax.—The tax imposed by this act is to be deducted before computing a state succession tax. In re Miller, (Cal. 1921) 195 Pac. 413.

1918 Supp., p. 308, sec. 204.

Payment.—The estate tax is made a charge on the estate, and is to be paid out of it by the administrator or executor substantially as other taxes and charges are paid. It becomes due, not at the time of the decedent's death, but one year thereafter, as the statute plainly provides. It does not segregate any part of the estate from the rest and keep it from passing to the administrator or executor for purposes of administration, but is made a general charge on the gross estate, and is to be paid in money out of any available funds, or, if there be none, by converting other property into money for the purpose. U. S. Woodward, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 615, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 309, sec. 209.

Scope of section.—This section pertains merely to the remedy for the collection of the tax. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

Annuities.—The principle that the vendor of an annuity enters at once into the possession and enjoyment of the price paid for it which does not on the death of the annuitant figure as a part of his estate for taxation purposes has been applied in the case of a transfer of property by a father to his son, the latter guaranteeing the payment to the former of a certain per cent on the agreed value of the property during the life of the father. Polk v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1920) 268 Fed. 175.

When resort to transferee permissible.—It is only when the estate proves insufficient for the purpose that resort may be had, under this section to the personal responsibility of the transferee or to the property transferred, and even then a right of action over is given to the transferee. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

Pleading.—Where a complaint seeks to recover the entire amount of a tax paid to the government and groups several payments into one cause of action it is good as against a demurrer which alleges that no cause of action is set up in the complaint where the complainant is entitled to recover a part of the sum so paid. Sayre v. Brewster, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 553.

Transfer when not in contemplation of death.—Polk v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1920) 268 Fed. 175.

1918 Supp., p. 312, sec. 1.

Persons subject to tax.—The tax is imposed on citizens of the United States regardless of their place of residence, or residents of the United States regardless of their citizenship, and upon the income of nonresident aliens from sources within the United States. Lawrence v. Wardell, (N. D. Cal. 1920) 270 Fed. 682.

1918 Supp., p. 313, sec. 2.

Power of Congress.—Congress has very ample authority to adjust its income taxes according to its discretion, and the rules it prescribes for the ascertainment of taxable income are binding upon the courts, unless they are palpably arbitrary and unjust. Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1921) 273 Fed. 822.

Scope of tax generally.—What is taxable is the gain, profit or income derived from the sale or dealing in property, whether real or personal. The tax is to be levied on nothing else except gains, profits, and income, and upon them only when actually realized in money or in money's worth, and in determining what is included therein the courts will look through form to substance. Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1921) 273 Fed. 822.

Meaning of "income" as affected by construction of word in other acts.—The word "income" must be given the same meaning in all of the Income Tax Acts of Congress that was given to it in the Federal Corporation Excise Tax Act. Merchants' Loan, etc., Co. v. Smietanka, (1921) 255 U. S. 509, 41 S. Ct. 386, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Meaning of "income" as affected by language of will.—A testator cannot, by declaring in his will that accretions of selling values shall be considered principal, and not income, render such items nontaxable under Federal income tax legislation, if the terms of such legislation are broad enough to include them. Merchants' Loan, etc. Co. v. Smietanka, (1921) 255 U. S. 509, 41 Sup. Ct. 386, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Stock dividends as income.—To the same effect or the annotation under this catchline in 1920 Supplement, see Walsh v. Brewster, (1921) 255 U. S. 536, 41 Sup. Ct. 392, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (D. C. Conn. 1920) 268 Fed. 207.

Computing tax on stock sold where stock dividend declared.—As to the computation of the tax in such cases it has been said:

"The second point is raised by Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U. S. 189, 40 Sup. Ct. 189, 64 L. ed. 521, 9 A. L. R. 1570, and must be ruled by its implications. Under the doctrine of that case a stock dividend is not regarded as new property at all. The old certificate represented precisely the same property as the old and new do thereafter. The old shares have proliferated, as it were, and although the right they represented has now suffered a cellular division into smaller units of greater number, that is all that has happened. In view of this, it seems to me difficult to avoid regarding the old and new shares together as anything more than the evidence of a right which has persisted unchanged through the declaration of the dividend. It might have been possible to look at the new shares as declared from the surplus, and the surplus as not included in the old shares (at least not in the same sense as the new shares comprise it); but all such notions were expressly repudiated in the prevailing opinion. If so, each of the new shares, whether contained in the old or the new certificate, represents a part of the original property purchased and in selling the first certificate the stockholder has not sold the whole of what he originally bought, and should not be credited with the whole purchase price. Judge Rose, in Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Miles, (D. C.) 273 Fed. 822, has adopted the same theory of computing an income tax in a stronger case. There the plaintiff sold some 'rights' declared upon his stock, and Judge Rose computed his profit in substantially the same way as I suggest here.

"The plaintiff answers this argument by saying that, if so, all shares at any time held by a stockholder must be brought into hotchpot and averaged. I scarcely think that consistency requires me to go so far. The law may, and in fact does recognize an identity in every share, which can indeed be traced upon the books of the company, at least until certificates are consolidated, and later subdivided. The purchase of a number of shares can be earmarked by the certificate, and it is an enormous convenience to keep the purchases separate. Yet it is possible and consistent, when new shares are declared, to attribute them ratably in subdivisions of those already issued. They are not so entered on the books, it is true; but the books are not kept in accordance with the underlying doctrine of Eisner v. Macomber, supra, in any event. At least the earlier certificates need not lose their separate identity because new shares are filiated to them in proper proportion.

"An illustration will make clear what I mean. Suppose a man has certificate A, for 100 shares, bought at $100, certificate B, for 100, bought at $150, and certificate C, for 100, bought at $200. Suppose, further, that a stock dividend of 50 per cent. is declared, and he gets one certificate D, for 150 shares, without paying anything. If he sells certificate A, he would be deemed to sell, not the whole of his first purchase, but only two-thirds of it, and he could credit himself with only $6,666. If he sold certificate B, he would credit himself with $10,000, and if certificate C with $13,333. If he sold certificate D, he could credit himself with $15,000, made up of $3,333 from his first purchase, $5,000 from his second and $6,666 from his third. If, on the other hand, he sold only a part of certificate D, some arbitrary rule of apportionment must be adopted, allocating the shares sold among his purchases. The most natural analogy is with payment upon an open account, where the law has always allocated the earlier payments to the earlier debts, in the absence of a contrary intention. Accordingly, if all the new shares were not sold at once, I think the first sales should be attributed to the first purchases still remaining unsold when the stock dividend was declared. I do not see that this method will result in confusion in its application, and it carries into effect the underlying theory of Eisner v. Macomber, supra.

"The tax at bar was not computed quite in this way, because all the purchases before the declaration of the stock dividend were brought into hotch-pot. This I think was inconsistent with the theory of the identity of the shares involved in each purchase. It must, therefore, be recalculated, which the parties have kindly consented to do, if they are told the rule. The credits will be computed as follows: Upon each certificate held on March 1, 1913, two-thirds its value on that day; i. e., $230. Upon each certificate bought at $100, $66⅔. Upon each certificate for stock dividend shares, if issued against any specified earlier certificate, the same credit per share as the shares of that certificate. If the certificate of new shares is not so earmarked, or if but one certificate was issued for the new shares, then credit will be allowed of two-thirds the value of the shares on March 1, 1913, until half the number of shares have been sold, which the plaintiff held on March 1, 1913, and retained till the stock dividend." Towne v. McElligott, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 960.

Dividend from surplus.—"A dividend may be income to the stockholder, though declared out of property which has long since become a part of the economic capital of the corporation. Peabody v. Eisner, supra; Lynch v. Hornby, 247 U. S. 339, 38 Sup. Ct. 543, 62 L. ed. 1149. True, it must not be a dividend in liquidation. Lynch v. Turrish, 247 U. S. 221, 38 Sup. Ct. 537, 62 L. ed. 1087. And perhaps it must on that account be from a corporate surplus, since otherwise it is hard to avoid regarding it as in liquidation. But it makes no difference that it distributes to the stockholder property which is not current profit, but the means of producing current profit. He must still pay an income tax upon it, though in his eyes it is a part of his capital." New York Trust Co. v. Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 952.

Sale of subscription right.—Where a stockholder sells his right to subscribe for shares in the corporation, the tax is not assessed on the entire amount received by him but on the gain or profit realized on the transaction. Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1921) 273 Fed. 822.

Cost of bonds as including interest during time preceding allotment.—A purchaser of bonds through an underwriting agreement under which he did not receive any interest upon the amount paid prior to the allotment of the bonds to him, some years later, is not entitled to have interest for the time so elapsed added as a part of the cost to him of such bonds, when computing the taxable income under the Federal income tax legislation, arising out of the sale of such bonds at a profit. Walsh v. Brewster, (1921) 256 U. S. 536, 41 Sup. Ct. 392, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (D. C. Conn. 1920) 268 Fed. 207.

Debenture bonds voted from a surplus or undivided profits have been held subject to taxation as "income." Doerschuck v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 739.

Distribution of stock acquired in another corporation.—In New York Trust Co. v.

Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 952, a pipe line company offered to buy an oil company's pipe line assets for a specified sum and to give in payment its own shares to be directly distributed by the pipe line company pro rata among the oil company's stockholders. This offer the oil company accepted and the contract bound the buyer so to distribute the stock, which it did. The court held that the new shares were income under the law and taxable as such.

Gain derived from sale of property which has appreciated in value.—Taxable income under this section, as amended, includes the gain derived from the sale of personal property which has appreciated in value during a series of years over its market value on March 1, 1913, if acquired before that date. Eldorado Coal, etc., Co. v. Mager, (1921) 255 U. S. 522, 41 Sup. Ct. 390, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Goodrich v. Edwards, (1921) 255 U. S. 527, 41 Sup. Ct. 390, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

However it is only where, and to the extent that, a gain over the original investment is realized upon a sale of property acquired before March 1, 1913, and worth less on that date than when acquired, that there can be any taxable income arising out of such sale, assessable under this section, as amended, since this legislation plainly imposes the income tax on the proceeds of sales of personal property to the extent only that gains are derived therefrom by the vendor. In other words paragraph (C) is applicable only where a gain over the original capital investment has been realized after March 1, 1913, from a sale or after disposition of property. Goodrich v. Edwards, (1921) 255 U. S. 527, 41 Sup. Ct. 390, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —; Walsh v. Brewster, (1921) 256 U. S. 536, 41 Sup. Ct. 392, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing in part and affirming in part (D. C. Conn. 1920) 268 Fed. 207.

A gain or profit derived from the sale by a testamentary trustee of personal property of the estate which has appreciated in value over its market value on March 1, 1913, the testator having died prior to that date, and the property being among the assets which came to the trustee, is taxable under this section, as amended. Merchants' Loan, etc., Co. v. Smietanka, (1921) 255 U. S. 509, 41 Sup. Ct. 386, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Testamentary trustee as taxable person.—A testamentary trustee is, by the express provisions of the different income tax acts, a taxable person. Merchants' Loan, etc., Co. v. Smietanka, (1921) 255 U. S. 509, 41 Sup. Ct. 386, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1918 Supp., p. 325, sec. 10.

Effect of dissolution of corporation before enactment.—Where a corporation sold all its property, distributed the proceeds to stockholders, thereby became dissolved, reported its net income for 1916 and paid the federal excise tax of one per cent thereon, all prior to the passage of this Act, which imposed a tax of two per cent on the net income for that year of all corporations, it was held that the stockholders were liable for the extra one per cent. U. S. v. McHatton, (D. C. Mont. 1920) 266 Fed. 602. The court said: "Where defendants took the corporation's property, there was right in plaintiff to thereafter impose further taxes. To pay any such taxes was then an obligation of the corporation. The right was in its nature inchoate; the obligation was contingent. Defendants took subject thereto. The contingency happened; the right vested. The act of September 8, 1916, to this extent taxes effect by relation as of the first of the year, and prior to distribution and dissolution."

1918 Supp., p. 327, sec. 11 (a).

Educational institution.—Although a corporation conducting a military school is operated exclusively for educational purposes and all the shareholders are officers, directors and teachers in the institution, it is not exempt from taxation under this section where a charge is made for the services rendered to the pupils and a dividend is declared from the earnings. Kemper Military School v. Crutchley, (W. D. Mo. 1921) 274 Fed. 125.

Income from funds loaned to and belonging to charitable devisee.—Where a testator left his residuary estate to one to hold temporarily as trustee for a hospital subject to the payment of certain annuities and the trustee invested the funds of the estate in the form of a loan to the hospital on which loan the charity paid an interest sufficient to take care of the administrative charges and the annuities, it was held that the income was not subject to taxation. The court said:

"As justification for assessing this tax, it contended, however, that as the act of 1916 forbids taxation on 'any income received by any . . . corporation . . . for . . . charitable . . . purposes,' that the income of this residuary estate was not exempt because it has not been 'received,' but remains in the hands of the trustee. But, apart from the fact that the corpus of the residuary estate has in fact already been 'received' by the hospital in the shape of a mortgage, and the hospital itself is pro forma paying to its own trustee the money which, pro forma, constitutes the income here taxed, the construction thus urged and the effect given to the word 'received' does not commend itself to our judgment. The sections in question in the acts of 1913 and 1916 are to be considered and construed jointly. They concern the same subject-matter, and that of 1916 was evidently meant to continue the broad and absolute purpose and provisions of the act of 1913 'that nothing in this section shall apply . . . to any corporation . . . operated exclusively for . . . charitable . . .

purposes.' Such being the case, the residuary estate which produced this income being the property solely of the hospital, no one but the hospital owning the income thereof, and the temporary holding of the income being by a trustee, who was the agent and representative solely of the hospital, it is clear that when substance and spirit, and not mere form and words, are the interpreters of the statute, the receipt of this income by the hospital's agent and representative was in truth and reality a receiving by the hospital, for he who acts by the hand of another himself acts." Lederer v. Stockton, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 676.

1918 Supp., p. 329, sec. 12.

Depletion defined.—As to what constitutes depletion it has been said: "We cannot conceive any substantial distinction as applied to a mine between that depreciation or allowance for capital assets consumed which was sought by mine owners under the earlier acts, and that depletion which was expressly allowed by the amendment of 1916. From every point of view, this kind of depreciation or allowance was depletion, and this allowed depletion is depreciation or diminution of capital, and when the question of right to the allowance arises as between fee owner and lessee, it can make no difference whether the claimed allowance is called by one name or by the other." Weiss v. Mohawk Min. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 502. In passing on the right of exemption in such a case for depletion, the court further said: "We think the substantial principles established by the decisions are that both the royalty received by the fee owner and the sums received by the operating lessee above the cost of operation are income; that the statutory reduction for 'depletion' cannot be twice credited, once to the fee owner, and once to the lessee; and that the exemption belongs of right to the fee owner."

Deduction for salaries paid.—On the question of a deduction by a corporation for salaries it has been said:

"The case is an easily imaginable one that those interested in what is called a close corporation, and which, in every respect, except its formal organization, is a partnership, might resort to the expedient of distributing profits by fixing a scale of salaries proportioned to the shares or interests of its officers in the corporation. To encourage and promote devotion to the interests of the employer, and to increase the efficiency of employees, the plan of giving employees a share in profits along with stockholders has become more or less common. In the case of a corporation taxpayer, the tax is measured by the profits which flow to the corporation from the business in which it is engaged, and this is not affected by what the corporation, through its managers or the action of its stockholders, may do with its profits after they have been received. When the employee is only an employee, and not in any sense a stockholder, the argument is at least a plausible one that what he receives he receives as compensation for his services, and it is none the less compensation for services, whether it is received in the form of a fixed salary or on the sliding scale, controlled by commissions or measured by the profits which through his effort come to the corporation. When the stockholder is only a stockholder, and in no sense an employee, what he received, whatever it may be called, is clearly given to him as profits. When, however, the one to whom the payment is made is both employee and stockholder, the difficulty of characterizing the payments made to him is increased; but the essential difference between what is compensation for services and what is a distribution of profits has not changed.

"The position to which counsel for the United States returns, asserting the right of the United States to have a jury determine what is fair compensation for the services rendered, and that all beyond this sum is a distribution of profits, is, it seems to us, an untenable position, because it is clearly the right of the employer to fix and determine what he shall pay, assuming, of course, that the employee is willing to accept of what is thus fixed. He may be unduly, or indeed unwisely, liberal, but an error of judgment of this kind cannot affect his right. We say, the position is untenable not upon the ground that Congress could not limit what should be allowed for deductions by reason of executive salaries, but on the ground that Congress has not thus far, and by the tax acts in question, established any such limitation. Nothing short of the legislative strong hand could fix any such limitation. There is practically no guide to determine what should be paid, or measure of payment, other than the judgment of those whose money is being paid. To object to a salary, for illustration, of $25,000, which a corporation might well deem it to be to its interest to pay to one man as its president, because other men might be found willing to accept the position for $5,000, or even for $1,000, would be recognized at once as an objection without weight. On the other hand, freedom to pay over the profits of a corporation to its stockholders under the guise of paying salaries is recognized to be fraught with danger of an evasion of the tax laws. In order to determine what may be done and what may not be done, recourse can be had only to the drawing of the line indicated. That line is drawn by an answer to the question how much, if any, of what is paid to a stockholder, is paid by way of a distribution of profits. This question can only be answered by a finding based upon evidence, and, if there is no evidence, there can be no finding. Whenever, in the wisdom of Congress, this protection to the United States is deemed inadequate to prevent escape from just taxation, Congress may by a simple enactment limit the deductions which may be made on account of payments of salaries to stockholders." U. S. v. Philadelphia Knitting Mills Co., (E. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 270.

Expenditures for improvements.—Where a corporation is conducting a military school for private pecuniary gain it is not entitled to a deduction from its gross income of expenditures for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of the property or estate. Kemper Military School v. Crutchley, (W. D. Mo. 1921) 274 Fed. 125.

1918 Supp., p. 335, sec. 14.

Claim for refund.—This act removed the legal disability imposed by R. S. sec. 3228 [3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1037] which prevented the government from discharging its moral obligations but did not repeal R. S. secs. 3226 and 3227 [3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1034, 1037]. Public Service Corp. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 282.

Covenant by lessee as to payment of "taxes, duties, and assessments" as requiring payment of federal income tax.—See Sharon R. Co. v. Erie R. Co., (1920) 268 Pa. St. 396, 112 Atl. 242.

1918 Supp., p. 341, sec. 200.

Recovery by corporation of dividends paid before enactment.—A corporation which declared a dividend before the enactment of the statute, and which is thereafter compelled to pay an excess profits tax for a portion of the period in which the dividend was earned, is not entitled to recover from the stockholders the part of the dividend which would not have been paid had the tax been deducted from the profits before declaring it. Overland Sioux City Co. v. Clemens, (Ia. 1920) 179 N. W. 954.

1918 Supp., p. 343, sec. 201.

Application.—The statute applies to all trades and businesses without regard to their class or character. Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

"As the 20 per cent paragraph is the only one in which the deduction is stated, and in the succeeding paragraph the tax is clearly placed upon the differences in the percentages of invested capital, it is apparent that it was the intention of Congress, by the repeated use of the words 'in excess of' and 'not in excess of,' to have the same meaning apply to those words where used in the first paragraph as where used in the subsequent paragraphs, thus imposing no tax upon the net income up to the amount of the deduction, but imposing the lowest rate of tax upon the difference between the deduction and 15 per cent of the invested capital, imposing the next tax upon the difference between 15 and 20 per cent of the invested capital, and so on, until in the last percentage paragraph the highest rate of 60 per cent applies to all net income in excess of 33 per cent of invested capital." Ehret Magnes Mfg. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1921) 273 Fed. 689.

"Invested capital."—The term "invested capital," as here used, includes all working capital consisting of money or property employed by a partnership in the business or for its benefit, and furnished or "paid in" by one or more of the partners. It does not include borrowed money. So in the case of a partnership money borrowed from banks or individuals other than members of the firm, and solely upon the credit of the firm, must be excluded and may not be considered. But where the evidence showed that, for every dollar of money borrowed from the bank, property of one of the members of the firm, exceeding in value the amount of the loans, was deposited with the bank and pledged as collateral security for the repayment of such borrowed money it was held that the property so furnished and pledged became a part of the working capital, and was used and employed in the business of the company to the same extent as if it had been paid directly into the firm treasury. Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

Where a partnership has invested capital, within the purview and meaning of that term as employed in the statute, more than nominal in amount, excess profits taxes upon its income cannot be assessed under the provisions of section 209 of the statute, and, if the amount of such invested capital cannot be satisfactorily determined, excess profits taxes must be assessed under sections 201 and 210 in accordance with the proper regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. If the partnership has invested capital more than nominal in amount, it is not in a position to complain of the regulations promulgated or of the method employed in determining the amount of the firm's invested capital, which forms the basis of the computation of the taxes, where, under the undisputed evidence, the arbitrary or suppositious invested capital fixed upon was larger in amount than the invested capital actually possessed and employed, and the taxes imposed were correspondingly diminished. These taxes are assessed upon percentages of income to invested capital. The larger the capital, the smaller the percentage and resulting tax. Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

"Single trade or business."—Where the principal business of a partnership was dealing in lumber it was held that in the assessment of excess profits taxes, the income derived from a single timberland deal should not be considered and treated by itself, and separate and apart from other partnership income or profits, but should be included in its income for the purpose of taxation. Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

The deduction must first be allowed in determining net income to be taxed at rate of twenty per cent. Greenport Basin, etc., Co. v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 269 Fed. 58.

Brokers.—Members of a partnership who buy and sell lumber, undertake and assume all the risks, and enjoy all the benefits of a merchandising business are not "brokers" as the term is used in this section. Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

Effect of departmental regulations.—While, in doubtful cases, departmental regulations may be an aid in construction and interpretation, they can neither add to nor subtract from plain congressional enactments." Cartier v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1920) 269 Fed. 647.

1918 Supp., p. 347, sec. 207a.

Constitutionality.—Defining invested capital according to the original cost of the property, to the exclusion of present higher values, as is done by this subdivision for the purpose of computing the war excess profits tax imposed upon corporations, except that the tangible property paid in prior to January 1, 1914, may be taken at its actual cash value on that date, but in no case exceeding the prior value of the original stock or shares specifically issued for it, and provided that intangible property purchased bona fide prior to March 3, 1917, shall be included in invested capital at a value not to exceed the actual cash value at the time of purchase, does not make the act productive of such baseless and arbitrary discrimination as to render the tax invalid under the due process of law clause of the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. LaBelle Iron Works v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 528, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Invested capital as applied to ore lands.—Neither the increased value of the ore lands of a corporation, though the result of an extensive exploration and development work, nor the surrender of old stock in the corporation in exchange for new issues, based on such increased values, can be regarded as within the provision of this subdivision by which invested capital is defined for the purpose of computing the war excess profits tax imposed by that act, as "actual cash paid in," or "the actual cash value of tangible property paid in, other than cash, for stock or shares in such corporation," or "paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits." LaBelle Iron Works v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 528, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Increase of value by appreciation.—Increase in the value of property by appreciation, first added to surplus on the books of the company and then declared as a stock dividend, is not undivided profits, paid-in surplus, earned surplus, nor invested capital within the meaning of this section. LaBelle Iron Works v. U. S., (1920) 55 Ct. Cl. 462.

Money expended in improving process.—When money has been earned and spent in improving a secret process, its increased value due only to that expenditure may figure as an asset in estimating under section 207 "earned surplus," if any, as an element of "invested capital." Lincoln Chemical Co. v. Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 272 Fed. 142.

A secret process was held to be "intangible property" in Lincoln Chemical Co. v. Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 272 Fed. 142.

Patents from which a corporation derives its sole revenue by way of royalties or licenses are held not to be "invested capital." De Laski, etc., Circular Woven Tire Co. v. Iredell, (D. C. N. J. 1920) 268 Fed. 377.

1918 Supp., p. 348, sec. 209.

"Capital" defined.—The word capital as here used is said to mean a situation where a man has laid out money or other form of property from which he receives a return without any personal participation on his part in the activities which in the end yield that return. It does not refer to a man's capacity for labor. Porter v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 739.

The lesser rate of assessment is to be followed only in those cases in which money or property plays no part in the source of the income, or such small part as to be practically negligible. Porter v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 739.

Profits not withdrawn.—The mere fact that the profits of a business having no capital are not wholly withdrawn, does not make of such undrawn profits a capital fund, where although they were allowed to accumulate they were not "used or employed in the business." Porter v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 739.

Income from patents.—A corporation deriving its income solely from royalties or licenses from patents is said to be a corporation "having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital" within the meaning of this section. De Laski, etc., Circular Woven Tire Co. v. Iredell, (D. C. N. J. 1920) 268 Fed. 377. The court said:

"It seems clear that patents do not fall within the term 'capital'; and it also seems to be clear that this is what was in mind when Congress made the distinction between 'invested capital,' which is defined under section 207 to include the actual cash value of patents paid for in stock or shares, and, also such other intangible property which had been paid for in money or stock, and also what was in mind when the word 'capital' is used alone in section 209, preceded by the word 'nominal'; that is, in the sense of something in name only employed in or available for production. The distinction is between those employing those stored-up concrete things, essential to productive labor, and those employing these things existing in name only. Patents were never capital in an economic sense. Congress included them within the term 'invested capital' to the extent only of the investment in them; if no investment in them, then they remain in the same class as that intangible something which makes for the wealth of the professional man, the broker, or others engaged in a personal service, which could never be 'capital,' except in name only.

"The decision of this case, however, need not depend solely upon the meaning of the word 'capital,' to be found in the distinction between 'invested capital' and 'nominal capital,' as used in the act. The patents which the plaintiff owned were the concrete embodiment of the skill which the plaintiff possessed in its field of activity. This skill or service it bartered for a consideration. Such skill or service is like the service a lawyer in large practice renders for an annual retainer, and is very nearly akin to the service which a commission house renders to those who buy and sell through it, or the service of a concern engaged in selling or leasing real estate, and in writing insurance. The plaintiff's source of income was that which certain persons were willing to pay it for the use of its skill and knowledge. It is true that skill and knowledge had been reduced to concrete form; but the payment was for the use of the skill and knowledge, and not for any part or parcel of the form to which the skill and knowledge had been reduced. Hence it would seem that in a very real sense the plaintiff was engaged in rendering a personal service, and was not employing 'capital,' and certainly no more than a 'nominal capital.'

Commissions received by executor.—Commissions received by an attorney for services rendered as an executor are not subject to the tax imposed by this section. Lederer v. Cadwalader, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 753. The court said:

"Taxes on income from a 'trade or business' clearly mean taxes on the trade, business, profession, or occupation of the taxpayer himself. This is the plain meaning of the statute, and any other construction distorts the simplicity of the language and requires that we read into the language something it does not contain. A single, isolated activity of the character of the executorship of the plaintiff does not constitute a trade, business, profession, or vocation under the facts of this case."

Commission business.—Where persons are engaged in a commission business it has been held that they are in a "trade or business having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital" within the meaning of that clause as used in this section. Porter v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 267 Fed. 739.

Effect of treasury rulings.—Treasury rulings indicating that the word "invested" was omitted in the act by oversight in the phrase "not more than a nominal (invested) capital" can neither modify nor add to the clearly expressed language of Congress. De Laski, etc., Circular Woven Tire Co. v. Iredell, (D. C. N. J. 1920) 268 Fed. 377.

Burden of proof in action for refund.—Lincoln Chemical Co. v. Edwards, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 272 Fed. 142.

1918 Supp., p. 350, sec. 300.

The "taxable person" intended by this section is the person or corporation actually manufacturing the munitions, and hence does not include individuals who advanced money to a corporation to send an agent abroad to secure a munition contract but who had nothing to do with the actual manufacture of the munitions. Traylor Engineering, etc., Co. v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 399, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1920) 266 Fed. 583.

1918 Supp., p. 351, sec. 301.

"Sale and delivery."—It is held that considering the context of the act the words "sale and delivery" must be read "sale or delivery." Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872.

"Any part of."—Under a regulation of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue providing that "Any part thereof," as used in this section is any article relatively complete within itself and designed or manufactured for the special purpose of being used as a component part of a completed munition, and which, by reason of some peculiar characteristic, loses its identity as a commercial commodity, and which, without further treatment, cannot be used for any purposes other than that for which it was designed," it has been held that rough castings designed or manufactured for the special purpose of being used as a component part of a completed munition after further progressive treatment and which could not be used for any other purpose than that for which they were intended were "relatively complete." Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872.

Manufacturer.—If the application of labor to an article effects some transformation in the character of the article, and converts it into a new and different article, having a distinctive name, character, or use, such article is a manufactured article, and the person producing it is a manufacturer. Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872, holding a person to be a "manufacturer" where labor performed on metal changed its form into rough given shaped castings adapted to use after further treatment, as essential parts of fuses.

Profits shared with others.—In computing the amount of net profits on which a munition manufacturer is taxed there can be no deductions made on account of payments made to third persons by the manufacturer under an agreement to share the profits of a contract in consideration of the aid given by the third persons in securing it. Traylor Engineering, etc., Co. v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 399, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1920) 266 Fed. 383.

Payments to persons engaged in a common venture made under a contract by which in substance they were to share in the profits which were ultimately yielded in proportion to each one's advancement are not to be deducted in computing the net profits. Traylor Engineering, etc., Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 266 Fed. 583, wherein the court said: "Without any thought of escaping the payment of taxes, but to bring about what is believed to be a more just distribution of profits, it is not unusual to pay dividends, in the form of salaries, to executive officers of corporations. The illustration of wage bonus used in presenting the argument of counsel for plaintiff is one for which he is not responsible. Whether in strict principle even this, if measured by and dependent upon profits, is within the deductions allowed by the act of Congress, the distinction between an ordinary wage bonus and the case of what is really a division of profits is that the one bears a normal relation to the value of the service rendered; the purpose of the payment of the bonus being to stimulate the wage-earner to add to the productiveness of his labor, but the other has no such normal relation."

"Without prolonging the discussion by going into all the refinements of the argument, we rest the ruling now made upon the broad proposition (concretely stated with respect to the facts of this case) that it is not the meaning of the act of Congress that a corporation may pay out of its profits to those interested with it in a common venture $1,000 for every dollar such persons have put into the venture, nor that it may pay them $1,000,000 as a premium for going on a surety bond for that sum, and thereby reduce the measure of the excise tax which the corporation would otherwise have been called upon to pay. The reason is that obviously such payments are not made as compensation for moneys advanced or services rendered, but are made by way of distribution of profits among the joint ventures, and what is more to the point the act of Congress does not permit deductions to be made for such payments before finding what are the profits made within the meaning of the taxing law."

1918 Supp., p. 352, sec. 303.

"Disposes of."—It is said that these words as here used mean something more than the word "sell" and must have a distinctive meaning beyond that word. They were intended to embrace every sort of transaction or device other than a sale. They are words of general use and not of legal technicality. Many shades of meaning have been assigned to them. That meaning should be given to them, if possible, which will consist with, and not defeat, the object of the act, or lead to injustice to manufacturers. To pass an article over into the control of another, to part with it, to relinquish it, to get rid of it, actually to remove it, is to dispose of it. Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872.

"Fair market price."—"To prevent avoidance of the tax on manufactured articles and parts of articles mentioned in section 301, Congress established a standard, by comparison with which the fair dealing of the manufacturers might be tested. An article or part of an article owned by a manufacturer, whether his ownership be entire or qualified, has a value. The standard of value set up by the statute is the 'fair market value.' If the manufacturer, enjoying the full ownership of an article, or a part of it, sold, or, having but a qualified ownership therein, disposed of, his entire interest for what that interest, whatever it might be, would fairly sell for on the market, he was taxable on the net profits only as the same were determined by section 302. If he sold or disposed of his interest for less than it would thus sell for on the market, his tax was to be computed for the taxable period on the gross amount received or accrued from the sale or disposition of such article, or part thereof. Such is the significance of the term 'the fair market price' occurring in section 303." Dayton Brass Castings Co. v. Gilligan, (S. D. Ohio 1920) 267 Fed. 872.

1918 Supp., p. 368, sec. 800.

Nature of section.—Statutes of this kind are not remedial laws, nor are they founded on any permanent public policy. They impose burdens upon the public and restrict the pursuit of occupations and the enjoyment of property. If a tax is to be sustained in any given case it must come clearly within the letter of the statute. Edwards v. Wabash R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 610.

Temporary bonds issued before Act took effect.—Where temporary bonds which were issued before this Act took effect were to be exchanged at a later date for permanent bonds it was held that neither the temporary nor permanent bonds were subject to the tax. The court said: "The issuance of the temporary bond was for the purpose of security only. The plaintiff below entered the entire amount of the bond as an outstanding obligation. The book entry shows that the maker intended to pass title to the temporary bond of the Guaranty Trust Company, and intended that when it did so such bond should be an obligation of the company, issued and outstanding. And when the underwriters and subscribers paid money on the faith of this security, and when receipts therefor in the form mentioned above were given a binding obligation to the extent of the money so advanced was created. The underwriters and subscribers, in so advancing the money, could rely implicitly upon the covenants and provisions of the trust agreement and the terms of the temporary bond, which was given as security. The temporary bond was properly issued and duly authenticated. The Guaranty Trust Company did not hold it as a mere agent. It was the bearer and holder of the bond. By the terms of the transaction, the authentication upon the bond was conclusive evidence that the bond had been issued, and that the Guaranty Trust Company was entitled to the benefit of the trust created by the trust agreement. The Guaranty Trust Company took as trustee for itself and its fellow underwriters and subscribers. This was an issue. The liability to a stamp duty, as well as the amount thereof, is determined by the terms found in the instrument. . . .

"It was never intended by the statute to impose the tax on the exchange of the permanent bonds for temporary bonds, or upon the exchange of registered or unregistered bonds, or vice versa, or for the substitution of several small bonds for one large one, and vice versa. For us to hold as contended for by the defendant below, would be to reach such a conclusion. No additional tax is required upon the issuance of a permanent or definite bond in substitution for a temporary bond which has been delivered. The term 'issued,' as used in the statutes, implies not merely delivery, but delivery of an instrument creating or renewing an obligation, and not merely furnishing a different expression of a pre-existing obligation." Edwards v. Chile Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 452.

Certificates in exchange for stock.—Certificates of stock issued in exchange for other stock are not subject to the tax not being evidence of an original issue of stock. The court said: "The question remains whether the documents upon which the tax has been imposed are the evidence of an original issue of stock. A stock certificate is a document which is the evidence of the number of shares of stock which the holder of it owns. And the tax is laid, not on each stock certificate that is issued, but on each original issue of certificate. The language is used to indicate the first issuance of the stock, and this is emphasized by the use of the words, in the same connection, 'whether on organization or reorganization.' When a corporation issues for the first time a certificate of the stock, that certificate is an original issue. The tax is placed on the original issue. The word 'original' is defined by Webster as 'pertaining to the origin or beginning; preceding all; first in order.' Plainly, then, it was not intended to tax the plaintiff on each issue of certificates, but only on each original issue of certificates which preceded all other issues which might subsequently be made, when the original certificates were surrendered and new ones issued in their place, either to the original owner or to those to whom the original owners had transferred them." Edwards v. Wabash R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 610.

Recovery of tax wrongfully exacted.—"One who denies the legality of the tax should have a color of certain remedy after payment under protest. He cannot interfere by injunction with the government's collection of its revenue, and the action at law to recover back what he has paid is the alternative left. . . . The citizen who is obligated to pay the tax which he deems illegal may do so, even though to his disadvantage, by paying under protest and later asserting his legal right of protest by the liberty of promptly bringing suit for its recovery. He has an equal right to do this, as he might have the legal right to interpose a defense for the collection of the tax." In such a case the collector is a proper party defendant. Edwards v. Chile Copper Co. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 452.

1918 Supp., p. 384, sec. 1004.

Amended return.—The fact that the false statement is made by an officer in an amended return will not excuse him from liability under this section. Levy v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 942, wherein it was said: "While amended or corrected income tax returns may not be prescribed by the statute, they are nevertheless allowed and received by the Treasury Department in the administration of the Income Tax Law, and on such returns taxes are assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. When so assessed, these are the taxes which under the law are charged against and collected from the taxable."

1919 Supp., p. 91, sec. 200.

"Income tax" defined.—An income tax is not upon any specific sum of money, but is a personal tax measured by sums of money received (or possibly accrued) to the person taxed during a certain period—i. e., the calendar year. Pennsylvania Cement Co. v. Bradley Contracting Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 274 Fed. 1003.

1919 Supp., p. 91, sec. 201.

Stock dividends as income.—See Loomis v. Wattles, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 876. See also annotation to 1918 Supp., p. 313, sec. 2, supra, 492.

1919 Supp., p. 94, sec. 210.

Persons subject to tax.—The tax is imposed on citizens of the United States regardless of their place of residence, or residents of the United States regardless of their citizenship, and upon the income of nonresident aliens from sources within the United States. Thus, a citizen of the United States who resided in the Philippine Islands during the entire year of 1918 is subject to the tax imposed by the revenue act of that year. Lawrence v. Wardell, (N. D. Cal. 1920) 270 Fed. 682.

Regulations issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which describe in detail the method of computing the excess profits tax have no binding force, if they alter, amend, or extend the statute. Greenport Basin, etc., Co. v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 269 Fed. 58.

1919 Supp., p. 97, sec. 213a.

Compensation of receiver.—Although the services rendered by a receiver extend over a period of several years the compensation awarded him when given in one sum is taxable as of the year when it is received notwithstanding the fact that the court in making its order divides the compensation according to the services rendered in each year. Jackson v. Simietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1920) 267 Fed. 932, affirmed (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 970.

1919 Supp., p. 99, sec. 214.

Estate taxes.—The amount of the federal estate tax laid by the Act of September 8, 1916, (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann., p. 305) which accrued and was paid during the year, may be deducted by executors from gross income when making their return of the income of the testator's estate for the taxable year, for the purpose of the income tax imposed by the Act of February 24, 1919, upon the net income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement, which statute, in this section, makes express provision for the deduction of taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year, imposed by the authority of the United States, except income, war profits, and excess profits taxes. U. S. v. Woodward, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 615, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Profits embezzled.—A person may charge off as a loss, profits which were made on a sale of stocks but which were embezzled by his broker. Black v. Bolen, (W. D. Okla. 1920) 268 Fed. 427.

1919 Supp., p. 103, sec. 219.

Transfer of assets of joint stock company to trustee.—A dissolution of a joint stock company and the transfer of its assets to one as trustee of a trust estate has been sustained though the motive in so doing was to reduce the amount of future taxation. In such a case it was said: "Bearing in mind the rule of construction which the Supreme Court announced in the case of Gould v.

Gould, 245 U. S. 151, 38 Sup. Ct. 53, 62 L. Ed. 211, and numerous other cases, to the effect that the provisions of the taxing statutes are not to be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used, and that they are to be construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the taxpayer, it is the opinion of this court that the right to change the status of an organization, or to dissolve an organization in any legal manner, is not made ineffectual because the motive impelling the change is to reduce or avoid taxation in the future. The right so to do is an incidental right, inseparably connected with an individual's right to own and control his property. It is practically identical with the sale by a citizen of tax-burdened securities and the investment of the proceeds thereof in tax-exempt ones, for the purpose of reducing or avoiding taxation.

"It is not unnatural that any thoughtful business man take such steps. It is altogether different from tax dodging, the hiding of taxable property, or the doing of some unlawful or illegal thing in order to avoid taxation." Weeks v. Sibley, (N. D. Tex. 1920) 269 Fed. 155.

Restraining payment of tax by trustee.—An equitable proceeding may be maintained by a beneficiary of a trust to restrain the payment by the trustee of a tax in compliance with a ruling by the Bureau of Internal Revenue where it is claimed by the complainant that the tax is illegal. Weeks v. Sibley, (N. D. Tex. 1920) 269 Fed. 155.

1919 Supp., p. 106, sec. 222a.

Citizen of United States in Philippines.—A citizen of the United States residing in the Philippines may be allowed a credit for the amount of income taxes paid to the Island treasury. Lawrence v. Wardell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 405.

1919 Supp., p. 118, sec. 252.

Refund as matter of right.—Under this section the refund is a matter of right without proof or duress or protest. Greenport Basin, etc. Co. v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 269 Fed. 58.

Filing claim for refund as condition precedent to suit.—It is not necessary before commencing a suit to obtain a refund of a part of an income tax paid under protest that the plaintiff should file a claim for a refund. Black v. Bolen, (W. D. Okla. 1920) 268 Fed. 427.

1919 Supp., p. 118, sec. 253.

Sufficiency of indictment.—An indictment charging a conspiracy to defeat and evade the income tax imposed by the federal statutes and alleging as the only overt act the filing of a false return with the collector of internal revenue will be quashed where it appears that there had been a previous acquittal under an indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States and which charged the same overt act. U. S. v. Rachmil, (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 270 Fed. 869.

1919 Supp., p. 120, sec. 261.

A citizen of the United States residing in the Philippines is subject to the Income Tax Law under the act of 1918. Lawrence v. Wardell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 405.

1919 Supp., p. 131, sec. 402.

Time of transfer.—The clause "whether such transfer is made or accrued before or after the passage of this act" was used in this section to elucidate without changing the law and to put at rest any controversy on the subject. Shwab v. Doyle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 321.

1919 Supp., p. 140, sec. 600a.

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 202 et seq.). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 202 et seq.). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

1919 Supp., p. 143, sec. 604.

This section was not repealed by the National Prohibition Act (1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. p. 202 et seq.). U. S. v. Freidericks, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 188.

1919 Supp., p. 153, sec. 628.

"Soft drinks."—Sweet cider is taxable under this section as a soft drink. Monroe Cider Vinegar, etc., Co. v. Riordan, (W. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 736. The court said: "Sweet cider is commonly understood to be a soft drink, and as drinks of that description are specifically taxed, the assessment in question in my opinion, was in contemplation of the act. In enacting the law Congress had in mind the essential distinction between hard and soft cider, and the comprehensive term 'soft drinks' was used to include it and other soft drink beverages fairly and reasonably coming within that classification. It is not conceivable that the law-making power intended to exclude sweet cider, which has less than one-half of 1 per centum of alcohol, from taxation, and to tax other soft drinks which also have hardly any alcoholic content. In Bradford v. Jones, 142 Ky. 820, 135 S. W. 290, the words 'soft drinks' were held to mean nonintoxicating beverages, and the court took judicial notice of the fact that such beverages were sold in places where there were formerly sold intoxicating liquors. Such has become the common understanding and therefore, the language of the statute must be taken in the sense in which it will be understood by the public. U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496, 21 L. Ed. 728; Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 42, 23 L. Ed. 200. Giving effect to the rules of construction enunciated in these adjudications requires me to hold that the words 'other soft drinks,' as used in the statute, clearly include for taxation the beverage sweet cider. There is no ambiguity in the term, and its meaning is plain, when we adhere to the common understanding. The doctrine of nos cuitur a sociis or eiusdem generis, urged by plaintiff, need not be called upon to assist in interpreting the statute, in view of the apparent intent with which the term was used in the statute."

Basis of computation of tax.—The basis for computing the amount of the tax on sweet cider sold in containers is held to be the price of the beverage and container. Monroe Cider Vinegar, etc., Co. v. Riordan, (W. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 736.

1919 Supp., p. 160, sec. 900.

Games.—Ouija boards are games or implements with which games are played within the sense of the word "games" as used in this section and subject to tax. Baltimore Talking Board Co. v. Miles, (D. C. Md. 1921) 273 Fed. 531. The court said: "One of these boards is a thing which one or more people employ for their amusement or sport, and with which they think they are playing at a game. The use of it is all the more interesting, in that it gives results which the players may not always suppose to be foretellable. In this respect it resembles various games of solitaire, the telling of fortunes by cards, etc. It is quite clearly among the general class of things which Congress intended to tax, and it is sufficiently identified by the words it used."

"There is a subordinate question raised. The plaintiff says that the larger part of its sales were of small-sized boards, sold by it at a low price to merchants, who distributed them as advertisements. It claims that in any event they are not taxable, because they are children's toys or games, and as such are excepted by the act itself. It may be that there are some who think that those who use ouija boards are childish enough. That is a matter of opinion upon which courts need not take sides. They are not the sort of thing which would interest many who are children in years. The picture on the envelope in which the plaintiff distributes these diminutive boards show that those who are supposed to use them are, for the most part, adults."

"It follows that the tax was properly collected, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict."

1919 Supp., p. 170, sec. 1006.

Constitutionality.—This act is constitutional. "This provision, by confining purchases to the drugs in the packages, or from the packages stamped, clearly tends to confine the purchases and dealings in such drugs to those which have paid the internal revenue tax levied. A compliance with this law by all purchasers would extend all transactions to such drugs as had paid the internal revenue tax." Gilmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 719.

Purpose.—The purpose of the statute is to prohibit the purchase, sale and distribution of narcotics. Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 694.

Sufficiency of indictment.—An indictment which charges that the defendant "did knowingly, unlawfully, and willfully sell, dispense, and distribute" derivatives of opium and derivatives of coca leaves, has been held sufficient to show that he was a person who was required to register under the Act of December 17, 1914, and the amendment of February 24, 1919. Bacigalupi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 367. So an indictment under this section has been held sufficient which charged that the defendant did knowingly, etc., "purchase, sell, dispense, and distribute cocaine in and from a certain tin box, which said tin box was not then and there the original stamped package containing said cocaine," and that said defendant did have in his possession the said tin box containing cocaine, consisting of about one-half an ounce, and that the "said tin box then and there containing said cocaine did not then and there bear and have affixed thereon appropriate tax paid stamps as required by the act of Congress approved December 17, 1914, known as the Harrison Narcotic Law." Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 695. And in Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 695, an indictment was held sufficient as against objection not raised in the court below.

In Bierriero v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 912; Senick v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 918, it was contended that to convict under this section it must be alleged and proved "that the accused is one of those persons required to register and pay the special tax," even if untaxed and unstamped drugs be found in his possession. The court said: "We are not of that opinion. The clause above quoted includes, not only those who purchase, but also those who sell and dispense, and the latter are specifically required to register and pay the special tax. Therefore an indictment in the language of the statute, charging that defendant 'did sell, dispense and distribute,' as in this case, alleges by necessary implication that he is within the class required to register. And if there be proof that unstamped drugs were found in his possession, the clause in question creates the presumption that he has violated the amended section. The burden is then upon him to show that he is not in the class required to register, and that his possession was not unlawful."

Evidence.—Under this section prima facie

proof is made of the violation of the statute by evidence that the accused had the possession of prohibited narcotics to which are not affixed appropriate tax paid stamps. In this respect the offense is not dissimilar to some other offenses against the United States, such as the offense of having in possession dies adaptable to counterfeiting or having possession of imported opium. Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 286 Fed. 694. Such provision of this section is permissible, for while the possession of drugs cannot of itself be made a crime, possession may be made prima facie evidence of some other offense. Pierriero v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 912; Senick v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 918.

An instruction in a prosecution under this section on possession as prima facie evidence of violation held not to be erroneous in Pierriero v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 912.

Sentence.—Where under this act a verdict of guilty is rendered upon several counts, and the sentence does not exceed that which might be properly imposed upon conviction on the counts which are good, the sentence must stand. Bacigalupi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 367.

1919 Supp., p. 174, sec. 1100.

Note without stamps as evidence.—A promissory note is inadmissible as evidence where the required documentary stamps are not affixed thereto. U. S. v. Masters, (E. D. Mo. 1920) 264 Fed. 260.

1919 Supp., p. 177, sec. 1107, subd. 4.

"Right to subscribe for or to receive such shares."—In Marconi Wireless Tel. Co. v. Duffy, (D. C. N. J. 1921) 273 Fed. 197, the plaintiff, for the purpose of consolidating its property and business with certain properties and business of the General Electric Company, contracted to transfer its assets, with minor exceptions, to the Radio Corporation of America (hereinafter called Radio), in exchange for 2,000,000 shares each of Radio's preferred and common stock. Stock was issued with the revenue stamp required by law attached thereto. Subsequently plaintiff was required by defendant to pay an additional tax upon the shares so issued direct to plaintiff's stockholders, amounting to the sum of $5,000, the stamps for which, upon the defendant's directions, were affixed to plaintiff's minute book, and canceled by the defendant despite the plaintiff's protest. The court said: "In considering the question at issue we must not ignore the substantial difference between a corporation and its stockholders. . . . The property sold to Radio was the plaintiff's property, and could be sold only by it. To effect the sale the consent of the stockholders was necessary; but it, and not the stockholders, held the legal title, and it alone could vest such title in the purchaser. The stockholders eventually would share in the consideration of the sale, but this could be brought about only by means of dividends or similar methods of distribution. The stock issued by Radio to the plaintiff's stockholders was the consideration for the property sold to it by the plaintiff. Had the plaintiff received the stock as seemingly was originally contemplated, and disposed of it, whether to its stockholders or to other parties, a tax such as was here imposed would have had to be paid. Undoubtedly it was within the power of plaintiff, upon obtaining the necessary authority, to direct Radio to issue the stock to its (plaintiff's) stockholders. But this authority—resolution of the plaintiff's board of directors—was nothing less than a transfer of plaintiff's rights to such shares of stock, and is covered by one of the quoted methods of transferring shares or certificates of stock taxable under subdivision 4, viz., a transfer of 'rights to subscribe for or to receive such shares.' . . . Such transfers having been effected, the challenged tax was justified, and the stamps were properly affixed to the plaintiff's minute book, as it evidenced the transfer."

1919 Supp., p. 179, sec. 1200.

Constitutionality.—This section imposing a tax of ten per cent on an establishment using child labor contrary to its provisions is unconstitutional. George v. Bailey, (W. D. N. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 639. The court said: "It will be noted that this section is practically a reproduction of the material provisions of the Owen-Keating bill; the only difference being that under that bill, the product of an establishment using child labor, was forbidden transportation in interstate commerce, and in the present act an establishment using child labor contrary to its provisions is subject to a tax of ten per centum, upon the net income derived from its operations. The question which suggests itself in the outset is whether the last act is intended to raise revenue. It will scarcely be insisted that such is its object. It is more reasonable to conclude that the purpose of the tax feature is to impose a penalty in order to deter the violation of the child labor provision. It would be a rather non-productive revenue system which imposed taxes, the effect of which would be to annihilate the subject of taxation, or to prohibit the exercise of the privilege for which the tax is levied.

"In the case of Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 33, 34, 18 Sup. Ct. 768, 769 (43 L. Ed. 60), the following is found:

"The direct and necessary result of a statute must be taken into consideration when deciding as to its validity, even if that result is not in so many words either enacted or distinctly provided for. In whatever language a statute may be framed, its purpose must be determined by its natural and reasonable effect.'

"This doctrine is reaffirmed in the Dagenhart Case, supra. In what are called the Pipe Line Cases, 234 U. S. 548-560, 34 Sup. Ct. 956, 958 (58 L. Ed. 459), the Supreme Court used this language which is quoted before in this opinion:

"The control by Congress over interstate commerce cannot authorize the exercise of authority not entrusted to it by the Constitution."

"If that principle applies to the authority of Congress in the regulation of commerce, there is no reason why it should not apply in raising revenue by taxation, for the power delegated to the United States to levy and collect taxes, is no more elastic than the power delegated by the commerce provision. As bearing upon this point the following is quoted from the opinion in Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 75 U. S. (8 Wall.) 533, 19 L. Ed. 482, which was a case involving the right of the federal government to levy taxes upon state banks:

"There are, indeed, certain virtual limitations arising from the principles of the Constitution itself. It would undoubtedly be an abuse of the power if so exercised as to impair the separate existence and independent self-government of the states or if exercised for ends inconsistent with the limited grants of power in the Constitution."

"By the Constitution the federal government is invested with power by congressional legislation 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debt and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.' But nowhere in the Constitution can be found authority to the national government to regulate labor within the states.

"Upon consideration of the prime question in this case and the authorities bearing upon it, the conclusion seems to be irresistible that the national Legislature cannot do indirectly that which it is forbidden by the Constitution to do directly; and it being definitely determined by the highest court of the land that the right to regulate labor is inherent in the states, then Congress cannot intervene to control it, either by way of interstate commerce, efforts to levy taxes, or by any other method."

Power of Congress.—The right to regulate labor within a state is a state function and Congress is forbidden by the Constitution to interfere with it. George v. Bailey, (W. D. N. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 639.

Injunction against collection of tax.—This act being unconstitutional an injunction may be granted to restrain the collection of the tax imposed, as R. S. sec. 3224 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1032) forbidding a suit to restrain the collection of any tax is inapplicable. George v. Bailey, (W. D. N. C. 1921) 274 Fed. 639.

1919 Supp., p. 192, sec. 1320.

Fees of clerk of court.—The clerk of the court is entitled to his fee "for receiving, keeping and paying out money" where Liberty Bonds are deposited as authorized by this section. McGovern v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 262.

1919 Supp., p. 193, sec. 1400.

Invalidity of unstamped instruments not affected by repeal.—The limitation on the repeal of the Stamp Tax Act does not leave in force the provision of the Act of 1898 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 291, note) invalidating unstamped proxies. State v. Miller, (Wis. 1921) 181 N. W. 745, reversing on rehearing (Wis. 1920) 179 N. W. 815.

VI. VALIDITY OF STATE STATUTES

3. Contracts (p. 341)

Where coal mining companies had contracts to deliver coal outside the state and an order of a state commission requiring them to deliver their coal to parties within the state was made the court held that an interlocutory injunction should be issued, the court saying: "That the operation of the statute, as indicated by the orders of the commission, is a direct interference with interstate commerce. When the coal is severed from the ground it becomes an article of commerce, and the owner of that commodity, under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution (article 1, § 8, see Vol. X, p 410), which recognizes no state lines, has the right, so far as the state is concerned, to sell and to contract to sell his entire output to citizens of other states. The orders are also an interference with interstate commerce by reason of the showing in the bill that the output of three of the five mines that are being operated by the complainants had been contracted to the Pennsylvania Company, an interstate carrier, under a contract meeting the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which approval carries an implied finding of fact that the coal, so used, is directly consumed in, or in aid of, interstate commerce." Vandalia Coal Co. v. Special Coal, etc., Commission, (D. C. Ind. 1920) 268 Fed. 572.

VIII. PERSONS, ETC., SUBJECT TO ACT

2. Telegraph Companies (p. 343)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Western Union Tel. Co. v. Sims, (Ind. 1921) 131 N. E. 520; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bushnell, (Ind. App. 1920) 128 N. E. 49, wherein it was held that a telegraph company was subject to the provisions of this act although the point of origin and the point of destination of the message transmitted were within the same state.

X. TRANSPORTATION WITHIN STATE OR TERRITORY

1. Transportation Within State (p. 349)

Transportation of a passenger and baggage under an interstate ticket would be none the less interstate commerce because the transportation in question was only one stage of the journey, lying between two points in the same state. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Woodbury, (1920) 254 U. S. 357, 41 S. Ct. 114, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (Tex. 1919) 209 S. W. 432.

Vol. IV, p. 351, sec. 1 [B]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 113.]

V. TRANSPORTATION AS INCLUDING WHAT

1. In General (p. 353)

Agreement to furnish car.—An agreement by an express company to furnish a car is not a separate and distinct contract, but is a part of the contract of transportation. The furnishing of the car was merely a part or an incident of the entire transaction. The stock could not have been transported, nor the carriage completed, except that a car was furnished for that purpose. Transportation means not only the physical instrumentalities, but all services in connection with the receipt, handling, and delivery of the property transported. Cecil v. Southern Express Co., (1921) 191 Ky. 262, 229 S. W. 1041.

Vol. IV, p. 355, sec. 1 [C]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 113.]

II. "Just and Reasonable" charges.

1. In general.
8. Telegraph messages.

II. "JUST AND REASONABLE" CHARGES

1. In General (p. 356)

Object of provisions as to just and reasonable charges.—In construing this provision and section 3, it has been said: "Obviously the legislative motive for the enactment of those provisions was to protect parties procuring the services of the carriers mentioned from exactions by such carriers of unjust or unreasonable charges for such services, and from being made the victims of undue or unreasonable discriminations against such parties, and in favor of others having similar dealings with the carriers. It is not to be supposed that those provisions were intended to have the effect of enabling a carrier to escape liability for a breach of its undertaking to render a service in the line of the business in which it is engaged by showing that the party for whom that service was undertaken was, without the knowledge or fault of that party, charged less therefor than its reasonable value, or than was exacted of others for similar services, or otherwise was accorded undue preferential treatment. The provisions were intended for the benefit of parties unjustly discriminated against, and were not intended to enable a carrier to shield itself from the consequences of a breach of its obligation to a party who was an unconscious recipient of the carrier's preferential treatment." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Esteve, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 22.

8. Telegraph Messages (p. 358)

What constitutes interstate message.—A message sent to another point in the same state but relayed through a point outside the state is an interstate message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Speight, (1920) 254 U. S. 17, 41 S. Ct. 11, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1919) 178 N. C. 146, 100 S. E. 351; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Beasley, (Ala. 1921) 87 So. 858 (overruling Western Union Tel. Co. v. Glover, (1920) 17 Ala. App. 374, 86 So. 154); Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brent, (1921) 191 Ky. 503, 230 S. W. 921.

Limitation of liability.—Since the amendment of June 18, 1910, providing that telegraph and cable messages may be classified into day, night, repeated, unrepeatd, letter, commercial, press, government, and such other classes as are just and reasonable, and different rates be charged for the different classes of messages, the sender of an unrepeatd cablegram from a foreign country is, without assent in fact, bound as a matter of law by the provision in the company's lawfully established tariff, limiting liability for mistake in transmission of unrepeatd cablegrams to the amount of the company's share of the tolls collected, where such tariff offers alternative rates for repeated and unrepeatd cable messages, since any deviation from the lawful rate would violate the statutory requirement of equality and uniformity of rates. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Esteve, (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 584, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 22. To the same effect, see Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brent, (1921) 191 Ky. 503, 230 S. W. 921.

Neither the fact that the message was telephoned in so that the sender did not know of a rule printed on the blank as to unreported messages nor the fact that the telegraph company had not filed its rules with the Interstate Commerce Commission obviates the binding effect of the rule. Grand Rapids Showcase Co. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (Mich. 1921) 183 N. W. 731.

A telegraph company is not liable for delay in the transmission of an interstate telegram, for an amount in excess of the price of the message, where the contract between the sender and the company, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, so provides. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Thompson, (1920) 123 Miss. 441, 86 So. 273.

The federal decisions being binding, a state court is bound to sustain the validity of a limitation of liability for mistake or non-delivery where the message is an interstate one. Ryan v. Colorado Postal Tel. Co., (Colo. 1921) 195 Pac. 645. See further to the same effect, Brewer v. Postal Tel. Co., (Mo. App. 1920) 223 S. W. 949.

Reasonableness of rules on telegraph blanks.—Where the telegraph blank on which the message involved was written is on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, as are the rules governing unreported messages and like matters, questions of the reasonableness of the regulations on the back of the blank are primarily for the Interstate Commerce Commission to determine. Czizek v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 223.

Mental anguish.—The transmission of a telegram between two points in the same state over a route passing out of the state is none the less interstate, so as to prevent the application of the rule of the local law permitting a suit to recover damages for mental anguish because of a mistake in delivery, although it would have been physically possible to send the message over a route lying wholly within the state, the course adopted being more convenient and less expensive for the telegraph company. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Speight, (1920) 254 U. S. 17, 41 Sup. Ct. 11, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (reversing (1919) 178 N. C. 146, 100 S. E. 351) wherein it was further held that the burden rests upon the plaintiff in a suit against a telegraph company to recover for mental suffering due to a mistake in the transmission of a telegram to show the motive, if material, of the telegraph company in transmitting the message between two points in the same state over a route passing through another state. Also that, any liability to the addressee of a telegram which might arise because of the motive with which the telegraph company transmitted the message between two points in the same state over a route passing through another state would not be a liability for an intrastate transaction that never took place, but for the unwarranted conduct of the company and the resulting loss.

In an action for negligent delay in transmitting a telegram a state court must apply the federal rule which forbids the recovery of damages for mental anguish, and this though the interstate character of the message was not pleaded by the defendant. Nichols v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Nev. 1920) 191 Pas. 573.

Punitive damages.—Under Act Cong. June 18, 1910, c. 309 (36 Stat. 539), and the common law as accepted and enforced by the federal courts, a telegraph company is not liable for punitive damages for delay in the transmission of an interstate telegram, resulting from the willful disregard of the sender's rights on the part of the company's agent, unless the agent's wrongful act was authorized or approved by the company. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Thompson, (1920) 123 Miss. 441, 86 So. 273.

Vol. IV, p. 359, sec. 1 [D]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 113.]

"Practice."—It is said that the word "practice" as used in this section covers a large field but that occasional and even common assertion of right do not make such a practice, its essence being uniformity. Francesconi v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 687.

Vol. IV, p. 359, sec. 1 [E]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 114.]

I. Validity of state statutes.

VI. Acts constituting violation.

I. VALIDITY OF STATE STATUTES (p. 360)

Statute as to effect of stipulation in pais is not affected by this section. Van Zant v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., (Mo. 1921) 232 S. W. 696, wherein the court said: "The plain and obvious import of that part of the Hepburn Act under consideration is to prohibit the issuance by an interstate carrier of interstate free passes to any persons, except those of certain designated classes, and to subject both the carrier issuing such a pass and the person using it, in violation of its prohibition, to certain penalties. With respect to the issuance of passes to persons coming within the exception, nothing is said: there is no reference whatever to the form or provisions of any such pass, or to the undertaking thereby assumed by the carrier issuing it, or to the liability, if any, that may be incurred in the transportation thereunder, for a failure on the part of the carrier to exercise care or otherwise. As evidenced by the language, the sole purpose of the enactment of these provisions was to prohibit the issuance of free transportation by interstate carriers. However, the issuance to certain classes of persons was excepted from the operation of the act. So far as the cases coming within the exception were concerned, the law remained unchanged. After the passage of the act, as to the persons named in the exception, the carrier could issue free interstate passes, on such conditions and under such stipulations as it saw fit, or it could refuse to issue them at all, just as it could and did do prior thereto. The only regulation of interstate free passes undertaken by the act was to prohibit their issuance and use, except with respect to the persons specifically excluded from its operation. . . . Our own conclusion is that Congress has not legislated on the subject of the rights and liabilities of the parties in cases of the interstate carriage of passengers under free passes, not coming within the prohibition of the Hepburn Act, or respecting the validity of stipulations or conditions annexed to such passes exempting the carrier from liability, and that therefore these matters remain the subject of regulation by the several states."

VI. ACTS CONSTITUTING VIOLATION (p. 363)

Sufficiency of information.—An information charging a violation of this section need not negative the exceptions specified therein. Krause v. U. S. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 183.

Vol. IV, p. 363, sec. 1 [F]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 115.]

VI. OWNERSHIP BY RAILROAD OF STOCK IN MINING COMPANY (p. 365)

A contract which an anthracite coal company, controlled by an interstate railway carrier through stock ownership and common officers, made with a sales company, the stockholders in which were practically identical with those in the railway company, whereby the coal company is to sell the coal mined by it to the sales company, the latter to pay therefor at 65 per cent of the New York prices, and to sell no other coal than that purchased from the coal company, there being further provisions that the coal company shall lease all its facilities, structures, and trestles to the sales company; that either party shall have the right to abrogate and cancel the contract upon giving six months' notice, and that the sales company shall not buy coal except from the coal company,—violates both the commodities clause of the Act of June 29, 1906, set out in the text, making it unlawful for any railway company to transport in interstate commerce any article which it may own or in which it may have any interest, and the Sherman Anti-trust Act of July 2, 1890 (see vol. IX, p. 644), prohibiting contracts in restraint of trade. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1920) 254 U. S. 255, 41 Sup. Ct. 104, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 225 Fed. 399) wherein it was further held that the combination effected through intercorporate relations between the interstate railway carrier, the anthracite coal company, and the sales company, which was found to violate both the Sherman Anti-trust Act of July 2, 1890 (see Vol. 9, p. 644), and the commodities clause of the Act of June 29, 1906, must be so dissolved as to give each of such companies its entire independence, and all contract relations between the coal company and the sales company which would serve in any manner to render the sales company not entirely free to extend its business of buying and selling where and from and to whom it chooses with entire freedom and independence must be enjoined, so that the sales company may in effect, as well as in form, become an independent dealer, free to act in competition with the coal company or railway company.

Distribution of assets on dissolution.—In U. S. v. Reading Co., (1920) 253 U. S. 26, 40 Sup. Ct. 425, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) 760 (see 1920 Supp. 568) the Supreme Court ordered the District Court to enter a decree "dissolving the combination of the Reading Company, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey and the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, existing and maintaining through the Reading Company, with such provision for the disposition of the shares of stock and bonds and other property of the various companies, held by the Reading Company, as may be necessary to establish the entire independence from that company and from each other of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company." As to a plan submitted the District Court (see U. S. v. Reading Co., (E. D. Pa. 1921) 273 Fed. 848) said: "Seeing, then, that this stock is not an earning of the Reading Company to be distributed as a dividend, but is a part of its capital disposed of in this case to qualifying shareholders, in the manner provided for by the creation of this intermediate corporation, it will be apparent that this decree of equal right to all shareholders, preferred and common alike, to participate in the sale as ultimate purchasers, is based on the general equitable principle that equality is equity and on the corporate right of all shareholders in a Pennsylvania corporation to share equally on a disposition of its assets. We are therefore of opinion that the plan which embodies these equitable principles should be approved and that the claim of the common shareholders to take all of this stock to the exclusion of the preferred stockholders should be denied. And in approving such plan we note that in point of fact the equity of a common participation of all stockholders, preferred and common, has not only the approval of the government of the United States that has no interest in the controversy, save to see that equity is done to all; of the Reading Company which has no interest save an impartial stewardship for all its shareholders; and, lastly, the silently expressed approval of substantially two-thirds of the shares held by common stockholders. . . . Without entering upon a further discussion of the questions involved, we are of opinion, after careful and matured consideration, that the plan as amended should be approved, and we therefore direct the preparation of a formal decree embodying its terms. We deem it proper to add that such decree shall provide for the creation of a new corporation, to which shall be sold the equities in the shares of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company held by the Reading Company. The rights to purchase the stock of this newly created company will be sold to the preferred and common stockholders of the Reading Company share and share alike. In the creation of such a corporation by this court's order, we follow a general course pursued in the case of United States v. Du Pont et al. (C. C.) 188 Fed. 127, and the wisdom of so doing will be seen by an examination of the opinion lately filed in that case, where the purpose of such procedure is fully explained. By the creation of this new corporation by the directions of this court, and by its retention of jurisdiction to enforce this decree as therein provided, the court can, if such contingency should arise, by its control of this newly formed corporation, control all of its stockholders, and prevent such stock from ever being used to thwart the decree made in pursuance of the plan." As to the stock of the Coal Company a plan was approved by which in substance the shareholders of the Reading Company both common and preferred were to share equally in the distribution. As to the stock of another railroad company held by the Reading Company the court said: "Reading Company contends that the spirit and the letter of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Transportation Act of 1920 (40 Stat. 456), justifies its prayer that the value of this stock of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey shall not be subjected to possible sacrifice by a sale until the Interstate Commerce Commission shall adopt a consolidation plan which will designate the several railroads of the East with which the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey may be consolidated, so that assurance may be given to a railroad company purchaser of this stock that the holding of it by such purchaser will not be objectionable.

"The Attorney-General has contended that the stock should be placed in the hands of a trustee or trustees under a decree of this court, which shall direct Reading Company to proceed with all due diligence to offer the same for sale within a definite period, and if at the expiration of such period a purchaser has not been found by Reading Company, then upon the application of the Attorney-General the court may decree a sale of this stock at public auction or in such manner as the court shall then provide.

"The court is of opinion that because of the provisions of the Transportation Act of 1920 there is presently no prospective purchaser of the Jersey Central stock at a fair price, and so long as the control of the voting power of this stock is taken from Reading Company and lodged with a trustee or trustees, acting under the supervision of this court, there is full compliance with the mandate of the Supreme Court, which requires that there shall be established entire independence between these two companies, and we are also of opinion there is no good reason why the decree of this court shall now subject the stock to the possible sacrifice of a forced sale, to the detriment, not only of the Reading Company, but also to the almost equal number of other shareholders of the Jersey Central who are not parties to this record, who have no right to be heard, and yet who may be very seriously affected by a decree of this court ordering at the present time a forced sale of this majority stock.

"The final decree to be entered herein, therefore, will direct the transfer of the stock of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, owned by Reading Company, to such trustee or trustees, individual or corporate, as the court may name, and shall contain the terms of the trust, which in substance shall provide that the stock shall be voted by the trustee or trustees, so that at all times there shall be entire independence of directors and management between Reading Company, as it shall be hereafter merged with Reading Railway Company, and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, and that pending a sale of the stock all dividends received by the trustee or trustees upon the same shall be paid to Reading Company, or as it shall direct, and that the actual sale of the stock of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey shall be deferred, in view of the possible grouping of railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the Transportation Act of 1920, subject, however, to a provision in the decree that on motion of the United States or other party, or upon the court's own initiative, that, without awaiting such action by the Interstate Commerce Commission, an order may be entered hereafter for the sale of such stock, if and when it shall appear to the court that the facts require it, or the situation makes it possible."

Vol. IV, p. 371, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. III, p. 813.]

III. Unjust discrimination.

2. What constitutes.

6. Effect on contracts.

IV. Rebates.

V. Damages for violation.

III. UNJUST DISCRIMINATION

2. What Constitutes (p. 373)

Discrimination in switching charges.—The practice of railway carriers entering a certain city to absorb switching charges within the switching limits, where the line-haul carrier competes with the switching line, and to refuse to absorb such charges when the switching line does not compete with the line-haul carrier, may be forbidden by the Interstate Commerce Commission as being unjustly discriminatory and unlawful, under this section, which prohibits any carrier from charging or receiving from any person a greater compensation than it receives from another person for doing for him a like and contemporaneous service under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 254 U. S. 57, 41 Sup. Ct. 24, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 368.

Agreement to carry cattle without unloading.—A special agreement to carry cattle for 36 hours without unloading is invalid as a discrimination unless a rate is provided therefor. Bradford v. Hines, (1920) 206 Mo. App. 582, 227 S. W. 889.

Bill of lading issued without surrender of the old bill is void, even in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Pioneer Trust Co. v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., (1920) 204 Mo. App. 328, 224 S. W. 109, wherein it was said:

"Defendant's tariff, rules, and regulations, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, covering conditions upon which a shipper would be permitted to divert or reassign a shipment in transit by exchanging bills of lading, provide that the original bill of lading must be surrendered before a new bill of lading is issued. That this is a service in connection with the transportation of property there is no question. Detroit Traffic Ass'n v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 21 Interst. Com'n R. 257, 262; In re Mileage Tickets, 23 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 95; Doran & Co. v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 33 Interst. Com. Com'n R. 523, 527. To hold that defendant might lawfully issue exchange bills of lading without receipt of the originals would plainly be permitting a discrimination among shippers, which is prohibited by the Commerce Act. Cicardi Bros. v. Pennsylvania Co., supra; Banaka v. Mo. Pac. Ry. Co., 193 Mo. App. 345, 186 S. W. 7; Cudahy Packing Co. v. Bixby, 199 Mo. App. 589, 205 S. W. 865; Hareison v. St. L. & S. F. R. Co., 191 S. W. 1068.

"It is apparent that, even if the agent who issued the exchange bills of lading without having the original ones in his possession was pro hac vice, the defendant corporation itself, such act under the federal statutes would be absolutely void. It is therefore immaterial as to what was the extent of the authority of defendant's agents who issued these exchange bills of lading involved in this case. Defendant, being forbidden to issue the bills of lading sued upon in the first place, of course, could not be rendered liable under any theory of estoppel."

6. Effect on Contracts (p. 378)

An agreement to establish a new rate on a certain class of shipments does not entitle the shipper to that rate on shipments thereafter made where the new rate was not filed until after the shipments. The established rate at the time of shipment must be paid. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co. v. Cascade Contract Co., (Ore. 1921) 197 Pac. 1085, wherein the court said:

"In other words, the plaintiff seems to have neglected to file the amended rate, and the defendant, without waiting for its promulgation, shipped the rock, and hence became liable for the freight as computed under the schedule of tariff in force at the time the shipment moved. The defendant was bound to know the existing tariff. It was charged with knowledge that the plaintiff could not charge less or more than, or any rate different from that prescribed in, the current schedule. It is fair to say that in seeking to protect its promise, but, as it appears, when it was too late, the record shows that the plaintiff applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for leave to refund to the defendant the difference of $1,394.39, but was refused by the commission on the ground that this would constitute a preference not allowed by the Interstate Commerce Law or the tariff in force at the time. This is clearly within the policy of the law, for any other shipper of stone would have a right to rely upon the published tariff in force at the time, and ought not to be subject to the preference that would arise out of refunding to the defendant a portion of the freight which it paid under the existing tariff, although it relied upon the promise of the plaintiff to promulgate a lower rate. In other words, the defendant paid the rate in force at the time, and must be bound thereby."

Effect of invalid agreement on statute of limitations.—In Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Tennessee Mill Co., (1921) 143 Tenn. 237, 227 S. W. 443, it appeared that a large shipper, having many claims against the railroad company for overcharges on freight and damage to shipments, procured an arrangement with the railway company whereby credit was to be extended to him on this basis. The defendant, being a large shipper, at all times had on file with the railway company many claims for overcharge on freight, and for loss and damage to shipments. Instead of settling the railway's claims against him monthly, he got the railway company to agree that it would carry these claims against him to the amount of $5,000 as long as his claims against the railway company ran between $5,000 and $10,000, and when defendant's claims against the railway exceeded $10,000 it agreed to extend to him a credit of 50 per cent of the amount of said claims. The parties worked under this agreement for several years. It was held that while the agreement was void as an unlawful preference by the extending of indefinite credits it prevented the running of limitations against the shipper's claims.

IV. REBATES (p. 378)

Right to set off claim against charges.—A claim of a shipper against the railroad company may be set off in an action for freight charges despite the possibility that such a set off may be made the cover for a rebate. Nashville, etc., R. v. Tennessee Mill Co., (1921) 143 Tenn. 237, 227 S. W. 443.

V. DAMAGES FOR VIOLATION (p. 379)

Rebates.—It is held that the amount of a rebate alone, as in the case of an absorption of charges to competitors, is not as a matter of law sufficient evidence on which to assess damages which are the pecuniary loss inflicted as a result of the rebate paid. Hillsborough Mills v. Boston, etc., R. R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 269 Fed. 816.

II. CONSTRUCTION (p. 381)

Object of provisions as to rates and charges.—In construing this section and section 1 [C] supra, it has been said:

"Obviously the legislative motive for the enactment of those provisions was to protect parties procuring the services of the carriers mentioned from exactions by such carriers of unjust or unreasonable charges for such services, and from being made the victims of undue or unreasonable discriminations against such parties, and in favor of others having similar dealings with the carriers. III. UNDUE OR UNREASONABLE PREFERENCE OR ADVANTAGE

2. Similarity of Circumstances and Conditions (p. 383)

Milling in transit.—A milling in transit privilege extended to shippers at Seattle and Everett and at no other places in Western Washington was in State v. Public Service Commission, (1920) 112 Wash. 520, 192 Pac. 1075, held not to be discriminatory as to shippers at Tacoma, the conditions being dissimilar in that a much greater "back haul" would be required in case of Tacoma shipments if milling in transit was allowed. The court stated the situation as follows:

"The milling in transit privileges extended to shippers at Seattle on shipments received in Eastern Washington and milled at Seattle and reshipped to points north of Everett, involve a back haul of 34 miles; such a privilege extended to the complainant at Tacoma would require a back haul of 75 miles. The through rates on eastern shipments to Tacoma is the same as through rates on shipments to Seattle and Everett. The Northern Pacific and Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railways accord milling in transit privileges at Tacoma and Seattle on eastern shipments milled at either point, the finished product to be reshipped to points north. On the Northern Pacific lines this involves a back haul of 18 miles, and on the Milwaukee a back haul of 26 miles. Both of these railroads operate lines into and through the territory north of Seattle, the Northern Pacific extending to the Canadian border, and the Milwaukee having lines through Tolt, Monroe, and Everett. East of Everett on the appellant's line there is no flour mill in Western Washington."

3. Allotment of Cars (p. 384)

Cars not owned by carrier—Detention by carrier.—A carrier is liable to a shipper for the unreasonable detention and use of tank cars belonging to the shipper in the absence of a regulation under the Interstate Commerce Act to the contrary. Francesconi v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 687.

Evidence held to show discrimination.—Weber v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1920) 262 Fed. 945, cited in 1920 Supp. p. 568, affirmed Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Weber, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 111.

5. Rates and Charges (p. 387)

Negligent act precluding recovery of charges.—A railroad company is not precluded from recovering its charges by its negligence in presenting to the consignee a bill showing that charges had been paid, whereby the consignee is led to pay the amount of those charges to the consignee, since the policy of the statute forbids that a carrier should be estopped to collect its lawful and uniform rates. Chicago, etc., R.

Co. v. J. I. Case Plow Works, (Wis. 1920) 180 N. W. 846.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 407)

Telegraph companies though brought within the act of the statute of June 18, 1910 (see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann., p. 355) are not required to file schedules. Brewer v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (Mo. App. 1920) 223 S. W. 949.

IV. CONTENTS, CONSTRUCTION AND SUFFICIENCY OF SCHEDULES

1. In General (p. 409)

Classification as including exclusion.—Classification in carrier rate-making practice is grouping,—the associating in a designated list, commodities which, because of their inherent quality or value, or of the risks involved in shipment, or because of the manner or volume in which they are shipped or loaded, and the like, may justly and conveniently be given similar rates. To exclude a commodity from all classes is classification of it in as real a sense and with as definite an effect as to include it in any one of the usual classes. Director General of Railroads v. Viscose Co., (1921) 254 U. S. 498, 41

V. PUBLICATION OF SCHEDULES

1. Necessity (p. 413)

Publication not essential.—The fixing of a rate, followed by the filing of the same with, and the approval of, the Interstate Commerce Commission, constitutes the lawful and binding rate to be paid, irrespective of any question of the publication thereof. Payne v. Clarke, (S. D. Cal. 1921) 271 Fed. 525.

1. In General (p. 421)

Payment of less compensation than that fixed by tariff rates.—A commission merchant, the consignee of an interstate shipment, is, as a matter of law, liable to the carrier for the difference between the freight charges erroneously claimed by the carrier and paid by the consignee upon receipt of the goods, and the larger amount due under the applicable published tariffs, although the standard "straight" bills of lading, under which the goods were shipped, did not come into the consignee's possession, and it had no knowledge of their issuance or terms, and although the consignee accepted the shipment upon the understanding that the charges were as reported, and did not agree to pay more. *New York Cent., etc., R. II. EXCLUSIVENESS OF REMEDIES (p. 433)

Discrimination in rates.—It has been held that an action to recover damages for a discrimination in rates which had been previously condemned by the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot be maintained where the plaintiff has not submitted its claim to the commission. Hillsborough Mills v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1921) 269 Fed. 816.

III. JURISDICTION OF COURTS

1. Federal (p. 433)

Generally.—The mere fact that the enforcement of a rule of the commission comes incidentally in question does not divest a court of jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has several times enforced such rules or practices of the carriers without preliminary recourse to the commission. Francesconi v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 274 Fed. 687.

IV. PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION BY COMMISSION (p. 436)

Construction of terms of classifications and tariffs.—Where the question is one of pure construction of the terms of published classification and tariffs and there is no complexity, doubt or confusion as to the subject on which the tariff operates it is one for the courts. Butler Motor Co. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 683.

Action for rebating.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Dusenberry v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 1009.

Action for unfair distribution of cars.—In the case of an alleged discrimination by out making a preliminary application to the a carrier in the distribution of cars an action may be maintained against the carrier with- Interstate Commerce Commission. Dusenberry v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 1009.

Recovery of overcharges.—Claims for the repayment of overcharges may be the subject of an original action in a federal court with- out first submitting them to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Wolf, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 681.

Vol. IV, p. 441, sec. 10 [D]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 118.]

IV. PARAGRAPH [D] (new)

Joinder of parties.—An action under this section may be maintained against the carrier and the person procuring such discrimination by his unlawful solicitation. And although the discrimination was in favor of a partnership one of whom is made defendant, all the members need not be joined where the liability of the one named as a defendant under this section is well laid. Dusenberry v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 268 Fed. 1009.

Vol. IV, p. 448, sec. 12. [First ed., vol. III, p. 838.]

II. POWERS AND DUTIES OF COMMISSION (p. 451)

In general.—An action for damages in the nature of the rental of a car for the period in which a railway company retained it beyond the time specified by contract is not within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but in that of the courts. Empire Refineries v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 668.

Vol. IV, p. 457, sec. 14. [First ed., vol. III, p. 843.]

Report—Findings of fact.—Findings of fact by the Interstate Commerce Commission upon questions the determination of which is by law imposed upon the commission, can be disturbed by judicial decree only in cases where the commission's action is arbitrary, or transcends the legitimate bounds of its authority. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. U. S., (1920) 254 U. S. 57, 41 S. Ct. 24, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Va. 1918) 249 Fed. 368.

II. REGULATION OF RATES

2. Power of Courts (p. 462)

State courts.—A state court has jurisdiction of an action to recover excessive charges paid under protest, there being no attack on the rates fixed by the commission. Payne v. White House Lumber Co., (Tex. 1921) 231 S. W. 417, wherein it was said:

"The fourth and sixth assignments deny the jurisdiction of the district court to determine the claim with reference to demurrage and freight charges and assert that the jurisdiction is with the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is asserted that the petition on such claim involved a construction of the rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission and for that reason the district court had no jurisdiction. This is not a suit attacking the rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing demurrage charges or the freight rate as being unreasonable, but is a suit to recover charges demanded and paid in violation of the rule. The petition might have been more specific, but it is apparent the rule or rate fixed by the Commission is not assailed, but it was the act of demanding and receiving demurrage and freight not authorized to be collected under the rules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The initial jurisdiction, of course, is with the Commission to fix and establish rules and rates for terminal charges, or other transportation charges. The petition does not present an administrative question upon which the road's liability depends and does not involve a question of the reasonableness of a practice in interstate commerce, of which the Interstate Commerce Commission has the jurisdiction. We think in an action of this character the only question between the shipper and carrier is what was the legal right of the carrier under its rules and regulations to collect demurrage, and not what they should have been."

5. Review (p. 465)

In general.—A finding by the commission in interpreting an order made by it as to changes by top lines will not be reviewed by the court where it has only a portion of the evidence before it. Louisiana, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Ark. 1921) 274 Fed. 372.

Findings have effect of statute.—Where the published rates of a carrier are found to be reasonable by the commission, they are to be treated as though they were embodied in a statute binding alike on all parties. Keogh v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 444.

Vol. IV, p. 468, sec. 15 [B]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 120.]

Change in classification by excluding certain commodity from shipment by freight.—The Interstate Commerce Commission must be deemed to have had initial jurisdiction, exclusive of the federal district courts, of a controversy presented by the contention of a shipper that an amendment or supplement to the appropriate freight tariff schedule, authorized by the Director General of Railroads, which became effective after the adoption of the Transportation Act of February 28, 1920, and by which the published classification and rates on silk were canceled and the freight classification rule amended so as to include silk among the articles that would not be accepted for shipment as freight, was invalid, in view of the provisions of sections 1, 3, 6, 13, and this section; as amended by the Acts of June 29, 1906, and June 18, 1910, which make it the duty of carriers to establish, observe, and enforce reasonable classifications of property. make it unlawful for any carrier to subject any particular description of traffic to any undue and unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage, require carriers to print and file with the Interstate Commerce Commission schedules showing freight classifications, and rules or regulations changing, affecting, or determining the value of the service rendered to the shipper, give to any person or corporation the right to apply to the commission for relief on account of anything done or omitted to be done by a carrier in contravention of the provisions of the act, and declare that whenever a new classification or regulation or practice is filed, the Commission shall have power to suspend the operation of the same pending investigation, and, if found to be unreasonable or otherwise in violation of the fact, the commission may find what will be just and reasonable, and require the carrier to conform to its finding. Director General of Railroads v. Viscose Co., (1921) 254 U. S. 498, 41 S. Ct. 151, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. IV, p. 473, sec. 15 [H]. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 122.]

Determination of commission as conclusive.—The determination by the commission of the maximum that may be allowed for services "connected with such transportation" is conclusive unless set aside on direct attack. Finkbine Lumber Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 933.

An order of the commission dismissing an application for an allowance for services rendered in connection with the transportation cannot be set aside in an action against the carrier to recover for such services. Finkbine Lumber Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 933.

Effect of dismissal by commission.—The dismissal of an application for an allowance under this section is held to amount to a ruling against the asserted right of the shipper to be compensated by the carrier for the services in question. Finkbine Lumber Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 933.

Switching and weighing services rendered by a shipper and which the carrier would have had to do itself as incidents of the transportation, if they had not been done by the shipper are within the meaning of the words "any service connected with such transportation." Finkbine Lumber Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 269 Fed. 933.

Government control of railroads as defeating jurisdiction.—In Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson-Tully Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 524, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 741) it was held that the objection of government control of the railroads could not defeat jurisdiction of a suit upon a reparation order of the Interstate Commerce Commission where the shipments for which reparation was allowed moved prior to the taking over of the railroads by the government, since, under the provision of § 10 of the Federal Railroad Control Act (see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 762), "Actions at law or suits in equity may be brought by and against such carriers, and judgments rendered as now provided by law; and in any action at law or suit in equity against the carrier, no defense shall be made thereto upon the ground that the carrier is an instrumentality or agency of the Federal government."

V. VENUE (p. 480)

Act of Oct. 22, 1913, abolishing commerce court as repealing venue provision.—The venue provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, permitting suits on reparation orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission to be commenced in any district through which the road of the carrier runs, was not impliedly repealed by the Act of October 22, 1913 (see 5 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1108), abolishing the commerce court, which, in restoring to the federal district courts the jurisdiction which had been vested exclusively in the Commerce Court, provided that the venue of any suit thereafter brought to enforce, suspend, or set aside any order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, should be in the judicial district wherein is the residence of the party or any of the parties upon whose petition the order was made. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson-Tully Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 524, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 741) wherein the court said:

"The commerce court repealing act was a section of an appropriation act, and dealt with venue only to the extent necessary to redistribute the jurisdiction of the court abolished, and in terms it repealed only acts or parts of acts in so far 'as they relate to the establishment of the commerce court,' and again so far as 'inconsistent with the foregoing provisions relating to the commerce court.' 38 Stat. at L. 219, 221, chap. 32. The venue provided for, and relied upon in this suit, was for suits in the circuit (district) court on an order for the payment of money, and of such suits the commerce court never had jurisdiction.

"The contention that Congress intended by implication to repeal and cut down to such narrow limits the venue which has gradually been so liberally extended cannot be entertained. The terms of the repealing act do not justify it, and we cannot doubt that if such purpose had been intended, it would not have been left to inference and implication, but would have been clearly expressed."

Contracts with another railroad for use of tracks as affecting venue.—A railway company which has such arrangements with another railway company running through a given federal district as are equivalent in practice to a lease of the latter company's road for the former's transportation purposes, and which deals with the public and with the Interstate Commerce Commission with respect to traffic as if it owned or had leased the tracks, is within the venue provision of the Interstate Commerce Act permitting an action upon a reparation order of the Interstate Commerce Commission to be commenced in any district through which the road of the carrier runs. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson-Tully Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 524, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 741.

VII. PETITION, COMPLAINT OR DECLARATION (p. 480)

Sufficiency of petition.—Allegations in the petition in a suit upon a reparation order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that the shipper filed its petition with the commission, claiming that it had been charged an unreasonable rate, that, upon hearing, the commission entered an order for the payment of money as reparation on account of unreasonable rates exacted for the transportation of its freight, that the order required payment to be made by a date named, that the carriers had refused payment when demanded, and that the suit was instituted under the Interstate Commerce Act and its amendments, to which petition copies of the report and order of the commission were attached, are amply sufficient to meet the statutory requirement that the petition in such a case shall set forth briefly the causes for which damages are claimed, and the order of the commission in the premises. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson-Tully Co., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 S. Ct. 524, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 741.

II. PURPOSE AND DOMINATING FEATURES OF AMENDMENT (p. 508)

The amendment creates an obligation on the part of the initial carrier to carry safely to destination, where the shipment is interstate, even though no contract is entered into between the parties, and renders it liable for loss or damage to the property occasioned by the connecting carriers. McGinn v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 81.

Effect of Act of Aug. 9, 1916.—The Act of Congress of March 4, 1915, as amended, expressly exempts baggage from its provisions requiring the payment of full actual damage in case of loss of baggage. Culbreth v. Martin, (1920) 179 N. C. 678, 103 S. E. 374.

IV. DEFINITION AND CONSTRUCTION (p. 510)

Presumption against terminal carrier superseded.—This act has superseded and abolished the rule of law or of evidence, heretofore prevailing in Louisiana and in most of the common-law states, that a delivering carrier of an interstate shipment shall be liable for injury to freight delivered in a damaged condition, upon proof merely that the goods were delivered to the initial carrier, another railroad in another state, in good condition, and without proof that the injury or damage occurred on the line of the delivering carrier. Henderson v. Kansas City So. R. Co., (1920) 147 La. 647, 85 So. 625.

V. EFFECT OF STATE LAWS (p. 511)

A state act penalizing failure to pay promptly claims for loss is invalid as applied to interstate shipments being in conflict with this act which regulates the damages recoverable. Hines v. Cabaniss, (1920) 204 Ala. 527, 86 So. 524.

VI. SHIPMENTS AFFECTED (p. 513)

Foreign shipments.—The Carmack Amendment under which carriers may limit liability by published tariffs, must be deemed to apply to the baggage of a passenger carried on the outward trip under a ticket calling for transportation from Canada to Texas and return, in view of the declaration of the Act of February 4, 1887, § 1, that such act applies to any common carrier engaged in the transportation of passengers or property from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, since the test of the application of the act is not the direction of the movement, but the nature of the transportation, as determined by the field of the carrier's operation. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Woodbury, (1920) 254 U. S. 357, 41 S. Ct. 114, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (Tex. 1919) 209 S. W. 432.

Where goods are accepted by a carrier for transportation to a certain port from which they are to be exported to a point in Europe, and the bill of lading prescribes as the measure of damages in case of loss the value of the goods at the time and place of shipment, the owner is bound by such provision in the bill of lading and cannot recover a greater amount as this section has no application to such a shipment. Fahey v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (Md. 1921) 114 Atl. 905, wherein it was also held that such provision included a loss resulting from delay in delivery of the goods.

Prior to the Cummins Act the Interstate Commerce Act did not apply to a shipment into the United States from a foreign country. Mexico Northwestern R. Co. v. Williams, (Tex. 1921) 229 S. W. 476.

New shipment out of state after arrival of goods at point of destination in state.—The liability of the initial carrier of goods consigned by a shipper to himself at a point within the state, where he intended to sell them, and shipped under an intrastate bill of lading that contained no reference to diversion or reshipment, is governed solely by such bill of lading, subject to any applicable rules and regulations prescribed by state authority, although, upon arrival at destination, at a point beyond such initial carrier's own line, the carrier then having possession of the goods forwarded them, upon the shipper's request, made after arrival, to a point in another state, taking up the original bill of lading, and issuing an interstate one, and such initial carrier may not be held liable by virtue of the Carmack Amendment for damages sustained in the course of transportation beyond the destination originally specified. Bracht v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co., (1921) 254 U. S. 489, 41 S. Ct. 150, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 200 Mo. App. 655, 209 S. W. 579.

VII. RECEIPT OR BILL OF LADING (p. 514)

Delivery without bill of lading.—The act does not establish a rigid and inflexible rule that delivery can be made only on surrender of the bill of lading. City Nat. Bank v. El. Paso, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1920) 225 S. W. 391.

New bill of lading by connecting carrier.—When the initial carrier issues the bill of lading, by the terms of which it undertakes to deliver the interstate shipment at a certain place, its contract is performed when it delivers the shipment in good order at the designated place, and it is not liable, under the Carmack Amendment, for damage to the shipment while it is being transported by another railroad company to some other point under a bill of lading issued by the other company to the owner of the property. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Norman, (1921) 125 Miss. 636, 88 So. 174.

Interpretation of bill of lading.—A bill of lading is not a negotiable instrument, or a piece of commercial paper, and the doctrines favoring an innocent holder for value do not wholly apply. The St. Johns N. F., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 272 Fed. 673.

Permitting inspection as conversion.—Permitting inspection by the consignee contrary to the provisions of the bill of lading, on which inspection the goods were rejected, does not amount to a conversion of the goods by the carrier. Bernie Mills, etc., Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (Mo. App. 1921) 228 S. W. 847, where it was said:

"The shipment of the corn from Bernie to Texas was an interstate shipment and governed by the Carmack Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act, 34 U. S. Stat. L. 594. This statute pertains to bills of lading and provides that any common carrier receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state shall issue a receipt or bill of lading, and shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss or damage or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier to which such property may be delivered. It is further provided in said statute that nothing contained therein shall deprive the holder of the bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law. But this last provision referring to rights and remedies under existing law has reference only to federal laws. American Silver Mfg. Co. v. Railroad, 174 Mo. App. 184, 156 S. W. 830. There are several provisions in the Interstate Commerce Act pertaining to bills of lading, but no provision makes the carrier liable for merely permitting inspection contrary to the provisions of the bill of lading."

IX. LIABILITY OF INITIAL CARRIER

1. In General (p. 517)

To the same effect as the first paragraph of original annotation, see Ostroff v. Hustis, (N. M. 1921) 114 Atl. 27.

Undisclosed intent to reship.—Liability for damages as an initial carrier depends upon the reception of the goods in one state for transportation to a point in another state or territory, rather than the intention which the shipper may have had at the time of loading the cars, but which does not find expression in some form of a contract, and that where all the obligations of a previous contract of shipment are terminated, and there has been a delivery to the consignee prior to the making of a subsequent contract for shipment into another state, the carrier of the property under the subsequent contract of shipment is the initial carrier under the Carmack Amendment. In this case appellant was the initial carrier. Rice v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (1921) 33 Idaho 565, 198 Pac. 161 (sheep shipped to another point in state, with expectation of re-shipment to market out of state. Carrier by which re-shipment was made held initial carrier).

Acts of connecting carrier as warehouseman.—"The Carmack Amendment does not make the initial carrier liable for a loss of or injury to goods proximately caused by the conduct of the succeeding carrier while occupying the relationship of warehouseman." New York, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, (Va. 1921) 106 S. E. 684.

Failure to mark goods properly.—Where a carrier by its haste in removing a car from a siding prevents a shipper from complying with the regulations regarding the marking of freight which it has established pursuant to section 1 [D] of this act (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 359), it cannot escape the liability imposed upon it by this section by pleading the shipper's failure to observe its regulations. Grammes v. Central R. Co., (1921) 269 Pa. St. 466, 112 Atl. 532. The court said:

"Had defendant observed its own regulations, and the loss been occasioned by plaintiff's failure to comply therewith, the point it now seeks to raise, viz., is a carrier responsible for a loss resulting from the shipper's failure to obey its rules? would have been up for consideration. Here, however, defendant by its haste prevented plaintiff from marking the freight as required: did not 'observe' its own regulations—as the Act of 1910, relied on by it, requires it to do—in that it received freight which was not all properly marked, and issued a through bill of lading therefor which did not show the markings on the barrels, and yet seeks to escape the liability which the Act of Congress imposes, though the fault was all its own. This, of course, it cannot do; and hence, since the assignments of error do not question the amount of the verdict, we need not consider the other points argued; though it may be said the maximum of escape from liability would, in any event, be the value of the brass in the unmarked barrels, and, though having the burden of proof on this point, defendant gave no evidence as to either the number or value."

Failure to feed and water.—"It is clear to our minds that, as to the failure to properly feed and water the stock while being held at Galesburg, the initial carrier would be liable, since, under the federal law, the initial carrier is liable for any negligence of a connecting carrier, and the latter owed plaintiff the duty of properly feeding and watering the sheep (2 Hutchinson on Carriers [3d ed.] § 653), which duty arose, under the circumstances, by virtue of the contract plaintiff made with the initial carrier." Miller v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 205 Mo. App. 463, 225 S. W. 116.

2. Former Liability Contrasted (p. 518)

This section does not change the common law liability of a carrier. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Lysaght, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 906, wherein the court holding that a carrier was liable for damages caused by an explosion of explosives said:

"The defendant contends that it is not liable for any loss or damage not 'caused by it,' and alleges that this explosion was not caused by it. These words of the act were used to make the initial carrier liable for any loss or damage occurring during the whole course of transportation, whether caused by it or by a connecting carrier, though they apply, also, to each carrier as to loss or damage on its own line. Georgia Railway Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 241 U. S. 190, 36 Supp. Ct. 541, 60 L. ed. 948. Congress cannot have intended to reduce the liability of common carriers to that of ordinary bailees for their own negligence only. Happier words than 'caused by it' might have been used, but they fairly cover loss or damage for which the carrier would be liable at common law."

Common law liability is not changed with respect to losses occurring on its own line. C. C. Whitnack Produce Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1920) 104 Neb. 587, 178 N. W. 177.

4. Nature of Liability (p. 519)

The liability under this section includes the failure to exercise the common law duty of due care according to the circumstances. Hence a carrier cannot excuse itself for failure to use such care in the handling of explosives as are required by the circumstances, by showing that it had complied with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission in violation thereto. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Allied Machinery Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 900.

6. Liability for Delay (p. 519)

Consequential damages from delay.—The initial carrier is liable for the consequential damage which the shipper suffers of the whole value of his goods where by reason of delay he loses a sale which he has made and the goods are thereafter wrongfully sold by the terminal carrier. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, (Va. 1921) 106 S. E. 684.

7. Wrongful Delivery or Diversion (p. 521)

Diversion by shipper.—A diversion by the shipper made to avoid loss on learning of an embargo does not destroy the status of the initial carrier as such. Miller v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., (1920) 205 Mo. App. 463, 225 S. W. 116.

X. LIABILITY OF CONNECTING CARRIER (p. 522)

Rule stated.—To same effect as original annotation, see McGinn v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 81.

While the Carmack Amendment gives a right of action against the initial carrier for loss of or damage to goods in shipment in interstate commerce, whether the loss or damage is caused by the initial or a connecting carrier, a suit may nevertheless be maintained against a connecting carrier, where it is shown that the loss or damage is occasioned by its negligence. Southern Express Co. v. Turner, (1920) 25 Ga. App. 625, 103 S. E. 802.

Presumption as against terminal carrier.—The rule in South Carolina, that loss or damage will be presumed to have occurred on the terminal carrier, in the absence of proof to the contrary, has not been superseded by the Carmack Amendment, and the federal decisions thereunder, when applied to goods in interstate commerce. People's Hardware Co. v. Raleigh, etc., R. Co., (S. C. 1921) 107 S. E. 146.

Liability for loss on lines of other connecting carriers.—While the Carmack Amendment does, in effect, make the connecting carriers the agents of the initial carrier, it does not make the connecting carriers the agents of one another nor impose any obligation or liability upon a connecting carrier for loss occurring upon the lines of other connecting carriers for which it is in no way accountable primarily. McGinn v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 81.

Election to sue at common law.—A shipper is not compelled to pursue his remedy under the Carmack Amendment but may elect to prosecute an action at common law against the terminal carrier. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Larosa, (Ind. App. 1921) 131 N. E. 22.

XII. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

1. In General (p. 524)

Limitation to value at time and place of shipment.—In Crutchfield v. Hines, (Mass. 1921) 131 N. E. 340, the bill of lading under which the goods were shipped contained the provision that "the amount of any loss or damage for which any carrier is liable shall be computed on the basis of the value of the property at the place and time of shipment under this bill of lading, including the freight charges, if paid." In holding that this provision was inapplicable where, due to deterioration in transit, the goods were worth less at the time of loss than at the time and place of shipment, the court said:

"Relying upon the authority of Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway v. McCaull-Dinsmore Co., 253 U. S. 97, 40 Supp. Ct. 504, 64 L. ed. 801, the defendant claims that the provision hereafter quoted taken from the so-called Carmack Amendment to section 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act, was void and without effect to support the contention of the plaintiff, because the first Cummins Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act made the above stipulation void. Act of March 4, 1915, c. 176, 38 Stat. at L. 1196. On the other hand, the plaintiff contends that the regulation was legalized by the second Cummins Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act. Act of Aug. 9, 1916, c. 301, 39 Stat. L. 441. From the agreed facts it is inferable that the bill of lading originally issued continued in force as a binding contract by the action of the parties, until the car was destroyed at Vernon, Connecticut. Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railway v. Texas Packing Co., 244 U. S. 31, 35, 37 Sup. Ct. 487, 61 L. ed. 970. A judge of the Superior Court found for the plaintiff in the amount of $500, and the case is before this court on the exceptions of the plaintiff.

"We do not think the second Cummins Amendment is applicable to the facts of this case."

2. Exemption from Negligence (p. 525)

Telegraph companies are not within the provision forbidding limitation of liability. Brewer v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., (Mo. App. 1920) 223 S. W. 949.

3. Agreed Valuation (p. 526)

Necessity of offering choice of rates.—A carrier may not, by a valuation agreement with a shipper, limit its liability in case of the loss by negligence of an interstate shipment to less than the real value thereof, unless the shipper is given a choice of rates, based on valuation. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Burke, (1921) 255 U. S. 317, 41 S. Ct. 283, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 178 App. Div. 783, 166 N. Y. S. 100; (1919) 226 N. Y. 534, 124 N. E. 119.

Charge based on agreed valuation harmless. — "Notwithstanding Act Cong. March 4, 1915, respecting the liability of carriers, where plaintiff's evidence as to his actual loss was based upon the agreed valuation set forth in the carrier's receipt, and the defendant's evidence corresponded with such valuation, there was no harmful error in basing the charge on the measure of damages thus agreed upon, as there is a presumption, until rebutted by proof, that goods are worth as much at the place of destination as at point of shipment, if not more." Payne v. Cheshire, (Ga. App. 1921) 107 S. E. 557.

Failure to require statement of contents. — In August, 1915, the express company received two trunks for interstate transportation. The trunks were locked and strapped, and their contents were hidden from view. The carrier did not ask or require the shipper to state the character or value of the articles in the trunks, or any of them, the shipper gave no such information, and the shipper did not dictate or suggest what the receipt given him should contain. The receipt contained an agreement limiting amount of recovery in case of loss. It was held the limitation was void, under the provisions of Act March 4, 1915 (the first Cummins amendment), which was in force at the time. Payne v. Adams Express Co., (1921) 108 Kan. 327, 195 Pac. 860, wherein the court said: "The defendant says the plaintiff estopped himself by accepting the receipt. Statutes expressing a definite public policy, in clear and positive terms, are not to be nullified so easily."

4. Notice of Claim (p. 529)

In general.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Ostroff v. Hustis, (N. H. 1921) 114 Atl. 27.

Prior to the Act of 1915 a contract requirement of 10 days' notice of injury was invalid. Jordan v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1920) 206 Mo. App. 56, 226 S. W. 1023, holding further that a notice to the contracting carrier on whose line the damages occurred was insufficient to bind the initial carrier.

Requirement of notice valid.—A clause in a contract of affreightment between an express company and a shipper, respecting an interstate shipment, and providing that, in case of the failure of the carrier to make delivery, a claim for loss, damage, or injury must be made in writing to the originating or delivering carrier, within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed, as a condition precedent to right of recovery, is valid.

The limitation prescribed in such clause is applicable to a claim for the loss of a portion of a package of goods, due to abstraction and theft thereof in transit, and consequent failure to deliver it.

In the absence of conduct on the part of the carrier working hindrance, obstruction, or concealment of such loss, nondiscovery thereof by the shipper within the period of the limitation does not exclude the claim from the operation of the limitation, nor extend the time thereof. Kahn v. American R. Express Co., (W. Va. 1921) 106 S. E. 126.

To whom given.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Ostroff v. Hustis, (N. H. 1921) 114 Atl. 27.

Notice of claim dispensed with.—With reference to the last proviso of the act it was said in Hunt v. Hines, (1920) 204 Mo. App. 318, 223 S. W. 798. "Congress doubtless concluded that losses for such causes would be sufficiently known to the carrier to start him upon investigation and put him upon inquiry without the formality of a notice from the shipper."

Waiver of notice.—Although a carrier may waive the benefit of such a limitation by express agreement or by inconsistent conduct, a waiver thereof cannot be predicated upon conduct which neither admits liability nor denies it, upon receipt of verbal notice of the loss, after expiration of the period of limitation, and later invokes protection of the limitation, upon disclosure of actuality of the loss and the time and circumstances thereof. Kahn v. American R. Express Co., (W. Va. 1921) 106 S. E. 126.

5. Time for Bringing Suit (p. 532)

While all limitation of liability is made illegal by the Cummins Amendment, certain limitations with respect to other matters remain open to the carrier, of which the period within which suits may be brought is one. Lazarus v. New York Cent. R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 93.

Constitutionality.—Where the period of limitation of an action by a shipper against a carrier is not fixed by contract but by the filing of a uniform bill of lading with the Interstate Commerce and this period expires before the beginning of the action, this section may restore the remedy without violating any provisions of the Constitution. Lazarus v. New York Cent. R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1921) 271 Fed. 93.

XVI. PLEADING (p. 535)

Effect of amendment on procedure.—Where a shipper elects to prosecute an action at common law against a terminal carrier for loss of goods, all presumptions that existed in favor of a plaintiff in such an action prior to the passage of the Carmack Amendment were available to him as the amendment did not change the rules relating to the "practice, procedure, or evidence" in common-law actions arising from interstate shipments. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., v. Larosa, (Ind. App. 1921) 131 N. E. 22.

Form of action as controlling.—Where an action is not only in name, but in substance, one for damages against the delivering carrier, the court will look beyond the technical denomination of the pleading and treat it as such. McGinn v. Oregon-Washington R. etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 81.

Vol. IV, p. 536, sec. 20 [L]. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 274.]

Failure to submit cross-action to jury as ground for venire de novo.—Where, in an action against the Director General of Railroads and several railroads for the conversion of goods by delivering them to the consignee without presentation of the bill of lading, the Director General files a cross-action against the final carrier in behalf of the initial carrier, based upon this section, the failure of the court to submit to the jury the issue of fact raised by such cross-action is ground for the issuance of a venire de novo. Albro Clem Elevator Co. v. Director General of Railroads, (N. J. 1921) 112 Atl. 885.

Vol. IV, p. 539, sec. 22. [First ed., vol. III, p. 851.]

I. DISCRIMINATION IN RATES (p. 541)

Reduced rates for army officers.—Reduced rates may be granted by a carrier for the transportation of the personal effects of Army officers changing stations under orders, in view of the provision, this section permitting reduced rates to the United States, and of a conference ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission, making such action applicable to property transported for the United States. Western Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 349, 41 Sup. Ct. 332, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1919) 54 Ct. Cl. 215.

Army officers and enlisted men in United States Army.—See Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1921) 256 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 456, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. IV, p. 549, sec. 1 [A]. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 262.]

VI. WILFULNESS AND KNOWLEDGE (p. 553)

Knowledge—Presumption as to shipper's knowledge of rate.—An agent of an express company who contracts with a shipper to make a shipment at a rate less than that specified in the schedule of rates filed by the company with the interstate commerce commission, cannot be held personally liable where the shipper is compelled to pay the difference between the rate charged him and the correct rate, since the latter is conclusively presumed to have known the correct rate. Hawkins v. Wilson, (Vt. 1920) 111 Atl. 634.

Vol. IV, p. 558, sec. 1 [B]. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 262.]

Allowances from a rate do not disestablish the rate; it remains just what it was. Neither does an overt or covert deduction from a published rate change the rate or convert it into a new rate. Lehigh Coal, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 266 Fed. 457, holding rate named in published tariff to have been a duly established rate.

Vol. IV, p. 559, sec. 1 [C]. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 263.]

VI. ENFORCEMENT OF PENALTY [new]

Creditor's bill.—A judgment imposing a fine upon a corporation for accepting rebates, contrary to the Elkins Act of February 19, 1903, § 2, is a debt which will support a creditors' bill by the United States to obtain satisfaction of the judgment out of the assets in the hands of the stockholders, among whom all the corporate property has been distributed, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1041 (see 3 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. 327), having provided that judgments for penalties may be enforced by execution against the property of the defendant in like manner as judgments in civil cases are enforced. Pierce v. U. S., (1921) 255 U. S. 398, 41 Sup. Ct. 365, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) —, modifying and affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 514, 171 C. C. A. 1.

Vol. IV, p. 573, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 203.]

Purpose.—“The essential object of this statute is to create, define, and punish the offense of abstracting or unlawfully having in possession goods while in interstate or foreign transit, and thereby interfering with interstate or foreign commerce.” White v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 517.

The term “station house,” as used in this section, means a railroad station house. Hence, a person may not be convicted under this section for stealing goods from the station house of a transfer company. Beckerman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 267 Fed. 185.

What constitutes “receiving.”—“When the actual, physical possession of stolen property has been recovered by the owner or his agent, its character as stolen property is lost, and the subsequent delivery of the property by the owner or agent to a particeps criminis, for the purpose of entrapping him as the receiver of stolen goods, does not establish the crime, for in a legal sense he does not receive stolen property.” U. S. v. Cohen, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 596.

Intention.—It is not necessary that the defendant have possession of the property with the intention of converting it to his own use. “Of course a person should not be condemned for having innocent possession of stolen property, for example, for the purpose of turning it over to the true owner or to the public authorities. But a knowing possession for the benefit of the thief or any knowing possession with the intent and effect of depriving the owner of his property would be a felonious possession." Applebaum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 43.

Knowledge of receiver as affecting crime.—"If the defendant had knowledge that the goods were stolen when he received them, he took the chance that they might have been stolen from an interstate shipment of freight or express, and received them at his peril. The statute provides that whoever shall steal from a railroad car any goods or chattels, which are a part of or constitute an interstate shipment of freight or express, or shall have in his possession any such goods or chattels, knowing the same to have been stolen, commits the crime denounced, and it is immaterial whether or not he knew the points of origin and destination of the goods." Freedman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 603.

Agent of consignee.—A regularly authorized agent of the consignee with authority to receive and receipt for the goods consigned to his principal may be guilty of larceny under this act where he receives the goods without giving any receipt, and there is an intent at the time he receives them to convert them to his own use. Nudelman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 942.

Place from which stolen.—In order to justify a conviction under this section it must be alleged and proved that the property was stolen from some one of the particular places mentioned in the statute. U. S. v. Cohen, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 596.

Goods in interstate commerce.—A shipment of coal from one point in a state to another on what is known as a slip bill, which is a customary way of authorizing a conductor to carry cars where the shipment is ready to go before the bill of lading can be prepared, is not such an interstate shipment the theft of which can be punished under this section though after the shipment started a bill of lading was made out to a destination in another state. Lowery v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 946.

Possession of other property.—In a prosecution under this section it is not reversible error to admit evidence of the defendants possession of other goods not alleged to have been stolen nor the subject of proof of theft, particularly where the defendant had admitted the possession of such goods in a voluntary statement. Rich v. U. S., (C. O. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 566.

Indictment—Generally.—An indictment under this section has been held to be sufficient where it described the goods, specifically alleged that they were in interstate transit and gave the name of the consignee and the locality of the offense. White v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 517.

Knowledge of interstate character.—It is unnecessary to allege in an indictment under this section that the accused had knowledge that the goods were stolen while in interstate commerce. Rosen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 271 Fed. 651, wherein it was said:

"To sustain a conviction under the act it must be shown:

"(1) That the goods and chattels involved were stolen.

"(2) That at the time they were stolen they were articles of interstate transportation and in course of such transportation.

"(3) That defendants came into possession of them.

"(4) That they received them knowing them to have been stolen.

"While the indictment charges that defendants knew at the time the goods and chattels are alleged to have been in their possession that they had been stolen, it does not charge that they knew they had been stolen from interstate commerce. But such an allegation is certainly unnecessary. A person who receives stolen chattels knowingly does so at the peril of their having been stolen while in course of interstate transportation. He cannot escape conviction because he did not know whether they were stolen in intrastate or in interstate commerce."

Bailee of goods.—Where an indictment charges that the goods were in the freight yard of a certain designated railroad, a common carrier, and by proper averments alleges that they were a part of an interstate shipment, an objection that the description of the custodian of the goods is not sufficiently complete comes too late after a trial and verdict on the evidence. Nudelman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 942.

Description of property.—An indictment under this section which identifies the amount of the article stolen, states that it was whisky, and that it was taken from a particular car at a specified time and gives the name of the shipper, of the bailee carrier from the possession of which it was taken, and the place of shipment, sufficiently describes the property. Fleck v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 617.

An indictment for larceny of goods in interstate commerce which states that the alleged stolen property was "a large quantity of Wayne knit hose, to wit, one case of hose, then and there of the value of, to wit, five hundred seventy-six dollars ($576.00)" sufficiently describes it. Pounds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 242.

Number of articles.—An indictment under this section charging the receiving of a "large number" of tierces of lard, knowing them to have been stolen, is sufficient without specifying the exact number of tierces. Rosenblatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 435.

Ownership of goods.—An indictment for larceny of goods in interstate commerce need not allege the ownership of the goods beyond that qualified ownership which arises from the carrier's possession of the goods while transporting them. Pounds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 242.

Name of owner and custodian of stolen property.—In Fleck v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 617, it was contended that an indictment under this section was defective in omitting to state the name of the owner of the property stolen. Answering this contention, the court said:

"The argument pressed does not meet the point as stated, but is that the bailee is charged to be the St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Railway Company, while the court must take judicial knowledge that all interstate carriers and shipments were then under control of William G. McAdoo, as Director General of Railroads. From this it is contended that the St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Railway Company, as such, could not have been the bailee or carrier in charge of the shipment. The allegation that the goods were taken from a railway car, and that they were moving and constituted a part of an interstate shipment of freight, which had been shipped by the consignor named, from Owensboro, Ky., to the consignee named at Granger, Tex., was, in legal effect a statement that the goods were in the possession of the Director General of Railroads as the bailee and carrier (Bloch v. United States, 261 Fed. 321, 323, — C. C. A. —), and this necessary legal conclusion from the facts stated is not overcome by the further statement that the goods were in the possession of the St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Company as bailee and common carrier. The defendants have suffered no prejudice, and it would be trifling with justice to permit a reversal of this case upon such a flimsy basis."

Taking without consent of owner.—An indictment for a violation of this section which alleges that the defendants "did knowingly, willfully and feloniously take, steal and carry away" the property, sufficiently alleges that the property was taken without the consent of the owner and of the bailee having it in possession. Fleck v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 265 Fed. 617.

Election.—Whether the court below erred in not requiring the district attorney to elect whether he would proceed on a count charging the receipt of stolen property, or on the one charging the stealing of property is unimportant, where the court imposed punishment for one offense only. Nudelman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 942.

Evidence—Method of opening doors of freight car.—Testimony as to method of opening the doors of a freight car so as to permit entrance without breaking the seal has been held admissible. Fowler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1921) 273 Fed. 15.

Accomplices.—The testimony of accomplices may be sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. Rosen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 271 Fed. 651, wherein it was said:

"At common law a jury can convict upon the testimony of an accomplice, although it is not corroborated, if it satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. In many of the states statutes have been passed which expressly provide that a person cannot be convicted of crime on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. But no such statute has been passed by Congress. It is, however, usual in the federal courts to caution juries in reference to such testimony."

"While the jury should be cautioned to scrutinize most carefully the uncorroborated testimony of accomplices, yet, when this has been done, there is nothing which forbids the conviction of a defendant, at common law or in a federal court, on their uncorroborated testimony." Freedman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1921) 274 Fed. 603.

Confession—corroboration.—In a prosecution under this section evidence that the goods in question were a part of a shipment in interstate commerce and that after their disappearance they were in the possession of one to whom the defendant had sold them, was held to be a sufficient corroboration of the defendant's confession. Rich v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 566.

Receiving stolen goods.—On a prosecution for receiving stolen goods the subject of interstate commerce the evidence must show that they were so stolen. U. S. v. Freedman, (E. D. Pa. 1920) 268 Fed. 655, holds the evidence to be sufficient to establish the fact.

Presumption from possession of goods.—While the possession of goods proven to have been stolen when in transit in interstate commerce, standing alone, does not establish guilt, such possession raises a presumption of guilt which in the absence of explanation may authorize a jury to infer guilt. Rosen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 271 Fed. 651.

Demurrer to evidence.—The introduction of evidence by a defendant after his demurrer to the evidence of the prosecution has been overruled operates as a waiver of any error in overruling the demurrer. Rich v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1921) 271 Fed. 566.

Variance.—In Nudelman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 264 Fed. 942, it was said:

"It is contended, also, that as to the first count there was a fatal variance between the allegations and the proof—first, in that the indictment charged that the goods were stolen from a certain designated car standing in the freight yard, whereas the evidence was that the goods were stolen from a freight house in the freight yard; and, second, in that the indictment alleged that the goods were taken from the custody and control of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company, and the evidence was that they were taken from the custody and control of the United States Railroad Administration as the operator of said railroad. These objections were first presented after all the testimony had been taken. In our opinion they are insufficient to invalidate the judgment, and that after verdict they are cured by the operation of section 1025, Rev. Stat. (see 2 Fed. Stat. Ann., 2d ed., 661). It was not a substantial variance between pleading and proof that the goods were taken from a freight house in the freight yard of the railroad company instead of from a designated car in the yard. While in the freight house they were still in the custody of the railroad company. Nor was it a fatal variance that the railroad company named in the indictment was then under the management of the United States Railroad Administration. The administration was operating the road as the railroad of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company, issuing tickets and bills of lading and carrying on the business in the name of that company, and this was matter of common knowledge."

Purpose of act.—"The purpose of the act is to make unfair methods of competition in commerce, unlawful, and the commission is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations, other than banks and common carriers, subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce. The power granted is far-reaching in its results, and of a most salutary character. Banks and common carriers were doubtless excepted from the provisions of the act, because each was subject to the direction and control of a separate commission largely similar to that of the Trade Commission." Hurst v. Federal Trade Commission, (E. D. Va. 1920) 268 Fed. 874.

Voluntary unincorporated associations.—Where an association composed of manufacturers contended that it was not subject to the act because it was a voluntary unincorporated association without capital stock and not engaged in business itself, it was said: "This contention overlooks the fact that the association is not the only one proceeded against; but that its officers and the members of its executive committee, as well as its membership generally, are included in the proceedings as parties and made subject to the commission's order. The language of the act affords no support for the thought that individuals, partnerships, and corporations can escape restraint, under the act, from combining in the use of unfair methods of competition, merely because they employ as a medium therefor an unincorporated voluntary association, without capital and not itself engaged in commercial business." National Harness Mfrs.' Assoc. v. Federal Trade Commission, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 268 Fed. 705.
